McCall Patterns will enable you to make in your own home, with your own hands, clothing for you, self and children which will be perfect in style and fit. Price seldom higher than 15 cents. Send for free Pattern Catalogue.

We Will Give You Free Premiums for getting subscriptions among your friends. Send for free Premium Catalogue and Cash Prize Offer.

THE McCALL COMPANY, 238 to 248 West 37th St., NEW YORK

Four Page Tracts

Can You Believe? A series of questions setting forth the fundamental points of our faith.

State of Man in Death. A collection of proof texts on this subject.

Life and Death. A short concise statement of the facts in the case.

Age to Come Not a Heresy, by H. V. Reed.

10 for 10 cents, 50 for 25 cents. 100 for 40 cents.

The Paternity of Jesus. A pamphlet of 122 pages, by M. Joblin, giving in detail all that can be said on this subject, and completely proving that He is the Son of God, and not the natural son of Joseph. This work ought to be sold at 25 cents a copy, but the author was so anxious that price should not stand in the way of its being read, that he put the price at ten cents, so all can buy them. Send to this office for them.

Address The Restitution Pub. Co.

Book and Tracts by Bro. W. H. Wilson.

"A Bible Study of Hades, as compared with our modern ideas," is the title of a new tract just issued by Bro. W. H. Wilson. It is a critical study of the subject of Hell. It shows that the meaning attached to this word today is different fro mthe meaning given to it years ago. It also shows how this change was made, and who made it. The price is 15 cents each, or 5 for 50 cents.

Student's Text Book, a cloth bound book 200 pages.

It deals specifically as How to study the Bible and why people fail to rightly understand God's Word. Price 50 cents.

Pine Woods Bible Class, a book of 480 pages bound in cloth. Studies are carried on as between a class and its teacher. Price $1.25.

Cunningly Devised Fables, 28 pages. Price 10 cents.

Where Will You Spend Eternity? Four pages, 25 cents per 100.

Are You in Need of Money? 4 pages 25 cents per 100.

Will It Pay to Become a Christian? is the title to a well written book of 96 pages by Brother Jas. W. Wilson. In a clear and convincing manner it sets forth the Christian faith and answers the question indicated in its title affirmatively. The edition should be taken at once and put out to work. It is neatly bound in cloth. The price is 25 cents, very low, and within reach of all.

W. H. Wilson, at 625 North Willow avenue, Austin Station, Chicago, Illinois.

The Bible: Its Principles and Texts

As indicated by the title this book is divided into three sections. The first consists of a remarkable disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "principles" in formulated propositions, and the third expounds in a clear, impressive and homelitic manner particular "Texts." The knotty and perplexing texts of the Bible are united and solved satisfactorily to the most fastidious and critical. More than one hundred and fifteen subjects of intense interest to every Bible student are formally discussed. Both simple and scholarly—the child is fascinated and taught; the scholar is entertained and instructed. Bible lovers, here is a feast for you. Throw open the door of your home; let The Bible—its Principles and its Texts come in and bless you and your family. 309 pages, 5x7 1-2 inches, durably and handsomely bound in whole cloth, with title embossed on back in gold. One copy, $1.10, two copies or more $1.00 each. The Restitution Pub. Co.

Popular Lectures, By Bro. M. Joblin

Send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled: "The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to Be Saved?" The Foolishness of Preaching and Salvation—what is it?

Each lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price.

TWO TRACTS By J. L. WINCE

"Salvation" and "Resurrection" two tracts by J. L. Wince, can not fail to arouse the interest of every believer. They deal with vital questions in a most convincing manner. The price is 10c each, 12 for $1.00. For sale by S. Roxanna Wince, Piercetton, Ind.

BEREAN NOTICE.

The lessons for our new Berean books for 1912 are ready for the printer. It is necessary for us to have an idea of the number of books needed before placing the work in his hands. Several societies in other states purchased their present books from the Illinois state society. If these societies or any others wish to buy their new books from us, will they please send an approximate number of the books they will need to the chairman of the committee, Leila E. Whitehead, 5439 Ontario street, Chicago, Ill., before December 18th. This does not apply to any society in Illinois. Send no money now—just an estimate of the number of books needed. For further information send to the above address.

ANNA E. DREW.
President Illinois Bereans.

BEREAN NOTICE.

The Chicago Bereans will make their annual Christmas distribution of food and money to the poor and needy of their great city. Friends who wish to help in this work of Christmas cheer, please send their contributions to Leila E. Whitehead, 5439 Ontario St., Chicago, Ill.

By order of Committee.

60 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents.

Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the

Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York

Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

Census Blank

MEMBERSHIP CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA

Name .....

Address .....
Street Town State

By whom Immersed ..... Date .....

Fill out the above and send to "The Census Editor," The Restitution, 803 Parkwood Drive, Cleveland, O.

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co.

WHOLESALE OPTICIANS

We make a specialty of High Grade Prescription Work, and carry a full line of all kinds of Optical goods. All orders filled same day as received.

"S. K. N." SERVICE

Means prompt returns, careful work, moderate prices. Goods shipped to all parts of the country.

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co. 338 SCHOFIELD BUILDING CLEVELAND, OHIO

SPECIAL OFFER!

IN ORDER to increase the circulatica of The Restitution, the following special offer is made:

One new subscriber for 1 year, choice of:

W. H. Wilson's "Student's Text Book," regular price..... 50c
Or 5 Copies of "Cunningly Devised Fables," reg. price 50c
Or 5 Copies of "Bible Study of Hades," reg. price 50c

For Two New Subscribers

One Copy "Pine Woods Bible Class," 480 pages, rg. price, $1.25
Or "The Bible, Its Principles and Texts," 309 pages, reg., $1.25
Or One Hundred of Bro. Joblin's Tracts, regular price $1.20

Here is a chance to get some of the books you all should own. By making special arrangements with the authors we are able to offer them to you without the payment of a cent on your part, just a few minutes effort. We cannot afford to continue this offer long, so take advantage of it at once, get some new subscribers today.

THE RESTITUTION, 803 Parkwood Drive

An Appropriate Christmas Gift

This is the time of year when we begin to think of appropriate Christmas gifts for friends and those near and dear to us. Here is a good suggestion. Send them the Restitution for a year, it will go to them fifty-two times, each time with messages of faith, hope, love, courage and gladness. A loving remembrance and a blessing each week of the year. For the balance of the year we are going to make this

GENEROUS OFFER

ALL FOR ONE NEW SUBSCRIBER FOR ONE YEAR AT $1.50 — The Restitution for the balance of 1911. The Restitution for ALL of 1912. One Beautiful Art Calendar for 1912. (No advertisement). One copy of "A Letter to a Friend," One copy of W. H. Wilson's Students' Text Book.

We will send all to one address or The Restitution to one address and the premiums to another This is for new subscribers only, and certainly a very generous offer. For two new subscribers you can substitute The Pine Woods Bible Class, or "The Bible, Its Principle and Texts," for the Students' Text Book. When requested we will send a card to those to whom the above may be sent as a gift, giving the donor's name and best wishes.

Send names today, so as to get all the advantages of this offer.

The Restitution Publishing Co., 803 Parkwood Drive

BOOKS AND TRACTS

Bible Pearls—Two-page tracts, suitable for wide distribution. 1. The Gospel. 2. Coming and Kingdom of Christ, by 20,000 Baptists in 1660. 3. Immateriality. 4. Kingdom of God. 5. Nature of Man and Thoughts for Thinkers. 6. Two Advents. 7. What is Religion? 8. Restitution Age. 9. Destiny of the Wicked. 10. Baptism. 10 copies for 5 cents, or assorted packages of 100 for 20 cents.

Less than Half a Cent a Day

The Restitution costs a Dollar and a Half a year, that's less than half A Cent a day or three cents a copy. You can't afford to be without it. If you are a subscriber get some one else to subscribe.

Help to Get Them on the List

Sample Copies of The Restitution

May be obtained for a stamp. Send for one.

"A LETTER TO A FRIEND"

This tract needs no introduction further than to say that it is one of the most convincing Gospel sermons ever written. Originally written as a letter to a friend by Sister C. C. Woodruff it was published and has sold extensively in tract form. In its present edition it is a 32 page tract, the price is

10c each; 12 for $1.00

There is no better way of spreading the Gospel than handing out one of these tracts wherever you have the opportunity.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

"Future Probation,

is that Awaiting any of the Unrighteous?"

Here is a work by Wm. Glenn Moncrieff that every one should read. It is one of the best things on the subject ever written and will appeal to every student of the word. It is a book of 150 pages, made to sell at 25c. We have a limited number left which we will sell at the special price of

10c each; 12 for $1.00

Send for some at once.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

Walter Tomlinson
10838 Orville ave

The Restitution
IS THE OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA.

The Restitution.

Founded in A.D. 1852

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Lk. 19:12-15), who will be King of Kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:53-58); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17), and belief in, the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Lk. 13:3), and obedience by Baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:13); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ." (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31).

ROBT. G. HUGGINS, Editor.

—Terms of— Subscription
ONE YEAR, $1.50;
SIX MONTHS 75 CTS. IN ADVANCE.

VOL. 60 CLEVELAND, OHIO, DECEMBER 19, 1911 No. 48

CHRISTMAS HYMN.

Christians awake, salute the happy morn,
Wherein the Saviour of mankind was born;
Rise to adore the mystery of love,
Which hosts of angels chanted from above;
With them the joyful tidings first began,
Of God's incarnation and the Virgin's son.

Then to the watchful shepherds it was told,
Who heard the angelic herald's voice, "Behold!
I bring glad tidings of a Saviour's birth,
To you and all the nations upon earth;
This day hath God fulfilled his promised word;
This day is born a Saviour—Christ the Lord.

In David's city, shepherds they will find
The long foretold Redeemer of mankind,
Wrapped up in swaddling clothes, the babe divine
Lies in a manger—this shall be your sign,"
He spake, and straightway the celestial choir
In hymns of joy unknown conspire.

The praises of redeeming love they sang,
And heaven's whole orb with hallelujahs rang;
God's highest glory was their anthem still,
Peace upon earth, and mutual good will;
To Bethlehem straight the enlightened shepherds ran,
To see the wonder God had wrought for man.

And found with Joseph and the blessed maid,
Her son the Saviour, in a manger laid,
Amazed the wondrous story they proclaim,
The first apostles of his infant fame;
While Mary keeps and ponders in her heart,
The heavenly vision which the swains impart.

They to their flocks, still praising God, return,
And their glad hearts within their bosoms burn:
Let us like those good shepherds, then employ
Our grateful voices to proclaim the joy;
Like Mary, let us ponder in our minds,
God's wondrous love in saving lost mankind.

This old English Christmas hymn was sung in Halifax, Yorkshire, England, in the early days of my grandfather Wilson.

JESSIE M. WILSON.
Chicago, Ill.

A CHRISTMAS SERMON.

"We Three Kings of Orient Are."

By David James Burrell.

Seek and ye shall find.—Matt. vii. 7.

..Run ye to and fro, and see now if there be any that seeketh the truth.—Jer. v. 1.

..For this is good and acceptable in the sight of God our Savior, who will have all men to come unto the knowledge of the truth. —1 Tim. ii. 3-4.

Jesus saith, I am the truth.—John xiv. 6.

Now when Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judea in the days of Herod the king, behold there came wise men from the East to Jerusalem, saying, Where is he that is born King of the Jews? for we have seen his star in the East and are come to worship Him.—Matt. ii. 1-2.

The king of Judea was troubled. It was rumored that about this time a prince was to be born, in fulfilment of prophecy, who would assume the Jewish throne. Tacitus declares that the opinion was prevalent in the East that the Messiah of Israel was about to appear. Vergil had written his fourth Eclogue, in which he announced the near approach of the golden age. A feeling of expectancy was prevalent everywhere. Herod was an old man, but still tenacious of his ill-gotten power. He was an apostate Jew, who long ago had forsaken the religion of his fathers to enter the service of the Roman government. His career had been a brilliant one; a protege of Anthony, he had, at a very early age, been made governor of Galilee and afterward tetrarch of Judea. He was a man of vast ambition; shrewd, cunning, and of violent passions; not above the trick of a demagog, he was nevertheless possessed of much cleverness and vast executive ability. To please his royal master, he built the splendid city of Caesarea. To conciliate the Jews, whom he hated, he rebuilt their temple and splendidly adorned it.

In the porch of this temple the old king was walking on a February morning nearly nineteen hundred years ago. His purple robes sparkled with gems and precious stones; a glorious ruby blazed in his turban; but his restless eyes betrayed a troubled heart. Off yonder, beyond the Kedron, a group of venerable strangers drew near, their long garments covered with dust. They would have attracted attention anywhere. Entering at the eastern or Shushan gate they climbed the marble stairway of the temple, entered Solomon's porch, and would have past on into the inner courts but for the admonition of a Levite, who pointed to an inscription on the middle wall of partition, "Let no Gentile or unclean person enter here under penalty of death." Arrested by this rebuff, they said, "We have come from the far East, seeking Him who is born King of the Jews. Tell us where we may find Him."

A moment later they were engaged in conversation with Herod, "Whence come ye?" "From the East." "And your errand?" "To find the promised King of the Jews." "It is a fool's errand: I alone am king of the Jews." "Nay, we can not be mistaken, for we have come under Divine guidance." And thereupon they told their story—how as they were watching the stars according to their custom, and meditating on the great promise of the coming deliverer, a new luminary wheeled into view and seemed to beckon to them. Was this a harbinger of that event for which they looked? While they wondered, it moved on toward the West and they arose and followed it. Their hope had been that the Jewish Prince would be found in the Holy City, and they were amazed to find that nothing was here known of him. The wise men were detained while at Herod's order the members of the Sanhedrin came together to consult as to the rumored birth of this Prince. They agreed as to the prophecy; the event was to occur in Bethlehem: "And thou Bethlehem, in the land of Judah, art not the least among the princes of Judah, for out of thee shall come a governor that shall rule my people of Israel." The wise men were permitted to resume their journey, with a parting injunction that they should return and report as to the success of their singular quest. As they resumed their journey, lo, yonder in the heavens a star moved along before them, and they followed with great joy.

We may find profit in the contemplation of the deed of these pilgrims on this Christmas Sunday. From time immemorial they have been regarded as kings:

"We three kings of Orient are.
Bearing gifts, we journey far:
Field and fountain, moor and mountain,
Following yonder star."

In the cathedral at Cologne there is a golden reliquary in which are preserved, in the odor of sanctity, the relics of these men. I said to the venerable monk in attendance, "Do you really believe that these are the relics of the wise men?" "Oh, yes," he replied. "There is no question whatever as to their genuineness; we now their names—Gaspar, Melchior and Balthazar. The venerable Bede tells all about them." There is, however, a considerable doubt—to put it mildly—as to the trustworthiness of the legends which have gathered about these Magi. We have no reason to suppose they were kings, but we know they were truth-seekers; and, as Cromwell said to his daughter, "To be a truth-seeker is to be one of the best sort next to a truth-finder."

I. The Quest. Wisdom is the principal thing, and there is nothing better than to get understanding. All truth is worth having. We blame our children for being inquisitive. But why? John Locke said, "The way to get knowledge is to ask questions." A wiser still has said, "Seek, and ye shall find." The cure for doubt is not a hoodwink, but a telescope. All truth is worth the having, and, therefore, worth the seeking. "Eureka!" cried Archimedes over a certain mathematical discovery. In all the world there is no pursuit so ennobling, so inspiring, and so gladdening as the pursuit of truth. This holds in all the provinces, but especially in the province of spiritual things.

It is related of Edmund of Canterbury, who was deeply interested in secular researches, that one night as he was poring over an ancient parchment a spirit came to him and made three circles upon the palm of his hand, saying as it vanished, "Be this the purpose of thy life." Three circles embrace all. The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom—and the end also. God is Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end. To know him is life eternal.

A man is in his noblest attitude when confronting the great spiritual verities. In this we are distinguished from the lower orders of life. We are able to touch the tremendous problems and measurably to solve them; and herein is the sweetest of life's delights. Lord Bacon said: "It is a pleasure to stand upon the shore and see ships tossing far away upon the sea; it is a pleasure to stand in the castle window and look down upon the battle and the adventures thereof; but no pleasure is comparable to the standing upon the vantage-ground of truth and beholding spiritual things."

II. The Harbinger. God helps every man who earnestly desires to solve the problem of destiny. To these wise men he gave the guiding star. A vast amount of erudition has been spent in the attempt to get rid of the supernatural on these premises. It is said that a remarkable conjunction of certain planets occurred at about this time. In 1604 Kepler saw in the heavens a phenomenon which occurs only once in nearly a thousand years: Saturn and Jupiter were in conjunction; presently Mars also wheeled into line thus forming "a fiery Trygon in Pisces." The constellation of Pisces, or the fish, was regarded as symbolical of Judea. The fish was also used by the early Christians as an anagram of Christ. Thus the "fiery Trygon" was identified with the star of Bethlehem. It is a fascinating hypothesis, but unfortunately (1) it did not occur at the precise time of the advent; and (2) being at an altitude of fifty-seven degrees it could not have paused over a village of a particular home. We are, therefore, led to regard the star as a special messenger—an angel with a torch, as it were—sent to direct these wise men in their earnest quest. So God interposes in behalf of every sincere seeker for truth. "Seek, and ye shall find." Seek, good friend, and you shall find. God is on your side. Be of good courage.

It was many years ago that a butcher's boy went singing ribald songs about the streets of Nottingham, England. A taste for knowledge brought him to Cambridge University, where he distinguished himself not only for his cleverness as a student but as a reviler of Christ. By the unexpected death of a companion he was brought to think seriously of eternal things; his sins weighed heavily upon him; but at Calvary he found pardon. In the early flush of his conversion he wrote his gratitude in the familiar hymn:

"Once on the raging seas I rode;
The storm was loud, the night was dark,
The ocean yawned, and rudely blowed
The wind that tossed my foundering bark.
Deep horror then my vitals froze;
Death-struck, I ceast the tide to stem.
When suddenly a star arose:
It was the star of Bethlehem!

"It was my guide, my light, my all;
It bade my dark forebodings cease,
And through the storm and danger's thrall,
It led me to the port of peace.
Now safely moored, my perils o'er,
I'll sing first in night's diadem,
For ever and forevermore,
The Star, the Star of Bethlehem.

God never yet left a man in the lurch who sincerely desired to solve the problem of destiny. It is a true saying, "A seeking sinner finds a seeking Saviour." Somewhere in heaven the star is set that call's and beckons to the fountain of life.

III. The treasure-trove. The wise men have reached their destination. All the divinely kindled stars lead to Bethlehem. Here is the end of the great quest. The star that guided the Magi rested over a humble cottage. They entered and found the Christ-child upon its mother's breast! Is that all? Ay, all—everything! In this child all the streams of prophecy converge. From this child radiate all the glowing lines of history. On the walls of the palace at Versailles, in a series of magnificent battle scenes, are portrayed the glories of France. In this humble home at Bethlehem all the hopes of Abraham, the dreams of David, and the visions of Isaiah are realized. This cottage is the center of the world.

Are you, friend, seeking the truth? Follow your star. Hearken when God speaks. "There are so many voices, and none of them is without significance." It is easy to quench all lights, to hush all voices; but hearken and give heed. Bethlehem is not far ahead. "Press on!" as Cromwell, the Lord protector, said to his daughter, "press on, dear heart, and thou shalt find the satisfying portion. Let nothing cool thy ardor until thou find it."

So here are the Magi opening their packs before the Christ-child. The search is over; the problem of destiny is solved. Here is gold for the king; here is myrrh for the victor; here is frankincense for the Son of God. We are passing through the days of giving. We are celebrating now the infinite grace that lavished upon us the unspeakable gift, and what shall we render in return? I beseech you, brethren, by His great mercy, that ye present yourselves a living sacrifice; which is your reasonable service. The best is none too good for God.

THE SEASON OF PEACE.

From a Christmas Sermon by Robert S. MacArthur.

On Earth Peace.—Luke ii. 14.

The whole air at the first Christmastide was tremulous with joy. It was a time for holy song, for inspired paean, for seraphic song. Let joy come still to our homes and hearts. Christ gives brightness and beauty, gladness and glory to the whole circle of life and duty. Come, Lord Jesus, there shall be room for thee in our homes. Once there was none in the inn, but only in the stable; now our best is Thine. Only honor us with thy beneficent presence!

I. Let us away with strife at this season; now is the time to speak kindly words. Let us not carry into the new year the enmities of the old; let not the harsh notes of contention come into the heavenly son of peace.

II. Christ came to give peace, and from heaven's throne today He bends to give peace to all who trust Him. He was the only sinless person ever born into this world. He might have come man, as did the first Adam; He came a babe. He was inserted into our race at its lowest and weakest point. If He were to lift the race He must get under it. He glorified the cradle; He beautified boyhood; He sanctified motherhood.

III. But Christ must be born in each heart in order that we may have a true Christmas. Are we rejoicing in the gifts of human love? Shall we be unmindful of Him who is the "unspeakable gift?" Turn not the Christ of God away from the heart's inn; banish Him not to the manger. Heaven's gift is now offered without money and without price. Receive Him with glad welcome!

THE POWER OF PERSONAL EXAMPLE.

The story is told of a German musician, who, passing along a street one day, heard strains of music issuing from a church. As the door stood open he entered and sat down to listen. Scarcely had he done so when his sensitive ear detected many discords which he had not noticed outside. He had unwittingly stumbled upon a chorus choir at rehearsal, and so painful were the discords to the musician that he would have left the building immediately had he not feared that in so doing he might offend the singers. After he had listened for a time, however, he distinguished one voice of rare sweetness singing in perfect time and tune. He found that this voice never wavered, but simply kept itself true to the key. After a while he noticed fewer discords in the other voices; one by one they blended in with that of the sweet singer who kept the key, until at last all of them were singing in perfect harmony.

If you and I persist in keeping our own lives pure and sweet, we will be helping more than we can ever know to bring some other life into harmony with that which is highest and best. There is a power in the influence which one life exerts unconsciously upon another that makes for results that sometimes reach far beyond the limits of one's knowledge and understanding."

The above quotation from Farm and Home comes very opportune just now, as there is some discord in the Church of God. If we would all try and follow our Leader, sing the same song, and try to learn it perfectly, discord would vanish, and we would become a happy band of singers, acceptable to our Leader. But when some are singing some other song or trying to sing the same song in some other tune, it makes such an unhappy discord that we fear the final results will be very disastrous to many. When our Saviour sang that command, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature; he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, he that believeth not shall be condemned," it is in harmony with all that sing the same song. When one sings that all mankind will be saved; or that there are many that have not had a fair chance and that they must have a fair chance or God is unjust judge, and other isms that some are singing and yet are claiming to belong to the same body, it certainly makes very inharmonious music, and creates a dissension which Paul requires us to avoid. "Now I beseech you brethren, by the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among you; but that ye be perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment." In those churches that Paul labored so hard to establish, and taught them that whoever preached a gospel different from the one that he had preached should be accursed, when he heard that there were contentions among them it grieved him so that he cried out, "Is Christ divided? Was Paul crucified for you? Or were ye baptized in the name of Paul?" There seems to be just now a disposition to unite all these different factions. It could be done if all would drop their contentions, and unite on the gospel that Christ, Paul, and others preached 1900 years ago. God's plan of saving people has not changed since Paul's day. But there has been so many inventions in the last 100 years, that the great majority of mankind have lost sight of God's plan; therefor they are out of harmony with God. Until the brethren can unite on articles of faith to guide one to the true gospel, we fear there will never be harmony among them. You never can bring all these different factions into harmony without some giving up their hobby. Paul says, "The Lord knoweth them that are his." He tells Timothy, "If any man teach otherwise, and consent not to wholesome words, even the words of our Lord Jesus Christ, and to the doctrine which is according to godliness, he is proud, knowing nothing, but doting about questions and strifes of words whereof cometh envy, strife, railings, evil surmisings, perverse disputings of men of corrupt minds and destitute of the truth, supposing that gain is godliness: from such withdraw thyself." In fact he tells Titus, Timothy, and the different churches that he established, to withdraw from all contention about anything opposed to his gospel, and warned them that in the last days they would not endure sound doctrines; and we are right there now. "They turn away their ears from truth," he says, "and shall be turned unto fables." No wonder that when Christ was teaching his disciples about the latter days they cried out, "Who then can be saved?" But Christ answers that question; there has been no change made since: "He that believeth (the gospel) and is baptized, shall be saved." Will we sing that song and be in harmony with the gift of God?

E. W. KNAPP.
Monkland, Oregon.

The second coming of our Lord is not the outpouring of the Holy Spirit. True, his presence is brought to us by his spirit, but the Holy Spirit is not his personal coming. The words of Jesus makes this clear: "Nevertheless I tell you the truth; it is expedient for you that I go away; for if I go not away, the comforter will not come unto you; but if I depart, I will send him unto you." (John 16:7.) No; Christ's second coming is a personal, literal, visible coming. Do you wish to see him?

As a city already weakened can not long stand a siege, so a character already weakened by self-indulgence falls quickly before an onslaught of temptation.

The Restitution

Issued weekly by

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING COMPANY.

Entered as second-class matter under act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

TERMS.

One year $1.50; six months 75 cents, in advance.

ROBT. G. HUGGINS.....Editor
BUELL W. NUTT.....Manager

BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Burton H. Lang, Harry Pott,
Chas. A. Coss, Wm. G. Rothe,
Buell W. Nutt, D. C. Robson,
W. S. Tomlinson.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

All remittances should be sent by bank draft, post office money order or express money order to The Restitution Publishing Co., 803 Parkwood drive, Cleveland, Ohio.

All communication intended for publication should be sent to the editor, Robt. G. Huggins, 10623 Lee avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

It is necessary to adhere strictly to the rule of not returning unused manuscripts. Writers will please keep copies, or risk the loss.

While the editor exercises a general supervision over the articles appearing in The Restitution, his endorsement does not extend to the interpretation of details nor the exegesis of particular texts in the writings of contributors.

Cleveland, Ohio....Dec. 10, 1911

EDITORIAL

An affectionate, happy Christmas greeting to all our readers.

Please write only on one side of the paper. All know this rule, yet many forget it when writing for The Restitution.

"What is a short proof of inspiration?" asked Frederick the Great of his chaplain. "The Jews, your majesty," was the answer.

We regret that The Messenger, a paper for which Brother Rothe was agent in this country, is now defunct. It appears by a letter from him in this issue, that Words of Life, the organ of the Conditional Immortality Mission, will take the place of The Messenger. One copy has come to us, but we have not yet examined it critically and for the present defer expressing our judgment of it.

The Church Walking With the World, poetry selected by Sister C. C. Ramsay, of Philadelphia, Pa., beautiful in sentiment and faultless in style, will appear in next issue. Watch for it, read it, study it, and you will get a good sermon in verse. Remember, it appears next week.

We have received the sixth volume of The Fundamentals, a pamphlet of 127 pages. It seems to be issued by The Testimony Publishing Co., with the design of neutralizing the arguments of skeptics. We have profited by reading the work. We may give our readers the benefit of an article (very interesting and of great worth) entitled "The Hope of the Church," a splendid article on the turn of Christ, by John McNicol, of Toronto.

END OF SANFORD AND SANFORDISM.

The United States and most of the other civilized nations now safguard entire religious freedom. And that is a privilege which can not, for any reason, be safely withdrawn. Yet it is an unfortunate fact that this protection acts as a barrier against nearly all efforts to prevent the victimizing of credulous people by religious cranks and scoundrels who adopt religion as a cloak for nefarious designs. The result is that such scenes are witnessed as the marching of naked Doukobars through public streets in the Canadian Northwest, and breaking up of homes by "sect" founders who pretend to believe that they are reincarnations of the disciples or prophets of old.

However, there is a case now before the public which probably will result in placing one of these men where he can do no harm and in disbanding the organization he has formed. He has violated the law in such a way that it can get at him. This "apostle," Rev. Frank W. Sandford, who claims to be Elijah, is the head of the "Holy Ghost and Us Society," which for eighteen years has maintained a religious community at Shiloh, Me. Many cases have been heard of in which people have surrendered all their property to Sandford, but as no complaints were made no legal action was taken.

Recently this man, and some of his followers returned from a voyage on a schooner to Africa, where they went to convert the natives. Six of the people on board the ship died on account of Sandford's neglect to provide necessary provisions and his refusal to permit easily obtainable relief for them. He has been tried and found guilty of causing these deaths. His sentence is likely to be severe. Probably the colony at Shiloh can not go on without him.

Sandford is undoubtedly a man of great mental force. He is probably sincere in the belief that he was sent from on high to save the world. The results of his fanaticism or monomania will not lessen the activities of religious cranks, but they may serve as a warning to religious mountebanks and the people that both fanatics and swindlers seek to influence.

EDITOR'S SERMON NOTES ON THE APOCALYPSE

Subject: Christ's Message to the Smyrnean Church

Text: Rev. 2:8-11

I. History of the Church. Its formation, progress and division. Acts 19:26. Home of Polycarp. Birthplace of Homer. Church there was commended by Ignatius. The "fallen" Ephesians left Ephesus (because they were not tolerated there) and went to Smyrna, where they established a church of their own. "Synagogue of Satan," V 9; 1 Jno. 2:19; Jas. 2:2-7. Their blasphemy, V 9; Jno. 6:63; 1:47; Rom. 2:24, 28, 29; 9:6-8; Phil. 3:2, 3; 1 Tim. 6:5.

II. Things in the Church which Christ Commends. 1 Tribulation and poverty. V. 9; Acts 14:22; 1 Thess. 3:4; Heb. 10:34; 1 Cor. 4:11-13; Heb. 11:37; Matt. 19:23. II. But thou art rich. Luke 12:21; 1 Tim. 6:18; Jas. 2:5.

III. Christ's wisdom in speaking a word to the weary. Isa. 50:4, Rev. 2:10. 1. He frankly tells them the worst. Acts 9:16; 20:22, 23; Matt. 10:16-31; Luke 9:23; Jno. 16:1. II. The imprisoning and killing power of the devil and why. V. 10; Matt. 10:23; 2 Chron. 32-31; Jas. 1:12. III. Then the alleviations—"ten days," Gen. 24:55; Num. 11:19. Trajan, A. D. 98 to 117. IV. Briefness of the trial is urged as a motive for the patient endurance of it. Isa. 26:20; 54:8; Psa. 30:5; Matt. 24:22; 1 Pet. 1:6; 5:10; II Cor. 4:17.

IV. The Promise. 1. "Crown of Life." A garland of victory and a diadem of royalty. V. 10; Jas. 1:12; 1 Tim. 4:8; 1 Pet. 5:4; Isa. 52-3; Rev. 4:4; 5:10. II "Not hurt of the second death." As there is a life for the righteous subsequent to death, so there is a death for the wicked after death. Heb. 9:27; 11:35-40; Luke 12:4-5; Rev. 20: 6, 14; 21:8.

COMMUNICATIONS

Dear Brother Huggins: I dearly love our paper and could not think of doing without it. Brother Almus Adams has been here for some time preaching and directing us in the narrow way. He will soon start on his southern trip to New Mexico and other states. May the Lord bless him and grant him a safe return to Nebraska. I will never forget the good time we had at Moorefield, Neb., last fall at the conference. May the Lord bless you and your wife and dear little "Baby Huggins," is my prayer.

Your sister in the faith,
MRS. LUCY LAPP.

Our little body is rejoicing over three new members who have put on the all-saving name. On last Sunday afternoon I baptized Charles Netts, husband of Sister Mabel Netts; Walter H. Poole, husband of Sister Margaret Poole, and Carrie Howell, daughter of Brother and Sister B. H. Howell, and sister in the flesh of Sister Mabel Netts. May they be shining lights for the cause of the Lord and Saviour, and be always ready to defend the Truth.

Your brother in the Blessed Hope,
DAVID F. BECK.
Springfield, O.

It is with much regret that I inform you of the discontinuance of "The Messenger" with the coming December issue. Many of its friends and readers will subscribe for "Words of Life," the official organ of the Conditional Immortality Mission of Great Britain, a magazine also advocating Life and Advent truths. I have agreed to take the American agency for this publication, and confidently trust that all subscribers to "The Messenger," through me, will now transfer their subscriptions for the coming year to "Words of Life." Terms: 1 copy, 37 cents per annum, 12 copies to one address, 25 cents per copy per annum. Thanking you for all favors. Fraternally yours,

WILLIAM G. ROTHE.

I have closed a very successful meeting at Reading, Minn. I preached thirty sermons in all and baptized four good, earnest, zealous people into the name of Jesus. There is a good interest here at present. Most all denominations were represented as we held our meetings in the Presbyterian church. A Baptist preacher attended three or four nights to hear us. I talked on the Kingdom of God, then all at once he stopped. When asked what he thought of our views, he replied: "There is nothing to it." He has no use for a literal kingdom. His kingdom is spiritual. It is hard work to make people realize that the spiritual is only the natural made perfect. We have received in all $123.97; paid out $74.38; baptized seven good, honest, earnest, zealous people. Brethren, does it pay to evangelize? I have on hand $49.60 as a salary for three months' work. Have preached 85 sermons, making me 58 cents per sermon, and costing $17.70 a convert. I have visited several places where a brother alone paid $25.00, and thought nothing of it; but this support is the donations of a large number of brethren. I have heard considerable talk among brethren about the soon coming of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. Do we believe it, or do we profess? We know God, yet in our works deny him. May the Lord find us teaching for his coming.

O. J. ALLARD.
Ft. Dodge, Ia.

I must say our Restitution is much valued, and we will never be without it as long as we are able to pay for it. It gives us the only sermons we have, with the exception of once a year, we drive twenty miles to Hillisburg, Ind., and hear Bro. Joseph Williams expound the truth. We were up there in September and had two real feasts of the truth.

My husband was raised in the Abrahamic faith; I was raised and belonged to the Baptist church. When I was married I had never heard one word of the doctrine. It seemed so strange to hear my husband say, "Oh, dear me, I wish people would read their Bibles and stop saying people went to their reward at death." It really worries him very much now.

Now, Bro. Huggins, a few questruth. I was baptised into the tions, I am really seeking the faith in June, 1904, and have learned much since, but there are some things I do not understand yet.

What is the Holy Spirit spoken of in Acts 4:31? Do we need to have it now, and when and how do we receive it? I have been taught that we were born again (John 3:3), when converted. My husband say not. He says the new birth is at the resurrection when those who are born again can come and go as the wind (John 3:8).

Our neighbors are all sanctified. We have gone a few times to a Methodist meeting and have seen our neighbor's receive sanctification. They pray at the altar a while, and then claim they receive sanctification. Please tell me what about this, and how can we get it according to the Bible?

MRS. ROSE McCOY.

(As to what the Holy Spirit is in Acts 4:31, we think it is sufficiently obvious from the passage itself, which reads: "The place was shaken where they were assembled together; and they were all filled with the Holy Spirit, and they spake the word of God with boldness." The Holy Spirit is always the "power of the Highest" (Lk. 1:35) in some kind of manifestation (1 Cor. 12). The word "shaken" in the text suggests that on the occasion referred to it appeared like a "rushing mighty wind," as at Pentecost (Acts 2:2). Then it filled all the "house where they were sitting;" now "they" (that is, the entire "company" of believers, see verse 23), were all filled with the Holy Spirit." Of course filling a house and men with the Spirit does not fit well with the sanctification and new birth ideas entertained by the churches. With them a man is "born again" and gets sanctified or reaches sinless perfection when the spirit is received. When however, a "house" (Acts 2:2) is filled with it, it never occurs to them to say that the house is "born again," or that it is sanctified! Peter and John were already sanctified; their souls were purified and sanctified when they obeyed the truth (1 Pet. 1:22; 1 Thess. 2:13). In Acts 4:31 the Spirit was given to them for another purpose entirely. They were in a time of great peril. When their enemies demanded of them, "By what power have ye done this?" Peter was "filled with the Holy Spirit" to give the answer (vss. 7, 8), Christ's promise to them in Matt. 10:19 accounts for the "boldness of Peter and John" (v. 13). In keeping with these facts Acts 1:31 states that when they were filled with the Holy Spirit "they spake the word of God with boldness."—Editor.)

To the Brethren:

I expect to start to Oklahoma and New Mexico about January 1st. Will probably go by way of Kansas City, and over the Rock Island road from there to Oklahoma. Can return through Missouri or by some other route if any should desire meetings. Brethren, if you want a meeting write me at 4019 Webster avenue, Omaha, Nebraska, Ames Station.

ALMUS ADAMS.

THE STAR OF BETHLEHEM.

An Angel of The Lord.

Men's minds, says a writer in an exchange, were a short time ago much exercised by the appearance of a "star" in a position amongst the heavenly bodies not noticed by them before, and speculation was rife as to whether or not it was "The Star of Bethlehem" expected by many to appear at this time; and, if so, what momentous events did its visit portend?

Leaving them to their speculations, we turn to the scriptures of truth, for they are the only source from which information of a satisfactory character (on this subject) can be obtained. Nothing is found therein to indicate that such a star should ever appear either previous to the birth of "the King of the Jews" or afterwards. Hence the thoughtful mind is led to ask: Was the "star" that appeared unto the wise men from the East literal or figurative? Especially is it so when it is remembered that "the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets" (Amos iii. 7). Amongst the many prophecies concerning the coming Messiah not one of them indicate a literal star as one of the signs that should precede his birth. On the contrary, the evidence points altogether in another direction. Where a star or stars are spoken of there is no difficulty of determining from their connection whether the language is used in a figurative sense or not.

In the remarkable dream of Joseph where the "sun, and the moon, and the eleven stars made obeisence to him" (Gen. xxxviii. 9), there is no difficulty in recognizing the figure which was obvious even to his father and his brethren, and much more so to us who have the record of its literal fulfillment when God had raised him up to be ruler over the land of Egypt.

When Balaam, the son of Beor, was blessing Israel at the command of God, instead of cursing them at the request of Balak, he says "There shall come a star out of Jacob, and a sceptre shall rise out of Israel, and shall smite the corners of Moab, and destroy all the children of Sheith" (Numbers xxiv. 17). Here the figure used points unmistakably to the one who was born in Bethlehem and who will, when seated on his throne in Zion, compel not only Moab and Sheth, but all kings to fall before him and all nations serve him; for it is written of him that he shall be called, at that time, "King of Kings and Lord of Lords" (Rev. xix. 16).

In these two instances (and others that could be given), the figure used represents men. But there are instances where it is used for a different purpose. The Lord in answering Job asks him where he was "when the foundations of the earth were laid" and "when the morning star sang together, and all the sons of God shouted for joy?" (Job xxxviii. 7). Here is an instance where stars are used to represent the angels. This is brought out more forcibly when the words of Christ to John are borne in mind, in the revelation given to him, the explanation of the mystery that had been shown him that "The seven stars (which John had seen in the right hand of the one like unto the Son of Man) are the angels of the seven churches" (Rev. i. 20). Some infer that the angels referred to in this case are human not angelic, messengers; but that does not alter the fact that stars are used to represent angels whether they be celestial or terrestrial.

Returning then to the question as to whether "the star" seen by the wise men from the East was a literal one or not, it is submitted that it could not have been for several reasons.

First of all neither revelation nor science ever speaks of any star passing from one portion of the heavens to another. Science divides them into two classes, fixed stars and planets, the latter revolving round their own axis, like our earth. True there have been "Star-gazers" in all ages who have beguiled the foolish with their lies as to the influence this or that star has upon their lives, but it has only been for their own selfishness; and when difficulties have been brought before them, as was done by the King of Babylon, when he asked his wise men and astrologers to reveal unto him, on pain of death, a dream which he had dreamt, and which had gone from him, they were as helpless as a babe. It is only men like Daniel, who are wise in the wisdom of Jehovah that could reveal such secrets unto the king. Daniel did not go star-gazing to discover the dream, but to the Creator of them, who revealed it unto him in a vision of the night. God has always revealed to his servants his purpose, either by the Holy Spirit, by dreams, by angels, or by visions; not one instance where he ever commanded them to study the heavenly bodies to discover what should transpire in or upon the earth.

It must be evident then that the wise men from the East who came to Bethlehem were not of the class who studied the solar system to beguile their fellows; but men who were students of Moses and the prophets, probably Israelites (for who else could have any interest in the king of the Jews?) men wise in the knowledge that was revealed. They knew that a certain period would elapse from the re-building of Jerusalem, after the restoration from Babylon, till "the Messiah, the Prince" should come. As true servants of God they were praying for his speedy coming, when lo, in answer to their petitions, an angelic-star appears to tell them of his birth and guide their footsteps to the place where "the young child lay."

If the star was a literal one, how were they to know it was "the star" of Christ if it was not revealed unto them? Why was it that afterwards they were warned of God in a dream not to return unto Herod, instead of discovering for themselves, what threatened the young child, from the star? Surely if their knowledge of it enabled them to discover the birth of "the King of the Jews," they ought to have been equal to the task of discovering from the same source what were Herod's intentions towards him.

The fact that God was in it takes away the idea altogether that the star of Christ was anything else than an angel who was sent to guide those servants of God to Bethlehem. All the other incidents in connection with that momentous event point to this conclusion. An angel was sent unto his mother to tell her that she should conceive and bring forth a son, and call his name Jesus.

On the plains of Bethlehem, shepherds, watching their flocks by night, had the joyful news conveyed unto them, by an angelic being, that there was born unto them in the city of David, a Saviour, Christ the Lord. And while the gladsome message was being told "suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God, and saying, Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, goodwill toward men.

An angel was also sent to his parents, warning them to flee into Egypt, to escape the destruction that came upon the children of Bethlehem, when all (reckoning from the birth of Christ) from two years old and under were slain by the command of Herod the king.

These and other incidents in connection with his birth had been previously foretold, and it is reasonable to suppose that if a literal star had to appear to herald his birth it would also have been predicted that we should have been told that it was in fulfilment of such and such a prophecy as in the other cases. This guiding angel was nothing new in the history of the children of Israel, for when Moses brought them up out of the land of Egypt, "The Lord (by an angel, chap. xiv. v. 19) went before them by day in a pillar of a cloud, to lead them the way; and by night in a pillar of fire, to give them light; to go by day and night" (Exodus viii. 21).

Seeing the evidence precludes a literal star at the first appearing of Christ, there is no necessity to look for it appearing again previous to his second coming. Nevertheless, there are many signs abroad in the earth that show truly that that day is near. He himself foretold as some of the signs that would precede his coming, "There shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations with perplexity; the sea and the waves roaring" (Luke xxi. 25). This last phrase "the sea and the waves roaring" precludes us taking it literally, as it would be nothing new, and could therefore be no sign. But when taken as a figure representing the nations of the earth in an uproarious condition, how easily such a sign could be discerned. Even this figure of speech is used in the present time. A writer in The Times speaking concerning an outbreak of war says, "There are different strata of European interests, and states that act in one direction in small difficulties may take quite another when the fountains of the great deep are broken up."

Hence then instead of looking at the literal sun, moon, and stars, for signs of the coming Christ, those who are "wise" look to the political heavens and earth to see what is transpiring there to indicate his speedy advent. This language will be better understood by a quotation from The Daily Telegraph; speaking of the French revolution it says: "To have spoken of any names that a Frenchman might be proud, or any deeds that he might emulate, would have been to blaspheme the new heavens and insult the new earth which the revolution had created." The language here clearly points to the rulers and those who are ruled over, and this language abounds in scripture, and when care is exercised there is no difficulty in discovering it. This doubtless may appear strange to many who are ignorant of the word of God, for it is written "many shall be purified, and made white, and tried; but the wicked shall do wickedly; and none of the wicked shall understand; but the wise shall understand." (Dan. xii. 10). Not men who are wise in their own conceits but those who have derived their wisdom from God through studying his word with the humility of a little child.

Those who are thus wise see that the nations are at unrest, and preparing as speedily as they can for that destruction that awaits them for their iniquity, at the hands of God. He has declared that he "will gather all nations against Jerusalem to battle" and destroy them there; establishing upon their lands an everlasting kingdom, the dominion of whose king shall be "from sea to sea, from the river unto the ends of the earth." Then will the suns, the moons, and stars of the European heavens be darkened, and not give their light, falling to rise no more; their power and glory gone. They will be eclipsed and extinguished forever by the splendor and glory of the sun of righteousness. He shall arise as "the bright and morning star" giving unto his servants a place with him in that "new heavens" which he shall establish in Mount Zion when it shall be "the joy of the whole earth." For they that be wise shall shine (in those heavens) as the brightness of the firmament; and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars for ever and ever." (Dan. xii. 3). The wise are they who seek "first the kingdom of God and his righteousness," knowing that all other things shall be added unto them when that kingdom shall be established in the earth. For then, said their master "shall the righteous shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father. Who hath ears to hear let him hear." (Matt. xiii. 43).

The theory of the truth will not save men; the knowledge of God's will will not keep men from sin. There must be a "love of the truth." It is our affection for a thing which molds our lives like it. It is an overruling, controlling love for God as seen in his word, and that word as seen in the character of Christ. Such love keeps all of God's commandments and counts them not burdensome.

THE BIRTH OF JESUS.

Some wise men in an Eastern land
Were gazing in the sky;
A brilliant star appeared to them,
They knew the king was nigh.

This star was sent to be their guide,
To bring them to the king:
They were the favored ones on earth,
Rich offerings they did bring.

And far away from where they were
A babe had just been born;
Angels had heralded his birth
Upon that wondrous morn.

The shepherd's came with hope and awe
To see that royal babe;
No regal pomp attended him
Just in a manger laid.

Thus He who is the King of Kings
Came thus with lowly birth;
But He will come again to us,
And purify this earth.

He'll sweep the Herod's from the earth,
Destroy the men of greed.
Set up that long o'erturned throne,
And succor those in need.

He'll raise up all his sleeping ones;
Give them eternal life;
Then ruling here with mighty power,
He'll put an end to strife.

A. WALLACE MASON
Cleveland, O.

BEREAN DEPARTMENT.

The Faith and Promises.

Dear Bereans:

In 2 Pet. 1:4 we read: "Whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises, that by these ye might be partakers of the divine nature, having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust." In the preceding verses it is shown that it is through the knowledge of God and our Saviour Jesus that we receive these great and precious promises. Now what are these promises that are so great and precious that by them we are to partake of the divine nature? In the first verse he says: "To them that have obtained like precious faith with us." Then these promises are something we must have faith in. In Gen. we read of promises that God made to Abraham, viz., that he would give him and his seed the land of Canaan for an everlasting possession. Stephen speaking of this promise says that God gave him now inheritance in it, no, not so much as to set his foot on; and yet he promised that he would give it to him for a possession. Acts 7:5. Paul says: "Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not, And to seeds, as of many, but as of one, and to thy seed, which is Christ. (Gal. 3:16). How are we to become heir with Abraham to the everlasting possession? Ye are all children of God by faith in Christ Jesus. For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ, have put on Christ. And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise. (Gal. 3:26, 27, 29).

If children then heirs; heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ, if so be we suffer with him, that we may be also glorified together" (Rom. 8:17). If we suffer with him, we shall also reign with him. II Tim. 2:12). In whom ye have obtained an inheritance. Eph. 1:11). Giving thanks to the Father, which hath made us meet to be partakers of the inheritance of the saints in light. (Col. 1:12). So then the scriptures Peter speaks of are none other than those made unto the fathers, and continued in Christ. For it pleased the Father that in him should all fulness dwell. (Col. 1:19). So let us hold fast those promises that are so exceeding great and precious, and by which we are to obtain that eternal inheritance, that when the Master appears we shall be admitted abundantly into his everlasting kingdom, wherein dwelleth righteousness.

WM. HARDESTY.
Oregon, Ill.

God's Sacrifice Reciprocated

Dear Bereans:

God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten son that we might have life eternal not by disobeying Christ, but by hearing, believing, and obeying the word of God and living a righteous life. God's love for the world was great, and we should try to prove our love worthy of the great sacrifice He made for us all, that we may have a place in that kingdom which will be established on earth, and live with Christ through life eternal.

In time of sorrow and trouble, God's love is a solace and comfort to all those that put their trust in him. O such restful peace to know that their trust in him. O such restful peace to know that there is one to forgive our wrongs and help us bear our burdens. Max each day of our lives show some kind or deed done for the love of our dear heavenly Father.

Yours in hope of eternal life.
MARY GOEKLER.
Greenes, Ill.

An Isolated One in The Work

Dear Bereans:

It is with pleasure I add my letter to the Berean column. We are many miles from the place we occupied when we joined the Bereans society; we may indeed be called isolated ones now, but we can work with you if we are isolated. I am reminded of what dear Bro. Wm. H. Witt on said in Pasadena, California, the last Sunday—he urged us to organize and by all means, he said, "organize a Berean society," for he knew the good they were doing at points he had visited, so instructive for young and old alike. I know they are a help to us all, especially the young, who are inquiring for the right path.

A very favorable report comes in The Restitution of the work done for the past year in Illinois, and we pray that more may be done in the year that is coming to us so fast. Our time to work may be short; we know not the day nor the hour our Lord may come. If we are prepared for His coming, what a glorious rest is promised to the faithful ones!

"O Christian, toil on.
Work, work, while 'tis day;
And soon a bright crown you will gain
In the land of the blest.
The weary shall rest
From labor, temptation and pain."

Your sister, asking a share in your prayers, and desiring a part in that rest promised to the faithful.

AZORAH M. SCROGGS.
Prado, Cal.

Excuses

As I was called upon to write an article for our Berean column, I began to find excuses, such as, "I couldn't write," "too busy," and such alike; then the when I studied about it I thought: Is it right that we make these excuses? And I said, No. It seems so easy to make excuses for not attending church and serving God as we should; when we make one excuse it is so much easier the next time, and so it goes on until we find we are too busy with worldly affairs to take an interest in the church and Jesus Christ. In Luke 14:18 to 23 we find where a great man made a supper and invited many; when all was ready he sent his servant to have them come. But they began to make excuses: One had bought a piece of ground and must go see it; another yoke of oxen, he must prove them; and another had married a wife and could not come. When the servants told their master these things he was very angry, and told his servants to go into the streets of the city and bring in the poor, the maimed, the halt and the blind, that his house might be filled, and that none of the men that were bidden should taste of the supper. So it shall be with us if we do not use the talent that we have.

In Matt. 21:43 we can see what it says, also in Matt. 22:8-14, where the wedding is ready, but they which were bidden were not worthy; for many are called, but few are chosen. So let us be up and doing what we can, although it may seem small to us if offered in the right spirit, like the widow's mite, it will be accepted.

And now dear Bereans, when we are called upon to speak a few words, or write a few lines, let us not begin to find excuses, so that when the Master comes we may be one of the chosen to go in with Him.

VENA DEXSMORE.
Mt. Sterling, Ill.

IS THE SOUL IMMORTAL?

In reading over the "Mail Bag" department of a recent issue of the Christian Herald, we came across the following in one of the answers:

The Bible nowhere declares that man is of himself and inherently immortal. "The soul that sinneth it shall die." When sin entered, then came physical decay and death; man's first condition was lost, and with the occurrence of sin, and consequent unforgiven, he also forfeited spiritual immortality. Eternal life is the gift of God. Paul declares that Jesus, through the gospel, brought life and immortality to light for fallen man, and showed the path to restoration thru repentance, forgiveness and acceptance.

S. D. McConnell, D. D., D. C. L., in his book "The Evolution of Immortality," says on p. 37:—

It is commonly assumed that each individual soul has had a beginning, but is so constituted and compounded of such stuff that it is intrinsically imperishable. . . To many it will be a surprise to be assured that this is not a Christian doctrine at all, but a pagan one.

Richard Watson, D. D. (1781-1833) was an eminent Wesleyan Methodist theologian. Said Dr. Watson:

That the soul is naturally immortal is contradicted by Scripture, which makes our immortality a gift dependent on the giver.

Says Dr. Hermann Olshausen, in his well-known "Commentary on the New Testament," V-4, IV p. 481:

The doctrine of the immortality of the soul and the name are alike unknown to the entire Bible.

These are strong statements, indeed, but we will search in vain to find in Holy Writ a single text to prove that the soul of man is inherently immortal. True, we are taught that man may live forever, but everlasting life is always conditional in the Word of God. "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life" (John 3:16). "Who will render to every man according to his deeds: to them who, by patient continuance in well doing, seek for glory and honor and immortality, eternal life" (Rom. 2:6-7).

LINDEN J. CARTER.

JEWS HAVE A FUTURE

"For I would not brethren that ye should be ignorant of this mystery that blindness in part has happened to Israel until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in."

1. Did not Paul think the Jews had a future when he wrote the eleventh chapter of Romans, "Hath God cast away His people? God forbid; for I also am an Israelite."

2. If the Church is Israel, when did God cast away His Church? "Now if the fall of them be the riches of the world, and the diminishing of them the riches of the Gentiles, how much more their fullness?" "If the casting away of them be the reconciling of the world, what shall the receiving of them be but life from the dead?

3. Are words intended to express or conceal ideas?

4. By what law of unnatural "selection" does a man apply the Old Testament blessings to the church and leave its curses for the Jews?

5. If a Christian believes that he is to "reign with Christ" over the kingdom and even to judge angels, why should he wish to steal the promises of earthly prosperity given to the Jews?

6. Is not this imitating too closely the method of Jacob in robbing Esau of the blessing?

7. When did ten proud Gentile- "of all the languages of the nations" take hold of the skirt of him that is a Jew," except to rob him?

8. Did not Christ say, "Jerusalem shall be trodden under foot of the Gentiles till the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled?" Does "until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled" mean forever?

9. When did "the Lord set His hand again the second time to recover the remnant of His people—from the islands of the sea?"

10. Has not history shown the logical results of confounding the church with Israel and the kingdom, when the consistent Puritans hung witches as "the church"(?) in the Old Testament was commanded; and when Cromwell massacred the Irish as "Canaanites and blood-thirsty idolaters"? If the Church is the kingdom, why should the Church and State be separated?

11. Were not many of the religious wars based upon the theory that the Church is Israel and therefore "must tread its enemies under foot"?

12. If the Church is Zion, does the Head of the Church live in Rome, Salt Lake City or Zion, Ill.? It is written, "there shall come out of Zion a deliverer, and turn away ungodliness from Jacob." Did the Deliverer come out of the Church and turn away ungodliness from the Church?

13. What did Peter mean when he said of the Lord, "After this I will return and will build again the tabernacle of David which is fallen down, and will build again the ruins thereof and set it up"? Is the Church in ruins?

14. Is a man a pessimist if he believes that the "tabernacle of David" means the tabernacle of David and not the Christian Church?

15. Would it be any more difficult to rebuild the temple in the future than it was several times in the past?

16. If the Church is the kingdom, how could Peter write to Christians already in the Church, "For so an abundant entrance shall be ministered unto you into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ."

17. If the Church is the kingdom, who is God Christ mean when He said "Verily I say unto you That ye who have followed Me in the regeneration when the Son of Man shall sit in the throne of His glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel?"

18. If the Church is to reign with Christ, whom is it to reign over? Who, then, are the twelve tribes of Israel? Must not so define a promise made at so solemn a time have meant something?

19. Has it yet come to pass that all the nations which came up against Jerusalem are going up from year to year—to "keep the feast of tabernacles"? Did not Zechariah say, "Thus saith the Lord of Hosts, There shall yet old men and women dwell in the streets of Jerusalem, and every man with his staff in his hand for very age." Has his prediction been fulfilled by the Turk? Will the Christian need a staff in the New Jerusalem? Must not this yet be fulfilled by the Jews?

20. When a certain nobleman went into a far country to receive a kingdom and to return, did he receive the church? If the kingdom which he received is the church, to whom will he return?

21. Should the servants to whom were given the talents, and the command "Occupy till I come" try to establish a kingless kingdom while the nobleman is gone to receive the kingdom? Is the Church lying in Ezekiel's valley of dry bones? If not, have these verses been fulfilled, "Behold my people, I will open your graves and cause you to come up out of your graves and bring you into the land of Israel—and David, my servant shall be king over them, and shall be their prince for ever."

22. Hath not the Lord said, "If Heaven above can be measured and the foundations of the earth searched out beneath, I also will cast off all the seed of Israel, for all that they have done saith the Lord." The Lord's Coming, published by C. C. Cook.

THE IMPORTANCE OF IN SIGNIFICANT THINGS.

Life is made of small things. We generally think of the larger things, yet the small ones make the larger. This illustrates my meaning:

One step and then another
And the longest walk is ended;
One stitch and then another,
And the largest rent is mended;
One brick upon another,
And the highest wall is made;
One flake upon another,
And the deepest snow is laid.

Often we are too careless of the little things of life. We are like Naaman; if we can do some great thing we pride ourselves on accomplishing the task. We forget that it takes more real, true courage to do some of the little, common, seemingly unimportant things, than to do large ones. We all more or less look for the big things, and is it not human nature? Some of the smaller things seem so trivial that we think they surely can't amount to much, and so they are neglected.

This reminds me of a story in my school reader that teaches the value of trifles. A certain man was to meet the king on a certain day and hour to counsel with him concerning a battle. He had no way of reaching the king except going by horse back. Through some carelessness the horse lost one nail from one of its shoes. For the loss of the nail the shoe was lost; for want of the shoe the horse was lost; for want of the horse the rider was lost; for want of the rider the kingdom was lost; and all for the loss of a horse shoe nail!

In Heb. 2 we read: "Therefore we ought to give the more earnest heed to the things which we have heard, lest at any time we should let them slip."

This is Paul's way of telling us to take care of the little tasks. He wasn't afraid that they could lose all that they had heard at any one time, but a little at a time.

It has been said that religion is merely a matter of remembrance. While we remember the exceeding great and precious promises made unto us, and recall the scene of Gethsemane, knowing that Jesus suffered that terrible death that we might have eternal life, it is not so difficult to keep in the narrow way. But then sometimes we forget. By the daily study of God's word we are strengthened and made strong, so that we may remember and be the victors in the end.

This thought was suggested to me some time ago, and it has been quite a source of help to me. Every morning when we rise, let our first thought be, "I am a child of God." It seems to make one live in a higher atmosphere. What a blessed privilege is granted unto us that we may be called children of God! May we all so live that we shall truly be children of God in that great day when Jesus comes, is my prayer.

ETTIEL LEHMAN.
Troy, Ohio.

CORN SHEAVES

Gathered From Everywhere

The Bible Its Own Miracle.—The position and influence of the Bible over mankind is remarkable. The first day's sale of the Revised Version of the New Testament exceeded a million copies. The Bible is the foundation-stone of the temple of all progressive civilization. It is the book of the cottage and the castle; of the philosopher and the wayfaring man. The Bible is its own miracle. The consciousness of Christendom testifies that there is something more than human in it. And the secularist has not yet superseded it by a Bible of his own.

The Bible of Jewish not of Gentile Origin.—The Bible is a collection of Jewish documents. The Bible contains Gentile references and Gentile quotations, but no single book of the Bible is of Gentile authorship. All the inspired penmen were Jews. Not one of the prophets who shared in either writing or compiling the Old Testament was a Gentile. The Old Testament is vitally connected with the annals of the Jewish people and the Jewish Church. The Messiah, the central personage of the Bible, was born of a Jewish maiden. The writers of the New Testament were all likewise of the Jewish race. There was an apostle of the Gentiles, but no Gentile apostle. The testimony of time is showing the Bible to be a book fitted and needful for all races, all families of men; but from the Pentateuch of Moses to the prophecies of Malachi; from the gospel of St. Matthew to the Revelation of St. John, not one of the documents of the Bible is of other than Jewish origin.

The Bible a Library of Books, Yet a Single Volume.—The construction of the Bible is scarcely less noteworthy than its career. The term bible signifies a book, but the Bible is not a book in the ordinary acceptation of the term. A book is generally the work of a single man, deals with a single topic, is composed in a single age. Very few books are written by more than one author, compiled by more than one editor, or are in hand for more than one lifetime. But the Bible was written by above thirty men; it comprehends an immense variety of topics; it was composed at intervals extending over not less than a thousand years. It is more like a library of books than a single book. Indeed Jerome, the profoundest Bible student of the early Christian age, or perhaps of any age, called it, "The Sacred Library." (Bibliotheca Sancta). For four centuries after Christ the term "writing" or "writings" was the common appellation of Holy Scripture, and not the term bible or book. When the term book began to be applied to the sacred library of inspired writings it was applied in the plural form, books; not in the singular form book. The primitive Christians thought of Scripture, not as the Bible, but as a collection of Bibles. It is less than nine centuries ago that in the modern languages of Europe the singular began to be used instead of the plural noun; and Christians spoke not of the bibles or books, but of the book of books—the Bible.

The Authorship of the Bible.—Henry Rogers lay down the proposition which he proves beyond cavil in his "Supernatural Origin of the Bible," that man would not have written the Bible if he could, and he could not if he would. All the objections against the truth of the book, consisting as it does of what seems to be national record, etc., show that if man thought of imposing a book on the world as God's he would have chosen another style altogether. No man would have dared to give the Bible its present form if he thought of palming on the world his own thoughts as the word of God. Its very form is an argument in favor of its divine origin. The Christian refuses to believe that the Bible is merely human, because he cannot conceive of man writing such a book, either as to form or substance. If man wrote this book he has never written another like it since, though the press teems with thousands yearly. Surely Bible writing need not have been confined to Palestine and to a few Jews, many of them in a humble position in life. Since the last book of the Bible was written eighteen centuries have passed away, and thousands of great authors have appeared on the scene; and in our day, which is the era of literature, why is it that no one writes a Bible? Why is it that the boldest blasphemer dare not issue a book as the rival and supersede of the Bible? But if the Bible has a merely human authorship why not?

God would never have so mysteriously preserved this book if it were not his own. It has been in existence, some of it, for nearly four thousand years, and though we have hundreds of MS., and though these have been collected and collated, and though we have issued several translations of the word of God, the copies are so much alike that not a single doctrine or duty is disturbed by these investigators. How wonderful this is!

Inspiration.—Many critics surmounted the difficulty by adopting the theory that a portion only of the word was inspired. This was perhaps the easiest, but was certainly not the best way out of the difficulty, for it raised the question as to what portion of the word was, and what was not inspired, and students would be liable to regard those portions of Scripture as uninspired which were not suitable to their particular tastes.

Step clean out for God. Why was "(the man cured of palsy, Matt. ix. 1-8) to take up the bed? Because, as some one has beautifully said, there is to be no provision made for a relapse. Oh how many of us have made that provision in the past! Yea, we will get up, but we will have the bed ready for a relapse. So far as you are able, make it impossible by the absoluteness of your surrender and consecration, ever to get back. Step clean out upon God. —G. Campbell Morgan.

EVERYDAY RELIGION

The religion that isn't good for every day isn't much good for any day. If it doesn't stay with a man on Monday, it was only cloak and a mockery on Sunday. If it does not show itself in the home-breathing upon every one therein a kindly and helpful and strengthening influence, then it will make a fine show in the house of God to very little purpose indeed. If religion doesn't grip a man's soul, if it isn't the one thing in his whole life, Sunday and Saturday, day and night, then it becomes so near to being nothing at all that it is scarcely worth reckoning. When we speak of everyday religion, we speak of the only genuine kind of religion that there is. And it is its homely, everyday quality that will commend it to the world and will in the end win for it the allegiance of the world. Religion is for every day. Its blessings and benefits, its comforts and sweet consolations, its guidance and its inspiration are for the commonplace days in the commonplace lives of commonplace men and women. It is something to take with one, something that will never be out of place anywhere, something that will add to life's joy its best touch of sweetness and will mix with all life's sorrows, hope and courage and power. A man who has everyday religion in good wholesome quantity can easily afford to be without a good many other things.—Christian Guardian

The longer I live, the more deeply am I convinced that that which makes the difference between one man and another—between the weak and powerful, the great and insignificant—is energy, invincible determination, a purpose once formed, and then death or victory. This quality will do anything that is to be done in the world; and no talents, no circumstances, no opportunities, will make one a man without it.—Bulwer.

Manager's Column

Some time ago we notified our subscribers through this column of our intention to send each delinquent subscriber a notice stating the amount due and unpaid. This notice was mailed and a great many responded by paying up their subscriptions or writing us to the effect that they were unable to pay at the present time; a great many, however, paid no attention to our notice, not even extending the courtesy of a reply. We have decided to send another notice to these delinquents to again call their attention to the fact that they are in debt to The Restitution in an effort to collect the four or five hundred dollars still outstanding; and we earnestly ask that those receiving the notices to at least acknowledge receipt of same, and also notify us as to whether they expect to pay the amount due. We are very sorry it is necessary to have to again refer to this matter, and trust this will be the last time.

Census blanks keep coming in, each day, and we have many from every state in the union. In a couple of weeks the work of placing them in alphabetical order in our Census Book will be started; so if you have not sent your blank or list in yet, you will have to hurry. Everybody wants to be in the Census Book.

There is always a steady demand for Bro. Huggins' book, but at the special price he has advertised it until Jan 1, 1912, this demand will doubtless be much greater. Better take advantage of this offer.

AND DON'T FORGET THE SPECIAL SUBSCRIPTION OFFER.

UNTIL JAN. 1ST, 1912

"The Bible: Its Principles and Texts," the most widely circulated book ever published by our people, can be obtained for 9 cts per copy. This special offer is made only until the first of the new year. The money received from this special sale of the book is to go partly to The Restitution Pub. Co. and partly to the author, who is now taking a course in proofreading and who needs a few extra pennies to meet the expenses of completing his education in this profession.

Scripture Searchers Assistant

A very valuable help to all who are studying the Scriptures—a reprint of one of our beloved Brother Joblin's works. Treats of thirty different subjects with about four hundred references. All should possess a copy for ready reference. Price by mail six cents. Address W. L. Tomlinson, 10825 Orville Ave., N. E., Cleveland, O.

A SONG BOOK.

Songs of the Kingdom.

Recommended by Bro. Huggins and nearly all of our preachers, as by far the best song book for our people. 138 pages, flexible cloth. 25 cents each; postpaid. Address, Chas. F. Crewe, St. Paul, Neb.

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

We, whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones.

This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of their paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

Emeline Stiers	.50
Mrs. John Robinson	.50

Ladies! Save Money and Keep in Style by Reading McCall's Magazine and Using McCall Patterns

McCall's Magazine will help you to economize in a moderate manner by keeping you up to date on the latest fashions in clothes for ladies, children and men. 60 New Fashion Designs in each issue. Also valuable information on all home and personal matters. Only $1 a year, including a free pattern. Published today or send for free sample copy.

McCall Patterns will enable you to make in your own home, with your own hands, clothing for yourself and children which will be perfect in style and fit. Every pattern less than 15 cents. 12 cents for free Pattern Catalogue.

We Will Give You Free Patterns for getting subscriptions from your friends. Send for free premium Catalogue and Cash Prizes offer.

THE McCALL COMPANY, 238-248 West 37th St., NEW YORK

Four Page Tracts

Can You Believe? A series of questions setting forth the fundamental points of our faith.

State of Man in Death. A collection of proof texts on this subject.

Life and Death. A short concise statement of the facts in the case.

Age to Come Not a Heresy, by H. V. Reed.

10 for 10 cents, 50 for 25 cents 100 for 40 cents.

The Paternity of Jesus. A pamphlet of 122 pages, by M. Joblin, giving in detail all that can be said on this subject, and completely proving that He is the Son of God, and not the natural son of Joseph. This work ought to be sold at 25 cents a copy, but the author was so anxious that price should not stand in the way of its being read, that he put the price at ten cents, so all can buy them. Send to this office for them.

Address The Restitution Pub. Co.

Book and Tracts by Bro. W. H. Wilson.

"A Bible Study of Hades, as compared with our modern ideas," is the title of a new tract just issued by Bro. W. H. Wilson. It is a critical study of the subject of Hell. It shows that the meaning attached to this word today is different fro mthe meaning given to it years ago. It also shows how this change was made, and who made it. The price is 15 cents each, or 5 for 50 cents.

Student's Text Book, a cloth bound book 200 pages.

It deals sperifically as How to study the Bible and why people fail to rightly understand God's Word. Price 50 cents.

Pine Woods Bible Class, a book of 480 pages bound in cloth. Studies are carried on as between a class and its teacher. Price $1.25.

Cunningly Devised Fables, 28 pages. Price 10 cents.

Where Will You Spend Eternity? Four pages. 25 cents per 100.

Are You in Need of Money? 4 pages 25 cents per 100.

Will It Pay to Become a Christian? is the title to a well written book of 96 pages by Brother Jas. W. Wilson. In a clear and convincing manner it sets forth the Christian faith and answers the question indicated in its title affirmatively. The edition should be taken at once and put out to work. It is neatly bound in cloth. The price is 25 cents, very low, and within reach of all.

W. H. Wilson, at 625 North Willow avenue, Austin Station, Chicago, Illinois.

The Bible: Its Principles and Texts

As indicated by the title this book is divided into three sections. The first consists of a remarkable disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "principles" in formulated propositions, and the third expounds in a clear, impressive and homelitic manner particular "Texts." The knotty and perplexing texts of the Bible are united and solved satisfactorily to the most fastidious and critical. More than 112 hundred and fifteen subjects of intense interest to every Bible student are formally discussed. Both simple and scholarly—the child is fascinated and taught; the scholar is entertained and instructed. Bible lovers, here is a feast for you. Throw open the door of your home; let "The Bible—its Principles and its Texts come in and bless you and your family. 300 pages, 5x7 1-2 inches durably and handsomely bound in whole cloth, with title embossed on back in gold. One copy, $1.10, two copies or more $1.00 each. The Restitution Pub. Co.

Popular Lectures, By Bro. M. Joblin

Send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled: "The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to Be Saved?" The Foolishness of Preaching and Salvation—what is it?

Each lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price.

TWO TRACTS By J. L. WINCE

"Salvation" and "Resurrection" two tracts by J. L. Wince, can not fail to arouse the interest of every believer. They deal with vital questions in a most convincing manner. The price is 10c each, 12 for $1.00. For sale by S. Roxanna Wince, Peroton, Ind.

BEREAN NOTICE.

The lessons for our new Berean books for 1912 are ready for the printer. It is necessary for us to have an idea of the number of books needed before placing the work in his hands. Several societies in other states purchased their present books from the Illinois state society. If these societies or any others wish to buy their new books from us, will they please send an approximate number of the books they will need to the chairman of the committee, Leila E. Whitehead, 5439 Ontario street, Chicago, Ill., before December 18th. This does not apply to any society in Illinois. Send no money now—just an estimate of the number of books needed. For further information send to the above address.

ANNA E. DREW.
President Illinois Bereans.

BEREAN NOTICE.

The Chicago Bereans will make their annual Christmas distribution of food and money to the poor and needy of their great city. Friends who wish to help in this work of Christmas cheer, please send their contributions to Leila E. Whitehead, 5439 Ontario St., Chicago, Ill.

By order of Committee.

60 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents.

Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the

Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York

Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

Census Blank

MEMBERSHIP CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA

Name .....

Address .....
Street Town State

By whom Immersed ..... Date .....

Fill out the above and send to "The Census Editor," The Restitution, 803 Parkwood Drive, Cleveland, O.

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co.

WHOLESALE OPTICIANS

We make a specialty of High Grade Prescription Work, and carry a full line of all kinds of Optical goods. All orders filled same day as received.

"S. K. N." SERVICE

Means prompt returns, careful work, moderate prices. Goods shipped to all parts of the country.

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co. 338 SCHOFIELD BUILDING CLEVELAND, OHIO

SPECIAL OFFER!

IN ORDER to increase the circulation of The Restitution, the following special offer is made:

One new subscriber for 1 year, choice of:

W. H. Wilson's "Student's Text Book," regular price.....50c
Or 5 Copies of "Cunningly Devised Fables," reg. price 50c
Or 5 Copies of "Bible Study of Hades," reg. price 50c

For Two New Subscribers

One Copy "Pine Woods Bible Class," 480 pages, rg. price, $1.25
Or "The Bible, Its Principles and Texts," 309 pages, reg., $1.25
Or One Hundred of Bro. Joblin's Tracts, regular price $1.00

Here is a chance to get some of the books you all should own. By making special arrangements with the authors we are able to offer them to you without the payment of a cent on your part, just a few minutes effort. We cannot afford to continue this offer long, so take advantage of it at once, get some new subscribers today.

THE RESTITUTION, 803 Parkwood Drive

An Appropriate Christmas Gift

This is the time of year when we begin to think of appropriate Christmas gifts for friends and those near and dear to us. Here is a good suggestion. Send them the Restitution for a year, it will go to them fifty-two times, each time with messages of faith, hope, love, courage and gladness. A loving remembrance and a blessing each week of the year. For the balance of the year we are going to make this

GENEROUS OFFER

ALL FOR ONE NEW SUBSCRIBER FOR ONE YEAR AT $1.50 — The Restitution for the balance of 1911. The Restitution for ALL of 1912. One Beautiful Art Calendar for 1912. (No advertisement). One copy of "A Letter to a Friend," One copy of W. H. Wilson's Students' Text Book.

We will send all to one address or The Restitution to one address and the premiums to another This is for new subscribers only, and certainly a very generous offer. For two new subscribers you can substitute The Pine Woods Bible Class, or "The Bible, Its Principle and Texts," for the Students' Text Book. When requested we will send a card to those to whom the above may be sent as a gift, giving the donor's name and best wishes.

Send names today, so as to get all the advantages of this offer.

The Restitution Publishing Co., 803 Parkwood Drive

BOOKS AND TRACTS

Bible Pearls—Two-page tracts, suitable for wide distribution. 1. The Gospel. 2. Coming and Kingdom of Christ, by 20,000 Baptists in 1660. 3. Immateriality. 4. Kingdom of God. 5. Nature of Man and Thoughts for Thinkers. 6. Two Advents. 7. What is Religion? 8. Restitution Age. 9. Destiny of the Wicked. 10. Baptism. 10 copies for 5 cents, or assorted packages of 100 for 20 cents.

Less than Half a Cent a Day

The Restitution costs a Dollar and a Half a year, that's less than half A Cent a day or three cents a copy. You can't afford to be without it. If you are a subscriber get some one else to subscribe.

Help to Get Them on the List

Sample Copies of The Restitution

May be obtained for a stamp. Send for one.

"A LETTER TO A FRIEND"

This tract needs no introduction further than to say that it is one of the most convincing Gospel sermons ever written. Originally written as a letter to a friend by Sister C. C. Woodruff it was published and has sold extensively in tract form. In its present edition it is a 32 page tract, the price is

10c each; 12 for $1.00

There is no better way of spreading the Gospel than handing out one of these tracts wherever you have the opportunity.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

"Future Probation,

is that Awaiting any of the Unrighteous?"

Here is a work by Wm. Glenn Moncrieff that every one should read. It is one of the best things on the subject ever written and will appeal to every student of the word. It is a book of 150 pages, made to sell at 25c. We have a limited number left which we will sell at the special price of

10c each; 12 for $1.00

Send for some at once.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

The Restitution
IS THE OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA.

The Restitution.

Founded in A.D. 1852

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Lk. 19:12-15), who will be King of Kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-53); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17), and belief in, the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Lk. 13:3), and obedience by Baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ." (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31).

ROBT. G. HUDGINS, Editor.

—Terms of— Subscription
ONE YEAR, $1.50;
SIX MONTHS 75 CTS. IN ADVANCE

VOL. 60 CLEVELAND, OHIO, DECEMBER 26, 1911 No. 49

THE CHURCH WALKING WITH THE WORLD.

The church and the world walked far apart
On the changing shores of time;
The World was singing a giddy song,
And the Church a hymn sublime.
"Come give me your hand," said the merry World.
"And walk with me this way."
But the good Church hid her snowy hands
And solemnly answered, "Nay,
I will not give you my hand at all,
And I will not walk with you:
Your way is the way that leads to death:
Your words are all untrue."

"Nay, walk with me but a little space,"
Said the World with a kindly air:
"The road I walk is a pleasant road,
And the sun shines always there.
Your path is thorny and rough and rude,
But mine is broad and plain;
My way is paved with flowers and dews,
And yours with tears and pain;
The sky to me is always blue,
No want no toil I know;
The sky above you is always dark,
Your lot is a lot of woe;

There's room enough for you and me
To travel side by side."
Shyly the Church approached the World
And gave him her hand of snow;
And the old World grasped it and walked along
Saying in accents low,
"Your dress is too simple to please my taste;
I will give you pearls to wear,
Rich velvets and silks for your graceful form,
And diamonds to deck your hair.

The Church looked down at her plain white robes,
And then at the dazzling World,
And blushed as she saw his handsome lip
With a smile contemptuous curled.
"I will change my dress for a costlier one,"
Said the Church with a smile of grace.
Then her pure white garments drifted away,
And the world gave, in their place,
Beautiful satins and shining silks,
Roses and gems and costly pearls;
While over her forehead her bright hair fell,
Crisped in a thousand curls.

"Your house is too plain," said the proud old World;
"I'll build you one like mine;
Carpets of Brussels and curtains of lace,
And furniture ever so fine."
So he built her a costly and beautiful house;
Most splendid it was to behold;
Her sons and her beautiful daughters dwell there
Gleaming in purple and gold.
Rich fairs and shows were held,
And the world and her children were there
Laughter and music and feasts were heard
In the place that was meant for prayer.
There was cushioned pews for the rich and gay
To sit in their pomp and pride;
But the poor who were clad in shabby array,
Sat meekly down outside.

"You give too much to the poor," said the World,
"Far more than you ought to do.
If they are in need of shelter and food,
Why need it trouble you?
Go take your money and buy rich robes,
Buy horses and carriages fine;
Buy pearls and jewels and dainty food;
Buy the rarest and costliest wine.
You must do as they do, and walk in the ways
That they are walking in."

Then the Church held fast the strings of her purse
And modestly lowered her head
And simpered, "Without doubt you are right, sir;
Henceforth I will do as you've said."
So the poor were turned from her door in scorn,
And she heard not the orphan's cry;
But she drew her beautiful robes aside
As the widows went weeping by.
Then the sons of the World and the sons of the Church
Walked closely hand and heart,
And only the Master who knoweth all,
Could tell the two apart.

Then the Church sat down at her ease and said,
"I am rich and my goods increase;
I have need of nothing, nor ought to do
But to laugh and dance and feast."
The sly World heard, and he laughed in his sleeve,
And mocking said aside,
"The Church is fallen, the beautiful Church,
And her shame is her boast and pride."

The angel drew near to the mercy seat
And whispered in sighs her name;
Then the loud anthems of rapture were hushed
And heads were covered with shame,
And a voice was heard at last by the Church,
From Him who sat on the throne:
"I know thy works, and how thou hast said,
'I am rich' and hast not known
That thou art naked, and poor and blind
And wretched before my face;
Therefore I from My presence cast thee out,
And blot thy name from its place."

Selected by Sr. C. C. Ramsay.

RELIGIOUS CHANGES.

In Belief and Practice Between the Resurrection of Christ and the Death of Constantine in 337

VIII.—The Growth of Immortal-Soulism

The so-called First Epistle of Clement, written, as we have seen, at the close of the first century, speaks of man in life and death in a Scriptural manner. The church in Rome had not yet been spoiled by human philosophy, as the following quotations will show:

"Let our whole body, then, be preserved in Christ Jesus; and let every one be subject to his neighbor, according to the special gift bestowed upon him. Let the strong not despise the weak, and let the weak show respect unto the strong. Let the rich man provide for the wants of the poor; and let the poor man bless God because he hath given him one by whom his needs may be supplied. Let the wise man display his wisdom not by words, but through good deeds. Let the humble not bear testimony to himself, but leave witness to be borne to him by another. Let him that is pure in the flesh not grow proud of it and boast, knowing that it was used to us that he will raise us again from the dead; and that if we live worthily of him, we shall reign together with him, provided only we believe." When Polycarp was a prisoner, and taken before the proconsul. "Then the proconsul, urging him and saying, 'Swear, and I will set thee at liberty; reproach Christ:' Polycarp declared: 'Eighty and six years have I served him, and he never did me any injury: how can I blaspheme my King and my Savior?' He was condemned to be burned alive, and he thus prayed before they burned him: "O Lord God Almighty, the Father of thy beloved and blessed Son, Jesus Christ, by whom we have received the knowledge of thee, the God of angels, and powers, and of every creature, and of the whole race of the righteous who have lived before thee: I give thee thanks that thou hast counted me worthy of this day and this hour, that I should have a part in the number of thy martyrs in the cup of thy Christ, to the resurrection of eternal life both of soul and body through the incorruption by the Holy Spirit. Among whom may I be accepted before thee this day as a fat and acceptable sacrifice, according as thou, the ever truthful God, hast fore-ordained, has revealed beforehand to me, and not hast fulfilled. Wherefore also I praise thee, I glorify thee along with the everlasting and heavenly Jesus Christ, thy beloved Son, with whom to thee and the Holy Spirit, be glory both now and to all coming ages. Amen."

Justin Martyr was a disciple of Plato previous to his conversion, and wore the philosopher's cloak; he brought a considerable amount of his heathen philosophy with him into the church, along with the cloak which he continued to wear. He tells Trypho, the Jew, as we have seen, that if he falls in with any, calling themselves Christians who say "that their souls, when they die, are taken to heaven; do not imagine that they are Christians;" but notwithstanding this strong statement, he himself was still a believer in the immortality of the soul of man; this was part of the "world's philosophy that got well inside the church before the gates were closed." In Justin's first apology he says: "And whatever both philosophers and poets have said concerning the immortality of the soul, or punishment after death, or contemplation of things heavenly, or doctrines of the like kind; they have received such suggestions from the prophets as have enabled them to understand and interpret these things." He says in his second apology: "I confess that I both boast and with all my strength strive to be found a Christian, not because the teachings of Plato are different from those of Christ, but because they are not in all respects similar; as neither are those of the others, Stoics and poets and historians." Justin in his Hortatory Address to the Greeks, speaking of the heathen philosophers, says: "And that even their doctrine regarding the human soul, as it now is, does not harmonize, is manifest from what has been said by each of them concerning it. For Plato says that it is of three parts, having the faculty of reason, of affection, and of appetite. But Aristotle says that the soul is not so comprehensive as to include also corruptible parts, but only reason. And Plato loudly maintains that 'the whole soul is immortal.' But Aristotle, naming it 'the actuality' would have it to be mortal, not immortal. And the former says it is always in motion: but Aristotle says that it is immovable, since it must itself precede all motion. . . . Certainly some of your philosophers say that the human soul is in us: others that it is round us. . . . For some of them say that the soul is fire, and some that it is the air; and others, the mind; and others, motion; and others, an exhalation; and certain others, that it is a power flowing from the stars; and others, a generating water. . . . I consider it reasonable to recur to our progenitors, who, both in point of time, have a great way the precedence of your teachers, and who have taught us nothing from their own private fancy, nor differed with one another, nor attempted to overturn one another's position: but without wrangling and contention received from God the knowledge which they also taught to us. * * Wherefore, as if with one mouth and one tongue, they have in succession and in harmony with one another taught us both concerning God, and the creation of the world, and the formation of man, and concerning the immortality of the human soul and the judgment which is to be after this life, and concerning all things which it is needful for us to know; and thus, in divers times and places, have afforded us the divine instruction."

If Justin had not been blinded by his heathen philosophy about the soul, he would have seen that his "progenitors," as he calls them, never say a single word throughout the whole of the Scriptures about "immortal souls;" on the contrary, they all agree that man is mortal, a creature of the dust; no hope of life after death except through Christ, and that at the resurrection of the dead. Because the early Christians, before Justin's philosophy came into the church, clung to this hope, they were despised by Celsus as having "a hope fit for worms."

Irenaeus, who, as we have seen, was a disciple of Polycarp, died about the year 202, so that we have the three who knew each other spanning this long period—John, Polycarp, Irenaeus. Irenaeus wrote an extensive work against heresies, in which he refers to the extraordinary and differing opinions of men in his time. It is not necessary to quote these opinions; suffice it to say that the foundation of all these absurd ideas, and of many more that were yet to follow, was the immortality of the soul, and the speculations as to its previous existence were so much learned rubbish, indulged in by so-called philosophers in all ages, who considered themselves too wise to accept the simple Bible statement that "the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground." Having satisfied themselves that the soul must needs be immortal, they considered that it must have a previous existence; and then the question which they tried to settle with much hair-splitting was: Why did not souls remember their previous existence, and the kind of bodies they were in previous to the present state? Plato, in order to dispose of this difficulty as to why souls did not remember their previous existence, taught that the demon who presided over births caused the soul, before it entered into this life, to drink of the cup of oblivion. Again, others taught that the soul's union with the body caused oblivion to the soul of past events.

Christ taught (John v. 28, 29): "Marvel not at this; for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation." He says nothing of departed immortal souls being brought back to take possession of their former bodies; but he emphatically states that those who are in their graves (or tombs) shall hear his voice and come forth. It would have been well for his professed followers if they had been satisfied with his promise that he would at his coming bring them forth from their graves and had not dabbled in heathen philosophy concerning immortal souls and all the foolish speculations they indulged in. Daniel xii. 2 teaches the same thought, that the real man goes at death to the dust and is brought up from it again: "Many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt." Also, Isaiah xxvi. 19 teaches this same idea that the man—the real man, not the least important part of him, as these immortal-soulists began to teach comes from the dust of the ground at the resurrection. "Thy dead men shall live, together with my dead body shall they arise. Awake and sing, ye that dwell in dust: for thy dew is as the dew of herbs, and the earth shall cast out her dead." Rev. xx. 6: "Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection: on such the second death hath no power, but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with him a thousand years."

A. WALLACE MASON.
Cleveland, O.

THREE GRAND CONCERTS.

The Psalmist David repeatedly urges praise and thanksgiving to God for his great mercies and wonderful works, and in the last psalm emphasises this important duty in summing up, by a request to "let everything that hath breath praise the Lord." This is in harmony with Jehovah's plan to appropriately celebrate the wonderful events in the gradual unfolding of his eternal purpose. The earth being the theater in which would be wrought the mighty deeds to fit it for man's eternal abode, it was honored at its creation by a grand concert given to properly celebrate the glorious event.

The creation of this mighty planet is thus briefly described: "He spake, and it was done, he commanded, and it stood fast." The dark reign of chaos was broken; the young earth began its sublime revolution; the voice of God was heard in approval of the work; "It is very good." Now note the grand concert that fittingly celebrated the event: "The morning stars sang together, and all the sons of God shouted for joy." This divinely organized concert filled earth and heaven with such strains as only angels can make. We have no copy of the song, but its chorus no doubt was "the future home, the blessed home, the eternal home of redeemed man." The sweet voices ceased, the last strains of music were no longer heard, the singers have gone. Did they leave forever? Oh, no! Four thousand years pass and a second grand concert thrills the air and sends joy and peace into a world filled with the tumultuous passions of men; bloodshed and violence had become the leading human pursuit, but man's extremity is God's opportunity. And while

Shepherds of Judea were guarding their sheep,
Promiscuously seated, estranged from sleep,
An angel from heaven presented to view,
And thus he accosted the trembling few.
Dispel your sorrows and banish your fears,
For Jesus your Saviour in Judea appears;
The wonderful story no sooner was heard,
When thousands of angels from glory appeared.
They all joined in concert and this was their theme:
All glory to God, and good will to all men."

Again the melody was hushed, but the song felt a gleam of glory that yet shines in some hearts that wait for his coming.

Will angel voices ever be attuned to sing again? Yes! Glory be to God, the grandest of the three concerts is yet to come. Here is a copy of the new song: "And they sang a new song, saying, Thou are worthy to take the book and to open the seals thereof; for thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood, out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation, and hast made us unto our God, kings and priests: and we shall reign on the earth." Not only will angels swell the mighty strains of music at this concert, but the united voices of all the redeemed hosts of God will, with immortal powers, join the mighty throng. To all loved ones bear this earnest invitation: "Come to the best entertainment ever provided," for this will insure all the blessings God has in store for the faithful.

Rochester, Ind. J. F. WAGONER

The Restitution

Issued weekly by

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING COMPANY.

Entered as second-class matter under act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

TERMS.

One year $1.60; six months 75 cents, in advance.

ROBT. G. HUGGINS.....Editor
BUELL W. NUTT.....Manager

BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Burton H. Lang, Harry Pott,
Chas. A. Goss, Wm. G. Rothe,
Buell W. Nutt, D. C. Robson,
W. S. Tomlinson.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

All remittances should be sent by bank draft, post office money order or express money order to The Restitution Publishing Co., 502 Parkwood drive, Cleveland, Ohio.

All communication intended for publication should be sent to the editor, Robt. G. Huggins, 10823 Lee avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

It is necessary to adhere strictly to the rule of not returning unused manuscripts. Writers will please keep copies, or risk the loss.

While the editor exercises a general supervision over the articles appearing in The Restitution, its endorsement does not extend to the interpretation of details nor the exegesis of particular texts in the writings of contributors.

Cleveland, Ohio....Dec. 26, 1911

EDITORIAL

Let us not fail to scatter along our pathway the seeds of kindness and sympathy. Some of them will doubtless perish; but if only one lives, it will perfume our steps and rejoice our eyes.

There are two ways of attaining an important end—force and perseverence. Force falls to the lot only of the privileged few, but austere and sustained perseverence can be practiced by the most insignificant. Its silent power grows irresistible with time.

Our habits, our external arrangements, our dwellings, and the order which we observe in them, are but the extension of our personality. We are all more or less like spiders—stretching out a web made of our own substance.

Sister Free, of Blair, Neb., writes: "You may say to the brethren that have subscribed to the fund to send Bro. Adams South, that I have received $55, which I have deposited in the bank, and as soon as his work is so that he can leave, presumably about the first of the year, he will go."

If you speak the truth with moderation—separating its substance from all alloy of human passion—you are not to blame for the wrathful opposition it may encounter. But, if you strain it, if you wrest it from its sacred impossibility, if you do not maintain it with absolute sincerity—you are responsible for the revolt which it excites, and for the consequences which may ensue.

A good, finished scandal, fully armed and equipped, such as circulates in the world, is rarely the production of a single individual, or even of a single coterie. It sees the light in one; is rocked and natured in another; is petted, developed, and attains its growth in a third; and receives its finishing touches only after passing through a multitude of hands. It is a child that can count a host of fathers—all ready to disown it.

December 21st, 1911, an express wagon delivered a barrel at our home. Investigation by the senses of smell and sight revealed that it was a barrel of apples. The work of emptying it was begun, with wife and sister Lang as assistants, when it was discovered that there was something more than apples in the barrel of surprise. There are linen books for "Baby Huggins;" there—"what is that?" "A can of cider." "And that?" "A can of strawberries." "And this?" "A box of eggs." Then dressed chicken, and more dressed chicken. Finally, a note signed by the senders, Bro. and Sister W. H. Eidemiller and their families, which read:

Dear Bro. and Sister Huggins:

May the contents of this barrel help to assure you and the rest of The Restitution workers, that we appreciate your liberal services in behalf of the paper. May our Father in heaven ever give you strength and wisdom to be able to bear the part that has fallen to your lot. We all join in sending Christmas and Christian greetings to you and to all the ecclesia in Cleveland.

Wishing you a Merry Christmas.

EDITOR'S SERMON NOTES ON THE APOCALYPSE.

Subject:—Christ's Message to the Pergamum Church.

Text:—Rev. 2:12-18.

I. History of the Church. 1. Pergamus was birthplace of Galen, second only to Hippocrates as a doctor—Contained 200,000 vol. library—Pergamena, now corrupted to parchment, invented there; also tapistry. II. Kingdom of Pergamum founded B. C. 284, by Philetorus; his brother Eumenes was his successor. He was succeeded B. C. 241, by Attalus, first king of Pergamum—Attalus II.; Attalus III. died 131 B. C.; bequeathed his kingdom to Rome. III. Why we preface our sermons on these messages to the churches with historical, geographical and political remarks, v. 13, 12). "Satan's seat" Greek, thronos, throne. (b) Antipas—"against all." Jas. 4:4; Acts 4:19; 5:29; Jer. 15:10.

II. Things in the Church which Christ Commends. 1. "Holdest fast my name, my faith." vvs. 13; Matt. 10:29; Mk. 10:29; Lk. 18:29).

III. Things in the Church which Christ condemns. 1. Baalism and Nicolaitanism (Numb. 24; 25:1; 31: 16; II. Pet. 2:15; Jude. 11). II. The sword is threatened the transgressors. (vs. 12, 16; Gal. 4:20; Numb. 22:23-33; 25:5; 31:8; Joshua 13:22).

IV. The Promise. 1. "Hidden manna, Greek, "the manna which was hidden." (Exo. 16:12, 15, 20, 33, 34; I Cor. 10:3; Psa. 78:24, 25; Heb. 9:4; Jno. 6:31-33, 48, 51; Acts 2:27, 31; I Jno. 3:2; Col. 3:1-3). II. "White stone." All the other promises given to the churches are single or intimately related. As the diamond is not mentioned in Exo. 28:15-22 as being in the "breast plate of judgment" worn by the high priest. (1) All critics admit that "diamond" in Exo. 28:18 is a mistranslation of the original.

And since the Urim and Thummim (meaning lights and perfection) were but on thing.

(2) The Urim and Thummim were not two things, but two names for one and the same thing (see Symbolik d. Mos. Cult. vol. II., pp. 123, 1101). While sometimes the two names are given together (Exo. 28:30; Lev. 8:8), Urim often stands alone. (Numb. 27:21; I Sam. 28:6).

We conclude the "white stone" conclude that the "white stone" was the Urim—a diamond (Exo. 28:15-30). III. "New name." (vs. 17; 3:12; 5:9; 14:3; 19:12, 16).

SPIRITS IN PRISON.

Will you please explain the meaning of 1 Peter 3:19? That was referred to me as a proof of the immortality of the soul, writes a correspondent.

The meaning of this text can much better be learned by taking into consideration the context. Read from verses 18 to 20. Let us question the text.

What has Christ once done?—"For Christ also hath once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust."

Why did he do it?—"That he might bring us to God."

That he might do this what did he pass through?—"being put to death in the flesh."

After this what was wrought for him?—"But quickened (or made alive) by the Spirit."

What did he do by that Spirit?—"He went and preached unto the spirits in prison."

Who were these spirits in prison?—Men "which sometime were disobedient."

When were they disobedient, and when did he preach to them?—"When once the long-suffering of God waited in the days of Noah."

What period of time was spent in that preaching to the disobedient ones?—"While the ark was a preparing."

What was the result of the preaching?—"Wherein few, that is eight souls were saved by water."

Through whom did he preach?—"Noah, . . . a preacher of righteousness." 2 Peter 2:5.

How did Noah obtain this righteousness and this commission?—"By faith Noah, being warned of God of things not seen as yet, moved with fear, prepared an ark to the saving of his house; by the which he condemned the world, and became heir of the righteousness which is by faith" (Heb. 11:7).

The "spirits in prison" were in the prison house of sin, bound by sin. The purpose of our Lord in giving himself, and of God in giving his Son, was to save men from that prison-house of sin. (see Isa. 61:1; Luke 4:18). God's law shuts every sinner up in sin, the only deliverance from which is the gospel of Christ (Gal. 3:23). It was our Lord who preached through Noah as declared by Peter himself in his first epistle (1:10-12). It was the Spirit of Christ by the prophets of old which testified of Jesus, so that when our Lord went and preached to the spirits in prison it was by placing his own Spirit upon Noah; and the time when that generation needed the preaching, was when the ark was preparing.

CHEATING THE SAINTS.

Advocates of truth are often carried to extremes in their enthusiastic efforts to combat error. The restoration of Israel, in its proper place a sublime theme, has been much abused by "hobbhist-ic." Everything in the Bible from Genesis to Revelations is "for Israel," to hear them tell it. Any passage you may quote, whether a prophecy, a promise, or a parable, is always shelved with the remark, which is so old and often repeated that it has holes worn in its knees and elbows, "that applies to Israel." So much of the Bible "applies to Israel" that Gentiles wonder if anything "applies" to them. "That applies to Israel" so frequent on the lips of some, is an expression which threatens to monopolize everything for "Israel," even to the extent of cheating the saints as completely as "Israel" cheated Esau out of his birthright.

Some people, says an exchange, who are anxious to support a theory—for that is all it is—tell us that the judgment of Matt. 25:31-46 is not the judgment involving the "saints" at all; but has to do with "nations" which work righteousness—"nations" as such, and not individuals. In order to show the fallacy of that theory we need but to call attention to several things:

I. The saints are included in the words "all nations." Proof: The expression "all nation" appears here in Matt. 25:32, and is the Greek panta ta ethene, lite., "all the nations;" and this very expression in both the Greek and English is repeated in Matt. 28:19. In this place Jesus said: "Go ye therefore, and make disciples of (from among) all the nations, baptizing them, etc. R. V. The theory that limits panta ta ethnen in Matt. 25:32 to the living nations on earth when Jesus comes, limits the same expression in Matt. 28:19 to the same nations; therefore, if the theory is true, then this command given by Jesus has not yet been obeyed in a single case, for we have not arrived at the point yet where these "so-called "all nations" are!!! "Shocking," you exclaim; and so it is; but, the theory that "all nations" in Matt. 25:32 excludes saints and confines it to the "nations" as such when Jesus comes, drives any logical thinker to that conclusion. No getting away from it.

II. If this picture of the judgment scene does not include the "saints," then the language (and we say this respectfully) is very poorly framed, for just 100 persons out of 100 persons would gather just that thought by reading it if they had not been previously prejudiced in favor of some theory.

III. If this language excludes the saints, then the saints will never hear from Jesus' own lips, "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world" (v. 34). And any theory that involves such outrageous conclusions as to make Jesus give the kingdom, God has prepared "from the foundation of the world," to unsaved and unsaintly nations, refuse to present it to his saints, needs to be most severely rebuked! Such an assumption is everywhere contradicted in the Bible.

IV. If the saints are excluded, then it must follow that Jesus does not say to "saints," "these shall go away into life eternal"! But instead he says that to unsanctified nations; and the worst is, that they will enter "life eternal" on the basis of works! just the thing the theory seeks to nullify and contradict!

V. If the saints are excluded, then Jesus calls the unsanctified "nations" righteous (v. 40), because of their works!!

VI. If the saints are excluded then the "nations" alive at the second coming which form the "goats" will "go away" "into the eternal fire which is prepared for the devil and his angels" (v. 41). R. V. And if so, what fire are all the other wicked, (the dead ones) going to be cast into? Are there two places of "eternal fire?" Is Jesus going to divide living nations when he comes on the basis of good works and cast the goat-nations—as such—into eternal fire and present the "sheep nations, as such, with God's kingdom? If so, then the saints of all ages and climes will be cheated out of their kingdom-inheritance God has been so long preparing for them; and the ungodly of all ages—however bad they were—will not be cast into "eternal fire" at all?!!

VII. If the saints are excluded then the nations which are not composed of Christians are called "sheep." But this would contradict all Bible, for only God's individual saints are ever called "sheep" (John 10:7-10, 27; Psa. 100:3; 74:1; and 33). Nations of whatever type, are not denominated "sheep" in the Bible once.

VIII. If the saints are excluded then the nations are called heirs, for they are told to inherit the "kingdom." This contradicts all Bible teaching, for Paul says: "If children (of God) then heirs" (Rom. 8:17). James says (2:5) that God hath "chosen the . . . rich in faith heirs of the kingdom. This is the divine rule governing Christ's disposition and the saints heirship of "the kingdom," and no matter what respect we may show to the Jew or his sympathizer, we must stick to the truth. We cannot afford to entertain fancies which contradict Christ's own words.

CORN SHEAVES

Gathered from Everywhere.

There is no Failure.

There is no failure. God's immortal plan
Accounts no loss a lesson learned for man.
Defeat is often the discipline we need
To save us from the wrong or teaching heed
To errors which would else more dearly cost—
A lesson learned in ne'er a battle lost.
When'er the cause is right, be not afraid;
Defeat is often but victory delayed.
And e'en the greatest victories of the world
Are often won when battle flags are furled.

Beauty Sleep—Sleep obtained two hours before midnight, when the negative forces are in operation, is the rest which most recuperates the system, giving brightness to the eyes and a glow to the cheek. The difference in the appearance of a person who habitually retires at 10 o'clock, and that one who sits up till 12, is quite remarkable. The tone of the system, so evident in the complexion, and clearness and sparkle of the eye, and the softness of the lines of the features, is, in the person of health, kept at "concert pitch" by taking regular rest two hours before 12 o'clock, and thereby obtaining the "beauty sleep" of the night. There is a heaviness of the eye, a sallowness of the skin, and an absence of that glow of the face which renders it fresh in expression and round in appearance, that readily distinguishes a person who keeps late hours.

"As a man Thinketh, so is he."—The person who thinks he is weak, and keeps saying so, will make himself and others believe it; but he who thinks he can do and proceeds to do it, will likely enhance his capital and surprise others with his efforts. And there is nothing like a poor weak fellow being harnessed up abreast with Almighty power with the heft of the load on the latter. Do not burden yourself with the Lord's burdens.

THE INSPIRATION OF THE BIBLE No. 1.

I.—Argument for the Old Testament.

To begin with the Old Testament:

(a) Consider how the writers speak of the origin of their messages. Dr. James H. Brookes is authority for saying, "Thus saith the Lord," or its equivalent is used by them 2,000 times. Suppose we eliminate this phase and its necessary context from the Old Testament in every instance, one wonders how much of the Old Testament would remain.

(b) Consider how the utterances of the Old Testament writers are introduced into the New. Take Matt. 1:22, as an illustration: "Now all this was done that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the Lord through the prophet." It was not the prophet who spake, but the Lord who spake through the prophet.

(c) Consider how Christ and his apostles regard the Old Testament. He came "not to destroy but to fulfill the law and the prophets." (Matt. 5:17). "The Scripture cannot be broken." (Jno. 10:35). He sometimes used single words as the bases of important doctrines, twice in Matt. 22, at verses 31, 32 and 42-45. The apostles do the same. (See Gal. 3:16; Heb. 2:8, 11 and 12:26, 27).

(d) Consider what the apostles directly teach upon the subject. Peter tells us that "No prophecy ever came by the will of man, but men spake from God, being moved by the Holy Spirit." (II. Peter 1:21. R. V.: "Prophecy" here applies to the word written as is indicated in the preceding verse, and means not merely the mere telling of events, but the utterances of any word of God without reference as to time past, present, or to come. As a matter of fact, what Peter declares is, that the will of man had nothing to do with any part of the Old Testament, but that the whole of it, from Genesis to Malachi, was inspired of God.

Of course Paul says the same, in language even plainer, in II Tim. 3:16: "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable." The phrase "inspiration of God" means literally God-breathed. The whole of the Old Testament is God-breathed, for it is to that part of the Bible the language particularly refers, since the New Testament as such was not then generally known.

As this verse is given somewhat differently in the Revised Version we dwell upon it a moment longer. It there reads, "Every Scripture inspired of God is also profitable," and the caviller is disposed to say that therefore some Scripture may be inspired and some may not be, and that the profitableness extends to the former and not to the latter.

But aside from the fact that Paul would hardly be guilty of such a weak truism as that, it may be stated in reply first, that the King James rendering of the passage is not only the more consistent Scripture, but the more consistent Greek. Several of the best Greek scholars of the period affirm this, including some of the revisers themselves who did not vote for the change. And secondly, even the revisers place it in the margin as of practically equal authority with their preferred translation, and to be chosen by the reader if desired. There are not a few devout Christians, however, who would be willing to retain the rendering of the Revised Version as being stronger than the King James, and who would interpolate a word in applying it to make it mean, "Every Scripture (because) inspired of God is also profitable." We believe that both Gaussen and Wordsworth take this view, two as staunch defenders of plenary inspiration as could be named.

II.—Argument for the New Testament.

We are sometimes reminded that, however strong and convincing the argument for the inspiration of the Old Testament, that for the New Testament is only indirect. "No one of the evangelists tells us that he is inspired," says a certain theological professor, "and not one writer of an epistle, except Paul."

We shall be prepared to dispute this statement a little further, but in the meantime let us redirect that the inspiration of the Old Testament being assured as it is, why should similar evidence be required for the New? Whoever competent to speak as a Bible authority knows that the unity of the Old and New Testament is the strongest demonstration of their common source. They are seen to be not two books, but only two parts of one book.

To take then the analogy of the Old Testament. The foregoing argument proves its inspiration as a whole, although there were long periods separating the different writers, Moses and David let us say, or David and Daniel, the Pentateuch and the Psalms, or the Psalms and the Prophets. As long, or longer, than between Malachi and Matthew, or Ezra and the Gospels. If then to carry conviction for the plenary inspiration of the Old Testament as a whole, it is not necessary to prove it for every book, why, to carry conviction for the plenary inspiration of the Bible, as a whole is it necessary to do the same?

We quote here paragraph or two from Dr. Natl. Aid West. He is referring to II. Tim. 3:16, which he renders, "Every Scripture is inspired of God," and adds: "The distributive word 'every' is used not only to particularize each individual Scripture of the canon that Timothy had studied from his youth, but also to include, along with the old Testament the New Testament Scriptures extant in Paul's day, and any others, such as those that John wrote after him.

"The Apostle Peter tells us that he was in possession, not merely of some of Paul's epistle, but 'all his epistles,' and places them, canonically, in the same rank with 'what he calls the other Scripture, i. e., of equal inspiration and authority with the 'the word spoken before the holy prophets, and the commandment of the Lord and Saviour, through the apostles' (II. Pet. 3:2, 16).

"Paul teaches the same coordination of the Old and New Testaments. Having referred to the old as a unit, in his phrase 'Holy Scriptures,' which the revisers translate 'Sacred Writings,' he proceeds to particularize. He tells Timothy that 'every Scripture, whether of Old or new Testament production, is inspired of God.' Let it be in the Pentateuch, the Psalms, the prophets, the historical books, let it be a chapter or verse; let it be in the gospels, the Acts, his own or Peter's epistles, or even John's writings, yet to be, still each part of the sacred collection is God-given and because of that possesses divine authority as part of the book of God."

We read this from Dr. West twenty years ago, and rejected it as his dictum. We read it today, with deeper and fuller knowledge of the subject, and we believe it to be true.

It is somewhat as follows that Dr. Gaussen in his exhaustive "Theopneustia" gives the argument for the inspiration of the New Testament.

(a) The New Testament is the later, and for that reason the more important revelation of the two, and hence if the former were inspired, it certainly must be true of the latter. The opening verses of the first and second chapters of Hebrews plainly suggest this: "God, who at sundry times and in divers manners spake in time past unto the fathers by the prophets, hath in these last days spoken unto us by his son, . . . therefore we ought to give the more earnest heed to the things which we have heard."

And this inference is rendered still more conclusive by the circumstance that the New Testament sometimes explains, sometimes proves, and sometimes even repeals ordinances of the Old Testament. (See Matt. 1:22, 23, for and illustration of the first, Acts 13:10, 39 for the second, and Gal. 5:2 for the third). Assuredly these things would not be true if the New Testament were not of equal, and, in a certain sense, even greater authority than the Old.

(b) The writers of the New Testament were of an equal or higher rank than those of the Old. That they were prophets is evident from such allusions as Rom. 16:25-27, and Eph. 3:4, 5. But that they were more than prophets is indicated in the fact that wherever in the New Testament prophets and apostles are both mentioned, the last named is always mentioned first. (See I Cor. 12:28; Eph. 2:20; 4:11). It is also true that the writers of the New Testament had a higher mission than those of the Old, since they were sent forth by Christ, as the Father. (John 20:21). They were to go not to a single nation only (as Israel), but into all the world. (Matt. 28:19). They received the keys of the kingdom of heaven. (Matt. 16:19). And they are to be pre-eminently rewarded in the regeneration. (Matt. 19:28). Such considerations and comparisons as these are not to be overlooked in estimating the authority by which they wrote.

(c) The writers of the New Testament were especially qualified for their work, as we see in Matt. 10:19, 20; Mark 3:11; Luke 12:12; John 14:26, and John 16:13, 14. These passages will be dwelt on more at length in a later division of our subject, but just now it may be noticed that in some of the instances, inspiration of the most absolute character was promised as to what they should speak—the inference being warranted that none the less would they be guided in what they wrote. Their spoken words were limited and temporary in their sphere, but their written utterances covered the whole range of revelation and were to last forever. If in the one case they were inspired, how much more in the other?

(d) The writers in the New Testament directly claim divine inspiration. See Acts 15:23-29.

where, especially at verse 28, Jasis recorded as saying, "For it seemed good to the Holy Ghost and to us, to lay upon you no greater burden than these necessary things." It is affirmed very clearly that the Holy Spirit is the real writer of the letter in question and simply using the human instruments for his purpose. Add to this 1 Cor. 2:13, where Paul says: "Which things also we speak, not in the words which man's wisdom teacheth, but which the Holy Ghost teacheth, comparing spiritual things with spiritual," or as the margin of the Revised Version puts it, "imparting things to spiritual men." In 1 Thess. 2:13 the same writer says: "For this cause also thank we God without ceasing, because when ye received the Word of God which ye heard of us, ye received not the word of man, but as it is the truth the Word of God." In II. Peter 3:2 the apostle places his own words on a level with those of the prophets of the Old Testament, and in verses 15 and 16 of the same chapter he does the same with the writings of Paul, classifying them "with the other Scriptures." Finally, in Rev. 1:7, although it is the Apostle John who is writing, he is authorized to exclaim: "He that hath an ear let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches," and so on throughout the epistles to the seven churches.

JAMES M. GRAY.

OBITUARY.

Sarah A. Dennie.

Sarah A. Dennie, daughter of Andrew W. and Malinda Roberts, was born in Green township, Marshall county, Indiana, July 8, 1838. She was a sister of the late Israel G. Roberts, and one of a family of seven children. She grew to womanhood under the care of her parents on the old Roberts' homestead, four miles north from Argos, where she received the advantages of the common schools of that day.

She was married to John C. Dennie, a school teacher, March 9, 1856, and went to housekeeping at Solon, Iowa, where her husband had previously prepared a home. They lived here until her husband's death, September 5, 1873. To them had been born seven children, namely: Andrew L., Ida M., Flora M., John E., Malley C., Willard Rush, and Minnie C. The next spring after the death of the father, she with her children, returned to Marshall county. They resided in the vicinity of Argos until the children were grown and married, since which she has lived in Argos and with her children, who have become scattered. Andrew J. lives on a farm southwest from Argos; Flora M., now Mrs. Short, near Stillwell, Ind.; John E., and Willard Rush, in Chicago, Ill.; and Malley C., in Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Sister Dennie obeyed the gospel message, was baptized, and received into the Church of God, at Antioch, in 1876, where she remained a member until her death. Her life has been ordered in harmony with her profession, living a life of Christian love and faith, often under trying circumstances.

She had been in declining health, for a number of years, but was better than usual of late until stricken with paralysis two weeks ago, from which she gradually grew worse until the end. She had been living with her son, John E., in Chicago, and died in the Englewood hospital where she had been taken for treatment, December 13, 1911, at the age of 73 years, 5 months, and 5 days. Two of her children, Ida M., and Minnie C., had preceded her in death. She leaves the other five, two sisters, Mrs. John Jordan, and Mrs. Smith Pomeroy, of Plymouth, and many other relatives to mourn because of her death. She had a wide acquaintance of friends who will miss her association.

Sister Dennie was a character of strong convictions, and pursued the highway of life, under its many difficulties, with the firm belief that this life is but the scene of trial and test, and that the rewards for the faithful discharge of one's duty here will be meted out by a just and loving God through the mediation of "our" Jesus Christ, our Lord and Saviour, in the ages to come.

Funeral services were held from the residence of her sister, Mrs. Smith Pomeroy, in Plymouth, Indiana, Friday, December 15, 1911, at 2 o'clock p. m., conducted by the writer, and interment was made in Oak Hill cemetery.

D. E. VANVACTOR.
Argos, Ind.

Mrs. Wm. F. Finney.

Matilda Ann, the oldest daughter of Charleson and Emily Spencer, was born in Henry county, Ind., and died at her home near Sircleville, November 18, 1911, at the age of 62 years and 28 days.

She was married to Wm. Finney on the last day of 1865, after his return from the war. They resided in Clinton County, a year, then removed to Delaware and Henry counties for about 20 years, when they returned to the home and stayed until her death, meeting the common hardships of the pioneers who improved Indiana to what it is today.

She never enjoyed a great degree of life's comforts or health, but was a cheery, good woman in all her trials. She was one of those helpful ones who believe in spreading good cheer, and was always ready to dispense it in kind acts, generosity, and cheerful words. It was always a pleasure to us to go to their humble home.

One child died in infancy, and Bertha at the age of 22. The surviving children are Mrs. Emma Mimsey, of Cincinnati, O.; Albert George and Mrs. Hugh Huffer. She is also survived by her husband, one brother, three sisters, ten grandchildren and a host of other relatives and friends who revere the memory of a good Christian mother and sister in the Lord. She was baptized in Henry county in 1870.

She was patient and kind in all her years of affliction, being sustained by the blessed hope, in which she fell asleep.

Therefore we comfort ourselves in the hope of the Lord's appearing to awaken those that sleep in him to a glorious immortality in the holy city.

The funeral was conducted by the writer at the Hillisburg church, then we laid her to rest in the Whiteman cemetery.

JOSEPH WILLIAMS.
Hillisburg, Ind.

THE PERFECT MIRROR OF TRUTH.

When the sky is open and the light shines through, whether the calm, pensive beauty of the moon or the golden glory of the sun, and falls unhindered on a quiet water surface, there is mirrored on its face so perfect an image that in a photograph of such it is difficult to determine which is the picture of the object and which that of the image. Everything within reach of the rays: the fringe of trees, the grassy bank, the rugged walls of rock, the flitting bird and floating cloud, and the old stone bridge across the stream, all are shadowed truly in the cool, calm depths, and it is impossible for one to look into such a mirror without a holy influence coming over him to purify, for it shows him to himself as he is, the drunkard's face, the guilty eye, the hard features of sin, for when God's camera takes a likeness there is no bribing of the artist to retouch the picture, nor it is to be concluded from nature that for proper purposes it is not wrong to have our pictures taken, but eminently fitting to stand often in the presence of his glory, before his faultless mirror, to see ourselves as we are seen by him, to "know as we are known."

For the word is also a perfect mirror for the inner man. Not a dark corner of the mind but the light of the "glorious gospel" reveals what is hidden, not an imperfection but the comparison with his faultless presence makes it noticeable; not a flaw of sin but "the perfect law" exposes it, till we see ourselves as God sees us, and know as we are known by him. Then let us quit singing that we shall know as we are known "when the mists have cleared away." That will be too late. Now is our cleansing time, and knowledge of sin and of righteousness is necessary to the change, which can be obtained only by seeing ourselves as we are now.

And the word of truth is a mirror that will do this. For in Jas. 1:22-25 he first speaks of "the word," then compares it to a looking glass, and lastly calls it "the perfect law." Therefore, since the word is a mirror and a "perfect law," it is a perfect mirror.

Now in 1 Cor. 13:12 Paul also speaks of the same "glass," saying, "For now we see through a glass, darkly; but then face to face, now I know in part, but then shall I know even as also I am known." When? "When that which is perfect is come," v. 10. What perfect thing? Herein lies the whole question of the time referred to in v. 12, and it includes the whole controversy of the working of miracles in the present time. Either the perfect thing has come and the miracles have ceased, or else if the perfect thing be the age of redemption, to come, then the miracles should be here in the church yet, for "that which is in part," of v. 10, refers to miracles as we see by v. 8, and the whole context from the first of chap. 12 and on the end of chap. 14, for the miraculous operation of the spirit is the whole subject under discussion here, and Paul's discourse on love in chap. 13 is put in to show by comparison that love is "more excellent" than all the miracles that could be performed, and concludes, therefore, that we should follow "after" it, 14:1, rather than be so concerned about "tongues" and other miracles, and would prefer the church, even then to "prophesy" or preach the word, as he further explains in vs. 5-19, rather than preach in miraculous "tongues."

So in 13:8 he shows that love shall never fail or be removed from the church, which he again emphasies in v. 13, saying that there abide or remain with the church three things, faith, hope, and love, and that the more excellent way is the greatest of the three, hence the conclusion in 14:1 to follow after it first of all. You notice that in the three things that "abide" miracles are not included, for as stated in v. 8 they were to "fail" or "cease" "when that which is perfect is come." Has the perfect thing come? Yes. The perfect law of truth, for "the law of the Lord is perfect," Ps. 19:8. The Scripture is able to furnish the man of God thoroughly unto all good works and make him "perfect" (2 Tim. 3:15-17). Perfect in love, "the bond of perfectness" (Col. 3:14).

The spirit was given to reveal the whole truth, as Jesus said, "When he, the spirit of truth is come, he will guide you into all truth, and he will show you things to come" (John 16:13). He shall teach you all things and bring all things to your remembrance whatsoever I have said unto you" (John 14:26). No one apostle was given this whole revelation. Each saw "in part." James saw the coming struggle of labor and capital; Peter saw the passing away of the heaven and earth that are now and the ushering in of the third, the age of glory; Paul saw the conditions in the formal churches "in the last days;" and John saw the visions of Patmos. Each saw in the mirror "darkly", or "in part." Stephen did before these parts were given, so we are better off than he, who lived in the sight of miracles. But when all these parts of the mirror were revealed and confirmed by the miracles, the "law" or "mirror" was "perfect" because it brought to light the meaning of the coming revelation, Jesus risen from the dead.

Paul finally compares this time when they saw "in part" to "a child," and the time "when that which is perfect is come" to "a man," 1 Cor. 13:11. The force of the illustration lies in that all a "child" speaks, understands or thinks is what the parent reveals to it, just as all the Lord and apostles spake, understood and taught was what the Father gave to them through the spirit. So in 1 Cor. 14:20 he says, "in understanding be men." Why? Because the perfect had come, therefore let the church at Corinth gradually drop their interest in "tongues" and center it in "prophesying" or preaching the truth that sanctifies or makes perfect.

Then let us all stand with "open face" before this "glass," beholding in it not our own glorious looks, but "the glory of the Lord," and so be "changed into the same image, from glory to glory, even as by the spirit of the Lord," II Cor. 3:18. For that is the work the spirit is today doing in us who are "transformed" by the truth, the faultless mirror.

JOSEPH WILLIAMS.
Hillisburg, Ind.

THE LITTLE HORN OF DANIEL EIGHTH

Although eminent students of prophecy have held that the "little horn" of Daniel, eighth chapter, cannot refer to Rome, and have presented arguments worthy of careful consideration, we are as yet compelled to think otherwise, and to regard this little horn as a symbol of the Roman power, for the following reasons, which appear to us conclusive, though they cannot at this time be elaborated as fully as we could wish.

I. The rise and early conquests assigned this little horn appear clearly to identify it with Rome. "Out of one of the (the four subdivisions of Alexander's Grecian empire) came forth a little horn, which waxed exceeding great toward the south and toward the east, and toward the pleasant land." (Dan. 8:9.)

Rome originated as a colony from Macedon, afterwards included in that division of Alexander's empire which fell to Cassander. It is true that this origin took place before the Grecian monarchy under Alexander was founded, but as the prophet is looking back after the breaking up of Alexander's kingdom, to the beginning of a small and insignificant power; and as it came out of what afterwards comprised one of the four divisions of the Grecian kingdom of Alexander, the time of its origin is not so important as that origin itself. Rome was at first a very insignificant and small kingdom, but it afterward grew and "waxed exceeding great."

Further, when we come to the angel's explanation of this part of the prophecy (v. 23), it is plain that the prophet is not contemplating this little horn, while still little and feeble, but rather after it has become "exceeding great," "mighty, but not by his own power." Rome's early conquests were "toward the south" (Carthage B. C. 146); "toward the east" (Macedon and Greece, 168 and 146 B. C., Asia Minor, 47 B. C.) and "toward the pleasant land" (Palestine under Herod, 37 B. C.). We take these dates as we write, from "Adam's Chronological Chart," which is generally regarded as good authority.

II. Rome "waxed great against (margin) the host of heaven," and "cast down some of the host and of the stars to the ground." (v 10) when Herod the Great, by the aid of Roman troops deposed Antigonus, the last Jewish Asmonean prince, B. C. 37, made Judea a Roman province, with himself its king, corrupted the Jewish priesthood, and massacred many nobles.

Herod as the representative of Rome to Daniel's people came into power just before Rome conquered Egypt (the last of the four divisions of Alexander's empire to be overcome) at the battle of Actium, B. C. 31, which was "the latter time" of these four kingdoms (vs. 22, 23) "when the transgressors" (The disobedient Jews) were "come to the full," or had nearly reached the limit and climax of their iniquity in rejecting the Son of God, their Messiah. This fulfillment is remarkable, and cannot possibly apply to Antiochus Epiphanes, as some learned writers have maintained, nor can it any better apply to the Macedonian power, which did not arise till some six centuries later, when the "transgressors" had long been destroyed as a nation, and vs. 23-25 long fulfilled.

III. Not only did Rome come into power with relation to the Jews at the right time to fulfill this prophecy, but Rome strikingly fills the prophetic description of a "king of fierce countenance, and understanding dark sentences." (v. 23.) The early Roman emperors were renowned and pitiless warriors. They also held the office of "pontifex maximus," or chief pontiff, which placed them at the head of the sacred college of augurs and made them the highest authority in the interpretation of all auguries and auspices for the state or public inquiry. They were believed to have a perfect understanding of these complex superstitions.

Further, Herod the Great, as the agent and representative of Rome to the Jews, was personally a man of fierce, ungovernable passions, and full of unscrupulous, deep, crafty designs. He was one of the worst and most bloodthirsty tyrants that ever reigned, and so cruel in his own family that Augustus Caesar once said of him that it were better to be Herod's hog than Herod's son. As a ruler "his power was mighty, but not by his own power," for he was wholly dependent upon Rome. He did, during his reign, "destroy wonderfully," ye he "prospered and practiced" kingcraft with great ability. By his subtle, crafty power as a ruler he caused "craft to prosper in his hand," or in his favor, and he "magnified himself in his heart" and despite his despicable character became known as Herod the Great. He "stood up against the Princes of princes" (v. 25) when he attempted to slay the infant Jesus; and so great was his tyranny that this slaughter of the innocents of Bethlehem and its environs called forth no remark by any historian of the time outside the Scriptures.

All this being done under Roman authority, unquestionably and unmistakably serves to identify Rome as the little horn of this chapter to the writer, beyond his power or wish to see otherwise.

IV. In v. 11 we learn that after this little horn had become great and magnified himself against the Prince of the host, explained in v. 25 to mean to "stand up against the Prince of princes" (upon which we have already commented); then by this same little horn "the daily sacrifice was taken away and the place of his sanctuary cast down."

Now no one will deny that after Rome had crucified our Lord on a Roman cross, within forty years she sent an army, besieged Jerusalem for three and a-half years, caused the Jewish daily sacrifice to cease July 17, A. D. 70, by depriving them of beasts to sacrifice, and soon afterward destroyed the sanctuary, temple itself, since which time that sacrificial worship has never been resumed.

This statement closely agrees with another statement in Dan. 9:27: "In the midst of the week he (the Roman commander) shall cause the sacrifice and the oblation to cease, and for the overspreading of abominations he shall make it (the holy city) desolate," etc.

The agreement in statement here is so marked and apparent to the writer that it is impossible to believe that the two passages refer to different events brought about by different powers. Especially is this apparent when we notice in the preceding verse that this invading army will "destroy the city and the sanctuary."

'SOW NOT AMONG THORNS'

In the parable of "The Sower of the Seed" our Lord likens the human heart to soil; not the packed ground of the road, but tillable land. "Good ground" is, with him a good and honest heart.

Now as the field was made to receive seed and give to it the necessary conditions and qualities for its germination, nourishment and perfection, so the human heart is designed by God to receive the seed of the kingdom of God, that incorruptible seed, the word of God, the gospel, "which liveth and abideth forever."

But, alas! as we all now, an enemy, "your adversary, the devil," has gone through the field of humanity, and sown seed of a worthless, nay more, of a most pernicious nature, so that to speak generally, the heart abounds in a crop of "thorns" or "tares"; the soil is cumbered with evil, and the field is a pathetic object to look upon.

"Thorns" are the cares of this life, the deceitfulness of riches, the lust of other things—these, entering in, "choke the word," so that it cannot bring forth fruit. The ground is preempted, the strength of the soil depleted, the "life" sucked out of it; hence there is no will, energy, strength left for the word of God. Impossible is it for those to do good who are accustomed to do evil. "Second nature," had second nature, leaves nothing congenial to the Divine seed.

In vain then to hope for anything satisfactory out of such a heart and life. It is the despair of the labourer. It is wasted time to try to do anything with this sort of man. The disposition of his mind, the activities of his personality, preclude a crop of a heavenly nature. Spirituality is an impossibility.

There are many today who are in this state, they simply can not bring forth fruit unto God, and unless they can be reached and rescued they will be fuel for the wrath of God. Alas! they do not know their case is so bad. These words are written to try to show at least some their real state, that heroic measures may be taken to bring them once again into a hopeful condition.

Brother! you who have understood the good message of life and home in Jesus Christ; who have embraced it as your individual hope; who have become identified with Jesus Christ as a disciple in baptism; who even now attend the meetings of the attached and yet are fruitless, hear the word I bring you.

You draw near to God with your lips. You sing the hymn of praise with the earnest hearted. You listen to the word read and expounded. You sometimes, when asked, become yourself the ostensible mouthpiece of man to God or of God to man; but—BUT, all the seed sown in your ears and heart, in your knowledge and utterance, fails to bring forth in you that unworldliness, that deep peace, that unspeakable joy, that glorious, all-conquering hope that you see in some others. There must be a reason. What then is the explanation?

Cares of this life. Love of money. Desires of a worldly sort. Thorns, thorns, thorns! Poor man! O that you may realize what a tearful sight you are before the face of God and Christ, and to the discerning hearts of real overseers. Could you once see this, even you would not be satisfied. You would "afflict your soul;" you would "weep and mourn, and lament;" you would arise and deliver yourself into the power at hand to assist all who will turn unto God. Let me talk to your heart—closely, tenderly, and—God grant it!—effectively.

The cares of this life—business cares, family cares. God did not lay them upon you as a part of your burden. No; you sought them for yourself, you assumed them not at his will. You increased your obligations; you entangled yourself; you got "all snarled up" in worldly occupations, enterprises, speculations. From morning to night, business—"shop"—is ever with you. Solicitudes, anxieties, fears are your portion. O the cares of this life are "thorns" indeed; a bed of thorns which pierce you as you lie down; thorns in your eyes and in your sides. You are pierced through with many sorrows. You have no time to read and meditate on the word; no time to be still ere you speak to God; no time to visit the fatherless and widow; no time to live the new life. The world has your time. Even on your bed it steals the time of sleep from your eyes! You "mind earthly things." Paul "wept" over such. Poor slave! The world has you! You are fast in its snare! There is practically nothing of you left for God and goodness. You may "collect" yourself, "gather yourself together" for a few minutes of devout worship on Sunday—what avails that? Carefilled, troubled about many things; there is your description Sad to be a thorny-grounded bearer of the word!

"Deceitful of riches." This promises the satisfaction of all carnal desires. It says: "I can give you enjoyment." It says: "Plenty of ease, fulness of bread, everything that heart can desire is mine, and I bestow it on those who love and seek me." And you—yes, you—have been the simpleton to believe in the deceiver's voice! Mammon has prevailed. You did not mean to give up God; you wanted God and Mammon. You are trying to serve both today. Listen: "Ye cannot serve God and mammon." The Gospel makes us despise earthly riches. We count them loss for Christ's sake. We take joyfully the spoiling of our goods if so required. We labor that we may have to give to the needy—not hoard as a provision with which to fulfil the desires of the flesh. We abound in liberality. We remember the poor. We assist the evangelist who gives himself to spread the gospel. That is not you. You love money. How hard you are after the pound! You are not rich, it may be, but you would be. You would say to gold, "Thou art my good, my confidence." That is just as bad as being rich. It is not the fault of your desire or effort that you are not rich. O the thorns! O the hopelessness of your bearing fruit to God! Disposition, endeavor are the other way

Continued next week

GOLD DUST.

Be brief, for it is with words as with sunbeams—the more they are condensed the deeper they burn.

If you get angry with a man or woman, make up your mind what you are going to say and then don't say it.

If you bring a smile to the trembling lips of another you will soon discover that a smile is alighting on your own lips.

If you would have treasure in heaven you must lay it up: No other can do it for you.

Avoid brag; it will bring you down in the eyes of those whose good opinion you most desire. Cultivate simplicity in action and in conversation. Promise little, perform much.

Only as we cultivate the various graces of the spirit—meekness, patience, gentleness, brotherly kindness, love—can we hope to be specially helpful to others in putting on these adornments of character and pureness of life, and to get rid of defilements of the world and the flesh.

ANNA DREW.
Dixon, Ill.

One is lifted up to the truly high places to the extent that he knows and delights in God.

The deepest need of all mankind is to be truly taught the law of God.

Righteous living awakens awe and admiration.

One who is king in name may be a slave at heart.

Manager's Column

At this season of the year when thoughts of the Christmas holidays are filling our minds we read and hear many little sermons on having the proper spirit in making our gifts. We can not have too many of these, for we too often forget the spirit of love, kindness and affection that should prompt our giving and instead, fall into the habit of giving merely as a custom, prompted sometimes by selfishness or pride. The spirit of comforting, the spirit of cheering, the spirit of helpfulness, these should be the three spirits of our giving. This is the spirit of our Helping Fund work: it is for those who need it, lovingly given by those who can give it, because this spirit of giving is with them.

There are many kindly letters, words of encouragement and well wishes from brethren received at this office every day. Many in their business letters speak a kindly word or send along their well wishes. These messages are always appreciated, but through lack of time and the pressure of many other duties it is not always possible to write a personal answer to each of those sending them, but we are always glad to get them, and if you do not get a letter in reply you may know that our time is well taken up with other work.

A man can bear a world's contempt when he has that within him which says he's worthy.—Smith.

Work is given to men not only because the world needs it, but because the workman needs it. Work makes men.—Henry Drummond.

God is ever the strong ally of those who walk in his ways of righteousness.

They who seek first the kingdom of God prove the promise of having other good things added to them.

God is the strength of a city or a soul; apart from him either is a ready prey to enemies.

Scripture Searchers Assistant

A very valuable help to all who are studying the Scriptures—a reprint of one of our beloved Brother Joblin's works. Treats of thirty different subjects with about four hundred references. All should possess a copy for ready reference. Price by mail six cents. Address W. L. Tomlinson, 10825 Orville Ave., N. E., Cleveland, O.

A SONG BOOK.

Songs of the Kingdom.

Recommended by Bro. Huggins and nearly all of our preachers, as by far the best song book for our people. 138 pages, flexible cloth. 25 cents each; postpaid. Address, Chas. E. Crowe, St. Paul, Neb.

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

We, whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones.

This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of their paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

Wm. D. Root	1.50
Geo. Watts	.50
Mrs. C. Seeley	1.50

Ladies! Save Money and Keep up Style by Reading McCall's Magazine and Using McCall Patterns

McCall's Magazine will help you dress stylishly at a moderate expense by keeping you posted on the latest fashions in clothes and hats. 50 New Fashion Designs in each issue. Also valuable information on all home and personal matters. Only 50c a year, including a free pattern. Subscribe today or send for free sample copy.

McCall Patterns will enable you to make in your own home, with the utmost ease, anything for yourself and children which will be perfect in style and fit. The most highest class 15 cents. Send for free Patterns Catalogue.

We Will Give You Free Premiums for getting subscribers among your friends. Send for free Premium Catalogue and Cash Prize Offer.

THE McCALL COMPANY, 239 to 249 West 37th St., NEW YORK

Four Page Tracts

Can You Believe? A series of questions setting forth the fundamental points of our faith.

State of Man in Death. A collection of proof texts on this subject.

Life and Death. A short concise statement of the facts in the case.

Age to Come Not a Heresy, by H. V. Reed.

10 for 10 cents, 50 for 25 cents. 100 for 40 cents.

The Paternity of Jesus. A pamphlet of 122 pages, by M. Joblin, giving in detail all that can be said on this subject, and completely proving that He is the Son of God, and not the natural son of Joseph. This work ought to be sold at 25 cents a copy, but the author was so anxious that price should not stand in the way of its being read, that he put the price at ten cents, so all can buy them Send to this office for them.

Address The Restitution Pub. Co.

Book and Tracts by Bro. W. H. Wilson.

"A Bible Study of Hades, as compared with our modern ideas," is the title of a new tract just issued by Bro. W. H. Wilson. It is a critical study of the subject of Hell. It shows that the meaning attached to this word today is different fro mthe meaning given to it years ago. It also shows how this change was made, and who made it. The price is 15 cents each, or 5 for 50 cents.

Student's Text Book, a cloth brund book 200 pages.

It deals specifically as How to study the Bible and why people fail to rightly understand God's Word Price 50 cents.

Pir · Woods Bible Class, a book of 480 pages bound in cloth. Studies are carried on as between a class and its teacher. Price $1.25.

Cunningly Devised Fables, 28 pages. Price 10 cents.

Where Will You Spend Eternity? Four pages, 25 cents per 100.

Are You in Need of Money? 4 pages 25 cents per 100.

Will It Pay to Become a Christian? is the title to a well written book of 96 page. by Brother Jas. W. Wilson. In a clear and convincing manner it sets forth the Christian faith and answers the question indicated in its title affirmatively. The edition should be taken at once and put out to work. It is neatly bound in cloth. The price is 25 cents, very low, and within reach of all.

W. H. Wilson, at 625 North Willow avenue, Austin Station, Chicago, Illinois.

The Bible: Its Principles and Texts

As indicated by the title this book is divided into three sections. The first consists of a remarkable disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "principles" in formulated propositions, and the third expounds in a clear, impressive and homelitic manner particular "Texts." The knotty and perplexing texts of the Bible are united and solved satisfactorily to the most fastidious and critical. More than one hundred and fifteen subjects of intense interest to every Bible student are formally discussed. Both simple and scholarly—the child is fascinated and taught; the scholar is entertained and instructed. Bible lovers, here is a feast for you. Throw open the door of your home; let The Bible—its Principles and its Texts come in and bless you and your family. 309 pages, 5x7 1-2 inches, durably and handsomely bound in whole cloth, with title embossed on back in gold. One copy, $1.10, two copies or more $1.00 each. The Restitution Pub. Co.

Popular Lectures, By Bro. M. Joblin

Send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled: "The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to Be Saved?" The Foolishness of Preaching and Salvation—what is it?

Each lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price.

TWO TRACTS By J. L. WINCE.

"Salvation" and "Resurrection" two tracts by J. L. Wince, can not fail to arouse the interest of every believer. They deal with vital questions in a most convincing manner. The price is 10c each, 12 for $1.00. For sale by S. Roxanna Wince, Pierceton, Ind.

BEREAN NOTICE.

The lessons for our new Berean books for 1912 are ready for the printer. It is necessary for us to have an idea of the number of books needed before placing the work in his hands. Several societies in other states purchased their present books from the Illinois state society. If these societies or any others wish to buy their new books from us, will they please send an approximate number of the books they will need to the chairman of the committee, Leila E. Whitehead, 5439 Ontario street, Chicago, Ill., before December 18th. This does not apply to any society in Illinois. Send no money now—just an estimate of the number of books needed. For further information send to the above address.

ANNA E. DREW.
President Illinois Bereans.

BEREAN NOTICE.

The Chicago Bereans will make their annual Christmas distribution of food and money to the poor and needy of their great city. Friends who wish to help in this work of Christmas cheer, please send their contributions to Leila E. Whitehead, 5439 Ontario St., Chicago, Ill.

By order of Committee.

50 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the

Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York

Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

BOOKS AND TRACTS

Bible Pearls—Two-page tracts, suitable for wide distribution. 1. The Gospel. 2. Coming and Kingdom of Christ, by 20,000 Baptists in 1660. 3. Immateriality. 4. Kingdom of God. 5. Nature of Man and Thoughts for Thinkers. 6. Two Advents. 7. What s Religion? 8. Restitution Age. 9. Destiny of the Wicked. 10. Baptism. 10 copies for 5 cents, or assorted packages of 100 for 20 cents.

Census Blank

MEMBERSHIP CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA

Name .....

Address .....
Street Town State

By whom Immersed ..... Date .....

Fill out the above and send to "The Census Editor," The Restitution, 803 Parkwood Drive, Cleveland, O.

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co.

WHOLESALE OPTICIANS

We make a specialty of High Grade Prescription Work, and carry a full line of all kinds of Optical goods. All orders filled same day as received.

"S. K. N." SERVICE

Means prompt returns, careful work, moderate prices. Goods shipped to all parts of the country.

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co. 336 SCHOFIELD BUILDING CLEVELAND, OHIO

SPECIAL OFFER!

IN ORDER to increase the circulation of The Restitution, the following special offer is made:

One new subscriber for 1 year, choice of:

W. H. Wilson's "Student's Text Book," regular price.....50c
Or 5 Copies of "Cunningly Devised Fables," reg. price 50c
Or 5 Copies of "Bible Study of Hades," reg. price 50c

For Two New Subscribers

One Copy "Pine Woods Bible Class," 480 pages, rg. price, $1.25
Or "The Bible, Its Principles and Texts," 309 pages, reg., $125
Or One Hundred of Bro. Joblin's Tracts, regular price $1.20

Here is a chance to get some of the books you all should own. By making special arrangements with the authors we are able to offer them to you without the payment of a cent on your part, just a few minutes effort. We cannot afford to continue this offer long, so take advantage of it at once, get some new subscribers today.

THE RESTITUTION, 803 Parkwood Drive

An Appropriate Christmas Gift

This is the time of year when we begin to think of appropriate Christmas gifts for friends and those near and dear to us. Here is a good suggestion. Send them the Restitution for a year, it will go to them fifty-two times, each time with messages of faith, hope, love, courage and gladness. A loving remembrance and a blessing each week of the year. For the balance of the year we are going to make this

GENEROUS OFFER

ALL FOR ONE NEW SUBSCRIBER FOR ONE YEAR AT $1.50 — The Restitution for the balance of 1911. The Restitution for ALL of 1912. One Beautiful Art Calendar for 1912. (No advertisement). One copy of "A Letter to a Friend," One copy of W. H. Wilson's Students' Text Book.

We will send all to one address or The Restitution to one address and the premiums to another This is for new subscribers only, and certainly a very generous offer. For two new subscribers you can substitute The Pine Woods Bible Class, or "The Bible, its Principle and Texts," for the Students' Text Book. When requested we will send a card to those to whom the above may be sent as a gift, giving the donor's name and best wishes.

Send names today, so as to get all the advantages of this offer.

The Restitution Publishing Co., 803 Parkwood Drive

Less than Half a Cent a Day

The Restitution costs a Dollar and a Half a year, that's less thanhalf A Cent a day or three cents a copy. You can't afford to be without it. If you are a subscriber get some one else to subscribe.

Help to Get Them on the List

Sample Copies of The Restitution

May be obtained for a stamp. Send for one.

"A LETTER TO A FRIEND"

This tract needs no introduction further than to say that It is one of the most convincing Gospel sermons ever written. Originally written as a letter to a friend by Sister C. C. Woodruff it was published and has sold extensively in tract form. In its present edition it is a 32 page tract, the price is

10c each; 12 for $1.00

There is no better way of spreading the Gospel than handing out one of these tracts wherever you have the opportunity.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

"Future Probation,

is that Awaiting any of the Unrighteous?"

Here is a work by Wm. Glenn Moncrieff that every one should read.It is one of the best things on the subject ever written and will appeal to every student of the word. It is a book of 150 pages, made to sell at 25c. We have a limited number left which we will sell at the special price of

10c each; 12 for $1.00

Send for some at once.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

Oregon State College
Oregon State Library

Walter Pomeroy Ti
10895 Pebble Ave

The Restitution
IS THE OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA.

The Restitution.

Founded in A.D. 1852

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The Inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:16, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Lk. 19:12-15), who will be King of Kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-53); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17), and belief in, the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Lk. 13:3), and obedience by Baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ." (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31).

ROBT. G. HUGGINS, Editor.

—Terms of— Subscription
ONE YEAR, $1.50;
SIX MONTHS 75 CTS. IN ADVANCE

VOL. 60 - 4 CLEVELAND, OHIO, JANUARY 2, 1912 No. 50

YULETIDE MEDITATION.

Christmas day, so they say.
Is the Son of God's birthday:
By the oxen meek and mild.
In the manger lay the child.

And the angels God did send,
To tell it to the shepherd men;
And the angels, they did sing.
Peace on earth, good will to men.

And the star, oh, so bright,
Guided them through the night;
Guided them through hill and dell
Until it stood over Bethlehem.

And the shepherds, there they saw
Mary and her bed of straw.
And beside her lay the King,
Who will soon come to earth and reign.

When he comes, all strife will cease,
And then the world will be at peace;
For he will reign in Zion's hill,
And all the earth with glory fill.

His word shall Paradise restore,
And sin and death afflict no more;
God's holy will shall then be done,
By all who live beneath the sun.

Mrs. Dr. L. Hichlin-Williams.
Los Angeles, Cal.

RELIGIOUS CHANGES.

In Belief and Practice Between the Resurrection of Christ and the Death of Constantine in 337.

IX.—Plato's Philosophy at Work.

Dr. Mosheim in his Ecclesiastical history, speaking of the second century, says: "This venerable simplicity was not, indeed, of long duration; its beauty was gradually effaced by the laborious efforts of human learning and the dark subtilties of imaginary science. Acute researches were employed upon several religious subjects, concerning which ingenious decisions were pronounced; and, what was worst of all, several tenets of a chimerical philosophy were imprudently incorporated into the Christian system. Many examples might be alleged which verify these observations we have now been making; and if the reader is desirous of a striking one he has only to take a view of the doctrines which began to be taught in this century concerning the state of the soul after the dissolution of the body. Jesus and his disciples had simply declared that men's souls slept until Christ should come again; this was sufficient for his disciples to know, as they had more piety than curiosity, and were satisfied with the knowledge of the solemn fact, without any inclination to penetrate its manner, or to pry into its secret reasons. But this plain doctrine was soon disguised when Platonism began to infect Christianity. Plato had taught that the souls of heroes, of illustrious men, and eminent philosophers alone ascended after death into the mansions of light and felicity; while those of the generality, weighed down with their lusts and passions, sank into the infernal regions, from when they were not permitted to emerge before they were purified from their turpitude and corruption. This doctrine was seized with avidity by the Platonic Christians, and applied as a commentary upon that of Jesus. Hence a notion prevailed that the martyrs only entered upon a state of happiness immediately after death; and that for the rest, a certain obscure region was assigned, in which they were to be imprisoned until the second coming of Christ, or, at least, until they were purified from their various pollutions."

Hence the origin of the Catholic purgatory. Mosheim himself was a believer in this Platonic doctrine of immortal souls in men, hence his statement just quoted about souls going to heaven at death. On the contrary, Jesus told his disciples, and among them there were good men, "Whither I go, ye cannot come." (John xiii. 33).

Some of the beginnings of this state of things we find in the writings of Irenaeus in his work, Against Heresies. He too was caught by this heathen philosophy. Kurtz, in his Church History, says: "From the middle of the second century onwards, there appears in the historical developments of Gnosticism an ever-increasing tendency to come to terms with the doctrine of the church. . . . The most brilliant period in the history of Gnosticism was the second century, commencing with Hadrian. At the beginning of the third century there was scarcely one of the more cultivated congregations throughout the whole of the Roman empire, and beyond this as far as Edessa, that was not affected by it."

The following will show that Irenaeus himself was caught with the tide of heathen philosophy sweeping into the church. He says: "The Lord has taught with very great fulness that souls not only continue to exist, not by passing from body to body, but that they preserve the same form as the body had to which they were adopted, and that they remember the deeds which they did in this state of existence, and from which they have now ceased—in that which is recorded respecting the rich man and that Lazarus who found repose in the bosom of Abraham. In this account he states that Dives knew Lazarus after death, and Abraham in like manner; and that each one of these persons continued in his own proper position; and that Dives requested Lazarus to be sent to relieve him, on whom he did not bestow even the crumbs from his table. Also of the answer given by Abraham, who was acquainted not only with what respected himself, but Dives also, and who enjoined those who did not wish to come into that place of torment to believe Moses and the prophets, and to receive the preaching of Him who was to rise from the dead. By these things, then, it is plainly declared that souls continue to exist; that they do not pass from body to body; that they possess the form of a man, so that they may be recognized and retain the memory of things in this world. Moreover that the gift of prophecy was possessed by Abraham, and that each class receives a habitation such as it has deserved, even before the judgment.

Irenaeus here assumes, like many other theologians since his day, that this parable which he quotes is a narrative of literal facts (Luke xvi. 19-31). Christ says: "Think not that I am come to destroy the law or the prophets; I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill." On the condition of man in death there is perfect harmony in Moses and the prophets, as we have seen. If the scene described in the parable were a literal fact it would be a direct contradiction of Moses and the prophets. There would certainly not be rest in the intermediate state for any one if the wicked are in torment in plain sight and hearing of the righteous. It must be a curious place for, say, a righteous father or mother (or, indeed, any other righteous person) to be in, to hear the screams of the damned (and damned, too, before the judgment), screaming to those who were their friends in this life to send them a drop of water to cool their tongue; and so terrible must be the screams, as theologians have delighted to picture, that there would certainly neither be rest nor sleep for the righteous who are in plain sight of them.

By Irenaeus using this parable to prove that souls exist in a separate and conscious state between death and the resurrection, he not only makes the Scriptures contradict themselves, but he is not consistent with his own theories. The fact is, by bringing this heathen doctrine into the Scriptures, and trying to engraft it in there, endless confusion has been caused, and the Bible has been made a book of mysteries which only the very learned can understand; and they certainly do not agree among themselves as to its teaching. Irenaeus in this same work, Against Heresies, says: "But as the animal body is certainly not itself the soul, yet has fellowship with the soul as long as God pleases; so the soul herself is not life, but partakes in that life bestowed on her by God." In another place he says: "Now the soul and the spirit are certainly a part of the man, but certainly not the man; for the perfect man consists in the commingling and the union of the soul receiving the spirit of the Father, and the admixture of that fleshly nature which was moulded after the image of God." If this parable, then, were a literal fact, only a third part of man, namely the soul, went to hell at death, and underwent all that torture previous to the judgment.

Athenagoras, another of the Christian philosophers of the second century, who writes a work on The Resurrection of the Dead, shows conclusively from his standpoint how unjust it would be to thus punish souls in hell before the resurrection: of course his arguments are directed against the heathen belief that the soul alone was punished or rewarded for the deeds done in the body; but they tell with equal effect against this theory of rewards or punishment to the soul in an intermediate state. He says: "For if good deeds are rewarded, the body will clearly be wronged, inasmuch as it has shared with the soul in the toils connected with well-doing, but does not share in the reward of the good deeds; and because, though the soul is often excused for certain faults on the ground of the body's needless and want, the body itself is deprived of all share in the good deeds done, the toils on behalf of which it helped to bear during life." In another place he says: "But the most irrational thing of all is this—to impose properly sanctioned laws on men, and then to assign to their souls alone the recompense of their lawful or unlawful deeds. For if he who would receive the laws would also justly receive the recompense for the sins committed, and not the soul by itself, man must also bear the recompense for the sins committed, and not the soul by itself; since God has not enjoined on souls to abstain from things which have no relation to them, such as adultery, murder, theft, rapine, dishonor to parents, and every desire in general that tends to the injury and loss of our neighbors."

While this is first-rate logic from a standpoint of those who believe that man has an immortal soul, as showing the absurdity of it being punished without the body, it contains a mass of misconceptions as regards man's soul. The following passages from Scripture show that souls are capable of feeling what are commonly supposed to be bodily senses only. "An idle soul shall suffer hunger" (Prov. xix. 15); "As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country" Prov. xxv. 25); "The full soul loatheth an honeycomb; but to the hungry soul every bitter thing is sweet" (Prov. xxvii. 7); "Let your soul delight itself in fatness" (Isa. lv. 2); "Men do not despise a thief if he steals to satisfy his soul when he is hungry" (Prov. vi. 30). Scriptural souls had blood: "Also in thy skirts is found the blood of the souls of the poor innocents" (Jer. ii. 34). Souls could be torn to pieces: "Lest he tear my soul like a lion, rending it in pieces" (Ps. vii. 2); "Deliver my soul from the sword" (Ps. xxii. 20). Also Joshua x. 35, 37, 39. Christ "poured out His soul unto death" (Isa. liii. 12); "Come unto Me; hear, and your soul shall live" (Isa. lv. 3); "And every living soul died in the sea" (Rev. xvi. 3); "Yea, his soul draweth near unto the grave" (Job xxxiii. 22); "Their soul dieth in youth" (Job. xxxvi. 14, marginal reading); "In whose hand is the soul of every living thing" (Job xii. 10); "To deliver their souls from death, and keep them alive in famine" (Ps. xxxiii. 19). Moses, the prophets, Christ, and the apostles all speak the same thing; there is no division among them concerning man in death and life: no eternal life out of Christ, but death is his portion. "Death and hell were cast into the lake of fire. This is the second death" (Rev. xx. 14). And as none have, or can get, immortality out of Christ, they must necessarily be destroyed, and not be roasted for ever and ever according to heathen philosophy. When Christ speaks in the gospels of any being cast into Gehenna fire, He means that they will be destroyed.

If the statements then, in Luke xvi. are to be taken as a narrative of facts because no statement is made as to it being a parable, then on the same ground the narrative in Judges ix. 8-15 will have to be taken literally; trees can hold convention, can talk, can travel from place to place, and appoint a king over them. If this idea must be rejected as being opposed to facts precisely on the same ground must the literal use of this statement in Luke be rejected as opposed to Scriptural facts, which has been shown. The passage itself says nothing about souls either mortal or immortal; that is read into it by believers in immortal souls. It states that the rich man died and was buried who lifted up his eyes in hell, not only a third part of him. Lazarus also died, but he was carried by angels into Abraham's bosom; nothing is said about his immortal soul, for the Scriptures know nothing of such heathen entities, but the man was carried, for his fingers were there; and he was carried into Abraham's bosom, which was there too. Lazarus was the man who had evil things in this life, who was starved, and was full of sores. According to Athenagoras his soul could not have any of these things, consequently it was not his soul but his body which was there. So also with the rich man; the individual who enjoyed the good things of this life was there suffering, with his tongue parched, desiring a drop of water to cool it; and he was tormented in a literal flame (not an imaginary or spiritual flame); and they all had the organs of speech, for they could talk to one another, and they were just like what they had been in this life, for they could recognize each other. The story is just constructed on the same plan as the one in Judges to teach an important truth, which was in this case, "If they believe not Moses and the prophets, neither will they be persuaded though one rose from the dead."

A. WALLACE MASON.
Cleveland, Ohio.

READING AND PREACHING

The Scripture makes a clear distinction between reading and preaching. The same apostle who says, "Preach the word," also says, "Till I come, give attendance to reading, to exhortation, and to teaching." The "reading" referred to was doubtless the reading of the Word of God. Our Saviour was accustomed to read the Scriptures in the synagogue at Nazareth on the Sabbath day; and after reading he spoke to them the words of life. Luke iv. 16-29. When Paul and Barnabas went into the synagogue at Antioch in Syria, after reading the law and the prophets, the rulers of the synagogue sent unto them saying, "Ye men and brethren, if ye have any word of exhortation for the people, say on. Then Paul stood up, and beckoning with his hand said, men of Israel and ye that fear God, give audience." Acts xiii. 15-16. In like manner, Justin Martyr, in his account of the early worship of Christians, says that on "Sunday, the memoirs of the apostles or the writings of the prophets are read so long as time permits; then when the reading has ceased, the president verbally instructs and exhorts to the imitation of these good things. Then we all rise together and pray, and when our prayer is ended, bread and wine, and water are brought, and the president in like manner offers thanksgiving according to his ability, the people assent, saying, Amen, and there is distribution to each."

There is no question but reading is a very important part of the religious service of the church of Christ. But the reading was a reading of the word of God; a matter which is far too much neglected at the present time; and even when attended to, Scripture is often read with little force, or appreciation of its meaning. Listening to the reading of a man who does not understand what he reads, is about as edifying as it would be to listen and hear a man read Latin who did not understand the language; but listening to the reading of the Scriptures by men who themselves know what they are reading about, greatly tends to the strengthening of faith and the upbuilding of Christians.

It is sometimes urged that successful preachers do read their sermons. But that does not prove that the habit is a good one, nor that they might not have been still more successful if they had never fallen into that habit. The fact is, ministers are, to a great extent, brought up and trained in certain lines of thought and action. Very few of them have the privilege of making an intelligent and unbiased choice in such matters. If the usage of their denomination is to write and read sermons, they fall into the prevailing current, with varying results. Whether the course is best or not they never know until it seems too late to change; their habits are fixed, and they try to make the best of what they think they cannot alter.

There is no doubt that many persons would utterly fail if they should undertake to preach without "notes," and no doubt the long suffering people who now listen to the prosy reading would have great cause to thank God for it. For there are multitudes of men trying to preach who give very little evidence that God has called them to such work. Any arrangement which assists such men to do work to which the Lord has never called them, is to be deprecated rather than encouraged. A man who is to be "instant in season and out of season," whose duty it is to "reprove, rebuke, and exhort with all long-suffering and doctrine," needs to be so filled with the truth and the wisdom of God that he will not be dependent upon books and parchments for the power to proclaim to the people words of everlasting life. If the Lord has given to him the tongue of the learned, that he may be able to speak a word in season to them that are weary, he should not neglect the gift which is him, but cultivate it to the glory of God. If God has made him of slow speech, it may be well for him to be swift to hear and slow to speak.

Many of the sermons that are read are prepared with special reference to a few learned and cultivated people. But the flowing periods and scholarly phrases which are designed to disarm the criticism of a few conceited worldlings who do not care a copper for the gospel anyway, are frequently unintelligible and void of force to the multitudes who are hungering and thirsting for the words of divine truth. Truth in the plain, simple, and even colloquial language of the home, the fireside, and the market-place, would come to the hearts of hundreds with a refreshing power; but they are cheated out of their rights and privileges for the sake of gratifying the fastidious tastes and high notions of a few worldlings, who have no more right to expect that the sermon should be shaped to suit their ideas than they have to ask that all the food on a common table should be cooked to suit their tastes.

The great teacher taught more wisely; and whatever the learned said or thought of him, it is recorded that "the common people heard him gladly." And a preacher to whom the common people do not listen gladly does not imitate the example of Christ, the great teacher. People are talking about the "lapsed masses," and wondering how to reach them. One way to reach the masses is to say something that is worth hearing, and say it from a full and earnest soul, and say it in a way that the common people can understand what is said.

By the Holy Spirit Christians are enriched in utterance. But if everything they have to say is cut and dried, and written down, there is but little opportunity for the manifestation of the Holy Spirit in this direction. It is the work of the Holy Ghost to bring all things to our remembrance; but if all things which are to be said are already written down, what necessity is there for the Spirit's aid under such circumstances? The Holy Ghost is to give boldness. And so we read, "With great power gave the apostles witness of the resurrection of the Lord Jesus." Acts iv. 33. But the testimony of a witness who could not tell his story without having it written down in advance, would probably have little weight in an ordinary court of law.

H. L. HASTINGS.

SUNDRY TRUTHS.

The Church of God is an assembly of believers in the testimony of the Old and New Testament, concerning Jesus Christ our Lord, through whom alone we can hope for immortality by a resurrection from the dead at his coming. Then the establishment of his kingdom over Israel and the nations of the earth until all enemies are put under his feet, even death, that God may be all in all.

God is immortal, incorruptible, unchangeable, having life in himself and the one with whom is the very fountain of life. 1 Tim 1:17; vi.:16; Rom. 1:23; Psa. civ:2, 24-37; Jno. v:26; Psa. xxxvi. 9.

Christ having been raised from the dead, death no more, is never to return to corruption or death, but has an endless life for in him dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily. His dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed. Rom. vi. 9; Ac. xiii. 34; Heb. vii. 16; Col. ii 9; Dan. vii. 14; Luc i.: 33.

The redeemed will have immortality and incorruptibility, with bodies fashioned like unto the glorious body of the Redeemer, who says, "Because I live, ye shall live also." When thus immortalized "they can not die any more," but will be equal to the angels in body as well as character, "partakers of the divine nature," and as joint heirs with Christ, their inheritance will be a kingdom which cannot be moved, even the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, that he will establish at his second coming. 1 Cor. xv. 53, 54; Phil iii. 21; Jno. xiv. 19; Luk. xx. 36; II. Pet. 1:4; Rom. viii. 17; Heb. xii. 28; II. Pet. i. 11.

THOS. ALLIN.
Newark, N. J.

The human heart unsoftened by a knowledge of God, is full of cruelty.

Sin brings destruction to all that is valuable.

The Restitution

Issued weekly by

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING COMPANY.

Entered as second-class matter under act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

TERMS.

One year $1.50; six months 75 cents, in advance.

ROBT. G. HUGGINS.....Editor
BUELL W. NUTT.....Manager

BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Burton H. Lang, Harry Pott,
Chas. A. Goss, Wm. G. Rothe,
Buell W. Nutt, D. G. Robson,
W. S. Tomlinson.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

All remittances should be sent by bank draft, post office money order or express money order to The Restitution Publishing Co., 803 Parkwood drive, Cleveltnd, Ohio.

All communication intended for publication should be sent to the editor, Robt. G. Huggins, 10623 Lee avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

It is necessary to adhere strictly to the rule of not returning unused manuscripts. Writers will please keep copies, or risk the loss.

While the editor exercises a general supervision over the articles appearing in The Restitution, his endorsement does not extend to the interpretation of details nor the exegesis of particular texts in the writings of contributors.

Cleveland, Ohio....Jan. 2, 1912

EDITORIAL

At this writing the editor is holding a series of meetings with the Brush Creek church. A full report of the meeting will appear later.

Let all note that the editor's address during January 8 to 14, 1912, will be in care of Sister Mattie Neill, W. Dry street, Salem, Ohio.

The special meetings at Salem, Ohio, begin this year, January 2, under the leadership of Bro. A. Wallace Mason. He leaves there January 8th to evangelize in Iowa for the rest of the winter. The editor is booked to preach in Salem Monday evening, January 8th, and during the week following.

We are sorry that in the issue of Dec. 26 the name of Bro. and Sister Westfall did not occur in connection with the surprise parcel sent. We are indebted to both Bro. and Sister Westfall and Bro. and Sister Eidenmiller for their kindness and we wish to thank them.

Sisters Amy Johnson and Emma C. Sharpton have written communications for the Love Feast, an annual feature that used to be in The Restitution. We have omitted this annual "feast;" instead thereof we now have a department called "Communication," which is weekly, and in which the readers can give their thoughts and exhortations to the brotherhood. Let all readers note this, and write often for this department of our paper.

EDITOR'S SERMON NOTES ON THE APOCALYPSE.

Subject:—Christ's Message to the Thyatirian Church.

Text:—Rev. 2:18-29.

I. History of the Church. I. Its formation, progress, and partial declension (Acts 16:6-15; 19:8-10; Rev. 2:19, 20, 21, 24, 25).

II. Things in the Church which Christ commends. I. Love and service (ver. 19; Acts 11:29; 1 Cor. 16:15; Heb. 6:10). II. Faith and patience (ver. 19; Heb. 11: 27). III. Last works more than the first—groweth (ver. 19, 4, 5, 3:11; Col. 2:19; II. Pet. 3:18; Matt. 13:45).

III. Things in the Church which Christ commends. I. Jezebel as a teacher in Thyatira (ver. 20; I. Kings 18:4; 19:2; 21:10). II. Ahab's Marriage to Jezebel introduced an apostacy in Israel of a deadlier kind than before (I. Kings 16:31; 21:25, 26): III. She was a prophetess (II. Kings 9:22, 30; Jer. 4:30). IV. Space (time) to repent (Eccl. 8:11; Isa. 26:10; Rom. 2:4; II. Pet. 3:9). V. According to your works (Psa. 62: 12; Matt. 16:27; Rom. 2:6).

IV. The Promise. I. Power over the nations (Rom. 8:17; II. Tim. 2:12; I. Cor. 6:1; Psa. 149: 9, 6; Rev. 3:21; 20:4; Lk. 19:17). II. He shall rule (break) them with a rod of iron (Psa. 2; Jer. 19:11; Dan. 2:40; Rev. 12:5; 19: 15). IV. As I received of my Father (Lk. 4:5-8; Jno. 16:33; Lk. 22:29). V. The morning star—symbol of royalty (Gen. 49:27; Numb. 24:17; Matt. 22; Job. 38: 7; Rev. 22:16; II. Sam. 23; Psa. 72; Dan. 12:12; 1-4; Matt. 13:43; Cant. 6:10).

CORN SHEAVES.

Gathered From Everywhere.

Inspiration a First Principle.—The doctrine of the inspiration of the Bible is a question naturally the very first of first principles. It is of no modern origin. It is an apostolic tradition that "all scripture is given by inspiration," and it is an apostolic command to withdraw from every man who refuses submission to apostolic teaching whether delivered by word or epistle. (2 Thess. ii. 15: iii. 14).

The Human Machine.—The human machine is very easily kept in order, but once let it get out of repair, and it is most difficult to set right. And it can only be kept in thorough repair when every joint, muscle, and nerve is maintained in a condition of persistent activity. I do not mean that a man should always be engaged in exercising his various tissues and organs in order to preserve health; but I do maintain that every tissue should be so actively exercised that it will be compelled to employ its entire time of so-called rest in laying up fresh stores of explosive material, and in healing up those rents which have taken place in their actual substance. In the region of nerve and muscle, a man ought always to live up to his income. He can save nothing by sparing exertion, so long as he does not go beyond his income. Give your brain sufficient food and an abundant supply of oxygen, and then give it a fair amount of good hard work every day, if you wish to maintain it in a high state of healthy activity.

Not Far From the Kingdom.—The New York Examiner reviews a book of 2,175 pages, published by the Rev. G. N. H. Peters, in which the author advances a view of the kingdom of God, that comes wonderfully near the truth. The reviewer's summary (from which we omit objectionable matter), will show this as follows: "The theory elaborated in the work may be epitomized as follows: The central thought of Scripture is the kingdom of God. It is based on the covenant with Abraham, and was established in a visible initiatory from in the Hebrew Theocracy. This theocracy would have remained permanently had the nation continued obedient to God. When they rejected him as king, he nevertheless subordinated their earthly king to his own theocracy, linking it inseparably with David's dynasty by means of a second, special and peculiar covenant. The visible theocracy was overthrown at the captivity, but its restoration with increased splendor was foretold by the prophets. . . . The re-establishment of this external theocratic kingdom in place of the earthly kingdoms 'will be preceded by a fearful time of trouble both in the church and in the world, . . . by a resurrection of the saints, and a translation of the living saints: It will embrace the New Heaven and New Earth, the perpetuity of this earth and of the human race; the restoration of the Jews to their own land, their supremacy over the nations, and the visible, endless reign of Christ on the earth. The kingdom will also include a divinely appointed and commissioned priesthood, with 'gradations of rank and order.' 'The rudimentary reorganization of the kingdom will be made at Mount Sinai,' from which secluded place it will emerge with sudden and overwhelming power. From the wilderness of Sinai, the army of the saints with Christ at the head will proceed to Palestine, dislodge the enemies possessing the land, and make Jerusalem the center of an everlasting theocratic dominion."

She Sold It.—Guadalupe Rocillo, a blind woman, sold in one year one thousand four hundred and twenty-seven copies of the New Testament in Mexico City. This is really a remarkable record, as every book sold means personal work, and sometimes hours of argument and persuasion. A little conversation which was overheard may give an idea of her methods.

Approaching a gentleman she said: "Well you buy a Testament?"

"Another day; I have not time now."

"If I were to offer you a letter telling you how to get fifty thousand dollars, would you have time to read it?"

"Ah! that is a different matter. I would take time for it."

"And yet the fifty thousand dollars could not add ten years to your life, perhaps could not even add a day, or the quarter of an hour, while the book which I offer you tells the way to have eternal life. Haven't you time to find out about that?"

The gentleman was interested, and they began a discussion about eternity. Guadalupe has a most convincing way of talking, and very soon prevailed on the man to buy her Testament.

Doubt Dissipated by Service.—A boy has come to his pastor to tell him of his doubts. The pastor listens to them, and his own heart beats with the tenderest pity for the lad.

"It is a most serious hour for you, my lad," the pastor says; "will you do me a favor this afternoon?"

"I will with pleasure; tell me at once what you would have me do."

"Go for a visit this afternoon to the old blind man," whose name he gives, "and read to him several chapters from the word of God."

The lad turns pale. How can he do it? What will he read? The pastor tells him what to read, and asks that again at 7 that day he join him in the study, and tell how his visit went. The day goes by. At 7 the pastor is eagerly waiting in his study for the lad. The lad is at the door. There are tears upon his face. He is alternately sobbing and laughing like a little child. What does it mean? His words explain:

"Say not a word about my giving up the church—about my doubts and fears. When I read to the old blind man, he became so happy that he shouted for joy, and I think I shouted too. O pastor, I have learned my lesson! Henceforth I will be busy for my Lord."

Make the Truth Your Partner.—Among boy friends one generally has a partner, an intimate, trusted more than anyone else. Men have partners for leadership and for the sake of business.

Another kind of partners is told of in this story. Franklin MacVeigh, treasurer of the United States, was a successful merchant all his life until elevated to his present position by President Taft. Many years ago when Mr. MacVeigh was selling groceries and feeding about half of the northwest, a young man, who knew him, called and asked him for some advice. This young man said:

"Mr. MacVeigh, I am just starting in life. I am bound to make mistakes, but I wish to make as few as possible. I want to have you give me a guide to success with others."

"Do you mean monetary success or character success?" asked Mr. MacVeigh.

"Well, I want both."

"No man can guarantee you success in money matters," was the reply of the merchant, "for that depends upon your business ability, the markets and a hundred and one other things. But you can get character success in only one way—make the Truth your partner.

"When anyone takes the Truth as their partner, it is with them day and night. It will stand close to your ear and heart, and guide you just the way you should go. After a time men will notice more and more that Truth is your partner, and that you cannot be induced to break up that partnership. Then you will have won character success. Take my advice; get intimate with the Truth, and stick to it, no matter what it costs you."

BAPTISM

Who are the subjects? What say the Scriptures? Christ's last command to his disciples, (Matt. 28:18, 19, 20) is: "All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth. Go ye, therefore, and teach—or make disciples of all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you; and lo I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." Note:—Mark the order here. They are to teach or make disciples first; then to baptize disciples, not unconscious babies; then teach them to observe all things commanded. This command was given for all nations, for all the world, the whole creation, as in Mark, and was to continue in force even unto the end of the world. No man, therefore, or body of men, have a right to alter or set it aside.

The commission is given by Mark 16:15, 16: "And he said unto them, go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized, shall be saved; but he that believeth not, shall be condemned." NOTE:—Mark the order again. They were to preach the gospel first; then to baptize believers.

Look at the example of Christ (John 4:1): "Whene therefore the Lord knew how the Pharasees had heard that Jesus made and baptized more disciples than John (although Jesus himself baptized not, but his disciples)." NOTE:—Mark the order again. He made disciples first; then baptized them.

The practice of the disciples may be cited (Acts 2:41, 42): "Then they that gladly received his word were baptized; and the same day there were added unto them about three thousand souls. And they continued steadfastly in the apostle's doctrine, and fellowship, and in breaking of bread, and in prayers." NOTE:—Is it possible to put the matter in plainer language? They gladly received his word first; then were baptized, were added to the church, and continued steadfastly in the apostle's teaching."

Philip at Samaria teaches the same truth (Act 8:12): "But when they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized, both men and women." NOTE:—Mark the order again. They believed Philip first; then were baptized, both men and women.

The baptism of Paul conforms to the same order (Acts 9:17, 18): "And ananias went his way, and entered into the house; and putting his hands on him said, Brother Paul, the Lord, even Jesus, that appeared unto thee in the way as thou camest, hath sent me, that thou mightest receive thy sight and be filled with the Holy Spirit. And immediately there fell from his eyes as it had been scales; and he received sight forth with, and arose and was baptized." NOTE—Mark the order again. He was converted first; then baptized.

Cornelius and his friends illustrate the same order, (Acts 10:44, 48): "While Peter yet spake these words, the Holy Spirit fell on all them which heard the word. Then answered Peter. Can any man forbid water, that these should not be baptized, which have received the Holy Spirit as well as we? And he commanded them to be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ.' NOTE—Mark the order again. They heard the word; they received the Holy Spirit; The gift of the Holy Spirit being the evidence of their faith, baptism followed.

Lydia and her household in the same way (Acts 16:15, 40): "And we sat down and spake unto the women which resorted thither, and a certain woman named Lydia a seller of purple, of the city of Thyatira, ons that worshiped God, heard us, whose heart the Lord opened that she attended unto the things which were spoken by Paul. And when she was baptized, and her household, she besought us, saying, if ye have judged me to be faithful to the Lord, come into my house and abide there; and she constrained us. And they went out of the prison and entered into the house of Lydia, and when they had seen the brethren, they comforted them and departed." NOTE:—Paul sat down and spake unto the women; Lydia's heart was opened, she believed, and then was baptized. Her household also was baptized. It is not said in so many words that they also believed, but it is not to be taken for granted that Paul acted in this case as in all other cases, and obeyed Christ's commission to baptize them that believe. They are also included in verse 40, amongst the brethren. It is usually assumed by Pedobaptists that Lydia was a married woman, or a widow, and had children; but there is not a vestige of evidence to support this assumption.

THOS. ALLIN.

Newark, N. J.

A THEOLOGICAL DODGE NAILED.

By Eld. H. W. Hewitt.

Some time ago the writer of this article was in conversation with two ministerial friends, discussing in a friendly way the subject of "Conditional Immortality." While we were all agreed on the broad subject of "Conditionalism," one brother and myself had mildly taken the other party to task for his advocacy of the "Subconsciousness" in the death-state. The writer quoted Psa. 146:3, 4, "Put not your trust in princes, nor in the son of man, in whom there is no help. His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish;" and was surprised to hear the brother respond warmly, "Don't you know that that text has nothing to do with man's condition in death?" I replied, "I believe it to be the strongest kind of evidence in the matter." "What effect," replied the brother, "could the statement that man could not think after he was dead, have in deterring others from putting their trust in him?" After having thus raised this veritable "man of straw," grown hoary with age, and thread bare with constant use by our brethren of the traditional school, he made the following assertion with great positiveness and much sincerity: "The word here rendered 'thoughts' should never have been so translated. The original Hebrew word here, is elsewhere used in the Old Testament, and translated 'plans' or 'purposes,' which would make the passage read, 'in that very day his plans (or purposes) perish.'" The writer then and there mentally resolved to make this passage the subject of careful and thorough investigation, that if possible, the true light might be made to shine forth for the benefit of all searchers for truth.

Our opponents have been prone to evade the plain logic of this Scripture, by 'throwing dust' in the eyes of truth-seekers, by here asserting what is palpably false, that we foolishly endeavor to maintain the primary thought in this Psalm to be the unconsciousness of the death-state! The primary thought in this passage is, as all can readily see, and every one of us will affirm, the greatness, faithfulness, and eternity of God. v. 1: "Praise ye the Lord;" v. 6: "Which made heaven and earth . . . and all that therein is;" v. 7: "He executed judgment . . . and looseth the prisoners;" v. 9: "Relieveth the fatherless and the widow," and v. 10: "The Lord shall reign forever, even thy God, O Zion, unto all generations. Praise ye the Lord." His logic is easily, "Trust in Jehovah, who combines within himself every quality necessary for your care and protection."

He urges in a negative way, in v. 3, the folly and peril of doing otherwise: "Put not your trust in princes, nor in the son of man in whom there is no help" (or salvation,' mar. reading). v. 4: "His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth." In other words, he is a mortal, dying, perishable creature. "In that very day his thoughts perish." And, when his little day is so quickly passed, into the utter unconsciousness and nothingness of his condition, he can no longer be of the little help he might have been when living.

Therefore, "Happy is he that hath the God of Jacob for his help whose hope is in the Lord his God" v. 5. While the truth stated in the last clause of the fourth verse is not the primary feature of the thought in the mind of the Psalmist here (as we have shown) it is nevertheless vitally connected with his warning of man's utter nothingness and perishability, and, incidentally, the strongest kind of declaration of the unconscious state of all men in death!

But what of the assertion that the Hebrew word here rendered "thoughts" is wrongly translated? As the writer can lay no claim to a personal knowledge of the meaning of the original Hebrew, we must refer the matter to those who are authorities for a final settlement. We note as suggestive in this connection, that the translaters who gave us the Revised Version, and who were of course familiar with the Hebrew tongue (and who can hardly be thought to be prejudiced in favor of the teaching of the unconsciousness of the death-state), failed to discover the "error" (?) our friend mentions, as they made no changes in the reading of these two verses (v. 3-4). Perhaps we may discover the reason for this.

We learn by a careful study of the "Dictionary of Hebrew and Greek Words," by James Strong, S. T. D., L. L. D., that the Hebrew word Eshto-nah, here rendered "thoughts," is nowhere else used in the Old Testament. Gesenius, in his "Hebrew and Chaldee Lexicon" (by Tregelles), defines this word as "thoughts, counsels." Prof. R. C. Robbins, of Mendota college, under recent date, says: "I think the word esh-to-naw occurs but once in the Old Testament, and that is in the passage to which you refer, Ps. 146:3, 4. It is derived from a Chaldee verb which means to think, to have in mind, to purpose to counsel. But in Psa. 146:3, 4, its form is fem. plural, hence means purposes, thoughts or counsels."

Dr. Strong in his dictionary of Hebrew and Greek words, defines this word as follows: "Thinking: —thought." He calls attention to the root word ashath, which he also defines as meaning "to be sleek, i.e., glossy; hence (through the idea of polishing), to excogitate (as if forming in the mind): shine, think." Webster defines the word "excogitate" here used by Dr. Strong as follows: "To think; to invent; to strike out by thinking; to contrive."

It seems clear, therefore, from the united testimony of these scholars that the Hebrew word esh-to-nah translated "thoughts" in Ps. 146:4, and nowhere else used in the Old Testament, means "thinking; thought or thoughts, counsels." Though in many Old Testament passages the idea of the purposes or plans of both God and men are freely referred to, in no case is this word used or thus translated. The probable reason for this does not seem difficult to find. It is, that in the original word here under consideration the idea of the power, and action of the mind in "thinking, thought or thoughts, counsels," is primary, and therefore must be so rendered.

The meaning of the root word ashath is also seen to be, without question, "to think," "to excogitate," by "forming in the mind," until the idea thus developed, polished and well rounded, glitters and shines with very clearness and luminosity! And it is the ability to thus think or excogitate, that the Psalmist here unqualifiedly declares perishes in the very day man dies. We note the interesting fact, also, that this word ashath occurs but twice in the Old Testament, and is rendered "shine" in Jer. 5:28, and in Jonah 1:6, where it is rendered "think" in both the authorized and revised versions.

Conditionalists may quote this passage with full confidence that its evident meaning cannot be gainsaid or effectually controverted.

But would this Scripture be true to the facts of human experience, should we allow the interpretation of our opponents to stand? Is it true that the plans or intentions of men perish the very day they die, which is the assertion our orthodox friends would force the passage to make? Are not these plans and intentions often carried to a glorious completion and fruition by those who succeeded the originators, and long after they have fallen in the embrace of death? Were not the plans of Julius Caesar to erect a mighty empire on the ruins of the Roman republic, made a shining success by his successor, Augustus Caesar? Did not the plan and purpose of Abraham Lincoln to preserve the American union, "one and inseparable," come to a magnificent fruition during the days of his successors? The simple fact of the case is, that the apologists for the teaching of man's natural immortality are forced to adopt, often, the most flimsy arguments to escape the evident force of the Scriptures.

Psalms 146:3, 4, is a case in point. Given its proper meaning, this text takes its place in perfect harmony with every Scripture bearing on the "sleep" of death, both in the Old and New Testaments. In fourteen New Testament passages, the dead are said to be asleep, and the Old Testament abounds with such declarations as, "the dead praise not the Lord, neither any that go down into silence," Psa. 115:17; "in death there is no remembrance of thee," Psa. 6:5; "The dead know not anything," Eccl. 9:5, etc. It is not the purpose of this article to discuss exhaustively the general question of the death-state, but to show the erroneousness of the popular interpretation of the passage in question. Given the true and Biblical conception of the nature of man, the various features of the redemptive economy will be seen to be in perfect harmony with every other part, and many of the most dangerous heresies of modern as well of ancient times would evaporate like mist before the rays of the rising sun. Our Lord is soon coming to "awake" the sleepers! Let us rejoice!—Selected from an exchange and revised by the Editor.

A teacher is sometimes necessary to acquaintanceship with God.

There is no teacher like experience, but the young may get the benefit of her lessons by consulting with the old.

OBITUARY.

Rachel Pearson, daughter of Jonathan and Elizabeth Knife, was born in Monroe township, Miami county, Ohio, May 2nd, 1841; died December 25th, 1911, aged 70 years, seven months and 23 days.

She was the fifth child of a family of fifteen children; six of them survive her; three brothers and three sisters. She was united in marriage to Perry Pearson, March 19, 1858. To this union no children were born, but they were the foster parents of a niece, who made her home with them until after her marriage.

Mr. Pearson departed this life on July 27th, only five months until she was called to follow him to the grave. She leaves many relatives and friends to mourn her loss.

She was baptized by Bro. J. F. Wagoner, in 1869, about 42 years ago, since which time she has been a firm and devoted believer of the truth. The editor was called by telephone to attend the funeral, which was conducted at the Church of God, December 27. She was then laid to rest in the Curtis cemetery, adjacent to the Brush Creek church.

MARRIED.

Mr. Howard Appleby and Miss Goldie White were united in marriage by the writer, at the residence of the bride's mother at Blair, Neb., December 20, at 6 o'clock p. m. Mr. Clinton Appleby, brother of the groom was best man, and Miss Pearl Baxter, bridesmaid. At a few minutes past 6 o'clock, to the strains of the wedding march rendered by Miss Sybil Roberts, of Arlington, Neb., the bridal party marched into the parlor and took their position on the north side. Before about thirty relatives and friends listened to the words repeated that made them man and wife. As these people stood before us looking bright and happy, yet solemn, we could but realize the sacredness of this God-given institution. The bride was dressed in a dainty gown of white silk; the maid of honor wore a dress of tan; the groom wearing the conventional black. After congratulations the company sat down to a three course supper prepared and presided over by Sister Free, which did her great honor. After supper the couple departed for Omaha, and will be at home to their friends about the first of the year. A great many will remember Goldie as she was always called at conference. Brother and sister Appleby are very estimable young people, and we predict for them a happy life. May God's richest blessing attend them through the journey of life.

ALMUS ADAMS.

Omaha, Neb.

'SOW NOT AMONG THORNS'

Continued from last week

"Desires of other things." That you may be a man of social reputation; that your home may be elegant; that your wife may be adorned like the children of this world; that your sons may be "gentlemen;" that your daughters may have accomplishments; that you may not be a "peculiar" person with "pilgrim" marks about you; that you may be a "good fellow" with everybody. A million trivial, harmful desires. Your bed is shorter than that a man may lie on it. It is uncomfortable. These "thorns" choke the self-denial teachings of Christ. But now, if any will be a follower of Christ, there is a "cross" to bear, crucifixion to be endured. "If we suffer with Him, we shall also reign with Him." "No cross, no crown." The world is to be "overcome," not conformed to, not sought. "For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh and the lust of the eye, and the pride of life, are not of the Father but are of the world, and the world passeth away, and the lusts thereof; but he that doeth the will of God abideth for ever."

"The thorns choke the word." Goodness, if it gets a start, is killed out by the thorns. Beware lest the spark of spirituality die in you; it is your only hope. "Strengthen the things that remain that are at the point to die." O cherish your last hope, lest God depart for ever. Fan the spark; do something; do it now. "But what shall I do?"

This must you do, and do immediately. Put the plough into your heart, the great breaking plough, not the little cultivator that is not sufficient to do the work. Plough keam deep. Send in the great blades. Tear up the thorns by the roots. Rid the soil of your heart of these thorns. Expose them; let the roots lie on the surface that they may rot. It may almost kill you to do it. The thorns have become so much a part of your life—they are your whole life in its workings—that it will be like wrenching you apart to separate your soul from them. As one who had departed from God once said when she heeded the word, "If thou wilt return, return unto me, saith the Lord," and wished to be received again into favor and live henceforth the life of the faithful: "It is hard to get back to God." It i true, it is hard, but it is not impossible, if you come while that faint spark within you is still alive. After that, dead coals. "It is impossible to renew them again unto repentance."

Now then for the plough and its work. Humble yourself. Confess your wanderings. Tell the truth, all the truth, to your great high priest. Cloak nothing. Conceal no backsliding. Smite the breast. Lie there if need be, in contrition. Return to the exaltation of God. Break off transgression by righteousness. Do the commandments of Jesus.

The thorns are now all turned up. The soil is cleared. The clods are pulverized. Everything is ready for the good seed. Sow it; sow it plentifully. Hear the word of the Lord. Give attendance to reading. "Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom" and spiritual understanding. Let purpose to follow the Lord fully be re-established. Cultivate the seed regularly, and God will give the increase.

Do this; reading is not enough. "Hearing and doing we build on the rock;
Hearing alone, we build on the sand."

Sorrow God-ward worketh repentance not to be repented of. What clearing of ourselves, what carefulness in after life it works! Get out the plough; prepare your heart; hear no more sermons, read no more Scripture, till you have got your heart in good tillable condition, till the great and strong and deadly thorns have no more relation to your being.—Selected by Bro. O. J. Allard.

FIRST PRINCIPLES.

Covenants of Promise.

1. Paul wrote to the Galatian churches, 3:16: "Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not, and to seeds as of many; but as of one, and to thy seed, which is Christ."

Here Paul tells first, how the promises, did not read—not, "And to seeds, as of many;" and then, secondly, how they did read—but as one, "And to thy seed." The important words of the promises then are shown to be, "And to thy seed."

2. These important words thus so specifically brought forward are from Gen. 13:15; 17:8, which texts read: "For all the land which thou seest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed forever." And I will give unto thee and thy seed after thee, the land wherein thou art a stranger, all the land of Canaan, for an everlasting possession; and I will be their God."

These promises as here set forth refer to the landed inheritance. Tafel, one of the best Hebrew scholars in America, at these words, "forever" and "everlasting," enters in a note the word "eternity." Greenfield on the last text in his Hebrew Interlinear, says, "Literally, a possession of eternity."

3. The duration of this covenant, if possible is intensified by the language of David as recorded in 1 Chron. 16:15-19: "Be ye mindful always of his covenant; the word which he commanded to a thousand generations, even of the covenants which he made with Abraham, and of his oath unto Isaac; and hath confirmed the same to Jacob for a law, and to Israel for an everlasting covenant saying 'Unto thee will I give the land of Canaan, the lot of your inheritance, when you were but few, and strangers in it.'"

4. By reference to our first cited text this seed is declared to be Christ. Therefore, the landed inheritance is the inheritance of Christ; and there is no other inheritance as to locality promised to Christ.

5. But the Christ to whom this promise was made, and who is to inherit it to eternity, is not only Jesus of Nazareth, but with him all his brethren, as is to be learned from the reading of Gal. 3:27-29. These are become Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise.

Covenant With David.

6. God covenanted with David to establish his kingdom, his throne and his seed upon his throne to all generations, and forever (Psa. 8, 9:20-37.)

7. To perpetuate his kingdom his throne, and his seed upon that throne unto all generations (Psa. 89:34-37).

8. That seed was to be chastised in case they transgressed God's law. They transgressed God's law and were and are chastised.

9. But God's mercy and loving kindness was not to be utterly removed (Psa. 89:33). Therefore, a future restoration may be looked for (Ezek. 21:25-27; Hosea. 4:4-5; Amos 9:8-15).

10. Jesus, that rightful heir, the seed of David and the head of the seed of Abraham.

11. David's throne to eternity and a reign for or during the ages promised to Jesus (Luke 1:32-33).

The Gospel.

12. Glad tidings respecting the restoration of this kingdom of David to be established forever, or unto all generations, suspended during the days of Zedekiah, but to be restored when the rightful heir should come, was preached by John the Baptist (Matt. 3: 2-3).

13. Glad tidings respecting this kingdom Jesus preached (Matt. 4:23; 9:35; Luke 4:43-44; 8:1; Matt. 25:31; 19:28; 24:14; Mark 16:14-15; Acts 1:3-6).

14. Glad tidings respecting this kingdom the apostles and Evangelists preached (Acts 8:12; 14:21-22; 20:25-28; 23:30-31).

15. The gospel contained in it the resurrection of the dead (1 Cor. 15:1-4).

16. The gospel contained in it the possibility of a fulfillment of the promises to the fathers, and the sure mercy of David by raising the heirs from the dead to life (Acts 13:32-37).

17. This gospel is God's power unto salvation. Rom. 1:16.

Faith.

18. Faith in this gospel respecting the kingdom was exercised in the days of apostles (Acts 8:12).

19. The word "faith" is from the Latin word fides, which means to trust, to trust in the observations of another; and from the Greek word pistes, which means to be persuaded that the observations of another are true. Therefore:

20. Faith comes by hearing (Rom. 10:17.) This is the way it was produced on the day of Pentecost (Acts 2:37); this is the way the Samaritans were made to believe (Acts 8:12); this is the way Paul obtained faith (Acts 9:5-6); this is the way the Ethiopian officer received faith (Acts 8:34-37); this is the way that Lydia received faith (Acts 16:13-14); and this is the way that the Philipian jailer received faith, Acts 16:31-33.

21. Without this faith it is impossible to please God (Heb. 11: 6).

22. Without this faith one will perish (Jno. 3:16).

23. Without this faith one will remain condemned (Jno. 3:18).

24. Without this faith the wrath of God will rest on one (Jno. 3:36).

Repentance.

26. The word "repentance" comes from two Greek words, metamelomai and metanoia. The former of these means regret, the sorrow of the world, a sorrow that often ends in death, as in the case of Judas. The latter denotes a godly sorrow, a sorrow that needs not to be repented of. Its first work lays hold on the mind, and denotes a mental change. Faith works by love and purifies the heart or affections. The affections thus changed then comes a change in the will, and this will power or change of the will is repentance in its primary meaning. It is scripturally best illustrated in the case of the prodigal, Luke 15:18, when he said, "I will arise and go to my father."

27. This resolution must, to be rewarded, be followed by fruits, works, action. The prodigal the moment he resolved "I will arise and go to my father," was not yet there; he had not yet been by the father received, but a retrace of his steps was necessary. Also see Matt. 3:7-9.

28. Repentance is for the remission of sins (Luke 24:47 Acts 2:38).

Baptism.

29. Baptize and its cognate, or family are all from the primary or root word, bapto. This word is never used in connection with a religious ordinance. This word is never used by any lexicon save Groves defined by sprinkle or pour, and he gives sprinkle or pour as his seventh definition.

30. Baptize is never by any lexicon now extant or ever known to exist, defined by pour or sprinkle.

31. This word in some of its forms, occurs in the Greek literature 175 times, all of which with their entire sentences are collected by Dr. Conant; and in not one single case will the sense of these sentences admit of sprinkle or pour as a rendering.

32. Baptism is spoken of under the figure of suffering (Matt. 20:22-23); under the figure of a birth (John 3:3-5); and under the figure of a burial (Rom. 6:3-4); no one of which figures will in any case admit of sprinkle or pour.

33. Isaiah 52:15 says that God will sprinkle many nations. The Hebrew word nazah here rendered "sprinkle," Gesenius defines "astonish." The context shows that this work is in the future, and that "astonish" is the work that will be done.

34. Ezekiel 36:25 speaks of sprinkling clean water upon a people in the future. But the text refers to Israel's national restoration and purification.

35. Clean, pure, unadulterated water was never commanded by divine authority to be sprinkled upon any one. Pure water was obtained under the law by the burning of the red heifer outside of the camp and taking up the ashes and cleaning the water through them. This was used as water of purification, but clean, unadulterated water never.

36. Baptism was always preceded by the exercise of faith and repentance, and stood as the fruit of repentance the evidence that the avowed repentance was correct and thorough.

37. Baptism thus preceded was for the remission of sin (Mark 1: 4; Acts 2:38).

38. Baptism was thus the act in which the old man of sin was put off and the new man, Christ was put on (Rom. 6:3-6).

39. Baptism was that form or mould of doctrine into which one was cast and made free from sin (Rom. 6:17-18).

40. Baptism was the act by which, if one became united to Christ in the likeness of his death, he had the pledge that he also would be united with him in the likeness of his resurrection (Rom. 6:5).

41. Baptism or a birth of the water was by Jesus made absolutely necessary in order to an entrance into the kingdom of God (Jno. 3:5).

42. Baptism was not for the removal of external impurities, as was many of the Levitical washings, but was of deeper significance and reached the conscience and became a saving ordinance (Peter 3:20-21).

43. Baptism introduced into Christ—the Christ body, made parties the seed of Abraham and heirs according to the promise (Gal. 3:27-29).

Christian Life.

The Christian life is brought forward by Jesus and the apostles under various figures for the purpose of illustrating its nature and enforcing its importance.

44. Jesus speaks of it as a way the end of which is a gate. The way he describes as narrow and the path as narrow and the gate as strait, or difficult to reach, and ingress or entrance as giving life—the future life. In contrast with these points he places a broad way a wide gate, but the ingress as death or destruction. How different, and how important (Matt. 7: 14, 15).

45. To impress activity he introduces the figure of trees, some bearing fruit and others bearing no fruit. The one cared for of course, while the other is cut down and consumed.

46. Next he presents the life as foundations of edifices. The life, for its faith and for its direction builded upon his word, as well founded and enabled to stand in the day of trial while the other not so builded, one that will fall under the force of the tempests and floods.

47. Again he presents the Christian life under the figure of a vine with its branches. He as the true vine, his disciples as the branches and his father as the husbandman. Every branch that would bear fruit to be cultivated so that it might bring forth more fruit, while the barren branches were to be cut off from the true vine and to be burned.

48. The bearing of the cross as a burden and perchance as a disgrace to be borne here, and in contrast with this, and as an incentive the crown to be worn hereafter in the next world.

49. Again Jesus as well as the apostles, introduces as a figure the marriage nuptials. The disciples—the church—is introduced as a virgin, pure, clean and espoused, as mourning, clothed in sorrow, and waiting for the bridegroom, while at his return comes the rejoicings, the marriage, the honors and the emoluments.

50. The apostle introduces the Christian life as a warfare. In this life the soldier fully armed with the armory, every article aptly described and applied, he ever to be on guard, the bivouacks and the marches to be made, the battles to be fought and the victories to be won in this life, that the spoils and the glories may be shared in hereafter when the perfect peace is established.

51. Again the figure of a pilgrimage is introduced where the disciple is to take up the line of march or pilgrimage to reach finally a haven of repose, a city where a shrine or an amulet is deposited: as Abraham, Isaac and Jacob to dwell in tents, and for a city to come, or as Israel in the wilderness, to march for the final land of promise.

52. Also, the figure of a voyage is presented, the world before the disciple as the ocean, then comes the tempests, the breakers and the struggles of the sailor, and he exhorted not to be tossed about with every wind of doctrine; faithful in all this turmoil, then the haven of safety at last, and solid terra firma, where he shares in the cargo brought forward.

53. Again the Grecian stadia is brought forward, where the training, the casting aside of superfluous weights, the race, the victory, the crown and the rejoicings are all brought to view, in their force, in their interest and in their beauty.

54. The labor and the rest is brought to view, the Christian life is regarded as one of trials, one of trouble, and one of constant labor; but beyond this, at the revelation of the Lord Jesus is placed the rest. God has designed a rest. He has foreshadowed a rest. God has prepared a rest. But those to whom it was first proclaimed and offered could not enter in on account of unbelief. Joshua did not give them that rest. That rest had not been received in the days of David nor in the days of Paul. There remains, therefore, a rest to the people of God. Let us labor, therefore, lest we should come short of it. But this rest will not be the rest of a stone—it will not be one of inactivity, but it will be one, while free from the troubles the trials, the temptations and the turmoils of this life of activity under the directions of the Master, in the discharge of his commands, in the proclamation of his words of peace, and in the enjoyment of eternal pleasures. Happy rest! May that day soon be ushered in.

55. In addition to these beautiful and instructive figures there are expressions that border on the literal, that mark out the constant duty and ministrations of the disciple as he moves on; such as, "Ye are the light of the world; ye are the salt of the earth; as you have received Christ so walk ye in Him; press forward to the prize of the mark of the high calling; keep yourself unspotted, from the world; shun every appearance of evil; then, joint heirs with Christ if so he that ye suffer with him, that ye may be also glorified together; and if you suffer with him you shall also reign with him."

Summary.

1. The promises to the fathers are fundamental and eternal in duration.

2. Christ—the Christ body the heirs to that promised inheritance.

3. David's kingdom and throne established forever—eternally.

4. That kingdom and throne suspended and the seed and the people under chastisement.

5. Christ, the rightful heir, to restore and to reign on that throne henceforth and forever—eternally—no end.

6. John the Baptist preached this gospel.

7. Jesus preached this gospel of the kingdom.

8. The apostles preached this gospel of the kingdom.

9. The people believed the gospel of the kingdom.

10. The importance of faith, with its works.

11. Repentance with its place its work and importance.

12. Baptism, its meaning, its place, its work and its importance.

13. The Christian life with the warfare, the battles, the pilgrimage, the voyage, the race, the cross, the sorrow, the tears and the sufferings on this side, while the victories, the haven, the city, the reward, the crown, the reign, the glory and the rejoicings are on the other, unsurpassed in degree and unending in duration.—First Principles, per Bro. W. S. Tomlinson.

GOLD DUST.

Right living will produce right thinking.

Failure and disappointments have generally taught the earnest man his choicest lessons.

In the moment of temptation the heart should lift itself to the great Master in full assurance of faith, recognizing His love, His wisdom and His ability to help us and His willingness to make all things work together for good of those who love Him.

It is good to be attracted out of ourselves, to be forced to take a near view of the sufferings, the privations, the efforts, the difficulties of others.

Every Christian should strive to be a pattern worthy of imitation, a pattern of earnest, faithful endeavor to copy Christ, in his daily life and active zeal in His service.

ANNA DREW.

Dixon, Ill.

The habit of Smiling. Form the habit of smiling. Anybody can smile when something excruciatingly funny comes to his attention. Sometimes we see the sourest faces break into a grin when a pedestrian slips on the ice, or has his hat carried away by a high wind. But these smiles which are due to some peculiar exciting cause are not the sort which express a sunny personality and are magnets to attract others. Those who have formed a habit of smiling are the ones whose smile means something.

A Boy's Best Creed.

Be honest lad, in word and deed,
In all you say and do;
Treat others in your walk of life
As you'd have them treat you;
Don't steal another's precious time,
Or blot a spotless name—
You may not think that stealing 'tis
Dishonest just the same.

Be true—there's nothing half so grand
As character of truth;
Let never trace of falsehood stain
The glory of your youth;
Let every thought you harbor be
As clear and pure as day;
Sincerity of purpose gleam
In every word you say.

True greatness is founded on living in harmony with God's laws.

He who is not true to God is not true to himself and false to others.

Sin sooner or later "finds one out."

Chains of iron are as nothing to the chains of sin.

If thou shalt live each day for Him, when sets life's sun
Thou shalt receive the Master's own "Well done!"

Do your best and never shirk, patient be and willing;
That's the only way to work; then your niche you're filling.

—Anthony E. Anderson.

Whatever we really are, that let us be in all fearlessness.
Whatever we are not, that let us cease striving to seem to be.

Anna Robertson Brown.—

He who would be truly great must be a servant of others.

It is foolish to seek advice of those whose wisdom is no greater than our own.

The young are apt to be influenced by feeling rather than judgment.

It is wise to take time to consider important questions.

A harsh answer, after three days' consideration, shows pride and folly.

The son is apt to follow in the sins of his father.

It takes no keen eye to foresee disaster to the king who indulges in oppression.

Think truly, and thy strength shall the world's famine feed;
Speak truly, and thy word shall be a faithful seed;
Live truly, and thy life shall be a great and noble deed.

—Bonar.

What I need, my God, Thou'lt give it,
Help me do what, too, is mine;
Great or little guide me through it,
Cover me with wing divine.
Be through all the livelong day,
Close companion of my way.

We are truly strong when in league with God.

Manager's Column

Now that the holiday season is past we can all get down to our regular routine again. Nineteen hundred and eleven is gone and with it our record of duties performed, and, alas, many unperformed. The poet has said that "Of all sad words of tongue or pen, the saddest are these, it might have been," and surely as we look back over the year we can see many places where it might have been better had we lived up to our opportunities, or overcome our weakness and temptation, or have been charitable, more kind or more forgiving. But now history has added another chapter to its legend and vain regrets will not change it. To day is here and if we live in tomorrow yesterday must furnish the lessons by which we improve it.

This is our first New Year's with The Restitution. When we started we planned many things and in the six months that have elapsed some of these have been carried out, others have had to wait, but at any rate we feel that we have made progress. We trust that 1912 will see a greater improvement: we trust that the plans that we have had to lay aside temporarily may be carried forward and completed. There are lots of things we WANT to do. Right now there are five things that we would like to do, but can not; the first requires time, so does the second, the third and fourth would take money, while the last would take both, and a lot of hard work. They are all going to be done some day though, because we are going to keep right after them till they are. Yes, and you can help, too, if you want to. C-o-o-p-e-r-a-t-i-o-n is the word to use. Let's co-operate in 1912. Let's make it our banner year.

BUELL W. NUTT,
Manager.

Bro. Wilson writes that his book, "The Destiny of Russia and Signs of the Times" is now ready for distribution. It is a 96 page book, bound in cloth and sells for 25c. It will be sent by return mail on receipt of the price. Address W. H. Wilson, 625 North Willow avenue, Austin Station, Chicago, Ill.

Scripture Searchers Assistant

A very valuable help to all who are studying the Scriptures—a reprint of one of our beloved Brother Joblin's works. Treats of thirty different subjects with about four hundred references. All should possess a copy for ready reference. Price by mail six cents. Address W. L. Tomlinson, 10825 Orville Ave., N. E., Cleveland, O.

A SONG BOOK.

Songs of the Kingdom.

Recommended by Bro. Huggins and nearly all of our preachers, as by far the best song book for our people. 138 pages, flexible cloth, 25 cents each; postpaid. Address, Chas. E. Crowe, St. Paul, Neb.

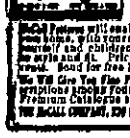
DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

We, whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones.

This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of their paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

J. A. Barr	1.50
Nathan Orr	.50
W. G. Rothe	2.50
A Friend, Wisconsin	3.50
Geo. Henry	1.50

Ladies! Save Money and Keep in Style by Reading McCall's Magazine and Using McCall Patterns



McCall's Magazine will help you dress fashionably at a moderate expense by keeping you posted on the latest fashions in clothes and hats. 16 New Fashion Designs in each issue. Also valuable information on all home and social matters. Only 50c a year, including a free pattern. Subscribe today or send for free sample copy.

McCall Patterns will enable you to make in your own home, with convenient ease, clothing for yourself and children which will be perfect in style and fit. Price—none higher than 15 cents. Send for free Pattern Catalogue.

We Will Give You Fine Premiums for getting subscriptions among Your Friends. Send for free Premium Catalogue and Cash Prize Offer.

THE McCALL COMPANY, 236 to 246 West 37th St., New York

Four Page Tracts

Can You Believe? A series of questions setting forth the fundamental points of our faith.

State of Man in Death. A collection of proof texts on this subject.

Life and Death. A short concise statement of the facts in the case.

Age to Come Not a Heresy, by H. V. Reed.

10 for 10 cents, 50 for 25 cents, 100 for 40 cents.

The Paternity of Jesus. A pamphlet of 122 pages, by M. Joblin, giving in detail all that can be said on this subject, and completely proving that He is the Son of God, and not the natural son of Joseph. This work ought to be sold at 25 cents a copy, but the author was so anxious that price should not stand in the way of its being read, that he put the price at ten cents, so all can buy them. Send to this office for them.

Address The Restitution Pub. Co.

Book and Tracts by Bro. W. H. Wilson.

"A Bible Study of Hades, as compared with our modern ideas," is the title of a new tract just issued by Bro. W. H. Wilson. It is a critical study of the subject of Hell. It shows that the meaning attached to this word today is different fro mthe meaning given to it years ago. It also shows how this change was made, and who made it. The price is 15 cents each, or 5 for 50 cents.

Student's Text Book, a cloth bound book 200 pages.

It deals specifically as How to study the Bible and why people fail to rightly understand God's Word. Price 50 cents.

Pine Woods Bible Class, a book of 480 pages bound in cloth. Studies are carried on as between a class and its teacher. Price $1.25.

Cunningly Devised Fables, 28 pages. Price 10 cents.

Where Will You Spend Eternity? Four pages, 25 cents per 100.

Are You In Need of Money? 4 pages 25 cents per 100.

Will It Pay to Become a Christian? is the title to a well written book of 96 pages by Brother Jas. W. Wilson. In a clear and convincing manner it sets forth the Christian faith and answers the question indicated in its title affirmatively. The edition should be taken at once and put out to work. It is neatly bound in cloth. The price is 25 cents, very low, and within reach of all.

W. H. Wilson, at 625 North Willow avenue, Austin Station, Chicago, Illinois.

The Bible: Its Principles and Texts

As indicated by the title this book is divided into three sections. The first consists of a remarkable disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "principles" in formulated propositions, and the third expounds in a clear, impressive and homelitic manner particular "Texts." The knotty and perplexing texts of the Bible are united and solved satisfactorily to the most fastidious and critical. More than one hundred and fifteen subjects of intense interest to every Bible student are formally discussed. Both simple and scholarly—the child is fascinated and taught; the scholar is entertained and instructed. Bible lovers, here is a feast for you. Throw open the door of your home; let The Bible—Its Principles and Its Texts come in and bless you and your family. 309 pages, 5x7 1-2 inches, durably and handsomely bound in whole cloth, with title embossed on back in gold. One copy, $1.10, two copies or more $1.00 each. The Restitution Pub. Co.

Popular Lectures, By Bro. M. Joblin

Send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled: "The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to Be Saved?" The Foolishness of Preaching and Salvation—what is it?

Each lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price.

TWO TRACTS By J. L. WINCE.

"Salvation" and "Resurrection" two tracts by J. L. Wince, can not fail to arouse the interest of every believer. They deal with vital questions in a most convincing manner. The price is 10c each, 12 for $1.00. For sale by B. Roxanna Wince, Pierceton, Ind.

BEREAN NOTICE.

The lessons for our new Berean books for 1912 are ready for the printer. It is necessary for us to have an idea of the number of books needed before placing the work in his hands. Several societies in other states purchased their present books from the Illinois state society. If these societies or any others wish to buy their new books from us, will they please send an approximate number of the books they will need to the chairman of the committee, Leila E. Whitehead, 5439 Ontario street, Chicago, Ill., before December 18th. This does not apply to any society in Illinois. Send no money now—just an estimate of the number of books needed. For further information send to the above address.

ANNA E. DREW.
President Illinois Bereans.

BEREAN NOTICE.

The Chicago Bereans will make their annual Christmas distribution of food and money to the poor and needy of their great city. Friends who wish to help in this work of Christmas cheer, please send their contributions to Leila E. Whitehead, 5439 Ontario St., Chicago, Ill.

By order of Committee.

60 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the

Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York

Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

SUBSCRIBE FOR

Words of Life

the publication of the Conditional Immortality Mission of Great Britain, advocating Life and Advent truths.

Terms: 1 copy 37c per annum, 12 copies to one address 25c per copy per annum.

Sample copy on application to

WILLIAM Q. ROTHE
1301 Park Pl. Brooklyn, N. Y.

It is helpful to publicly confess our allegiance to God.

Those in harmony with God's laws are at peace.

"No one can fare the future so well as he who has found faith in the past."

The only amends for the past which we can make will be to add to the past no more past for which amends are needed.—Robert E. Speer.

Self-Control Part of Education.—The education which does not teach self-control is imperfect. If you can talk in half a dozen languages, and cannot hold your tongue in one, there is a fatal lack. If you are able to perform abstract mathematical problems, but cannot control your extravagance so as to live within your income, you might as well be an ignoramus and be done with it.

BOOKS AND TRACTS

Bible Pearls—Two-page tracts, suitable for wide distribution. 1. The Gospel. 2. Coming and Kingdom of Christ, by 20,000 Baptists in 1660. 3. Immateriality. 4. Kingdom of God. 5. Nature of Man and Thoughts for Thinkers. 6. Two Advents. 7. What is Religion? 8. Restitution Age. 9. Destiny of the Wicked. 10. Baptism. 10 copies for 5 cents, or assorted packages of 100 for 20 cents.

Census Blank

MEMBERSHIP CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA

Name .....

Address .....
Street Town State

By whom Immersed ..... Date .....

Fill out the above and send to "The Census Editor," The Restitution, 803 Parkwood Drive, Cleveland, O.

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co.

WHOLESALE OPTICIANS

We make a specialty of High Grade Prescription Work, and carry a full line of all kinds of Optical goods. All orders filled same day as received.

"S. K. N." SERVICE

Means prompt returns, careful work, moderate prices. Goods shipped to all parts of the country.

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co. 322 SCHOFIELD BUILDING CLEVELAND, OHIO

SPECIAL OFFER!

IN ORDER to increase the circulation of The Restitution, the following special offer is made:

One new subscriber for 1 year, choice of:

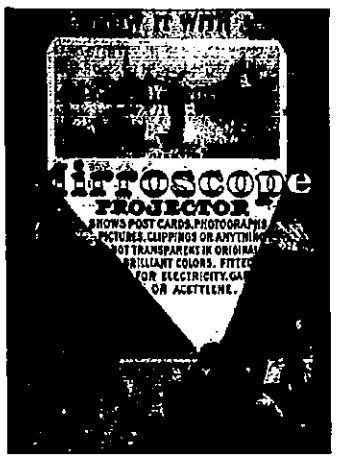
W. H. Wilson's "Student's Text Book," regular price 50c
Or 5 Copies of "Cunningly Devised Fables," reg. price 50c
Or 5 Copies of "Bible Study of Hades," reg. price 50c

For Two New Subscribers

One Copy "Pine Woods Bible Class," 480 pages, reg. price, $1.25
Or "The Bible, Its Principles and Texts," 309 pages, reg., $1.25
Or One Hundred of Bro. Joblin's Tracts, regular price $1.00

Here is a chance to get some of the books you all should own. By making special arrangements with the authors we are able to offer them to you without the payment of a cent on your part, just a few minutes effort. We cannot afford to continue this offer long, so take advantage of it at once, get some new subscribers today.

THE RESTITUTION, 803 Parkwood Drive



YOU will get genuine pleasure from an hour or two spent with the "Mirroscope" these long winter evenings. Pictures, Photos, Post Cards, Etc. are shown in exact reproduction same as with a high priced Stereopticon, can be used in any home and operated with Electricity, Gas or Acetylene. Price: $2.50, $5.00, $7.50, $10.00, $15.00, $20.00, according to size. Sent anywhere in the U. S. Send for one today.

HOME ILLUMINATED PICTURE CO.
311 SCHOFIELD BUILDING CLEVELAND, OHIO

Less than Half a Cent a Day

The Restitution costs a Dollar and a Half a year, that's less than half A Cent a day or three cents a copy. You can't afford to be without it. If you are a subscriber get some one else to subscribe.

Help to Get Them on the List

Sample Copies of The Restitution

May be obtained for a stamp. Send for one.

"A LETTER TO A FRIEND"

This tract needs no introduction further than to say that it is one of the most convincing Gospel sermons ever written. Originally written as a letter to a friend by Sister C. C. Woodruff it was published and has sold extensively in tract form. In its present edition it is a 32 page tract, the price is

10c each; 12 for $1.00

There is no better way of spreading the Gospel than handing out one of these tracts wherever you have the opportunity.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

"Future Probation,

Is that Awaiting any of the Unrighteous?"

Here is a work by Wm. Glenn Menzies that every one should read. It is one of the best things on the subject ever written and will appeal to every student of the word. It is a book of 150 pages, made to sell at 25c. We have a limited number left, which we will sell at the special price of

10c each; 12 for $1.00

Send for some at once.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

The Restitution
IS THE OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA.

The Restitution.

Founded A.D. 1852

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Lk. 19:12-16), who will be King of Kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-53); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life Giver (John 3:15; Rom. 6:23); Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17), and belief in, the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Lk. 13:3), and obedience by Baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ." (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31).

ROBT. G. HUGGINS, Editor.

—Terms of— Subscription
ONE YEAR, $1.50;
SIX MONTHS 75 CTS. IN ADVANCE

VOL. 50 CLEVELAND, OHIO, JANUARY 9, 1912. No. 2

THE PASSING YEARS.

God's hand is rolling past the years,
The years of grief and joy:
But soon He'll roll the clouds away,
And give peace without alloy.

When nature from her Maker's hand
Sprang forth at His command,
She was arrayed in gorgeous robes,
So pure and yet so grand.

The earth its varied colors showed
The sky He spread with blue,
And beauty shone in many forms
In every changing hue.

All nature sang His praises forth
With bounding life of joy,
And reveled in the purest love,
So free without alloy.

The birds poured forth their melodies.
The insects hummed his praise,
The plants, the trees, and all the flowers,
Joined in these glorious lays.

But man has marred this beautiful earth,
That shone with luster rare,
Brought on scars, wounds and drunkenness,
And black and wild despair.

But see, there flashes on the sky,
The light of coming day;
And messengers are hasting with
That new and living way.

When man to man will brothers be,
Oppression then will cease,
And vice shall flee to hide her head
Before the King of Peace.

A. WALLACE MASON
Cleveland, O.

THE RESPONSIBILITY THAT ATTACHES TO TEACHING.

(James 3:1-6.)

A minister of note is reported to have said to his son: "Keep out of the ministry if you can: if you can not, God help you to be a good minister." That was most excellent advice. It was quite in accord with the position that James here takes.

I.—A Warning Given

"Do not be ambitious to teach." Today young men are urged to take up the work of the ministry. The cry is raised "we need more ministers." And pastors are expected to urge godly young men to study for the ministry. I can't do that. We don't want a man made to order. . . . James, Paul, Peter and John found it necessary to lift up a warning voice against hastily entering the pastor's office. They sought to impress upon all the responsibility of such a work; to awaken a fear of the peculiar dangers to which a position exposed them, and of the dreadful consequences both to themselves and others of unfaithfulness in the office of leading others. It's serious business, this directing the lives of men Godward.

God says of men of old: "I have not sent these prophets, yet they ran; I have not spoken to them yet they prophesied." A man who has simply gone through a school and been ordained is not necessarily a minister of God. No mere human training and setting apart can make him such.

There is need in this day to remember that the ministry is not simply a profession, like medicine, or law, in which a man is to make a living and gain a position. The real minister is sent.

II.—The Warning Enforced.

Two weighty reasons are given why one should not hastily take the place of a teacher.

1. The consequences of unfaithfulness.

"Knowing that we shall receive the greater condemnation." The reason for this is obvious. Teachers are far more destructive, if in error, than their brethren. Their work, if wrong, is most damaging. Therefore the condemnation is greater. You remember that Jesus said: "Whosoever shall break one of these least commandments and shall teach men so shall be called least in the kingdom of heaven."

It is amazing to me to see how careless many teachers of the Word are in what they say.

Men make strongest assertions with no authority, and often against the expressed revelation of God, as, "Jesus never will come to earth." There is a serious responsibility going along with leadership. A leader is like a town clock. When a common man's watch goes wrong he alone is misled, but when the great public clock gets out of the way, multitudes are deceived, and a whole community are led astray. Hence the necessity for greater care and attention with reference of the one to the other. Every teacher is responsible beyond a private individual, for reason that his position influences many. An error in him effects the whole congregation.

Some are very eager for leadership. They wish to be prominent. They court office; but they seldom consider that leadership involves serious responsibility. The pastor's place is a solemn one. It is a momentous trust, only to be entered upon in the fear and in answer to the call of God.

The most eminent ministers of the church in all ages have felt this and to such an extent that they have shrunk back from the sacred office. Ambrose when elected bishop of Milan fled from the city and had to be brought back from this place of concealment.

John Knox rushed from St. Andrews on his first appearance and hid himself. He was compelled, however, to appear in the public place of preaching.

2. The Danger of unfaithfulness and failure.

"For in many things we all offend." No teacher is without fault. No one is absolutely without error. Such is human nature that even under him there is imperfection. The man who can accurately take in the whole truth and accurately set it forth in speech is a perfect man. There are none such. The tongue is something like the horse's bridle—the ruler and the guide of all. Bridle a bit of harness, but put in place determines all power and use. So with a ship's helm; it holds the destiny of all on board. It can put the ship on the rocks, or in the harbor. It can make the distance a matter of six or twenty days.

In a similar way, says James, the tongue though small is of great importance.

The tongue of the teacher is as important, is as full of grave power to those that are taught as the bridle of the horse. It is as much master of men's destinies for good or evil, as the helm of the ship. The position of leader is no cheap position. It has the gravest responsibility. It is not lightly to be sought, or held for the sake of the honor attached to it. There is an honor; but this may easily become dishonor—even disaster. It takes all a man's care, diligence, self-control and conscience; it takes all these and the enlightenment of the Holy Spirit, to make him a teacher who will but rarely stumble.

A teacher must search diligently about the things he teaches, and if he does, not fearful will be his judgment. The man who offers his services as a guide, you suppose knows the way; but if he is mistaken, and because he is mistaken he leads you astray, wasting your time and strength, he cannot be free from severe judgment. The responsibility of leading you astray rests with him.

There is terrible temptation in the teacher to be a trimmer and not to declare all the counsel of God. "Speak smooth things."

There is another side of James which he does not teach. There is a laudable desire to teach. "Covet earnestly the best gifts," one of which is teaching.

F. S. WESTON.

THREE MIRACLES AND THE TWO ADAMS.

What is a miracle? An act of power beyond the laws of nature, a supernatural operation performed alone by the power of God.

The first miracle in regard to man. God formed man of the dust of the ground; he was not yet alive. Then he breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and that man that God formed in his own image, out of the dust of the ground, became a living soul, and he called him Adam.

Another miracle was in the birth of Isaac. God had made a promise to Abraham that "In thee and thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed." The promise could not be fulfilled without the exercise of God's supernatural power in bringing Sarah into the child-bearing state again, as she was 90 years old—past the age of bearing. Read Gen. 17:15; 18:15. God said: "Sarah, thy wife shall bear thee a son indeed; and thou shalt call his name Isaac."

The four great prophets of the Old Testament made a great many prophecies; some of them have been fulfilled and some are yet in the future. But God has declared that all prophecy shall be fulfilled. We notice a prophecy in Is. 7:14 which could never have been fulfilled without a miracle. By the law that God established with the first Adam; no virgin could conceive and bear a child, for in the case of conception the virginity was destroyed. But here is a promise that a virgin shall conceive. How was it accomplished? For we believe that prophecy has been fulfilled. We find its fulfillment recorded in Matt. 1:18: "Mary was found with child of the Holy Spirit" (20th verse): "For that which is conceived (or begotten, mar.) in her is of the Holy Spirit. She shall bring forth a son, and thou shalt call his name Jesus; for he shall save his people from their sins. Now this was done, that it might be fulfilled which was spoken of the Lord by the prophet, saying: Behold, a virgin shall be with child. And Joseph knew her not till she had brought forth her first born son, and he called his name Jesus."

The angel Gabriel was sent from God to a virgin whose name was Mary, and said unto her, fear not Mary, for thou hast found favor with God; and behold thou shalt conceive in thy womb, and bring forth a son, and shall call highest. . . . The Holy Spirit shall come upon thee, and the power of the highest shall overshadow thee, and that Holy Thing his name Jesus, He shall be great, and shall be called the son of the which shall be born of thee shall be called the son of God (Luke 1:30, 35).

The first Adam was given dominion or rule over everything that was created on the earth; was put into the garden of Eden to keep it, and of all the trees he might eat, except the tree of the knowledge of good and evil; if he should eat of that he should surely die. He ate of that tree, and God sent him forth from the garden of Eden. Adam lived 930 years and he died. There was no promise of any other kind of death until God made his promise to Abraham. Then there was a promise of a blessing to his seed through the miraculously born Isaac. Death reigned from Adam to Moses, even over them that had not sinned, after the similitude of Adam's transgression, who is the figure of him that was to come (Rom. 5:14). The first man is of the earth, earthy; the second man is the Lord from heaven (1st Cor. 15:47).

We have shown how the first Adam was made of the dust of the ground, and the second Adam of a virgin. The first Adam had a wife, was commanded to multiply and replenish the earth, which they did to the extent of 33 sons and 23 daughters, according to Josephus.

The second Adam had no wife, never had any children. The first Adam was the author of eternal death; and all that die in the first Adam die as he did: The second Adam is the author of eternal life, and all that die in him will receive eternal life at the resurrection. The second Adam is the one that all the promises that God made to Abraham center in, as he is the acknowledged seed (Gal. 3:16,29).

It was a law with Israel that sacrifices should be made, and a lamb without blemish was their sacrifice. But a sacrifice for all the people and for all time to come, required something higher. "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son," the only being without sin. All of the first Adam's race were sinners, for "by one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin" (Rom. 5:12). So Christ could not be wholly of the Adamic race, for in him was no blemish or sin (1st Pet. 2:22; 1st John 3:5). It required the blood of a sinless being to atone for sin, and the blood of Jesus Christ, "cleanseth us from all sin". The first Adam was the son of God by creation; the second Adam is the son of God by birth of the Virgin Mary. The first Adam received eternal death by disobedience; the second Adam obeyed in all things, and received eternal life at his resurrection, and has become the first fruits of them that slept. The first Adam inherited a curse: the second Adam inherits a blessing. The wages of sin is paid to the first Adam and all of his race; the gift of God which is eternal life is to be given to the second Adam and all of his race.

How can one that belongs to the first Adam become related to the second Adam? By faith, for "ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus. For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ, have put on Christ; and if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs according to promise." We cannot be saved in the first Adam, but by coming into the second Adam, we are saved by faith (Luke 7:50; 18:42) by hope (Rom. 8:24); by grace saved by faith (Eph. 2:58) by water (1st Pet. 3:20, 21); by love of truth (II. Thess 2:10); by the power of God through the preaching of the cross (1st Cor. 1:17, 18).

We see then our only hope of eternal life is in believing, obeying, and joining the body of the second Adam by baptism. Then we are in a position for the resurrection of the just when the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, and the dead in Christ shall rise first: Then we which are alive and remain, shall be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air, and so shall we ever be with the Lord. Wherefore comfort one another with these words (1st Thess. 4:15, 18).

R. W KNAPP.
Monkland, Ore.

"THOU SHALT LOVE THE LORD THY GOD WITH ALL THY SOUL, MIND, AND STRENGTH."

I have been thinking how it is possible that some people can love the Lord God when he is presented to them in such a forbidding aspect—as a God for instance that confines his creatures in the popular hot box and preserves them alive to suffer forever, or, as a parallel, a God of vengeance that must have the blood of an innocent person before he can be "satisfied." Such a God is not lovable, and we would become hypocrites in even attempting to love such an one.

How different is the story of the Bible revelation of God, the God gracious and merciful that Moses tells us about, and that David sings about in ever recurring refrain. Hezekiah tells his people that the Lord is gracious and merciful and will not turn away His face from you if ye return unto Him. Poor Jonah even seemed displeased at the extent of the Lord's mercy and regretted that his anger was ready to give out so soon. "For I know that thou were a gracious God and merciful and slow to anger, of great kindness and repenteth of the evil, therefore take my life from me, for its better for me to die than to live." All the other prophets to the last of them continually dwell, and love to dwell on the mercy of the Lord to them that fear him and hope in his truth, who doth not reward us according to our sins, but is continually waiting to be gracious. Now this loving Lord is a lovable God, because love begets love, and we can love one who first loves us, but a man eating ogre who can be satisfied with nothing but the blood of the innocent as a ransom is not lovable to say the least of it.

And when we come down to consider God's last message to us through his Christ, it is one with that of Moses and the prophets, and in fact Christ ever refers back to them and quotes them as to this matter of transcendant importance, this love toward God. Moreover he ever gave all credit for all the benefits, temporal and spiritual, that humanity obtain to "our Father who art in heaven." My Father and your Father, and when one addressed him as "good master," he replied, "Why callest thou me good, there is none good but God."

And such is the universal testimony likewise of the New Testament in regard to the disposition of the Father towards the human race—waiting to do them good individually and collectively, not breaking the bruised reed, or quenching the smoking flame; just think of it, he who measured the waters in the hollow of his hand, meted out the heaven with a span, comprehended the earth, and weighed the mountains, gathering the lambs in his arm and gently leading them that are with young. I claim that this God is a lovable God, he is the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, not the God who has to be bought off with a ransom of innocent blood!

What do you think?

J. F. GELLETTY.
Baltimore, Md.

"BE YE HOLY, FOR I AM THE LORD, YOUR GOD."

Lev. 20:7

This thought came to me as I read this beautiful hymn in one of the popular books.

The first verse is as follows:

"Take time to be holy, speak oft with thy Lord.
Abide in Him always and feed on his word.
Make friends of God's children, help those who are weak;
Forgetting in nothing his blessing to seek."

In this fast age—the latter days—our lives are so full of less important things than taking time to be holy.

We get up in the morning determined to read, study and pray before we realize how it is the time has gone, and night is upon us and we go to our rest tired with the daily toils, and dissatisfied because we failed to spend oft with our Lord and to feed on His word.

We have tried during the last year to make friends with God's children, during our good spiritual conferences, we keep in touch with isolated members through our paper, the weak are strengthened by our able speakers and those who give us a passing word of encouragement. And we realize more and more the great and many blessings He is constantly giving to all those who love his appearing.

The second verse is:

"Take time to be holy, the world rushes on;
Spend much time in secret, Jesus alone,
By looking to Jesus, like Him thou shalt be—
Thy friend in thy conduct His likeness shall see."

How true it is, how the world is rushing on and on all so full of the temporal things that the unseen things are never in their thoughts. As the world grows worse and the time is coming when, like days of Noah, we should spend more time in secret, in prayer with our dear Lord, trusting him to care for us even in time of peril and danger, and getting to be more and more like Him, so that we shall make our election and calling sure. Since we are living in the time of wars and rumors of wars, we must watch and pray, and hold fast to the faith once delivered to the saints.

The third verse is:

"Take time to be holy,
Let Him be thy guide,
And run not before Him,
Whatever betide.
In joy or in sorow, still follow thy Lord,
And looking to Jesus, still trust in His word."

If we always feel that our Lord is guiding and directing us, whether in joy or sorrow, the burdens will be lighter to carry, our hope full of brightness of His coming on the morn of the resurrection when all who have trusted in His word will have no further burdens to carry—no more trusting and hoping, for all will be made perfect. Then we will have what we have hoped for and love, joy and peace will cover the earth as the waters cover the sea.

And now, sisters, since our heavenly Father has blessed us with all spiritual blessings that we should be the praise of his glory who first trusted in Christ, "in whom we also trusted after that ye heard the word of truth, the gospel of your salvation, in whom also after that ye believed ye were sealed with that holy spirit of promise, which is the earnest of our inheritance until the redemption of the purchased possession unto the praise of his glory" (Eph. 1:13, 14). But we must be careful and not feel sure of our reward of blessedness, for in 1st Cor. 10:12 we find "Wherefore let him who thinketh he standeth take heed, lest he fall." But God helps us and says He will not tempt us above what we are able to bear. "We are troubled on every side yet not distressed; we are perplexed, but not forsaken; cast down, but not destroyed, always bearing about in the body the dying of the Lord Jesus that the life also of Jesus might be manifest in our body."

So far all these promises we must faint not, "for our light affliction which is for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory." "For one look for the unseen things which are eternal." And so now dear sisters, let us try more and more to take time to be holy, for we find in 1 Pet. 1:16: "Be ye holy, for I am holy," and in Matt. 5:48: "Be ye perfect even as your FRather in heaven is perfect." "So let us all put on, therefore as the elect of God, holy and beloved, bowels of mercies, kindness, humbleness of mind, meekness, long-suffering, forbearing one another and forgiving one another even as Christ forgave you. And let the peace of God rule in your hearts, to the which ye are called in one body, and be ye thankful, And I pray that the very God of peace sanctify us wholly. And I pray our whole spirit and soul and body be preserved blameless unto the coming o four Lord Jesus Christ."

JESSIE KAUFFMAN.
Riverside, Cal.

Oregon State Library
Oregon, Ore.

The Restitution

Issued weekly by

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING COMPANY.

Entered as second-class matter under act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

TERMS.

One year $1.50; six months 75 cents, in advance.

ROBT. G. HUGGINS.....Editor.
BUELL W. NUTT.....Manager

BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Burton H. Lane, Harry Pott,
Chas. A. Gore, Wm. G. Rothe,
Buell W. Nutt, D. C. Robson,
W. S. Tomlinson.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

All remittances should be sent by bank draft, post office money order or express money order to The Restitution Publishing Co., 503 Parkwood drive, Cleveland, Ohio.

All communication intended for publication should be sent to the editor, Robt. G. Huggins, 10622 Lee avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

It is necessary to adhere strictly to the rule of not returning unused manuscripts. Writers will please keep copies, or risk the loss.

While the editor exercises a general supervision over the articles appearing in The Restitution, his endorsement does not extend to the interpretation of details nor the exegesis of particular texts in the writings of contributors.

Cleveland, Ohio....Jan. 9, 1912

EDITORIAL

We now have enough poetry on file to last a year. Will writers note this and write only prose compositions for at least a while?

The printer made such a bad mistake in our sermon notes on Pergamum in the issue of Dec. 26th, that we have reprinted it entire in this number.

We have splendid articles on the whole in this issue, but Bro. Thomas' article on Work is so affectionately, forcibly and opportunely written that we feel impelled to commend it editorially. Reader, turn right now to it and read it carefully.

EDITOR'S SERMON NOTES ON THE APOCALYPSE

Subject:—Christ's Message to the Pergamum Church

Text:—Rev. 2:12-18

I. History of the Church. 1. Pergamus was birthplace of Galun, second only to Hippocrates as a doctor—Contained 200,000 vol. library—Pergamena, now corrupted to parchment, invented there; also tapistry. II. Kingdom of Pergamum founded B. C. 283. by Philoerus; his brother Eumenes was his successor. He was succeeded B. C. 241, by Attalus, first king of Pergamum—Attalus II.; Attalus III. died 131 B. C.; bequeathed his kingdom to Rome. III. Why we preface our sermons on these messages to the churches with historical, geographical and political remarks (v. 13). (a). "Satan's seat" (Greek, thronos, throne). (b) Antipas 1—"against all." Jas. 4:4; Acts 4:19;5:29; Jer. 15:10. (1).

II. Things in the Church which Christ Commends. 1. "Holdest fast my name, my faith" (vs. 13; Matt. 10:39; Mk. 10:29; Lk. 18; 29).

III. Things in the Church which Christ condemns. 1. Baalism and Nicolaitanism (Numb. 24; 25:1; 31:16; II. Pet. 2:15; Jude. 11). II. The sword is threatened the tran[illegible]ora (vs. 12:16; Gal. 4:20; Numb. 22:23-33; 25:5; 31:8; Joshua 13:22).

IV. The Promise. 1. "Hidden manna. Greek the manna which was hidden" (Exo. 16:12, 15, 20, 33, 34; I Cor. 10:3; Psa. 78:24, 25; Heb. 9:4; Jno. 6:31-33, 48, 51; Acts 2:27, 31; 1 Jno. 3:2; Col. 3:1-3). II. "White stone." All the other promises given to the churches are single or intimately related. As the diamond is not mentioned in Exo. 28:15-22 as being in the "breast plate of judgment" worn by the high priest, 2 and since the Urim and Thummim (meaning lights and perfection) were but one thing, 3 we conclude that the "white stone" was the Urim—a diamond. (Exo. 28:15-30). III. "New name" (vs. 17; 3:12; 5:9; 14:3; 19:12.

(1) Antipas comes from two Latin words, anti, opposed to, and papas, father or pope;; so the word denotes a class of people who are opposed to papal supremacy.

(2) All critics admit that "diamond" in Exo. 28:18 is a mistranslation of the original.

(3) The Urim and Thummim were not two things, but two names for one and the same thing (see Symbolik d. Mos. Cult. vol. II., pp. 109, 110). While sometimes the two names are given together (Exo. 28:30; Lev. 8:8), Urim often stands alone (Numb. 27:21; I Sam. 28:6).

COMMUNICATIONS.

Dear Bro. Huggins:

Your article on "Cheating the Saints" is grand. Matt. 25:31-46 has reference to no one else but the children of light. Those whom the Saviour has purchased with his precious blood belong to him, together with their time and talents. Christ was a Saviour and deliverer; he brought help because he was a perfect servant, so now that time and talent are committed to our trust, we should do likewise, for the Nobleman will require an account of our stewardship when he returns to reckon with his servants (read Luke 16). I think this chapter will soon tell you what is the test of fellowship. Had not the steward wasted his goods? Does not this mean chastisement? By his being a friend to debtors he could ask them to pay half of what they owed, which means his coming in touch with other debtors threw them into affliction and made them see they were not right in the sight of the Lord, so they repented in sack clothes and ashes. By doing so this redeemed the steward. If eating the bread and drinking of the cup isn't a test of fellowship, I'm badly mistaken. I can cite you to many, many more beautiful proofs. I have cited you to this because it fits in so nicely with your article on Cheating the Saints. The Bible is for only the righteous.

I also like the continued article on "Sow not Among Thorns."

Your sister,
KATHRYN TOWNSEND.
Lebanon, Ill.

The Restitution:

I see that my time is up I am not able to pay for it, so you will please stop my subscription. The paper has been a welcome visitor in my father's household, and after his death in mine, for about thirty-five years. The last year has been a very busy year for the writer, he having preached one hundred sermons, baptized thirteen, traveled 3,530 miles, and helped to reorganize the Church of God at Gallimore Gap, Henderson county, N. C. The writer is trying to supply the Church at Southern Grove, S. C., and Liberty, N. C.; also Gallimore Gap, N. C. I find plenty of calls, but being a poor man I can not fill but a few outside of my regular churches. I find some people who claim that a preacher ought to work without any assistance in a financial way, but I find that one can not devote his whole time to the business without something to eat and wear; and he must provide for his family or deny the faith. If God is no respecter of persons, as the Bible declares, why should the preaching member be required to sacrifice this all, and the lay members be exemtp? In the fifteenth chapter of John we are taught that every branch must bear fruit. Paul states that the Lord ordained that they who preached the gospel should live of the gospel (1 Cor. 9:14). Turning to Matt. 10:7, 14, and Luke 10:1-11 we find that Christ requires those to whom the minister sows spiritual things to provide for him temporal things. Bear one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ. I have been preaching at Liberty, N. C., for two years, during which time twenty-three or twenty-four have taken on the name of Christ by baptism. That church is twelve miles from the railroad, but the deacons, Bros. L. R. Rhoades and Judge Freeman always meet me with a conveyance, bringing me back when I wish to start home. The church is always willing to meet all my expenses. Is a live church, and is being blessed by the Lord. Bro. J. M. Lyda is still preaching for the Liberty church, where he has labored for thirty years. May the Lord help us all to remain faithful is the prayer of the writer.

J. H. ANDERSON.
Pelzer, S. C.

(Bro. Anderson is one of our worthy ministers, was our school chum in our boyhood, and we will see that Bro. Nutt supplies him with The Restitution out of the Helping Fund.—Editor.

Some Children's Sayings — Some little folks say some queer things, at least they sound queer to grown-ups, though the children themselves see nothing queer in them. One little fellow, a very busy boy, had said his prayer and was being tucked in bed by his big sister, when he recalled an important omission in that prayer:

"May I pray some more?"

"Why do you wish to pray more?"

"O, I forgot something."

"So out of bed he got, knelt again and added: "And Lord bless Stanley Lang, if you have time."

Now Stanley was a very dear playmate of his, and it was strange he had forgotten him in his prayer. But being very busy himself, and believing the Heavenly Father had much to do in caring for all his children, both little and big, he meant well, when he added to his prayer, "If you have time."

Little Eleanor, four years old, whose father was away, had prayed sincerely to God to watch over her dear father, then added innocently enough, "And I guess you'd better keep an eye on mother, too."

That suggestion probably sounded different to the mother than it did to the heavenly Father, who knew that the child meant all right.

The Three Dudes — Three dudes were walking along the street one morning and met an aged, decrepit minister, with long white hair and beard. Desiring to poke fun at the old man, the first called out, "Hello, Father Abraham." The second said, "Hello, Father Isaac," and the third chimed in, "Hello, Father Jacob." The minister seeing the situation and likewise using scripture, quietly replied, "I am neither Abraham, nor Isaac, nor Jacob, but Saul, the son of Kish, who went forth to hunt his father's asses; and behold, I have found them."

—Selected by Bro. Knapp.

WORK

With the editor's kind permission we offer to the brethren scattered abroad a practical, rather than a doctrinal sermon; and we take for our text the simple word work. This word, as commonly used in worldly matters, implies action, energy, labor. Energetic, persistent and determined work is necessary to success in any undertaking. But when used by our Pastor in the pulpit, it has but little practical significance for those who listen. He exhorts his hearers to work in the Master's vineyard. He warns them that the night is far spent and the day is at hand. We arise and sing:

"Work for the night is coming,
Work thro' the morning hours;
Work while the dew is sparkling,
Work 'mid springing flowers."

And we disperse to our homes with a vague idea that Christian work simply means going to church on Sunday and being reasonably good the rest of the week. But this is not work. Real Christian work is the same as any other kind of work. It requires energy, and activity, just as does farm work, house work, or office work. The evangelist who leaves a comfortable home and travels from town to town, meeting opposition and discouragement at every stopping place, will agree that Christian work requires courage, energy and activity quite as much as does farm or business work.

"But," says a dear brother or sister, "I could not become a preacher or evangelist. I am not capable. I would gladly work for Jesus if I only knew of something I could do." The writer has been over all this ground, and possibly a brief narration of some of his efforts along the line of Christian work may serve as pointers for others, who, like him, have an earnest desire to work for [illegible] lack opportunity, educ[illegible] ability to publicly proc[illegible] glad tidings.

Many years ago the writer started on a journey to the city of Wilmington, Del., and took with him a copy of the "Restitution," to read on the way. The number was especially good, and after reading it he marked some of the best articles and laid it on a vacant seat in the car, with a silent prayer that it might fall into the hands of some good and honest heart. The next day, while passing a commission house in the city, he obeyed a sudden impulse to turn in at the open door, and having no business there, felt somewhat embarrassed when the proprietor advanced to serve him. But as he turned to leave he noticed a gentleman sitting by a table, reading that copy of the "Restitution" which he had left on the car seat. He advanced and asked the gentleman where he got that paper; he replied, "I picked it up from the table here, and I am quite interested in it." We then gave him a history of our connection with the paper, and for several hours he continued asking questions about the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ. Many days later he visited me at my place of business, for the purpose of gaining more knowledge upon these subjects.

Now, brethren, the moral of this little story is quite plain. Every copy of The Restitution, every tract which we leave in a public place, becomes a worker for Jesus. The most humble among God's people may work for Jesus as effectively as the wise and learned. Save carefully each copy of your "Restitution;" send to the Restitution office for a few pounds of "Bible Pearls," a few copies of "A Letter to a Friend," or a hundred of Bro. Joblin's tracts, and where ever you go, to your office, or to town, or to market—it matters no where—carry a few tracts or papers with you and leave them where somebody will see them and pick them up.

If each brother and sister of the Church of God would do this one little work thoroughly and earnestly for the next five years, millions of people, perhaps, would hear and read of the kingdom of God who otherwise will live and die in ignorance of it. The extra printing, job work and other business which would flow to the Restitution office, because of this labor by the members of the church, would be sufficient to put our paper on a strong and solid foundation, and thus make it a power for good. All this and more, would result if each member would begin now, and earnestly do this little work for Jesus and our fellow man. A work so easy and so simple, that a child may accomplish it as successfully as his parent. Surely if we know this and refuse, or neglect to do our part, we are without excuse. We are like the shiftless tramp who looks for work, but earnestly prays he may not find it.

Another pointer, especially suited for sisters' work, may be made a power for good. Let each sister, everywhere, it matters not how humble, poor or isolated, make a neat little box or wall pocket, of cardboard, cover it tastefully. Print on it in plain letters, "Take one free," then go to the nearest postoffice, store, railroad station or other public place, and ask permission to keep it up there. Now [illegible] with back numbers or extra [illegible] of the "Restitution," a choice collection of tracts, etc., and keep it full all of this year, and the following year, if God lets you live. If you are not able to buy tracts enough, then notify Brother Huggins, and my word for it, he will see to it that your box is well filled. Suppose five hundred sisters should adopt this line of work and each put up and maintain for five years a box of this kind. I venture the assertion that the truth in the United States and Canada would receive from this effort alone a greater impetus than ever before known.

Now, dear reader, just a word to you personally. I know exactly what you are thinking. "Those are pretty good ideas, and if I was only sure the plans would be generally adopted, I would gladly do my part," etc., etc. Pardon me, my brother, that is a very poor excuse and you will be heartily ashamed of it in the age to come. If you think these are good plans, and if they present some prospect of success, then go to work and do your part, just the same as if you knew that every brother and sister in the land was working with you. Brother Huggins and the Restitution office will first feel the pulse throbs of a new impulse, and the number and activity of the workers will be known to him through the medium of tracts and books ordered. Awake, brethren and sisters. "The night is far spent, the day is at hand." Here is [illegible] that you can do; will you do it? The work is light and the reward great beyond measure. Listen: "And they that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament, and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars for ever and ever" (Dan. 12:3).

S. H. THOMAS.
Proctor, Mont.

PRACTICAL VALUE OF THE HOPE OF THE LORD'S COMING.

"But if, that evil servant shall say in his heart, "my Lord delayeth his coming" and shall begin to beat his fellow servants." (Matt. 24:49).

1. Did the pre-millennialism of Paul, Bunyan, Spurgeon, Muller and Moody interfere with their usefulness?

2. If the church continues as in the past to be a small minority, does not optimism involve infinitely more suffering than the coming of the Lord "to cut short in righteousness" and to introduce "the acceptable year of the Lord" which was rejected at His first coming?

3. What will it profit a man to create hopeless confusion in the Bible by proving to his satisfaction that "the Church is Jerusalem," therefore the destruction of Jerusalem is the Lord's coming; and, "the Lord's coming is death," and death is the "blessed hope" of the church and "the church is the kingdom," and the kingdom comes every time Tammany is turned down in New York City.

4. If a man thinks the Bible writers had so complete an absence of distinct ideas, how can he defend the inspiration of the Bible against infidels, critics and spiritualizers?

5. Would rich Christians hord their wealth if they believed "our citizenship is in heaven, from whence also we look for the Lord?"

6. Do those Christians who are working and praying for the Lord's return, spend much time or money on theaters, balls and polite gambling?

7. Can a pre-millenialist ever feel as pessimistic as an optimist over "gathering clouds," especially as he sees "the day approaching?"

8. Who study the Bible the harder, those who are interested in the "sure word of prophecy," or those who are expecting the kingdom to come in the next election returns?

9. According to Paul in his letter to Titus (2:12-15) is there not a necessary connection between "looking for that blessed hope," and, "living soberly, righteously and Godly?"

10. Do not the following statements present difficulties to the post-millennialist—that the angels sang "peace on earth," but Christ said, "I came not to bring peace, but a sword," that at first John the Baptist and Christ preached "the kingdom of heaven is at hand" and "among you," whereas later Christ "spake a parable unto them, because they thought the kingdom of heaven should immediately appear." Is it not because of such difficulties, that men conclude that Christ and the apostles were mistaken? Are pre-millennialists ever driven to this conclusion?

11. Is not the hope of the Lord's coming, the only possible comfort to a man who is fully alive to all the sin and suffering of the world?

12. Could skeptics and Christian socialists say, "Christianity is a failure" if Christians were striving by "all means to save some," instead of expecting to gather the whole world into an "elect" church?

13. When an Old Testament writer denounces the Israelites, and immediately predicts ultimate blessings for them, does not the post millennialist, (if he is an advanced critic) reject the text, or if orthodox, does he not try to apply these earthly blessings to a heavenly church? On the other hand cannot a pre-millenniallist accept the Bible, without rejecting the text, or stealing the promises which Jacob stole from Esau?

—The Lord's Coming, published by C. C. Cook.

Men who are not at peace with God are seldom at peace with one another.

God is often credited with the consequences of one's wrongdoing.

It is easy to have confidence in one who is working in harmony with God.

Human life is divided into periods of time, and some of them are very short. Moment by moment we live on through the hours and days and years into which the smallest divisions of time ultimately grow. We cannot merge two moments, nor telescope two weeks. Each second is distinct from and independent of the other. We must live a day at a time. As J. R. Miller says: "The mornings are little hilltops from which we can look odwn into the narrow valley of one little day. What lies over the next hill we cannot see. Perhaps when we come to it, it may reveal to us a lively garden through which our path shall go on. Or it may show us a valley of shadows, or something worse—a path amid briars." But no matter as to that; we have but the one little valley in sight, and the evening is our horizon, and there we shall rest until tomorrow.

USE OR LOSE

There is a law of nature that man must either "use or lose." If you are unwilling to use the powers and opportunities that God gives you, you must lose them. If you will not use those capabilities of the soul, such as the love of the beautiful, true and sublime (the sentimental side of our nature), they will disappear and leave you cold, heartless and disappointed. Many a man in a mad scramble for wealth has refused to yield to the enderer side of his nature, and has killed the faculty by which he can enjoy while seeking the things he thought he would enjoy. Many a man who has gained wealth is shocked to find that after all, the finer and tenderer side of his nature is paralyzed. Beauty in nature, art, literature, no longer appeals to him. Money has mounted to the saddle, but the enjoying power is dead. Straining and striving have starved the soul.—Selected.

THE ERROR OF THE WICKED

Says the Apostle Peter: "Ye therefore, beloved, seeing ye know these things before, beware lest ye also, being led away with the error of the wicked, fall from your own steadfastness." 2 Peter 3:17.

The "error" Peter speaks of did not exist in Peter's day; but was to be a last-day creature. In the last days "scoffers" shall arise says Peter and say, Where is the promise of his coming? Against this blasphemous scepticism Peter urges the fact of the change which took place at the deluge. Then he announces that another great change is due at the coming of the Lord Jesus which is to be the greatest conflagration the world has ever seen.

Peter says, "Seeing ye look for such things, be diligent." He then goes on saying: "Seeing ye know these things, beware." What things? Why the cry that the Lord is slack concerning his coming. The "error" is the indifference regarding the event. And now if you are entertaining an indifferent spirit with regard to it, you are already well along with the "error" he speaks of. If we say we know nothing of its approximate nearness, we are being "led away" with the "error of the wicked." We do "know" he is have appeared; and if we are led away with that error, it will be our own fault.

What will produce that "error."

1. Wealth. Those among us who are wealthy are easy prey; for the man who is constantly saving his money and gaining more wealth all the time has thereby furnished the best proof there can be given that he does not believe the coming of Christ is near.

2. Worldliness. Are we worldly? Do we attend places Christians ought not to go; or practice things Christ forbids and that the love of Christ would shame us out of? If so, we can easily be led away with this error. May God help us to be careful. Peter is writing for our benefit.—Selected.

"SIZING" PEOPLE UP

Labels on the outside of a tin can tell us what we may expect to find on the inside. "Hon." and "Dr." and "Rev." and various combinations of the alphabet are ornamental labels for various kinds of barins. Labels, commercial and personal, are therefore very useful. It is unfortunate that they are sometimes misleading. It is easier to look for labels than for facts. So, for a good fraction of our mental furniture we take men for just what they are labeled.

Many very good and very great men had to be dead a long time before they were recognized to be either good or great, because people had labeled them wrong.

Jesus encountered the same difficulty. He came into his own home town where he had lived. He went into the church and spoke with such eloquence as they had never heard. It was extraordinary this wisdom and this power, and it did not agree with the label that they had always put on him—"the carpenter's son."

The Creator did not mean that we should ever be anything but alert and interested and growing. He did not mean that a single hour in our lives should bear a man-made label, but rather that we should every one have the daily joy of discovery of himself in some new way; now in a friend and now in ourselves; now in a baby, and again in a prophet. We are daily walking, everyone in an undiscovered country. It is a blessed journey when we do not allow it to be labeled beforehand and when we find a divine friend and Saviour even in the carpenter's son.—The Fighting Saint.

THE INSPIRATION OF THE BIBLE—No. 2.

III.—Argument for the Words

The evidence that the inspiration includes the form as well as the substance of the Holy Scriptures, the word as well as the thought, may be gathered in this way.

1. There was certainly some occasions when the words were given to the human agents. Take the instance of Balaam (Num. 22: 38; 23:12, 16). It is clear that this self-seeking prophet thought i. e., desired to speak differently from what he did, but was obliged to speak the word that God put in his mouth. There were two incontrovertible witnesses to this, one being Balaam himself and the other God.

Take Saul (1 Sam 10:10), or at a later time, his messengers (19: 20-24). No one will claim that there was not an inspiration of the words here. And Caiphas also (John 11:49-52), of whom it is expressly said that when he prophecied that one man should die for the people, "this spake he not of himself." Who believes that Caiphas meant or really knew the significance of what he said?

And how entirely this harmonizes with Christ's promise to his disciples in Matt. 10: 19, 20 and elsewhere: "When they deliver you up take no thought (be not anxious) how or what ye shall speak; for it shall be given you in that hour what ye shall speak. For it is not yet that speak but the Spirit of your Father which speaketh in you." Mark is even more emphatic: "Neither do ye premeditate, but whatsoever shall be given you in that hour, that speak ye, for it is not ye that speak, but the Holy Ghost.

Take the circumstances of the day of Pentecost (Acts 2:4-11), when the disciples "began to speak with other tongues as the Spirit gave them utterance." Parthians, Medes, Elamites, the dwellers in Mesopotamia, in Judea, Cappadocia, Pontus, Asia, Phrygia, Pamphylia, Egypt, in the parts of Libya about Cyrene, the strangers of Rome, Cretes and Arabians all testified, "we do hear them speak in our tongues the wonderful work of God!" Did not this inspiration include the words? Did it not indeed exclude the thought? What clearer example could be desired?

To the same purport consider Paul's teaching in 1 Cor. 14, about the gift of tongues. He that speaketh in an unknown tongue, in the Spirit speaketh mysteries, but no man understandeth him, therefore he is to pray that he may interpret. Under some circumstances, if no interpreter be present, he is to keep silence in the church and speak only to himself and to God.

But better still, consider the utterance of 1 Peter 1:10, 11, where he speaks of them who prophesied of the grace that should come, as "searching what, or what manner of time, the Spirit of Christ which was in them did signify when he testified beforehand the sufferings of Christ and the glory that should follow, to whom it was revealed," etc.

Should we see a student who, having taken down the lecture of a profound philosopher, was now studying diligently to comprehend the sense of the discourse which he had written, we should understand simply that he was a pupil and not a master; that he had nothing to do with originating either the thoughts or the words of the lecture, but rather a disciple whose province it was to understand what he had translated, and so be able to communicate it to others.

So much for the Old Testament, but when we reach the new, we have the same unerring and verbal accuracy guaranteed to the apostles by the son of God as we have seen. And we have the apostles making claim of it, as when Paul in 1 Corinthians 2:12, 13, distinguishes between the "things" or the thoughts which God gave him and the words in which he expressed them, and insisting on the divinity of both; "not in the words which man's wisdom teacheth, but which the Holy Ghost teacheth."

In Gal. 3:16, following the example of his divine Master, he employs not merely a single word, but a single letter of a word as the basis of an argument for a gre: doctrine. The blessing of justification which Abraham received has become that of the believer in Jesus Christ. "Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not, and to seeds as of many; but as of one, and to the seed, which is Christ."

The writer of the epistle to the Hebrews bases a similar argument on the word "all" in chap. 1:8, on the word "one" in 1:11, and on the phrase "yet once more" in 12:26, 27.

To recur to Paul's argument in Galatians, Archdeacon Farrar in one of his writings denies that by any possibility such a Hebraist as he, and such a master of Greek usage could have argued in this way. He says Paul must have known that the plural of the Hebrew and Greek terms for "seed" is never used by Hebrew or Greek writers to designate human offspring. It means, he says, various kinds of grain.

His artlessness is amusing. We accept his estimate of Paul's knowledge of Hebrew and Greek, says Professor Watts; he was certainly a Hebrew of the Hebrews, and as to his Greek he could not only write it but speak it as we know, and quote what suited his purpose from the Greek poets. But on this supposition we feel justified in asking Dr. Farrar whether a lexicographer in searching Greek authors for the meanings they attached to spermata, the Greek for "seeds," would not be inclined to add "human offspring" on so good an authority as Paul?

Nor indeed would they be limited to his authority, since Sophocles uses it in the same way, and Aeschylus. "I was driven away from my own country by my own offspring" (spermata)—literally by my own seeds, is what the former makes one of his characters say.

Dr. Farrar's rendering of spermata in Gal. 3:16, on the other hand would make nonsense if not sacrilege. "He saith not unto various kinds of grain as of many, but as of one, and to thy grain, which is Christ."

Granting then, what we thank no man for granting, that spermata means human offspring, it is evident that despite all opinions to the contrary, this passage sustains the teaching of an inspiration of Holy Writ extending to its very word."

III.—Argument for the Words.

The evidence that the inspiration includes the form as well as the substance of the Holy Scriptures, the word as well as the thought, may be gathered in this way.

1. There were certainly some occasions when the words were given to the human agents. Take the instance of Balaam (Num. 22: 38; 23:12, 16). It is clear that this self-seeking prophet thought i. e., desired to speak differently from what he did, but was obliged to speak the word that God put in his mouth. There were two incontrovertible witnesses to this, one being Balaam himself and the other God.

Take Saul (1 Sam, 10:10), or at a later time, his messengers (19: 20-24). No one will claim that there was not an inspiration of the words here. And Caiaphas also (John 11:49-52), of whom it is expressly said that when he prophesied that one man should die for the people, "this spake he not of himself." Who believes that Caiaphas meant or really knew the significance of what he said?

And how entirely this harmonizes with Christ's promise to his disciples in Matt 10:19, 20 and elsewhere: "When they deliver you up take no thought (be not anxious) how or what ye shall speak. For it is not ye that speak but the spirit of your Father which speaketh in you." Mark is even more emphatic: "Neither do ye premeditate, but whatsoever shall be given you in that hour, that speak ye, for it is not ye that speak, but the Holy Ghost."

Take the circumstances of the day of Pentecost (Acts 2:4-11), when the disciples "began to speak with other tongues as the Spirit gave them utterance." Parthians, Medes, Elamites, the dwellers in Mesopotamia, in Judea, Cappadocia, Pontus, Asia, Phrygia, Pamphylia, Egypt, in the parts of Libya about Cyrene, the strangers of Rome, Cretes and Arabians all testified, "we do hear them speak in our tongues the wonderful works of God!" Did not this inspiration include the words? Did it not indeed exclude the thought? What clearer example could be desired?

To the same purport consider Paul's teaching in 1 Cor. 14, about the gift of tongues. He that speaketh in an unknown tongue, in the Spirit speaketh mysteries, but no man understandeth him, therefore he is to pray that he may interpret. Under some circumstances, if no interpreter be present, he is to keep silence in the church and speak only to himself and to God.

But better still, consider the utterance of 1 Pet. 1:10, 11, where he speaks of them who prophesied of the grace that should come, as "searching what, or what manner of time, the Spirit of Christ which was in them did signify when he testified beforehand the sufferings of Christ and the glory that should follow, to whom it was revealed," etc.

"Should we see a student who, having taken down the lecture of a profound philosopher, was now studying diligently to comprehend the sense of the discourse which he had written, we should understand simply that he was a pupil and not a master; that he had nothing to do with originating either the thoughts or the words of the lecture, but rather a disciple whose province it was to understand what he had translated, and so be able to communicate it to others.

"And who can deny that this is the exact picture of what we have in this passage from Peter? Here were inspired writers studying the meaning of what they themselves had written. With all possible allowance for the human peculiarities of the writers, they must have been reporters of what they heard, rather than formulators of that which they had been made to understand."—A. J. Gordon in "The Ministry of the Spirit," pp. 173, 174.

OBITUARY.

Clarinda C. Randolph.

Clarinda C. Randolph was born April 14th 1831 in Mercer Co. Ky., and was married to William H. Fitz Randolph, August 17, 1848, at the home of Clarkson E. Randolph, by pastor Bradford Crawford. She was the mother of 12 children, of which two preceded her to the land of the enemy, and ten are living to mourn her loss. She died December 13th, 1911, at the age of 80 years, 8 months and one day. She was baptized in the name of Jesus Christ by the writer in the year of 1895, and lived a consistent Christian life until her death. Some time before her death, she carefully selected Job. 14:10, and Psa. 6:5 as the texts to be preached from at her funeral. A few days before her death she called for her bible, but was not able to see what she wanted in it; she then pressed it to her bosom, after which she asked to be laid down and died a few day afterwards.

H. M. WILLIAMS.
Ashton, Kansas.

EVANGELIST REPORT FOR NOVEMBER

Sermons

Moorefield, Nov. 4 to 30..... .25
Made 15 visits,

Expense

Omaha to Moorefield $5.40
Breakfast at Holdredge..... .25

Total $5.65
Salary $65.00

Total due $70.15

We left home for Moorefield on Nov. 4, and stayed there till Dec. 4. The interest was good. Some who have never taken much interest in our doctrine are especially interested. One family who had been handed our articles of faith studied them and became convinced we had more grounds for our position than they thought and became very much interested. They belong to another church. If we had handed them the Bible and said, "That is our creed," what would they have gotten out of it? They had to be told and go to the Bible and find it, and that is what convinced them. May the Lord bless them in their efforts to learn the truth. They will no doubt in time take a stand with us.

Our next point was North Star, which we leave for our next report.

ALMUS ADAMS.
Omaha, Neb. Evangelist.

EVANGELIST REPORT FOR DECEMBER, 1911

When I made my last report I was at Reading, Minn., holding meetings in the presbyterian church. There I preached seventeen sermons in all to a large and attentive audience each night. On Sunday, Dec. 10, four willing souls went down into the waters of baptism and rose to walk in newness of life. At the close of the meeting we were helped in a financial way by several outsiders contributing of their own free will. Our next point was at Eagle Grove over Sunday, Dec. 17, where we preached two sermons to the brethren who are trying to keep the cause alive at Eagle Grove. Our audiences were small but appreciative. Holidays coming on, we thought it best to rest a couple of weeks, and went to Gladbrook to spend Christmas and visit among our relatives. On Sunday the 24th, we preached twice for the brethren at Gladbrook. We expected to start south after January 1st, to begin meetings in southern Missouri, but circumstances would not permit of a meeting there now, so may visit there later. News has just come to us of the deaths of Sister Appleyard at the home of her daughter at Waterloo, also of Brother Kilroy, in Florida, where he was spending the winter. One by one we go down the valley. As I see the ranks of those who have battled for the faith in years gone by thinned, the thought comes to me: How long will we be able to stand for a witness as a people for the truth of the gospel if the Lord delays his coming much longer. We will surely be few in number.

Receipts

O. H., Dec. 1st	$39.54
Eva Baker	5.00
Bessie Baker	5.00
C. Shinkel	5.00
Rhoda Waddell	2.50
A. M. Jones	5.00
W. H. Baker	10.00
Inez Titus	10.00
A. L. Harlan	2.00
C. P. Allard, Sr.	5.00
Mark Baker	1.00
Fred Clark	2.00
Total	$92.04

Expenses

Fare, Reading to Ft. Dodge	$ 3.48
Dinner, Worthington	.50
Bus, Worthington	.50
Supper, Cherokee	.25
Fare, Eagle Grove, return	.72
Phone	.20
Coal and wood, Reading	3.90
Oil, Reading	1.10
Janitor, Reading	5.00
Fare to Gladbrook	3.12
Total	$18.07
Days worked	14
Sermons	15
On hand Jan. 1st	$73.07

O. J. ALLARD.
Ft. Dodge, Ia.

SELECTIONS

When winter binds in frosty chains
The fallow and flood,
In God the earth rejoices still
And owns his Maker good.
—Hebor

Covet nothing that is your neighbors, except his kindness of heart and gentleness of manner.
—Dr. Henry Van Dyke

Truth is a strong thing; let man's life be true.
—Robert Browning

Offer unto God thanksgiving; and pay thy vows unto the Most High.—Psa. 50:14.

Be friendly. The all-seeing eye
Beholds and guides the butterfly,
And each wee thing that creeps and runs,
All, all are God's own little ones.
Be friendly. All the world is fair,
And God's great hand is everywhere.
—F. L. Nutt.

Suffering is a wonderful fertilizer to the roots of character.
Austin Phelps.

So use present pleasures that thou spoilest not future ones.
—Seneca.

"Wish you Happy New Year!"
Hear the cheery shout.
Hear it sounded far and near, in the house and out.
"Wish you Happy New Year!"
You, and you, and you!
Now then set to work, my dear, tomake the wish come true.
—Selected.

If you are acquainted with Happiness introduce him to your neighbor.
—Brooks.

If you want to be cheerful, jes' set your mind on it an' do it.
Alice Hegan Rice.

God bless the good natured, for they bless everybody else.
—Beecher.

ELIZA BLYTH.
Cleveland, O.

A SAVIOUR

Luke 2:11

For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour which is Christ the Lord.

His birth was foretold when Isaiah prophesied, saying, "For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given; and the government shall be upon his shoulders, and his name shall be called Wonderful Counsellor, the Mighty God, the Everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace."

Now concering this son born to be a Saviour the apostle John says (John 3:16-17): "God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten son, that whosoever believeth on Him should not perish, but have everlasting life. For God sent not his son into the world to condemn the world, but that the world through Him might be saved." This only begotten son says: "My meat is to do the will of Him that sent me;" "I am the good shepherd. The good shepherd giveth his life for the sheep;" "Therefore doth my Father love me because I lay down my life, that I may take it again, no man taketh it from me, but I lay it down of myself."

The apostle Paul in Acts 13:22 says: "We declare unto you glad tidings how that the promise which was made unto the fathers, God hath fulfilled the same unto their children, in that he hath raised up Jesus again; as it is written in the second Psalm. 'Thou art my son, this day have I begotten thee;' and as concerning that he raised him from the dead, now no more to return to corruption, he said on this wise, I will give you the sure mercies of David." How thankful we should be for this Saviour, alive forever more, and who holds the keys of death and the grave.

Dear brothers and sisters, I am so thankful that a few of us have studied God's word and learned the true gospel; and my prayer is when Jesus comes he will say to each: "Well done thou good and faithful servant, enter into the joy of thy Lord."

MINNIE TOWNSEND.
Salem, O.

Don't Trouble Trouble—
There's a saying old and rusty,
But as good as any new;
'Tis "Never trouble trouble
Till trouble troubles you."

Don't you borrow sorrow;
You'll surely have your share;
He who dreams of sorrow
Will find that sorrow's there.

If care you've got to carry,
Wait till 'tis at the door,
For he who runs to meet it
Takes up the load before.

If minding will not mend it,
Then better not to mind;
The best thing is to end it;
Just leave it all behind.

Then don't you trouble trouble
Till trouble troubles you,
You'll only double trouble
And trouble others, too.
—Selected.

I. CHRON. 16:8-35.

In the 31st verse of this chapter, David is speaking of the time when the Lord is reigning, when the earth is filled with the glory of the Lord: "Let the heavens be glad, and let the earth rejoice, and let men say among the nations, The Lord reigneth." He is to come to judge the earth. Psa. 29:2: "When the righteous are in authority, the people rejoice." There never was a time in the history of the nations when a ruler did that which was right and just throughout his reign as did David. He ruled over all Israel, and executed judgment and justice among all his people. The Lord chose him to be a ruler and said, "I was with thee and have made thee a great name. And David grew great, and the Lord of Hosts was with him. The people rejoice when the righteous are in authority, they cannot rejoice in the rule of the wicked. After David's death Solomon reigned, he ruled with great wisdom for a while, but he forsook God and made the burdens heavy; so when his son came to the throne the people asked that they might be released from paying so much to the kings. But he answered that he would double their burdens, so the people revolted, and the kingdom was divided, and Israel followed after the ways of the heathen kings. Is there a kingdom or nation today that God could say of their rulers as he said of King David: "I have found David, the son of Jessie, a man after mine own heart, which shall fulfill all my will?" When we read the psalms and the history of this king, we know why he fulfilled the will of God, because he asked the blessing of God on all he did, and gave God the glory and praise for the blessings he received. His prayer was: "Search me, O God, and know my heart; try me, and know my thoughts, and see if there be any wicked way in me, and lead me in the way everlasting." If this is our prayer, and the prayer of those in authority, then would the people rejoice. But we know there will be no righteous judge, until he comes whose right it is to reign. Then will he judge the people with righteousness, and the poor with judgment. In his day shall the righteous flourish. May that day soon come is my prayer.

ELLA KNOWLES.
Salem, O.

RECIPE FOR GOLDEN CAKE

One cup of faith, one cup of zeal, three good resolutions beaten in to daily practice, one-half cup of milk of human kindness, two cups of charity, one teaspoonful of forbearance.

Flavor with the essence of humility, season with the spice of wisdom and fruit of good works. Bake through a lifetime in the oven of righteousness, cover with a frosting of purity.—Found in a Christian Woman's Recipe Book.

WHEAT 3,400 YEARS OLD.

Some of the wheat which was stored by Joseph during the seven years' famine in Egypt has been sent to Valentine Hammer. The famine was 1,500 year B. C., or 3,400 years ago. The wheat will not be planted as there is no hope that it will grow.

Azez Khayal, of New York city, who has just returned from a trip through Egypt and Syria, sent the wheat to Senator Hammer. It was found in Dier-Bahri by officers of the museum of Cairo.

A small portion was put on exhibition at the museum, and the rest was sold. Mr. Khayal, who happened to be in Cairo, purchased the wheat.—Cor. New York American.

MAN'S AVERSION TO MENTION DEATH.

"Decease" is now a regular form of word for death. But it began as a gentle euphemism, "deceasus" (departure seeming much less harsh to the Romans than "mors," death). All languages abound in euphemisms of the kind which go back to a superstitious reluctance to mention death plainly, that gradually passed into a kindly desire to soften the idea. "Passed away," "departed," "gone," "expire," (breathe out), "no more," "demise," and even "the late" are expressions of this nature. Most striking of all is the Roman euphemism for "he is dead"—"vixit," he has lived.—The World's Crisis.

"The inner side of every cloud
Is bright and shining.
I therefore turn my clouds about,
And always wear them inside out,
To show the lining."

Only when we walk in the ways of righteousness can we have the help of God.

God is ever ready to go more than half way to meet the repentant soul.

Mixed Theology.

Chrysostom, Archbishop of Constantinople, in a sermon on I Thess. 4:13—"But I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not," has this to say: "If I may speak somewhat paradoxically, even the soul of a sleeping person is in some sort asleep; but not so the soul of a dead man: that is awake."

The noble John Summerfield, who was born in England in 1798, where he is said to have become one of the most popular and eloquent preachers of his day, once said: "Give thanks to God who has taken your friend, that you have the opportunity of honoring the departed one, and of dismissing him with becoming obsequies. If we fully believe in a resurrection we will be persuaded that our deceased friend has departed to a better state . . . A messenger is sent to bring us to God, but it is the king of terrors. Our Jesus has the keys of hell and death."

Dr. Alexander Watson, the famous Scotch preacher and gifted author, whose works have become so popular in America, once wrote "There is no death; the dead are the living which have died. While they were dying they lived and after they are dead, they are more alive than they were before they died."

Mr. Moody, of tender and blessed memory, not long before he died, said: "Some day you will take up the papers and read that D. L. Moody is dead, but don't believe a word of it, for I shall be more alive at that time than I am to-day."

The well-meaning man who preached his funeral sermon, said: "Mr. Moody is in heaven." Before he had finished his sermon he said: "I had rather be D. L. Moody, dead and in his casket (pointing at the dead evangelist), than the greatest man alive in America today."

On a tombstone in the town of Rockford, Minn., I found this inscription:

"Silently they laid her to rest,
Beneath the grass-grown sod,
In heaven, with the agels she is blest,
Like them she dwells with God."

On a little marble slab in one of the oldest churchyards in New England, the following inscription may be found:

"She sleeps beneath her native earth,
And near the spot which gave her birth
While oft we lift the tearful eye
And hear her calling from the sky.

In an old cemetery on Cape Cod, I found the following verse: "This lovely bud, so young and fair,
Called hence by early doom,
Was only sent to show how sweet a flower
In Paradise could bloom."

On a tombstone in British Columbia I read the following: "There is no death: Mrs. Leola Marston died June 16, 1893."

On a marble slab that marks the resting place of a miner, in one of the fertile valleys of Oregon, there is this quaint and unusual inscription:

"He came from New England to search for gold,
And soon had contracted an awful cold.

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

We, whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones.

This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of their paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

Mrs. J. Skinner	.50
C. E. Hatch	8.50

Ladies! Save Money and Keep in Style by Reading McCall's Magazine and Using McCall Patterns

McCall's Magazine will help you dress stylishly at a moderate expense by keeping you posted on the latest fashions in clothes and hats. 50 New Fashion Designs in each issue. Also valuable information on all home and personal matters. Only 50c a year, including a free pattern. Pick out a style today or send for free sample copy.

McCall Patterns will enable you to make in your own home, with your own hands, clothing for yourself and children which will be perfect in style and fit. Price—none higher than 15 cents. Send for free Pattern Catalogue.

We Will Give You Fine Presents for getting subscriptions among your friends. Send for free "premium Catalogue and Cash Prize Offer.

THE McCALL COMPANY, 236 to 246 West 37th St., NEW YORK

The bright angel then brought him joy untold,
And landed him where the streets are gold."

I am told that a man in New Hampshire once gave this testimony: "Since I last met you, my dear brethren, I have had some very narrow escapes. The Lord came very near calling me home to glory, several times, but he has had mercy on me and has spared my life, and so I am still alive to praise his name."

A popular preacher, when asked if he believed the body goes to heaven at death, said: "No, I do not believe that any body goes to heaven at death, and, really I have never been able to understand how that anybody goes to heaven, if no body goes to heaven. But I suppose that my ignorance does not alter the fact. I have always believed, and shall continue to believe, that everybody goes to heaven or hell at death."

And so I suppose "as long as the world goes round" that men will sing:

"A charge to keep I have.
A God to glorify,
A never dying soul to save
And fit it for the sky.
"Help me to watch and pray,
And on thyself rely;
Assured if I my trust betray
I shall forever die."

Kindly words and wise counsel are most likely to awaken courage.

Public services of thanksgiving to God will be held wherever there are loyal hearts.

Scripture Searchers Assistant

A very valuable help to all who are studying the Scriptures—a reprint of one of our beloved Brother Joblin's works. Treats of thirty different subjects with about four hundred references. All should possess a copy for ready reference. Price by mail six cents. Address W. L. Tomlinson, 10825 Orville Ave., N. E., Cleveland, O.

A SONG BOOK.

Songs of the Kingdom.

Recommended by Bro. Huggins and nearly all of our preachers, as by far the best song book for our people. 138 pages, flexible cloth. 25 cents each; postpaid. Address, Chas. E. Crowe, St. Paul, Neb.

Book and Tracts by Bro. W. H. Wilson.

"A Bible Study of Hades, as compared with our modern ideas," is the title of a new tract just issued by Bro. W. H. Wilson. It is a critical study of the subject of Hell. It shows that the meaning attached to this word today is different fro mthe meaning given to it years ago. It also shows how this change was made, and who made it. The price is 15 cents each, or 5 for 50 cents.

Student's Text Book, a cloth bound book 200 pages.

It deals specifically as How to study the Bible and why people fail to rightly understand God's Word. Price 50 cents.

Pine Woods Bible Class, a book of 480 pages bound in cloth. Studies are carried on as between a class and its teacher. Price $1.25.

Cunningly Devised Fables, 28 pages. Price 10 cents.

Where Will You Spend Eternity? Four pages, 25 cents per 100.

Are You in Need of Money? 4 pages 25 cents per 100.

Will it Pay to Become a Christian? is the title to a well written book of 96 pages by Brother Jas. W. Wilson. In a clear and convincing manner it sets forth the Christian faith and answers the question indicated in its title affirmatively. The edition should be taken at once and put out to work. It is neatly bound in cloth. The price is 25 cents, very low, and within reach of all.

W. H. Wilson, at 625 North Willow avenue, Austin Station, Chicago, Illinois.

The Bible: Its Principles and Texts

As indicated by the title this book is divided into three sections. The first consists of a remarkable disquisition on "The Bible" the second simplifies its "principles" in formulated propositions, and the third expounds in a clear, impressive and homelitic manner particular "Texts." The knotty and perplexing texts of the Bible are united and solved satisfactorily to the most fastidious and critical. More than one hundred and fifteen subjects of intense interest to every Bible student are formally discussed. Both simple and scholarly—the child is fascinated and taught; the scholar is entertained and instructed. Bible lovers, here is a feast for you. Throw open the door of your home; let The Bible—Its Principles and Its Texts come in and bless you and your family. 309 pages, 5x7 1-2 inches, durably and handsomely bound in whole cloth, with title embossed on back in gold. One copy, $1.10, two copies or more $1.00 each. The Restitution Pub. Co.

Four Page Tracts

Can You Believe? A series of questions setting forth the fundamental points of our faith.

State of Man In Death. A collection of proof texts on this subject.

Life and Death. A short concise statement of the facts in the case.

Age to Come Not a Heresy, by H. V. Reed.

10 for 10 cents, 50 for 25 cents 100 for 40 cents.

The Paternity of Jesus. A pamphlet of 122 pages, by M. Joblin, giving in detail all that can be said on this subject, and completely proving that He is the Son of God, and not the natural son of Joseph. This work ought to be sold at 25 cents a copy, but the author was so anxious that price, should not stand in the way of its being read, that he put the price at ten cents, so all can buy them Send to this office for them.

Address The Restitution Pub. Co.

50 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents.

Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the

Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York

Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

Popular Lectures By Bro. M. Joblin

Send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled: "The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to Be Saved?" The Foolishness of Preaching and Salvation—what is it?

Each lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price.

TWO TRACTS By J. L. WINCE

"Salvation" and "Resurrection" two tracts by J. L. Wince, can not fail to arouse the interest of every believer. They deal with vital questions in a most convincing manner. The price is 10c each, 12 for $1.00. For sale by S. Roxanna Wince, Pierceton, Ind.

SUBSCRIBE FOR

Words of Life

the publication of the Conditional Immortality Mission of Great Britain, advocating Life and Advent truths.

Terms: 1 copy 37c per annum, 12 copies to one address 25c per copy per annum.

Sample copy on application to

WILLIAM G. ROTHE

1301 Park Pl. Brooklyn, N. Y.

BOOKS AND TRACTS

Bible Pearls—Two-page tracts, suitable for wide distribution. 1. The Gospel. 2. Coming and Kingdom of Christ, by 20,000 Baptists in 1660. 3. Immateriality. 4. Kingdom of God. 5. Nature of Man and Thoughts for Thinkers. 6. Two Advents. 7. What is Religion? 8. Restitution Age. 9. Destiny of the Wicked. 10. Baptism. 10 copies for 5 cents, or assorted packages of 100 for 20 cents.

Census Blank

MEMBERSHIP CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA

Name .....

Address .....
Street Town State

By whom Immersed ..... Date .....

Fill out the above and send to "The Census Editor," The Restitution, 803 Parkwood Drive, Cleveland, O.

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co.

WHOLESALE OPTICIANS

We make a specialty of High Grade Prescription Work, and carry a full line of all kinds of Optical goods. All orders filled same day as received.

"S. K. N." SERVICE

Means prompt returns, careful work, moderate prices. Goods shipped to all parts of the country.

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co. 338 SCHOFIELD BUILDING CLEVELAND, OHIO

SPECIAL OFFER!

IN ORDER to increase the circulation of The Restitution, the following special offer is made:

One new subscriber for 1 year, choice of:

W. H. Wilson's "Student's Text Book," regular price..... 50c
Or 5 Copies of "Cunningly Devised Fables," reg. price 50c
Or 5 Copies of "Bible Study of Hades," reg. price 50c

For Two New Subscribers

One Copy "Pine Woods Bible Class," 480 pages, rg. price, $1.25
Or "The Bible, Its Principles and Texts," 309 pages, reg., $1.25
Or One Hundred of Bro. Joblin's Tracts, regular price $1.00

Here is a chance to get some of the books you all should own. By making special arrangements with the authors we are able to offer them to you without the payment of a cent on your part, just a few minutes effort. We cannot afford to continue this offer long, so take advantage of it at once, get some new subscribers today.

THE RESTITUTION, 803 Parkwood Drive

YOU will get genuine pleasure from an hour or two spent with the "Mitroscope" these long winter evenings. Pictures, Photos, Post Cards, Etc. are shown in exact reproduction same as with a high priced Stereopticon, can be used in any home and operated with Electricity, Gas or Acetylene. Prices $2.50, $5.00, $7.50, $10.00, $15.00, $20.00, according to size. Sent anywhere in the U. S. Send for one today.

HOME ILLUMINATED PICTURE CO.

311 SCHOFIELD BUILDING CLEVELAND, OHIO

Less than Half a Cent a Day

The Restitution costs a Dollar and a Half a year, that's less thanhalf A Cent a day or three cents a copy. You can't afford to be without it. If you are a subscriber get some one else to subscribe.

Help to Get Them on the List

Sample Copies of The Restitution

May be obtained for a stamp. Send for one.

"A LETTER TO A FRIEND"

This tract needs no introduction further than to say that it is one of the most convincing Gospel sermons ever written. Originally written as a letter to a friend by Sister C. C. Woodruff it was published and has sold extensively in tract form. In its present edition it is a 32 page tract, the price is

10c each; 12 for $1.00

There is no better way of spreading the Gospel than handing out one of these tracts wherever you have the opportunity.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

"Future Probation,

is that Awaiting any of the Unrighteous?"

Here is a work by Wm. Glenn Moncrieff that every one should read. It is one of the best things on the subject ever written and will appeal to every student of the word. It is a book of 150 pages, made to sell at 25c. We have a limited number left which we will sell at the special price of

10c each; 12 for $1.00

Send for some at once.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

Oregon State College
Corvallis, Oregon

The Restitution
IS THE OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA.

The Restitution.

Founded in A.D. 1852

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Lk. 19:12-15), who will be King of Kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints co-rulers with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:24, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-53); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17), and belief in, the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Lk. 13:3), and obedience by baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ." (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31).

ROBT. G. HUGGINS, Editor.

—Terms of— Subscription
ONE YEAR, $1.50;
SIX MONTHS 75 CTS. IN ADVANCE

VOL. 60 CLEVELAND, OHIO, JANUARY 16, 1912. No. 52

SING ME A SONG.

A song, a song today!
The grass is dead and the skies are gray.
And the wind is crying:
There is no one near to give me cheer;
I am all alone with the cold, cold year,
And it makes me think of dying.

A song, a song today!
A song that shall live in my heart alway;
A song of the budded flowers,
That under the brown leaves sleep and sleep,
And wait for the first spring birds to cheep,
And April's sun and flowers.

MRS. M. P. A. CROZIER.
Grand Rapids, Mich.

RELIGIOUS CHANGES.

In Belief and Practice Between the Resurrection of Christ and the Death of Constantine in 337

X.—How Purgatory Began

The assumption that the soul is an independent entity and can exist apart from the body is not found in any of the very early Christian writers. Just in proportion as heathen ideas were admitted into the church, so the speculations concerning the soul—its powers, attributes, pre-existence, transmigration, and its condition after death—became more and more a matter of discussion among them. At the end of the second century, however, there were those who considered the soul as mortal, as is shown in the following quotation from a fragment of the writings of Clement of Alexandria preserved by Aurelius Cassiodorus, a writer of the sixth century:—"The soul, then, which is produced along with the body, is corruptible, as some think." Tatian a disciple of Justin, says: "But, further, it becomes us now to seek for what we once had, but have lost, to unite the soul with the Holy Spirit, and to strive after union with God. The human soul consists of many parts, and is not simple; it is composite, so as to manifest itself through the body; for neither could it ever appear by itself without the body, nor does the flesh rise again without the soul."

Theophilus of Antioch of whom we know very little, but some of whose writings have been preserved, says: "For God will raise thy flesh immortal with thy soul; and then, having become immortal, thou shalt see the Immortal, if now you believe on Him; and then you shall know that you have spoken unjustly against Him." Theophilus is like a good many people in modern times who speak of man's soul being immortal, and this part of him being the real man: then in the next breath speak of him becoming immortal at the resurrection. If he is immortal all along, how can he become immortal at the resurrection or at any other time? The body, according to such theories, is only an outside covering, and can be dispensed with, and still the man live on and enjoy or suffer. Theophilus further remarks: "Plato, who spoke so much of the unity of God and of the soul of man, asserting that thy soul is immortal, is not he himself afterwards found inconsistent with himself to maintain that some souls pass into other men, and that others take their departure into irrational animals? How can this doctrine fail to seem dreadful and monstrous—to those at least who have judgment—that he who was once a man shall afterwards be a wolf, or a dog, or an ass, or some other irrational brute?" Athenagoras, the Athenian philosopher and Christian, says: "When a soul of itself, as being immortal, moves comfortably to reason, either predicting the future or healing the present, the demons claim the glory for themselves."

Near the end of the second century, Clement of Alexandria became the successor of Pantaenus in the catechetical school at Alexandria. There he had as pupil, Origen, who succeeded him as head of this school. Of Pantaenus we know very little, as none of his writings are extant: he went on a missionary tour to the East, and probably never returned. He commenced the allegorical system of interpreting the Scriptures: this was adopted and improved upon by Clement, and was further developed by Origen in the third century, and was so ably carried out that if Moses and the prophets had been alive to see their writings, after they had passed through the hands of these distinguished scholars, they would not have been able to recognize them.

Clement says: "If, then, the Lord descended to hades for no other end but to preach the gospel; as He did descend, it was either to preach the gospel to all, or to the Hebrews only. If, accordingly, to all, then all who believe shall be saved, although they may be of the Gentiles, on making their profession there, since God's punishments are saving and disciplinary, leading to conversion and choosing rather the repentance than the death of a sinner; and especially since souls, although darkened by passions, when released from their bodies are able to perceive more clearly because of their being no longer obstructed by the paltry "flesh." According to Clement it is very much better for souls to get rid of their "paltry flesh," that they may be preached to; their chance then of accepting salvation there would seem to be immeasurably improved; and it would seem a great mistake to clothe them again at any time with this "paltry flesh," when they are able to see more clearly without it. Clement further says in the Stromata: "Did not the same dispensation obtain in hades so that even there all the souls, on hearing the proclamation might either exhibit repentance, or confess that their punishment was just, because they believed not? And it were the exercise of no ordinary arbitrariness for those who had departed before the advent of the Lord (not having the gospel preached to them, and having afforded no ground for themselves in consequence of believing or not) to obtain either salvation or punishment. For it is not right that these should be condemned without trial, and that those alone who lived after the advent should have the advantage of the Divine righteousness. But to all rational it was said from above, 'Whatever one of you has done in ignorance, without clearly knowing God; if, on becoming conscious, he repent, all his sins will be forgiven him.' For, behold, it is said, 'I have set before your face death and life, that ye may choose life.' And in another scripture He says, 'If ye hear Me and be willing, ye shall eat the good of the land.' But if ye hear Me not, and are not willing, the sword shall devour you; for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken these things.'" How could the sword devour souls such as Clement describes, which could "perceive more clearly" after they had got rid of the paltry flesh, which alone could be devoured by the sword from Clement's standpoint?

Clement also remarks: "If, then, Christ preached the gospel to those in the flesh that they might not be condemned unjustly, how is it conceivable that He did not for the same cause preach the gospel to those who had departed before His advent?" For the very good reason that the Scriptures teach that "Man that is in honor and understandeth not, is like the beasts that perish" (Ps. xlix. 20); "Thou hidest thy face, they are troubled: Thou takest away their breath, they die, and return to their dust" (Ps. civ. 29); "For the living know that they shall die: but the dead know not anything" (Ecc. ix. 5). Clement says, speaking of the supposed souls alive in hades, "For it is but right that these should be condemned without trial," giving this as a reason why they should be preached to there. Clement: innumerable other orthodox believers in immortal souls consent souls to hell for thousands of years, and still believe that these souls who are suffering there will be yet brought out for judgment. Such are some of the monstrous doctrines imported into the "orthodoxy" church by the adoption of heathen philosophy. But this theory of Clement's about souls being preached to in hades we have also the beginning of the Catholic purgatory.

A. WALLACE MASON.
Cleveland, O.

THE SYMBOLS OF REV. CH. 12.

In the preceding chapter we are carried forward to the time when the dead are judged; and rewards are given to the saints. It is therefore evident that the writer has here gone back to the events of the first centuries of our era. A great wonder in the heaven". In heaven of the Roman empire. We use the article "the" because it is in the Greek, "a woman clothed with the sun"—the light of the gospel. "And the moon under her feet"—the shadows of the former dispensation that borrowed its light from the gospel—as the moon shines with its light borrowed from the sun. "And upon her head a crown of twelve stars"—the bright and shining lights of the gospel dispensation.

"And she being with child cried, travailing in birth, and pained to be delivered." The woman is a symbol of the Christian church; the language is figurative and borrowed from Isaiah 26:17-18, and from Gal. 4:19. "My little children, of whom I travail in birth again until Christ be formed in you." When Paul established the churches in Galatia, he labored, figuratively travailed in birth, to bring forth Christ in the Christians of Galatia; but now he stands in doubt of them, and has to labor and travail again to correct some false teaching.

This woman being a symbol, it is proper that the language be figurative. The great red dragon, with seven heads and ten horns, we recognize as pagan Rome. In the third century the dragon was in common use as a symbol of Rome (Elliott ii. 14).

"And she brought forth a man child, who was to rule all nations with a rod of iron; and her child was caught up to God and to his throne." This being a symbolic woman, her child must be a symbolic child; because the rule is "everything after its kind." If this child is not our Lord because he ascended some 300 years before the time of this scene. His mother Mary was a literal woman and he a literal child. This child is not Constantine, because he was not born to rule all nations—only Rome.

Who then is this mysterious man-child? Read Rev. ch. 2:27: "And he shall rule them with a rod of iron; as the vessels of a potter shall they be broken to shivers; as I received of my father." It is the overcomers of Thyatira and of other churches.

In the symbol there is condensation but in the thing symbolized expansion. In the man child are condensed all the overcomers. This war in the Roman empire was waged in the fourth century. Constantine is in all probability the symbolic Michal, and Maximin the dragon, who strove to destroy the "man-child." the woman's converts to Christianity. Constantine by giving liberty of conscience in religion helped the persecuted woman; and another party symbolized by "the earth" helped the woman; see verse 16: "And the earth helped the woman: and the earth opened her mouth, and swallowed up the flood which the dragon cast out of his mouth."

Let the reader pause here, and ask himself this question: Do [illegible] understand what the "earth" [illegible] and on the same [illegible] Nathanael was the Bartholo- [illegible] disciples [illegible] God [illegible] Rabbi, thou art the son of God." Philip had introduced Jesus as the son of Joseph, but in his confession of faith Nathanael rose infinitely above his teacher, and declared Jesus to be, what to every Christian he is, the son of God in the absolutely literal sense. Jesus was so well pleased with this pupil that he put him forward into prophecy at once.

Do you remember Father Jacob's dream in Bethel, of the ladder and the angels? Let all the Nathanaels listen: "Hereafter ye shall see heaven opened, and the angels of God descending upon the son of man." We may observe as our lesson from these occurrences:—

1. That these plain men were First Adventists, looking for and expecting the Messiah's immediate appearing, and were prepared consequently to "come and see."

2. Their confession of him as the Messiah was based upon the prophetic portraiture of the Messiah. In this was the contrast of these plain men and particularly of this Israelite indeed, from the recognized authority of religious teachers of their day.

One of the saddest verses in the Bible is that of Acts 13:27: "They that dwell at Jerusalem, and their rulers because they knew him not, nor yet the voice of the prophets which are read every Sabbath day, they have fulfilled them in condemning him." What would have saved them? Answer: A recognition of the voice of the prophets. What prophecies? Answer: First Advent, or the Messianic prophecies. Read 2 Peter 1:19: "We (Christians) have a more sure word of prophecy; whereunto ye do well that ye (Christians) take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, until the day dawn, and the day star arise; in your hearts knowing this first, that no prophecy of the Scripture is of any private (one's own) interpretation. For the prophecy came not in old time by the will of man; but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Spirit."

It is a sad comment on the scholarship of that age, that neither scribe, priest, nor rabbi was to be found in the calling of the original twelve. Christians, please notice this fact, and especially to Jesus Christ the great prophet of the Christian dispensation, and remember that God respects his own Word whether the people do or not, and that history in some sense may repeat itself.

3. Our closing and a very important observation, is that relating to direct, personal work. There should be Andrews to find the Simons, and Philips to go after Nathanaels. The co-operative, and well-directed energies of a church, should by personal effort keep up a converting interest the whole year round, and thereby keep the evangelists in the new fields, and among the weak and broken down churches. There should be enough of attractive influence to call on the needy to "come and see," and interest enough to get them there, and to make them see Jesus the Son of God, the Saviour of men, of whom Moses and the prophets wrote.

The church needs no more organized machinery; there is more now then there is power to run, but it would do all churches good to resolve themselves into an Andrew and Philip society and go after someone, and hold on to them until they come and confess that they have found him of whom Moses and the prophets did write.—C. H. Wallace.

[illegible] MIGHTY FAITH

[illegible] beloved brethren [illegible] ye [illegible] unknown [illegible] reading, is the [illegible] Jesus [illegible] foreseen [illegible] Jesus [illegible] (1 Cor. [illegible] with [illegible] expose [illegible] flashing lights [illegible] with their reckless performances. Some are apparently never happy unless their hair is on end and their nerves at the utmost tension doing stunts, or witnessing them. There are some good people who are about as flighty in their faith. They are up today, and down tomorrow—oftener down. If the Lord should happen to come when they are soaring aloft, He must needs say, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant."

It is to be hoped that He will catch a lot in that attitude. But what will He say if He finds them in the dumps? There are those who have allowed themselves to become victims of effervescence to such [illegible] can [illegible] there seems [illegible] It has got to [illegible] victims to [illegible] imagine a lot of [illegible] think of but few that are [illegible] thinking about. In fact, it is [illegible] pressing to them to [illegible] think deeply—to study the [illegible] things of divine truth; what they [illegible] a feather. If they feel well all is well, but if they do not—and they could not tell why to save them—then there is hardly anything worth living for. They are "impressionists," they act on impulse or impression, and when their nerves are working well they do some really wonderful, if not even commendable things. The thing is to catch them on the impulse—when the current is on—which is probably seldom. If the spell is on and lasts long enough no doubt there will be considerable done and well done. But there will be more and longer times when they are idle and likely getting rusty than there are when wearing themselves out with overwork.

Now the Lord never has praised that kind of work and workers in His vineyard, but He cautioned them again and again to endure unto the end, for such only are to be saved. The Bible has never encouraged flash-in-the-pan experiences. It says little or nothing about soaring aloft until the Lord comes, and then true believers are "caught up," body, soul and spirit. Until then it is best to stay on the ground with both feet, and be constantly engaged in some good word and work. There is plenty to do at all times, whether you feel like it or not. Get busy and let feelings take care of themselves, poor things. In nine cases out of ten, a person's feelings will fall into line when he warms himself up well with hard work. The Bible says little to stimulate fancy or to plume imagination, or to set one to soaring or sky-craping, but it speaks in no unmistakable terms about being steadfast, unmoveable, always abounding in the work of the Lord; to be established in the present truth and to be rooted and grounded in love. It incites to faith by admonishing us to give our attention to reading and to study to show ourselves approved of God, workmen that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of truth. Such will be ready always to give every man that asketh them a reason of the hope that is in them with meekness and fear. They can say, "It is written," when tempted to do wrong, instead of falling back on their impressions or imaginations which the devil loves to manipulate to their destruction and the injury of the cause. —C. E. COPP.

Oregon State College
Corvallis, Oregon

The Restitution

Issued weekly by

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING COMPANY.

Entered as second-class matter under act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

TERMS.

One year $1.50; six months 75 cents, in advance.

ROBT. G. HUGGINS.....Editor
BUELL W. NUTT.....Manager

BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Burton H. Lang, Harry Pott,
Chas. A. Goss, Robt. H. Pate,
Buell W. Nutt, D. C. Robison,
W. S. Tomlinson.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

All remittances should be sent by bank draft, post office money order or express money order to The Restitution Publishing Co., 803 Parkwood drive, Cleveland, Ohio.

All communication intended for publication should be sent to the editor, Robt. G. Huggins, 10823 Lee avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

It is necessary to adhere strictly to the rule of not returning unused manuscripts. Writers will please keep copies, or risk the loss.

While the editor exercises a general supervision over the articles appearing in The Restitution, his endorsement does not extend to the interpretation of details nor the exegesis of particular texts in the writings of contributors.

Cleveland, Ohio....Jan. 10, 1912

EDITORIAL

Bro. Almus Adams, writing from Kansas City, Kan., January 12, says: "I [illegible] say to the brethren that [illegible] may address me at Enid, Okla., till February 1. I will go to [illegible] Gibson first, then to Enid."

Sister Jessie Herrold writes:—"I like The Restitution; it comes to me full of good news. After reading my papers I mail most of them to some one else. Wishing the editor and all the readers a Happy New Year."

The reader will be entertained and instructed by reading Bro. Francis' article in this number on the man child of Rev., 12th chapter. We commend our brother [illegible] will favor us during the year with other contributions from his able pen.

Bro. L. C. Cattell, of 90 Royal Parade, Eastbourne, Sussex, England, writes a kindly and brotherly letter, and encloses a money order for himself and Bro. Mercer, of London, to pay for The Restitution. Our subscribers are increasing some in foreign countries; and we may say here that Bro. Cattell will be glad to forward to us remittances for the paper for all readers who desire to subscribe in England.

Sister A. J. Martin writes:—"I am writing to let you know that I have not forgotten the good old gospel of the kingdom of God, and that The Restitution is a weekly visitor to my home and is truly appreciated. I dearly love the paper for its many Bible truths. Wish I were able to express in words my appreciation of the many good articles that appear from time to time in its pages. Hope you will be spared till the Lord comes to carry on the good and grand work."

Sister Merwin writes that she feels as if she had "drifted far away from her Michigan home" in the far-away state of Washington, "yet," says she, "not so far but that the good old Restitution comes every week, full of cheer and hope." Praise God, his scattered family has a medium of communication and can hold communion with each other in their peeled condition. We will praise him more and better, no doubt, when the "whole family" has been "gathered together in Christ." What a "family re-union" that will be!

Brother, or at least friend J. O. Welty writes:—"I am glad some one sought me out and is persistently sending sample copies of The Restitution to me. You appear to be letting God speak through you, and I must "sure" get acquainted with you. Enclosed find $1.20 for tracts. I know nothing of your tracts, but then some one's persistence with their own money for rather God's), I will enclose 50 cents for one-third of a year's subscription to The Restitution." Despondent brother, you that think it "does no good" to "persistently" scatter the seeds of truth, read this letter again, and see if you cannot work yourself up to "persistently" use a little of "God's money" in a cause so laudable.

Sometime since we told our readers how for several months we had been trying to get acquainted with the Adventists in Northern Ohio. We have written letters, made appeals, exhorted to love and good works different members of that body, but all our efforts thus far have only met with studied indifference. Indirectly we heard from one; he was "afraid of our doctrines;" and another made a slighting remark about the "restoration of Israel." Now, brethren, you are passing judgment on doctrines you think we teach; you are condemning a theory of Israel's restoration that you imagine we hold. Better go slow. Better accept our offer which we have made to you privately, and which we now make to you publicly: I will meet you anywhere with any man or body of men who you may elect as representatives of your church, and tell them frankly our position on these questions. Or, we will commit ourselves in print on these matters of controversy between us, and after our explanation of the matters involved in the pages of your papers, we will leave it to your judgment thus enlightened if we should continue disrupted and isolated, divided and disgraced, as now. If this matter is not attended to now: if you hear no more of it, reader, you will know upon whose shoulders to place the blame.

A MIXED RULE OF INTERPRETATION: HOW IT WORKS

A sermon was preached some years ago in London. In the congregation were two Jews. After the sermon a discussion arose in the vestry on the subject of a Psalm which contained a prophecy respecting the restoration of the Jewish nation. The clergyman denied the interpretation of the national restoration. One of the Jews, who spoke for both, interposed, and said: "Then, how can you wonder that we deny what you call the incarnation?" The Jew then asked for a Bible, and opened at that passage which contains the address of the angel to Mary: "And behold, thou shalt conceive in thy womb and bring forth a Son and thou shalt call His name Jesus. He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest: and the Lord God shall give unto Him the throne of His father David."

He then invited the clergyman to go with him through the passage. The clergy went through the first three or four clauses, and the Jew allowed the literal interpretation to pass. But when he came to this part, "And the Lord shall give unto Him the throne of His father David, and He shall reign," etc., "that is," said the clergyman, "He shall reign in the hearts of His people." "Is that so," said the Jew, "and not at Jerusalem, where David reigned? Then I deny that Mary had a son, it signifies only that the Messiah was pure from His birth; that is the meaning of the Virgin having a son. I take your mode of interpreting this verse, and carry it back to the former verse, and deny the incarnation." "But," said the clergyman, "we believe in the literal interpretation of this, because the event has shown it to be literal." "Then," said the Jew, with an indescribable mixture of scorn and contempt, "Ha! you believe because it is done; we believe because God spoke."

Reader, let us take God at His word.

THE SUPREME IMPORTANCE OF PASTORAL WORK. No. 1

Good Business Policy

During the holidays we were privileged to visit a church which, for age and membership, cannot be excelled in the state. Like Sardis, they have a name that they live and yet are dead, save a "few names" among them (Rev. 3:1, 4). The condition is too sad to dwell upon. The only motive we have in alluding to the condition is to enquire into the cause that has produced so bad an effect. Frankly and scripturally, what is it?

Briefly it is a misconception of our primary duty in relation to the brotherhood of God. From infancy it has been instilled into us that the conversion of sinners is our elementary mission in the world; the shepherdizing of God's own elect, only incidental. Precisely the reverse of this order is the truth: Giving the flock of God shepherd care is our primary work; the conversion of sinners is merely incidental. This is the divine order and constitutes the basis of Worldly enterprises, business undertakings, succeed or fail, grow or diminish, flourish or die, according to the rigidity or looseness with which they adhere to what is called "good business policy." What is that? Permit me to illustrate it. Two business concerns open their doors for business—for "trade." Anyone can see to begin with that success depends upon the amount of business they do. How to get the business and the large volume of it, is the paramount query. To get this they adopt a different business policy: one firm runs mad after "new business," new patronage, new trade, it makes all kinds of offers and inducements to "evangelize" those without; to this end it bends all its energies, time, money and strength; but towards its customers themselves it is wholly indifferent. Instinctively the customers feel that because they are customers they should have first consideration, that if any special privileges are granted, any special offers made, they should be the beneficiaries. Filled with umbrage because treated with less respect and consideration than outsiders, they leave the firm that has so abused them to the tender mercies of the outside "evangelized," and specialized. The firm, still pursuing this business policy, continues to be everlastingly "getting" new customers and keeping none. Spending all its efforts upon "getting" customers, and none upon the "get," the firm loses its supporters, sacrifices them for mere driftwood. This kind of business policy, thousands have learned to their sorrow, spell bankruptcy every time.

1. Good business policy in the commercial world. "The children of this world" are often, at least in business matters, "wiser than the children of light" (Luke 16:8). "The Lord commended the unjust steward" (vs. 8), but why? Because he acted wisely. His wisdom did not consist in augmenting his lord's debtors—he made no effort to evangelize others—but from first to last he sought his lord's debtors and made concessions to them. He made discounts to "everyone of his lord's debtors" (vs 5). All the benefits he proposed, all the inducements he offered, all the blessings in his hand ready to bestow were for his lord's debtors. It does not appear that he once thought of others. Now, dear brethren and sister, there is a bit of worldly wisdom in commercial life which will well pay us if we meditate upon and adopt it in our religious life.

On the other hand, here is another firm whose business policy is just the reverse. It is much concerned, too, in increasing its volume of business, of evangelizing" those outside the influence of the firm. With business discretion they say they must evangelize, but through their customers. It makes all kinds of inducements to its customers, they are considered first and last: toward them the firm bends all its energies, time, money and strength; it will make any kind of a sacrifice to have a "satisfied customer." What is the result of this business policy? A host of satisfied customers! This kind of treatment keeps all the customers the firm has got and when another is "gotten" he remains "got!" The firm, by simply considering its patrons above orders, its supporters above everybody else, builds up a big business. This kind of business they, thousands have learned to be joy of their pocketbooks, spells success every time. The application of this principle to the work of the truth is too obvious to need pointing out.

THE DYING THIEF

In this story as recorded in Luke xxiii. 39-43 we find a question and an answer. The crucified robber was suddenly convinced that Jesus who was hanging by his side was less a person than the long expected Messiah. Being sure that the Messiah was to reign at Jerusalem, and therefore in some way or other would be delivered out of his present evil plight and ascend David's throne, he made his humble petition, "Jesus, do not forget me when you have come to your kingdom." And Jesus replied, "I tell you this very day in solemn truth you shall be with me in paradise." When Jesus shall come into his kingdom the earth shall be turned into a paradise, a beautiful garden—Is. li. 3; lviii. 11; Ez. xxxvi. 5; Rev. ii. 7). And the penitent thief, raised from his dishonored grave, shall have an honored place in the paradisecial kingdom.

But, says an objector, the authorized text says, "Verily I say unto thee today shalt thou be with me in paradise.' To this we reply, that when Luke wrote his gospel he did not punctuate his sentences with what we call "commas"; this mode of punctuation was not invented till hundreds of years later. So we have a perfect right to place the comma after, instead of before "today" and thus our Lord said, "Verily I say unto thee today, thou shalt be with me in paradise." The different editions of our Bible vary in punctuation. For instance, see Heb. x. 12, where some have the comma at the word "ever," others at "sins." Thus our reading is, "offered one sacrifice for sins for ever," while the other says, "for ever sat down on the right hand of God." The altered position of a little comma [illegible] this weighty change of meaning). Our Lord on the cross used a customary form of speech. Again and again in Deuteronomy the prophet Moses used the same phrase, "I testify unto you this day" (Deut. xxxii. 46). Paul, addressing the Ephesians, said, "I testify unto you this day." (Acts xx. 26). And when on his defence, he exclaimed, "I would to God that all who hear me this day, might be such as I am" (Acts xxvi. 29). In harmony with this Hebrew phraseology, Jesus said to the thief, "Verily I say unto thee today (or, this day), thou shalt be with me in paradise." If the robber spake of a future earthly kingdom, and Jesus spake of a present hades or intermediate state, called paradise, into which as disembodied souls they were about to enter, then the colloquy may be likened to a game of cross questions and crooked answers. But not so. A plain petition received its plain and appropriate answer. And Jesus at his return will remember that penitent thief, who, as a resurrected saint, shall have a place in the Messiah's kingdom.

ABSENT FROM THE BODY

"We are willing rather to be absent from the body and to be at home with the Lord." (2 Cor. v. 8). But this sentence by itself cannot be understood. We need to read from chap. iv. 16 to v. 10, in order to grip its meaning, and then we shall at once see that Paul is speaking of three conditions: (1) The present life—"in this tabernacle." (2) The state of death—"dissolved, naked, unclothed." (3) Condition of resurrection—"clothed upon with our habitation, which is from heaven: that what is mortal may be swallowed up of life." The temporal state is here contrasted with the eternal state, the house made of earth with the building whose origin is from heaven. Paul desired that he, a mortal body, might be changed, and so become an immortal body, as a worm becomes a butterfly. But when would this be? At the moment of death? Not so, but at the time of the second advent, when the dead shall rise and the living be changed. Then shall we realize what it is to be unfettered by mortality, to be absent from a corrupt bodily frame, to be "a new creature." This body of sin and of death cannot be "at home with the Lord" until in the change necessitated by resurrection and ascension we are "absent from this body," for flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God. When shall this be? When Christ, who is our life, shall be manifested" (Col. iii. 4). For this reason "we wait for a saviour who shall fashion anew the body of our humiliation" (Phil. iii. 21). Paul had no idea of this great change taking place at death. In death he would not be absent from the body. He, a dead body, would lie in the grave. In 2 Cor. i. 8-10 he rejoices that God delivered him from death, and of Epaphroditus he writes, "He was sick nigh unto death, but God had mercy upon him" (Phil. ii. 27). Where was the mercy if by being cured Epaphroditus lost the near opportunity of being "absent from the body" and becoming "clothed upon with immortality?" "Not that we would be unclothed and found naked," says the apostle. He did not wish to be bereft of life, and lie a naked corpse in the earth. And when he speaks of "this earthly house being dissolved," the dissolution means the whole time he is in the grave. Paul did not earnestly long for and anticipate with great delight the dissolution of death, but he did desire the time when that which is mortal might be swallowed up of life. And he tells us in verse 10 that it is at the time of the establishment of the judgment seat of Christ (which is at the second advent) that the momentous change from mortal to immortal shall come. Paul desired to be absent from this present vile body of corruption; he desired to be transformed into the image of his Lord: to be, like Christ, a sinless and immortal being. Not in the distressing hour of death, but on the joyful morn of resurrection, will Paul's desire receive its fullest realization and gratification. Then shall Paul "be at home with the Lord."

TO DEPART AND BE WITH CHRIST

Paul was "in a strait between two things" (Phil. i. 20-26). He was sorely perplexed, was in a great dilemma as to what was best i.e., to live or to die. The apostle's life was a dog's life—hated by his own countrymen and hunted by the gentiles (see 1 Cor. xi. 23-29). Life—as he lived it—was hardly worth living, except that as a living preacher he was the trusted servant of the Lord Jesus Christ. Death would bring him the ending of shame and toil and pain, and as a martyr, Christ should be magnified (honored, glorified)—thus, death would be "gain" to the aged, deserted (ii. 20, 21), wearied prisoner in his dungeon at Rome. Which was best? Our orthodox friends know. They say, "to die and depart." Dan Paul says he did not know. He was tired of life, yet had no desire to sink into the sleep and unconsciousness of death. But there was a third possibility, and Paul hailed it with delight. Said he, "I have the desire to depart—without dying—and be with Christ, for this is very far better than living a woe-stricken life, or dying a violent death." The apostle refers to this third possibility in 1 Thess. iv. 17, "Then we that are alive shall be caught up in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air; and SO (not in death, but by translation) shall we ever be with the Lord." Paul earnestly hoped that Christ would return during his lifetime, and that "in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye" (1 Cor. xv. 52), he might be changed to the immortal nature and sit with Christ in the heavenly places. This was Paul's choice. Let it be yours and mine.

COMMUNICATIONS

To the Readers of The Restitution:

Bro. Huggins, being called to attend the funeral of Sister Rachel Pearson, was here just in time to attend our Bible study on Wednesday evening and a very pleasant and profitable evening was spent.

At the close of that meeting a series of meetings were asked for, and with the consent of Bro. Huggins, meetings began the following evening and continued till the following Wednesday evening. The people of the community were notified by telephone. The weather was ideal, excepting Saturday evening, the services well attended, considering the short notice, and audiences were very attentive.

Bro. Huggins delivered six sermons especially for the brethren and stirred up our pure minds to more zealous work for the Master. We are always glad and anxious for a visit from Bro. Huggins, and may he soon come again to expound the truth once delivered to the saints, is our prayer.

ETHEL LEHMAN, Secy.
[illegible] y, Ohio.

PAUL THE PESSIMIST.

To be a pessimist in this age concerning the things of the world is equivalent to being looked upon as was one of God's servants in olden time, of whom it was said: "I hate him; for he doth not prophecy good concerning me, but evil" (Kings xxii. 8), and of whom the apostate king spake when he commanded: "Put this fellow in the prison, and feed him with bread of affliction" (Kings xxii. 27).

Pauline doctrine in respect of the last days is intensely pessimistic. He has no word of praise for the gigantic achievements of modern intellect, no intimation of his having the slightest hope because of the attainments in mechanical art of the present age. His teaching concerning man in his relation to things mental, political, moral, or ecclesiastical, may be summed up in his words to Timothy: "This know, that in the last days perilous times shall come."

How completely Paul was outside the currents of modern life and thought may be gathered from a comparison of his words, just quoted, with the words of those representative of present-day affairs. The leaders in twentieth century philosophy and twentieth century theology unite in pronouncing the present era to be a glorious age. Thus their judgment is a decided negative to the declaration of the apostle. Who, then, is right.

The answer is to be found in the records of human history. But to which page of the register shall we turn? Let us find in Scripture an indication of the method which will lead us most quickly to the result desired. "Can the fig tree, my brethren, bear olive berries? either the vine figs?" (James iii. 12). The thought of James is this: "As the root, so shall the fruit be." With this in mind, we proceed at once to the root of human history, and turn to the beginning of things to learn the moral value of these same things in their end. If the fountain be bitter, its waters cannot, of necessity, be sweet. If the seed sown be thistle, of it we cannot gather the fragrant blossoms of the rose.

We would here ask the reader to carefully peruse the record of man's doings found in Genesis iv. The record is not embellished in any way, the words chosen are few and simple; the writer's feelings are not once seen; hence the account given is ideally historic. Now, what we learn from the history is this: That the present achievements of man, the modern attainments of his science, the latest products of his art, all had their origin in that portion of the race which started out with its back towards God, its face toward destruction, and which, ultimately, was wiped off the face of the earth in the waters of the deluge. Here we learn that the first poet was a bigamist, and the first song that ever came from the lips of man was a praise of murder and of crime. The foundations of the first city were laid by an architect whose hands were crimsoned by his brother's blood.

The pessimist—we were about to write the Paul—of such an age of "progress" was found in an Enoch. We read of him that, notwithstanding the artifices in brass and iron, or the sweet strains of skilled musicians, or the adept poets of his day, he prophesied thus: "Behold! the Lord cometh!" He who walked with God knew God's thoughts of the advanced science of his times, estimated it in the light of sanctuary values, and pronounced judgment upon the whole.

In the account of antediluvian age, we read of culture, science, art, progress, but not of God. Hence, in these last days, history is but repeating itself. Man has quarried the rocks, and read the records of pre-historic worlds, and boasts of the greatness of his geology. He harnesses the powers of nature to his chariot, and pirates of his inventive genius. He sweeps the heaven with his eye, numbers the stars, weighs the planets, and ends by saying that in these days "the heavens declare the glories of Kepler and Newton." God is barred and bolted from His universe, hurled from His throne, and man would fain encircle his brow with the diadem of the omnipotent one. Perilous times, indeed.

Let us glance at the three-fold description of these times of peril. First, from 2 Tim. iv. 3 we learn that they are times of "heaped teachers." Next, from James v. 3, times of "heaped treasures." And lastly, from Romans ii. 5, times of "heaped wrath." It is not necessary to point out that the "heaped teachers" teach not concerning the "heaped wrath;" they are too optimistic to deal with such matters! Neither is it necessary to point out that the "heaped treasures" redeem not from the wrath piled up.

But what of Paul's attitude towards this state of things? What manner of conduct did he enjoin upon the servants of God? Three words contain the answer "Preach the Word." Is there injustice abroad? Preach the Word. Is righteousness bleeding in the dust, and wrong triumphant on the throne? Preach the Word. Those who preach the word today are the real "apostolic succession." The "sword of the Spirit" is the only weapon which Paul can commend to the Christian warrior. Hence, in his letter to Timothy, he puts a three-fold emphasis upon the word:

The Word Inspired—2 Tim. iii. 16, 17.

The Word divided—2 Tim. ii.. 15.

The Word Preached—1 Tim. iv. 2.

But now let the reader note that it is to be preached, and not only because it is inspired, but because it is divided; not only because it is authoritative, but because it is understood. While the world, then, is delving deep into the treasures of nature, the church explore the boundless treasure of grace. While the world hastes to its "treasures of wrath," let those called out from its corruption enter into the present enjoyment of the riches of His grace and glory untold.

If we have noted Paul's pessimism, and pointed out his method, we cannot close without referring to his experience. In him we see the result of being severely scriptural. The path of faithfulness trodden by Paul was by no means a path of roses. It was

A path of suffering—2 Tim. i. 12.

A path of imprisonment—2 Tim ii. 9.

A path of persecution—2 Tim. iii. 11.

A path of abandonment—2 Tim. iv. 10-16.

A path to the lions—2 Tim. iv. 17.

If you would be successful, preach anything that gets the people. If you would be faithful, preach the Word. But the path of faithfulness leads not to the court of human favor. The Micaiahs are smitten and mocked, sneered at and ridiculed. The Enochs know not companionship, save they find it in their God. The Pauls are deserted and hied away to make sport before the godless mob. The Johns have Patmos isles for their abodes.

But God is no man's debtor. The Patmos which the persecutors of the apostles deem to be a barren rock, proves to be a stepping stone to the vision of coming glories. If Paul must say: "No man stood with me," yet grace insists on interposing a "nevertheless the Lord stood with me." Who would not sacrifice the tinsel of earth to gain the gold of heaven? Who would not exchange the favor of mortal man for the fellowship of the eternal God?

Here harmony of sound can never take the place of spiritual melody from sin-purged hearts. The viol and the harp may please the ear, but cannot bring peace to a sin-burdened soul. The only melody that can break the fetters of sin is the sweet sound of Jesus' name.

Let us then plead for pessimists to take the field against the force of human optimism. Pessimists who will not have one single good thing to say of the natural man; pessimists who, Paul-like, will own to having "no confidence in the flesh;" Pessimists who can see but one place for the old Adam nature, and that place the cross of Calvary, and who will gladly acknowledge that "in us, that is to say, our flesh, dwelleth no good thing."

"Perilous Times!"
"Preach the Word!"

OBITUARY

Thos. McDonald

Thomas McDonald was born January 29, 1842, near Rutland, Marshall county, Indiana. He was the son of Samuel and Eliza McDonald, pioneers of our country, having settled here with a company of relatives about 1836. He was reared on the farm, receiving only the advantages of the common schools of that day. He was married to Zerilda Logan on February 1, 1863, and became the father of two children, namely, William, born January 2, 1864, and Delbert, born August 2, 1865. He suffered the loss of his older son August 18, 1864, and of his wife on May 11, 1869. He was married to Jennie Lawson March 17, 1875. To them were born two children, namely, Fred Otto, born August 28, 1876, who died August 26, 1876, and Dessie M., born September 18, 1880, now a teacher in Brightside schools.

Immediately after his first marriage he went to housekeeping on the old farm, known by his name for miles around, located four miles south of Plymouth, where he lived for over forty-six years. On account of ill health he moved to Plymouth in September, 1910.

He was attacked by disease six years ago and suffered severely for a year, when he underwent a surgical operation that relieved him so that he enjoyed reasonable health for a time. But after a year he again failed and gradually weakened until death relieved him. He passed away at his late residence, 701 North Walnut street, Plymouth, at 3 o'clock a. m., January 5, 1912, at the age of 69 years, 11 months and 6 days.

Our beloved friend was a man universally respected by all who knew him. He was of a quiet unassuming nature, ever ready to do his duty to his neighbor. He believed and defended the faith of the Gospel of Christ, but for some unaccountable reason, never obeyed its formal commands. About two weeks before his death he expressed a desire for baptism, but on account of his weakened condition both mentally and physically, it was not administered. No doubt he made his peace with God as far as he was able; as to what the result will be ultimately, that we leave to a merciful heavenly Father and compassionate Savior.

He leaves his companion, two children, Delbert, of Mitchell, Illinois, Dessie M., of Plymouth, one sister, Mrs. Rebecca Osborn, of Culver, Indiana, two half sisters, Catherine Upmeyer, of Harrisburg, Oregon, Florence Littler, of Portland, Oregon, of his immediate family, and many other relatives to lament because of his death. His father was a brother of Thomas McDonald, formerly county superintendent of schools of Marshall county, and the father of the Hon. Daniel McDonald of Plymouth, and of Platt McDonald of Chicago, the only two remaining cousins of the name. John and Samuel McDonald, of Plymouth, are his nephews.

Funeral services were held from the residence, Sunday, January 6, 1912, at 1 o'clock p. m., conducted by the writer, and he was laid to rest in the old Pisgah cemetery, near where he had spent most of his life, to await the resurrection by the power of Christ and his just and righteous disposition.

Sisters McDonald, wife and daughter of the deceased, have the full sympathy of the church in their bereavement, and the highest respect and approval of all who know them for their loyal, patient and Christian care they bestowed upon their husband and father during his long tedious illness. May the Good Father bless them for it and sustain them in this hour of trial.

D. E. VANVACTOR.
Argos, Ind.

Lena Ill

Miss Lena Ill was born in Cincinnati, Ohio, Jan. 19, 1850, and died at the home of her only sister in the flesh, Sister Theodore Klingenstein, 3421 Maguet avenue, Cleveland, Ohio, Jan. 10, 1912, aged sixty-one years, eleven months and twenty-one days. She was blessed with a religious tendency of mind, from her youth was faithful as a Sunday school pupil, joining the Baptist church when only fifteen years of age. In 1904 she learned the glad tidings of the kingdom of God, and those things which concern our Lord Jesus Christ, and the same year became obedient to the faith, brethren W. S. Tomlinson and Wm. Pate (since deceased, but of blessed memory) helping her to put on the sin-cleansing and sin-covering name of Jesus the Christ. She has been a great sufferer for the last ten years of her life. During this long period her afflictions have incapacitated her for active service in public work of the truth. While her opportunities were only those of a "shut in," it can be truthfully said of her, "She hath done what she could." Her life has been well spent, for it was spent for the Master and his servants; and her example of patience and Christian fortitude in afflictions and sufferings will live long in the minds and hearts of her brethren, sisters and friends. She was composedly resigned to death, falling asleep in the same faith as the ancient ones had, "of whom the world was not worthy." When "many shall come from the north, south, east and west, and shall sit down with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, in the kingdom of God," we believe Sister Ill will be one of the glorified company "to the praise of his glory," who hath redeemed her. Let us all be faithful that we may participate with her in the strains of the "new song" in the cloudless morning of redemption.

On Jan. 14th the editor of the Restitution spoke words of comfort as a funeral address from John 8:1-8, after which we sorrowfully wended our way to Lakeview cemetery, where Sister Ill was left to rest till the great Life Giver comes.

ORDAINED TO ETERNAL LIFE

Acts 13:48 reads in the King James and also American Revised Versions, "As many as were ordained to eternal life believed." This is accepted by foreordaintionists to mean that they could not help it: God had decided that they should believe, hence they were automatons registering the divine will.

The verb used is tasso and as translated here would be found in the passive perfect. The form is tetagmenoi, however, and in Hickie's lexicon we learn that it is to be translated, to appoint; to ordain; passive, to be appointed; to be ordained. But Dr. Hickie adds, "unless it is to be taken in a middle sense." Goodwin's Greek Grammar (Edition 1892) p. 97 says, "The middle voice generally signifies that the subject performs an action upon himself or for his own benefit." When we read on we find that the middle voice differs from the passive only in the future and aorist tenses. Hence we have a right to translate tetagmenoi either passive or middle. The King James translators, being foreordinationists, chose the passive, but by all proper rules we ought to scan the context before deciding so important a question.

In ver. 46 Paul said to the Jews that they judged themselves unworthy of eternal life, that is, they refused it. Here free will (choice) is indubitably taught. If then we are to use the passive in ver. 48 we flatly contradict the plain teaching of ver. 46. But if we adopt the middle voice, as according to the most eminent Greek scholars (and all grammars) we have the right to do, these verses are harmonized. Ver. 48 (last clause) will then read, "And as many as appointed (ordained) themselves (worthy) to eternal life, believed;" or, as we would say, as many as desired to be saved.

This instance shows with what caution we should accept a teaching that carries such consequences with it. God desires us to study so we may rightly divide the Word of truth. In the variorum renderings we find also that it is allowable to translate this, were found disposed: had set themselves; were determined or disposed. The authorities are Dr. J. W. McGarvey, Dr. J. V. Bartlett, Dr. P. J. Gloag, Dr. F. Rendall. These constitute a strong array of sound scholarship in favor of the free will view.—Herald of Life.

ALONE

It is human to stand with the crowd, it is divine to stand alone. It is man-like to follow the people, to drift with the tide; it is God-like to follow a principle, to stem the tide.

It is natural to compromise our conscience and follow the social and religious fashion for the sake of gain or pleasure; it is divine to sacrifice both on the altar of truth and duty.

"No man stood with me, but all men forsook me," wrote the battle scarred apostle in describing his first appearance before Nero to answer for his life for believing and teaching contrary to the Roman world.

Truth has been out of fashion since man changed his robe of fadeless light for a garment of faded leaves.

Noah built and voyaged alone. His neighbors laughed at his strangeness and perished in style. Abraham wandered and worshipped alone. Sodomites smiled at the simple shepherd, followed the fashion, and fed the flames. Daniel dined and prayed alone. Elijah sacrificed and witnessed alone. Jeremiah prophesied and wept alone. Jesus loved and died alone.

Of the lonely way His disciples should walk He said: "Strait is the gate and narrow is the way which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it." Of their treatment by the many who walk in the broad way, He said: "If ye were of the world, the world would love his own; but because ye are not of the world, therefore the world hateth you."

The church in the wilderness praised Abraham and persecuted Moses. The Church of the Kings praised Moses and persecuted the prophets. The Church of Caiaphas praised the prophets and persecuted Jesus. The church of the popes praised the Savior and persecuted the saints. And multitudes now, both in the church and the world, applaud the courage and fortitude of the patriarch and prophets, the apostles and martyrs, but condemn as stubbornness or foolishness the faithfulness to truth to-day.

Wanted, today, men and women, young and old, who will obey their convictions of truth and duty at the cost of fortune and friends and life itself.

PROBLEMS

If we go to heaven at death, why say "God is merciful to us when he prolongs our life?"

Why speak of "a narrow escape from death" if death is simply being "called home to glory?"

If death is the "wages of sin," how can it be the "gate to endless bliss?"

If death is the penalty for breaking God's law, how can it be the "voice of Jesus that calls us to his arms?"

If "sudden death means sudden glory," why take all sorts of illtasting decoctions to keep from dying?

If "death is man's best friend," why treat this friend so ill?

If our loved ones are "safe in glory," why weep over their graves?

Why teach that the soul is immortal and can never die, when God says, "The soul that sinneth, it shall die?"

If "the soul of man is the image of God," and "also a part of God," will it be doomed to hell?

If "we go to be with Christ at death," what will he say when he comes "to judge the living and the dead" and finds we have already been judged and rewarded or punished?

If "the spirit is the real man," did God tell the truth when he said: "Out of the ground thou wast taken, for dust thou art?"

Was God speaking to Adam, or simply to Adam's body when he said: "Dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return?"

If God spoke to Adam's body, then was it not Adam's body that understood what God said?

Would God have spoken to a part of Adam not capable of understanding what he said?

JOHN M. KELLEY.

WHY THE COLORED PEOPLE IMMERSE

It was in 1882, if I remember correctly, when I was "riding a circuit" in Arkansas, going on horseback. One time I overtook an elderly man of color, who with a battered beaver and tattered saddlebags, was riding a roached pony somewhat the worse for wear. I accosted him: "Good evening, uncle."

With a lift of his hat, he replied, "Howdy, boss?"

"Uncle, yonse a preacher, aint' ye?"

"Yaas, suh; yaas, suh. I preaches some."

"Baptist, I guess?"

"Naw, suh; naw, suh. I'se a Methdis minister."

"Uncle, yonse been under de water, then, eh?"

"Yaas, suh; yaas suh. Ise been baptized under the wattah for sutt'n."

"Uncle, tell me why it is most of you colored folks—no matter what church you belong to—are immersed."

"Dun know, boss, 'less it's kase we ain't got sense anuf to splain away the Scripture like de white folks."—J. C. Mason.

GOLD DUST

"It is not pleasant to hear disagreeable speeches; do not make them."

"He who hurts others injures himself; he who helps others advances his own interests."

"Now is the time—Ah, friend, no longer wait to scatter loving smiles and words of cheer to those around whose lives are now so dear. They may not meet you in the coming year. Now is the time."

"Take it not greviously if some think ill of thee and speak that thou wouldst not willingly bear. Thou oughtest to be the hardest judge of thyself and to think no one weaker than thyself. If thou dost walk righteously, thou will not much weigh fleeting words."
—Thomas a Kempis.

"The noblest character is the poorest in spirit, and though he possess all the beatitudes, walks lowly among men, holding them to him the more closely. All greatness is meekness, for greatness comes through tribulation, as wealth through toils. The highest quality of true exaltations is humility."

"Every word of God will fulfill its mission. All we have to do is to help send it on its mission."

ANNA DREW.
Dixon, Ill.

A NATURAL CONCLUSION

"The streets are all paved with gold there, and the angels play on their harps, and there are lovely flowers and everything that's beautiful," said the Sunday school teacher to her small hearers, telling them of heaven. "And now kind of little boys and girls go tell me," she continued, "what there?" No one knew, but soon a little brown hand shot up over in the corner. "Yes, Samuel?" and the teacher smiled encouragingly.

"Please, teacher, they're dead ones."—Everybody's Magazine.

CORN SHEAVES

Gathered from Everywhere

Things that Count—Not what we have, but what we use;
Not what we see, but what we choose—
These are the things that mar or bless
The sum of human happiness.

The things near by, not things afar;
Not what we seem, but what we are;
These are the things that make or break;
That give the heart its joy or ache

Not what seems fair, but what is true;
Not what we dream, but good we do—
These are the things that shine like gems,
Like stars, in Fortune's diadems.

Not as we take, but as we give;
Not as we pray, but as we live—
These are the things that make for peace,
Both now and after Time shall cease.

Pointless Preaching.—There is a great deal of pointless preaching at the present time. After sitting under the ministry of the word, a person is often led to inquire, "What is all this for? What is the preacher's object? What end has he in view?" so aimless and pointless is the discourse. It cannot be intended to convert sinners, for there is nothing in it to alarm their fears, arouse their guilty consciences, and lead them to repentance. It cannot be the spiritual edification of believers, for there is nothing in it to quicken them into newness of spiritual life, to encourage them amid trial, or to stimulate them to greater Christian activity. It is a sort of abstract, ethical theorizing, with scarcely any reference to the soul. No wonder that a person sometimes longs to hear one of the old-time trumpet blasts, when some son of thunder reasoned of temperance, righteousness and judgment to come, and sinners, like Felix, trembled beneath the power of divine truth. A man seldom accomplishes more than he aims to effect. A minister who does not aim in the pulpit and out of it to save souls, will have a barren ministry, and many fruitless regrets at last.

Mother—The biggest and most comprehensive word in the world is "Mother." Have you ever stopped to think just how big it is? Outside of Deity, it is the biggest, most potential name man ever utters. It compasses the whole world and it symbolizes all beauty.

"Mother." Your mother, my mother. The mother of all men.

From the beginning to the end of life "Mother" shapes the destiny of the children of men. In cradle days, our world. In childhood and youth, still our world. In manhood and womanhood—God pity us if anything less.

Some Rules of Keeping Health.—Dr. G. E. Robbins of Chillicothe, laid down a few terse axioms before the Ohio medical convention in Cleveland, Wednesday, May 10, 1911. Here are some of them:

Sleep, and plenty of it, is the surest preventive against every disease.

A clear conscience beats pills as a universal curative.

The day will come when we will spend laying dust on our highways the money we now spend for doctors and undertakers—and it will yield better returns.

Hard work never killed any man provided his work didn't mean worry too.

Regular meals are better than beefsteak, and good humor while you're eating them outclasses bread and butter.

If you can't get your fresh air out of doors while you're awake, get it indoors while you're asleep. Your bedchamber is the most important spot on earth, so far as your health is concerned.

A Word of Warning and Exhortation.—Disheartened by the dangers and difficulties of one of their enterprises an army of Ancient Rome lost courage and resolved to retreat. The general reasoned with his soldiers, expostulating with them, he appealed to their love of country, to their honor, and to their oaths. By all that was calculated to revive a fainting heart he sought to animate their courage, but in vain. They were not to be moved, and carried away as with a panic. They wheeled about to retreat. At that juncture they were forcing a mountain pass, and had just cleared a gorge where the road, between stupendous rocks on one side and a foaming river on the other, was but a foot path broad enough for the step of a single man. As a last resort the general laid himself down there, saying: "If you retreat, it is over this body you go, trampling me to death." No foot advanced. The fight was arrested. His soldiers could face the foe, but not mangle beneath their feet one who loved them, and had often led them on to victory, sharing all hardships like a common soldier, and ever foremost in the fight. Hesitating no longer to advance, they wheeled round to resume their march, deeming it better to meet suffering and death itself rather than trample underfoot their devoted leader. Their hearts recoiled from such an outrage.

Now for a practical lesson—For all who have named the name of Christ not to depart from iniquity, for such as have enlisted under his banner to go back to the world, for such as have renounced sin to return to its pleasures, involves a far greater crime. A more touching scene than this bars our return, Jesus, as i were, lays himself down on our path, and none can become backsliders and return to the practice and pleasures of sin without treading him under their feet. The words of Paul call up a spectacle from which every lover of Jesus should recoil with horror. "If he," says the apostle, "who despised Moses' law died without mercy, of how much sorer punishment, suppose ye, shall he be thought worthy who hath trodden underfoot the Son of God, and count the blood of the covenant wherewith he was sanctified an unholy thing, and hath done despite unto the spirit of grace?" May God of his infinite mercy help us to avoid this awful fate.

Many are enshrouded in moral and religious darkness. The explanation of their plight, though humiliating and painful, is plain. "Men love darkness rather than light," explains our Savior, "because their deeds are evil."

Mixed Theology.

Chrysostom, Archbishop of Constantinople, in a sermon on I Thess. 4:13—"But I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not," has this to say: "If I may speak somewhat paradoxically, even the soul of a sleeping person is in some sort asleep; but not so the soul of a dead man: that is awake."

The noble John Summerfield, who was born in England in 1798, where he is said to have become one of the most popular and eloquent preachers of his day, once said: "Give thanks to God who has taken your friend, that you have the opportunity of honoring the departed one, and of dismissing him with becoming obsequies. If we fully believe in a resurrection we will be persuaded that our deceased [illegible] has departed to a better state . . . . A messenger is sent to bring us to God, but it is the king of terrors. Our Jesus has the keys of hell and death."

Dr. Alexander Watson, the famous Scotch preacher and gifted author, whose works have become so popular in America, once wrote "There is no death: the dead are the living which have died. While they were dying they lived and after they are dead, they are more alive than they were before they died."

Mr. Moody, of tender and blessed memory, not long before he died, said: "Some day you will take up the papers and read that D. L. Moody is dead, but don't believe a word of it, for I shall be more alive at that time than I am to-day."

The well-meaning man who preached his funeral sermon, said: "Mr. Moody is in heaven." Before he had finished his sermon he said: "I had rather he D. L. Moody, dead and in his casket (pointing at the dead evangelist), than the greatest man alive in America today."

On a tombstone in the town of Rockford, Minn., I found this inscription:

"Silently they laid her to rest,
Beneath the grass-grown sod,
In heaven, with the angels she is blest,
Like them she dwells with God."

On a little marble slab in one of the oldest churchyards in New England, the following inscription may be found:

"She sleeps beneath her native earth,
And near the spot which gave her birth
While oft we lift the tearful eye
And hear her calling from the sky.

In an old cemetery on Cape Cod, I found the following verse:

"This lovely bud, so young and fair,
Called hence by early doom,
Was only sent to show how sweet a flower
In Paradise could bloom."

On a tombstone in British Columbia I read the following: "There is no death: Mrs. Leola Marston died June 16, 1893."

On a marble slab that marks the resting place of a miner, in one of the fertile valleys of Oregon, there is this quaint and unusual inscription:

"He came from New England to search for gold,
And soon had contracted an awful cold,
Margurite Gillfillan.....1.50
A. A. Bowerman.....3.00
A. K. Kimsey.....3.50
Mrs. Chas. Moon (In memory of Bro. J. O. Woodruff....5.00

The bright angel then brought him joy untold,
And landed him where the streets are gold."

I am told that a man in New Hampshire once gave this testimony: "Since I last met you, my dear brethren, I have had some very narrow escapes. The Lord came very near calling me home to glory, several times, but he has had mercy on me and has spared my life, and so I am still alive to praise his name."

A popular preacher, when asked if he believed the body goes to heaven at death, said: "No. I do not believe that any body goes to heaven at death, and, really I have never been able to understand how that anybody goes to heaven, if no body goes to heaven. But I suppose that my ignorance does not alter the fact. I have always believed, and shall continue to believe, that everybody goes to heaven or hell at death."

And so I suppose "as long as the world goes round" that men will sing:

"A charge to keep I have,
A God to glorify,
A never dying soul to save
And fit it for the sky.
"Help me to watch and pray,
And on thyself rely:
Assured if I my trust betray
I shall forever die."

Kindly words and wise counsel are most likely to awaken courage.

Scripture Searchers Assistant

A very valuable help to all who are studying the Scriptures—a reprint of one of our beloved Brother Joblin's works. Treats of thirty different subjects with about four hundred references. All should possess a copy for ready reference. Price by mail six cents. Address W. S. Tomlinson, 10845 Orville Ave., N. E., Cleveland, O.

A SONG BOOK.

Songs of the Kingdom.

Recommended by Bro. Huggins and nearly all of our preachers, as by far the best song book for our people. 138 pages, flexible cloth. 25 cents each; postpaid. Address, Chas. E. Crowe, St. Paul, Neb.

Book and Tracts by Bro. W. H. Wilson.

"A Bible Study of Hades, as compared with our modern ideas," is the title of a new tract just issued by Bro. W. H. Wilson. It is a critical study of the subject of Hell. It shows that the meaning attached to this word today is different fro mthe meaning given to it years ago. It also shows how this change was made, and who made it. The price is 15 cents each, or 5 for 50 cents.

Student's Text Book, a cloth bound book 200 pages.

It deals specifically as How to study the Bible and why people fail to rightly understand God's Word. Price 50 cents.

Pine Woods Bible Class, a book of 480 pages bound in cloth. Studies are carried on as between a class and its teacher. Price $1.25.

Cunningly Devised Fables, 28 pages. Price 10 cents.

Where Will You Spend Eternity? Four pages, 25 cents per 100.

Are You in Need of Money? 4 pages 25 cents per 100.

Will It Pay to Become a Christian? is the title to a well written book of 96 pages by Brother Jas. W. Wilson. In a clear and convincing manner it sets forth the Christian faith and answers the question indicated in its title affirmatively. The edition should be taken at once and put out to work. It is neatly bound in cloth. The price is 25 cents, very low, and within reach of all.

W. H. Wilson, at 625 North Willow avenue, Austin Station, Chicago, Illinois.

The Bible: Its Principles and Texts

As indicated by the title this book is divided into three sections. The first consists of a remarkable disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "principles" in formulated propositions, and the third expounds in a clear, impressive and homelitic manner particular "Texts." The knotty and perplexing texts of the Bible are united and solved satisfactorily to the most fastidious and critical. More than one hundred and fifteen subjects of intense interest to every Bible student are formally discussed. Both simple and scholarly—the child is fascinated and taught; the scholar is entertained and instructed. Bible lovers, here is a feast for you. Throw open the door of your home; let The Bible—Its Principles and Its Texts come in and bless you and your family. 309 pages, 5½" x 7½" inches, durably and handsomely bound in white cloth, with title embossed on back in gold. One copy, $1.10, two copies or more $1.00 each. The Restitution Pub. Co.

Four Page Tracts

Can You Believe? A series of questions setting forth the fundamental points of our faith.

State of Man in Death. A collection of proof texts on this subject.

Life and Death. A short concise statement of the facts in the case.

Age to Come Not a Heresy, by H. V. Reed.

10 for 10 cents, 50 for 25 cents, 100 for 40 cents

The Paternity of Jesus. A pamphlet of 122 pages, by M. Joblin, giving in detail all that can be said on this subject, and completely proving that He is the Son of God, and not the natural son of Joseph. This work ought to be sold at 25 cents a copy, but the author was so anxious that price should not stand in the way of its being read, that he put the price at ten cents, so all can buy them Send to this office for them.

Address The Restitution Pub. Co.

Popular Lectures, By Bro. M. Joblin

Send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled: "The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to Be Saved?" The Foolishness of Preaching and Salvation—what is it?

Each lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price.

TWO TRACTS By J. L. WINCE

"Salvation" and "Resurrection" two tracts by J. L. Wince, can not fail to arouse the interest of every believer. They deal with vital questions in a most convincing manner. The price is 10c each, 12 for $1.00. For sale by S. Roxanna Wince, Pierceton, Ind.

SUBSCRIBE FOR
Words of Life
the publication of the Conditional Immortality Mission of Great Britain, advocating Life and Advent truths.
Terms: 1 copy 37c per annum, 12 copies to one address 25c per copy per annum.
Sample copy on application to
WILLIAM G. ROTHE
1301 Park Pl. Brooklyn, N. Y.

BOOKS AND TRACTS

Bible Pearls—Two-page tracts, suitable for wide distribution. 1. The Gospel. 2. Coming and Kingdom of Christ, by 20,000 Baptists in 1660. 3. Immateriality. 4. Kingdom of God. 5. Nature of Man and Thoughts for Thinkers. 6. Two Advents. 7. What is Religion? 8. Restitution Age. 9. Destiny of the Wicked. 10. Baptism. 10 copies for 5 cents, or assorted packages of 100 for 20 cents.

50 YEARS' EXPERIENCE
PATENTS
TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.
Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the
Scientific American.
A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.
MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

Census Blank

MEMBERSHIP CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA

Name .....

Address .....
Street Town State

By whom Immersed ..... Date .....

Fill out the above and send to "The Census Editor," The Restitution, 803 Parkwood Drive, Cleveland, O.

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co.
WHOLESALE OPTICIANS
We make a specialty of High Grade Prescription Work, and carry a full line of all kinds of Optical goods. All orders filled same day as received.
"S. K. N." SERVICE
Means prompt returns, careful work, moderate prices.
Goods shipped to all parts of the country.
The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co. 318 SCHOFIELD BUILDING CLEVELAND, OHIO

SPECIAL OFFER!

IN ORDER to increase the circulation of The Restitution, the following special offer is made:

One new subscriber for 1 year, choice of:

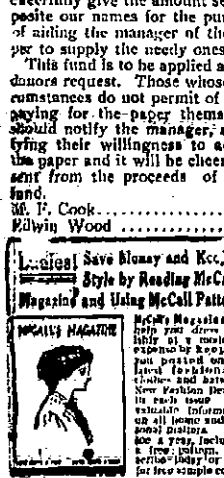
W. H. Wilson's "Student's Text Book," regular price.....50c
Or 5 Copies of "Cunningly Devised Fables," reg. price 50c
Or 5 Copies of "Bible Study of Hades," reg. price 50c

For Two New Subscribers

One Copy "Pine Woods Bible Class," 480 pages, reg. price, $1.25
Or "The Bible, Its Principles and Texts," 309 pages, reg., $1.10
Or One Hundred of Bro. Joblin's Tracts, regular price $1.00

Here is a chance to get some of the books you all should own. By making special arrangements with the authors we are able to offer them to you without the payment of a cent on your part, just a few minutes effort. We cannot afford to continue this offer long, so take advantage of it at once, get some new subscribers today.

THE RESTITUTION, 803 Parkwood Drive



YOU will get genuine pleasure from an hour or two spent with the "Mirroscope" these long winter evenings. Pictures, Photos, Post Cards, Etc. are shown in exact reproduction same as with a high priced Stereopticon, can be used in any home and operated with Electricity, Gas or Acetylene. Prices $2.50, $5.00, $7.50, $10.00, $15.00, $20.00, according to size. Sent anywhere in the U. S. Send for one today.

HOME ILLUMINATED PICTURE CO.
311 SCHOFIELD BUILDING CLEVELAND, OHIO

Less than Half a Cent a Day

The Restitution costs a Dollar and a Half a year, that's less than half A Cent a day or three cents a copy. You can't afford to be without it. If you are a subscriber get some one else to subscribe.

Help to Get Them on the List

Sample Copies of The Restitution

May be obtained for a stamp. Send for one.

"A LETTER TO A FRIEND"

This tract needs no introduction further than to say that it is one of the most convincing Gospel sermons ever written. Originally written as a letter to a friend by Elder C. C. Woodruff it was published and has sold extensively in tract form. In its present edition it is a 32 page tract, the price is

10c each; 12 for $1.00

There is no better way of spreading the Gospel than handing out one of these tracts wherever you have the opportunity.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

"Future Probation,

Is that Awaiting any of the Unrighteous?"

Here is a work by Wm. Glenn Moncrieff that every one should read. It is one of the best things on the subject ever written and will appeal to every student of the word. It is a book of 130 pages, made to sell at 25c. We have a limited number left which we will sell at the special price of

10c each; 12 for $1.00

Send for some at once.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

Ladies! Save Money and Keep in Style by Reading McCall's Magazine and Using McCall Patterns

McCall's Magazine will help you dress stylishly at a moderate expense by keeping you posted on the latest fashions in clothes and hats. 50 New Fashion Designs in each issue. Also valuable information on all home and personal matters. Only 50c a year, including a free pattern. Just send a postal today or send for free sample copy.

McCall Patterns will enable you to make in your own home, with no more trouble, clothing for yourself and children which will be perfect in style and fit. Price never more than 15 cents. Send for free Pattern Catalogue.

We Will Give You Fine Premiums for getting subscriptions among your friends. Send for free Premium Catalogue and Cash Prize Offer.

THE McCALL COMPANY, 238 to 246 West 37th St., NEW YORK

The Restitution
IS THE OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA.

The Restitution.

Founded in A. D. 1852

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Lk. 19:12-15), who will be King of Kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints conjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-53); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life Giver (John 3:15; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17), and belief in, the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Lk. 13:3), and obedience by Baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ." (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31).

ROBT. G. HUGGINS, Editor.

—Terms of— Subscription
ONE YEAR, $1.50;
SIX MONTHS 75 CTS. IN ADVANCE

VOL. 60 - 6 CLEVELAND, OHIO, JANUARY 23, 1912. No. 53

SIGNS OF THE MORNING

The morning is breaking.
The night is far spent.
The nations are waking
With warlike intent:
The "Classes" and "Masses,"
In battle array,
Are facing each other
'Tis dawn of the day.

Awake, O Italia!
On Tripoli's shore,
The Turk and the Papist
Are striving once more;
It is Jacob and Esau.
Their flags have unfurled—
'Tis the question of ages.
To envelop a world.

Will the Esau of Turkey
His birthright despise?
Will the blessing of Cyrene
Be small in his eyes?
Shall not El-Senusi,
The world to o'erawe,
Raise the green flag of Jehad
The dread Holy War?

Will the Jacob of Christendom
Ever find rest?
He has marked Laban's cattle
And taken the best;
With the Laban behind him,
And Esau before,
The question of ages
Is with us once more.

Pass over the Jabbok!
Cross over the seas;
With ships or with camels
Thou art not at ease.
Thou art Jacob—supplanter,
'Twas for power and greed,
To the "white man's hard burden"
Thou gavest much heed.

Thou art Jacob—supplanter,
But wilt thou prevail?
Wilt thou wrestle with God
And become Israel?
Then call on thy God
And pray for thy band.
For the night is far spent.
The day is at hand.

Ho, Muscovite prince.
Within Russia's bond!
The squadrons of Magog
Art at Trebizond,
And ready to fall
On the Turk as he flees,
And drive him to cover
Between the "two seas."

And wouldst thou, Italia,
For Palestine wait,
And present to Pope Pius
A temporal estate?
Beware! For when Satan
From prison goes forth,
The nations go "up on
The breadth of the earth."

Dried up is Euphrates.
For Turkey is weak.
While Japan and China,
As power now speak;
Now is India's awak'ning,
And Persia's still spared,
And "the way of the kings
Of the east is prepared."

The nations are hastening
God's Word to fulfill
While the "Classes" and "Masses"
Are doing his will;
The war-dogs are waking,
To hear the peace call,
And the church is asleep
In the midst of it all.

Awake, slumbering virgins!
No—Let them sleep on!
'Tis the watchman who first
Needs to know of the dawn.
Go up to thy tower,
O Watchman, and cry!
Let the world hear no more
Of thy soft lullaby.

The nations are waking,
North, South, East and West;
Society throbs with
A fearful unrest;
Creation travaileth
To her great, second birth—
Christ is coming! and "will he Find faith on earth?"

—A. E. Hatch.

THE INSPIRATION OF THE BIBLE—No. 3.

A. But the most unique argument for the inspiration of the words of Scripture is the relation which Jesus Christ bears to them. In the first place he himself was inspired as to his words. In the earliest reference to his prophetic office (Deut. 18:18), Jehovah says, "I will put my words in his mouth, and he shall speak . . . all that I shall command him." A limitation on his utterance which Jesus everywhere recognizes. "As my Father hath taught me, I speak these things;" "the Father which sent me, he gave me a commandment what I should say, and what I should speak;" "whatsoever I speak, therefore, even as the Father said unto me, so I speak;" "I have given unto them the words which thou gavest me;" "the words that I speak unto you, they are spirit and they are life" (John 6:63; 8:26, 28, 40; 12:49, 50).

The thought is still more impressive as we read of the relation of the Holy Spirit to the Christ. "The Spirit of the Lord is upon me because he hath anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor;" "he through the Holy Ghost had given commandments unto the apostles;" "the revelation of Jesus Christ which God gave unto him;" "these things saith he that holdeth the seven stars in his right hand;" "he that hath an ear let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches" (Luke 4:18; Acts 1:2; Rev. 1:1; 2:1-11).

If the merest word needed the unction of the Holy Ghost to give to men the revelation he received from the Father, in whose bosom he dwelt; and if the agency of the same Spirit extended to the words he spake in preaching the gospel to the meek, or dictating an epistle, how much more must these things be so in the case of ordinary men when engaged in the same service? With what show of reason can one contend that any Old or New Testament writer stood, so far as his words were concerned, in need of no such agency ("The New Apologetic." pp. 67, 68).

In the second place he used the Scriptures as though they were inspired as to their words. In Matt. 22:31, 32, he substantiates the doctrine of the resurrection against the skepticism of the Sadducees by emphasizing the present tense of the verb "to be," i. e., the word "am" in the language of Jehovah to Moses at the burning bush. In verses 42-45 of the same chapter he does the same for his own Deity by alluding to the second use of the word "Lord" in Psa. 110. "The Lord said unto my Lord . . . If David then called him Lord, how is he his son?"

In John 10:34-36, he vindicates himself from the charge of blasphemy by saying, "Is it not written in your law, I said, Ye are gods? If he called them gods, unto whom the word of God came and the Scripture cannot be broken; say ye of him, whom the Father hath sanctified, and sent into the world, thou blasphemest; because I said, I am the son of God?"

We have already seen him (in Matt. 4) overcoming the tempter in the wilderness by three quotations from Deuteronomy without note or comment except, "It is written." Referring to which Adolphe Monod says, "I know of nothing in the whole history of humanity, nor even in the field of divine revelation, that proves more clearly than this the inspiration of the Scriptures. What! Jesus Christ, the Lord of heaven and earth, calling to his aid in that solemn moment Moses his servant? He who speaks from heaven fortifying himself against the temptations of hell by the word of him who spake from earth? How can we explain that spiritual mystery, that wonderful reversing of the order of things, in [illegible] for Jesus the words of Moses were not the words of God rather than those of men? How shall we explain it if Jesus were not fully aware that holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Spirit?

"I do not forget the objections which have been raised against the inspiration of the Scriptures, nor the real obscurity with which that inspiration is surrounded: if they sometimes trouble your hearts, they have troubled mine also. But at such times, in order to revive my faith, I have only to glance at Jesus glorifying the Scriptures in the wilderness; and, I have seen that for all who rely upon him, the most embarrassing of problems is transformed into a historical fact, palpable and clear. Jesus no doubt was aware of the difficulties connected with the inspiration of the Scriptures, but did this prevent him from appealing to their testimony with unreserved confidence? Let that which was sufficient for him suffice for you. Fear not that the rock which sustains the Lord in the hour of his temptation and distress will give way because you lean too heavily upon it."

In the third place Christ teaches that the Scriptures are inspired as to their words. In the sermon on the Mount, he said, "Think not that I am come to destroy the law, or the prophets; I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill. For verily I say unto you, till heaven and earth pass, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law, till all be fulfilled."

Here is testimony confirmed by an oath, for "verily" on the lips of the son of man carries that force. He affirms the indestructibility of the law, not its substance merely but its form, not the thought but the word.

"One jot or title shall in no wise pass from the law." The "jot" means the yod, the smallest letter in the Hebrew alphabet, while the "title" means the horn a short projection in certain letters extending the base line beyond the upright one which rests upon it. A reader unaccustomed to the Hebrew needs a strong eye to see the title, but Christ guarantees that as a part of the sacred text neither the title nor the yod shall perish.

The elder Lightfoot, the Hebraist and rabbinical scholar of the Westminster Assembly time, has called attention to an interesting story of a certain letter yod found in the text of Deut. 32:18. It is in the word teshi, to forsake, translated in the King James as "unmindful." Originaly it seems to have been written smaller even than usual, i. e., undersized and yet notwithstanding the almost infinite number of times in which copies have been made, that little yod stands there today just as it ever did. Lightfoot spoke of it in the middle of the seventeenth century, and although two more centuries and a half have passed since then with all their additional copies of the book, yet it still retains its place in the sacred text. Its diminutive size is referred to in the margin, "but no hand has dared to add a hair's breadth to its length," so that we can still employ his words, and say that it is likely to remain there forever.

The same scholar speaks of the effect a slight change in the form of a Hebrew letter might produce in the substance of the thought for which it stands. He takes as an example two words, "Chalal" and "Halal", which differ from each other simply in their first radicals. The "Ch" in Hebrew is expressed by one letter the same as "H," the only distinction being a slight break or opening in the left limb of the latter. It seems too trifling to notice, but let that line be broken where it should be continuous, and "Thou shalt not profane the Name of thy God" in Lev. 18:21, becomes "Thou shalt not praise the name of thy God." Through that aperture, however small, the entire thought of the divine mind oozes out, so to speak, and becomes quite antagonistic to what was designed.

This shows how truly the thought and the word expressing it are bound together, and that whatever affects the one imperils the other. As another says, "The bottles are not the wine, but if the bottles perish, the wine is sure to be spilled." It may seem like narrowmindedness to contend for this, and an evidence of enlightenment or liberal scholarship to treat it with indifference, but we should be prepared to take our stand with Jesus Christ, in the premises, and if necessary, go outside the camp bearing our reproach.

JAS. M. GRAY.

THE JESUITICAL SPIRIT MANIFESTED IN THE McNAMARAS' CRIME.

According to a Catholic authority quoted in The Menace, "from 25 to 50 per cent of the delegates representing laboring men of this country, year after year, were Catholic laymen." Under the caption, "The Triple Treason of the McNamara Brothers" (against the State, the union, and the mass of honest toilers), The Menace, among other things, says:

"The labor unions have unfortunately been in the hands, in most instances, of Roman Catholics, and, Catholic like, there has been a disposition, quite human and popish, to fly to the boycott, the bludgeon and brutality—not excepting murder. . . .

There is lying before me, as I write, a list of the unions, and names of officials who direct the business and policies of these unions who are Roman Catholics, and this close connection with Rome has led many to think that the hierarchy in some way is the paid ally of men seeking the destruction of the unions and is operating through these head officers, Jesuitical scheme, far-reaching, and in line with the spirit and conduct of Catholic conquest the world over.

Is not the McNamara confession a sequel? Who can tell?

But this is not all; nor so startling as the second point, and is a close link in the chain of evidence.

The McNamara brothers are Roman Catholics. Lincoln Steffins tells of the constant attendance of the priest, and the fact is not disputed.

It is more than a co-incident that some of the worst crimes of American history show either a black gown as a background to the deed, or an active Romanist as a participant, or both, as in the Molly McGuires, the assassination of presidents and the betraying of organized labor. That is Roman Catholic history everywhere. Daily the threats and feelings of revenge and boycott, which is poured into The Menace office, show that Catholicism, in spirit, at least, does not change.

But the connection of Romanism with the Los Angeles case is plain, when John J. McNamara says, as reported by the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, December 2, 1911, in a lengthy interview and confirmed by Lincoln Steffins:—

"What I have done, I have done in the belief that circumstances justified me in all my actions. I am enough of a Jesuit to believe that circumstances justified me in all my actions. I am enough of a Jesuit to believe that the end justifies the means, and I have done many things in my life that I did not believe to be altogether right.'

McNamara has the Jesuit spirit and the Jesuit argument.

Romanists by birth and education, these desperate men were prepared and ready for any plot—not their own—realizing that at the worst they would receive absolution."

The purpose of the Roman church to rule in this country, whether in the field of labor or of education, is more and more apparent. She is planing for a Roman Catholic president, and has actively entered politics for that purpose. The "spirit out of the mouth of the beast" is abroad doing its last work. We might fear the outcome if we did not see her fate so plainly pictured in God's prophetic Word.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON NOTES, JAN. 28TH.

Title:—Presentation in the Temple, Luke 2:22-39. Golden Text:—Luke 2:30-31 2:30-31

Last Sunday we studied about the circumstances surrounding the birth of Jesus, which occurred in Bethlehem of Judea, B. C. 5. The reason that Bethlehem was chosen as the scene of this great event was because it was the home of David.

When Jesus was forty days old his parents took him to the temple at Jerusalem to present him unto the Lord in accordance with the Jewish law that every first-born male child, like the first fruits of the farm, was consecrated to God in grateful recognition of God's deliverance of the first born of the children of Israel, who had been preserved from the destroyer, who slew the first-born of all the Egyptians (Exo. 13:2, 13-15).

Upon arriving in the temple they were met by one Simeon, of whom nothing is known except what is revealed in our lesson, but whose holy state must have been the ripened fruit of long years of true living and of communion with God. Herein we find a lesson that it matters little who we are, but greatly what we are. The various characteristics applied to Simeon are "just" or "righteous," "devout," "patient," and "spiritual." These earned for him the promise "that he should not see death before he had seen the Lord Christ." Upon beholding the child Simeon uttered a song of praise. He had ripe old age with service to God and was content to lie down with his fathers in sleep: "Now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace, according to thy word, for mine eyes have seen thy salvation, which thou hast prepared before the face of all people."

It was only a few years later that the apostle Paul voiced much the same sentiment to Timothy, "For I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand."

The word of Simeon caused Joseph and Mary to marvel, both as coming from a stranger and of the boundless extent of benefits he predicted, reaching to the ends of the world. Simeon blessed them and said to Mary: "Behold this child is set for the fall and rising again of many in Israel, and for a sign which shall be spoken against."

Jesus was a sign of God's love, of God's power, of the new era of righteousness, of the fulfillment of God's promises, of the strong feeling of God against sin, of the certainty of its punishment, and of the only way of salvation.

"Yea a sword shall pierce through thy own soul also." These words are designed to illustrate that the mother suffers, in the sufferings of her son.

Anna's long service in the temple had fitted her for a part in this great event, consequently we find her praising God and speaking of him to all them that looked for redemption in Jerusalem.

And when they had performed all things according to the law of the Lord, they returned into Galilee to their own city of Nazareth. One of the strongest points in our lesson today is "Patient Continuance in Well Doing;" like Simeon, "we shall reap if we faint not."

S. A. SANFORD.

Cleveland, O.

"THE NIGHT COMETH."

How happy the man or woman who, at the end of life's day, has the consciousness of having left no work undone, no task unfinished they can look at the approach of night with that serenity which the world can neither give nor take away, knowing they have the approval of their Lord and Master. On the other hand, there is the one who has wrapped his talents in a napkin, as it were: how does the oncoming of night find him? It finds him with his work still unfinished, his sins unrepented of, himself still unmastered, and worst of all, no hope for that "morning without clouds."

I have often watched the laborer, as he hastens home anxious to see his loved ones and to rest in the bosom of his family. Was night unwelcome to him? Nay, verily; it was what he had worked for and thought of all day; it was his reward. "The night cometh."

He who uttered those words himself never shirked his duty; no day ever passed without every task having been accomplished; everything was in order when the night came. He was found ready. It has come as a joy to him, as a glory after suffering.

How often we have admired the beauty of a perfect night—the sky studded with stars, and all calm and peaceful. What a feeling of awe pervades one's whole being. Its contemplation leads us to exclaim, "how wonderful thy work, O Lord; in wisdom hast thou made them all." It helps us to remember the words of Paul in 1 Cor. 2:9: "Eye hath not seen nor ear heard, neither hath entered into the hearts of man, the things which God has prepared for them that love him."

Brothers and sisters, let us be up and doing, for the time is short. Whether we lay down and fold our hands in peaceful slumber, or be weary and worn with the cares of the world, rests entirely with ourselves. Whether we meet our Lord with joy and not with fear, and hear that glad "well-done," depends upon us. Oh, what a meeting that will be! My prayer is that we all may make a renewed effort to be there without the loss of one. Then no more disappointments, pain, nor death.

CATHERINE COWELL.

Cleveland, O.

Kindly words and wise counsel are most likely to awaken courage.

"SO RUN."

How shall I run the Christian race?

1. With patience: "Let us run with patience therefore" (Heb. 12:1).

2. Looking unto Jesus: "Let us run . . . looking unto Jesus" (Heb. 12:2).

3. With no weights: "Let us run," and in running, "lay aside every weight" (Heb. 12:1).

4. With Christians only: "Run not with them," the gentiles (1 Peter 4:4). Are you guilty?

5. With Certainty: "I therefore so run, not so uncertainly" (1 Cor. 9:26).

6. To warn the young: "Run, speak to this young man" (Zech. 2:4).

7. Swiftly: As horsemen, so shall they run" (Joel. 2:4).

8. Carefully: When thou runnest, thou shalt not stumble" (Prov. 4:12).

9. Together: "The people came running together" (Mark 9:25).

10. Outside of yourself or your particular friends: "Joseph . . . whose branches run over the wall" (Gen. 49:22).

11. In the midst of and through opposition: "By thee I have run through a troop" (2 Sam. 22:30).

12. Well shod: "Your feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace" (Eph. 6:15).

—Selected

The Restitution

Issued weekly by
THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING COMPANY.

Entered as second-class matter under act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

TERMS.

One year $1.50; six months 75 cents. In advance.

ROBT. G. HUGGINS.....Editor
BUELL W. NUTT.....Manager

BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Burton H. Lang, Harry Pott,
Chas. A. Goss, Robt. G. Pate,
Buell W. Nutt, D. T. Robison,
W. S. Tomlinson.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

All remittances should be sent by bank draft, post office money order or express money order to The Restitution Publishing Co., 903 Parkwood drive, Cleveland, Ohio.

All communication intended for publication should be sent to the editor, Robt. G. Huggins, 10623 Lee avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

It is necessary to adhere strictly to the rule of not returning unused manuscripts. Writers will please keep copies, or risk the loss.

While the editor exercises a general supervision over the articles appearing in The Restitution, his endorsement does not extend to the interpretation of details nor the exegesis of particular texts in the writings of contributors.

Cleveland, Ohio....Jan. 23, 1912

EDITORIAL

We are gratified that the brethren near Troy, Ohio, have obtained Bro. A. Wallace Mason for a few months' service, beginning the first Sunday in February. The blessing of the Lord attend them in their pastoral effort.

Sister R. C. Elliott sends $1.50 and the names of some interested friends to whom she orders sample copies of The Restitution and tracts to be sent. Many thanks, Sister Elliott. It is largely thru the kindness of brethren and sisters in sending us names of friends and neighbors for sample copies that our mailing list grows.

The Sunday School Notes is a new feature this week. Many have requested notes on the lessons, and Bro. Sanford, our superintendent in Cleveland, has kindly consented to write them. Although new work to him, it will be perceived by his first effort which is published this week, that he will soon be doing the work in a very creditable and satisfactory manner.

Bro. Allard asks: "What is the law Jesus is mediator of? He is the mediator of some covenant. The Hebrews writer (9:15) says he is the mediator of the new covenant. What are the words of the new covenant? Kindly ask this question through the paper. Where can we find the words of which the new covenant consists?" We suggest II. Cor. 3 as an explanation of this question. However, we leave the question open for the pens of our contributors.

We are in the clutches of a record-breaking winter. Just when the thermometer was playing pranks and food duffs were soaring, and the city was threatened with scarcity of provisions, the expressman delivered a box at our home. Inspection was promptly begun. Bro. B. F. Smith and family were the readers. No need to go into details. Suffice it to say that it contained a "variety" of good things fresh from the farm. We have enjoyed these things hugely three times a day since they came. Many thanks to our brother Smith and his estimable family for such an opportune and useful present.

EDITOR'S SERMON NOTES ON THE APOCALYPSE.

IV.

Subject: Christ's Message to the Sardian Church.

Text: Rev. 3:1-6.

I. Christ's fulness versus the emptiness of the church (ver. 1; Matt. 7:11; James 4:3).

II. Things in the church which Christ Condemns. (1. A name that thou livest and art dead (ver. 1; I. Tim. 5:6; Matt. 8:22; Lk. 15:24; Rom. 6:11; 11:15; Eph. 2:1, 5; Heb. 6:1; 9:14; Jas. 2). II. Remnant—but "ready to die" (vs. 2, 4; Psa. 51:12, 13; Ezek. 34:4) III. Works not perfect (complete) "before God" (ver. 2; Eph. 2:10; Matt. 3:15; Rom. 13:8; Rev. 11:10).

III. Things in the church which Christ commends. 1. How they had "heard and received" the truth at first. The "how" may refer to:

(a) The subject-matter of the truth (Col. 2:6; I. Tim. 6:11, 12, 20; II. Tim 1:13, 14); or

(b) Its hearty reception (I. Thess. 1:5-10; Gal. 4:13-15; II. Pet. 1:9).

1. "A few names" (ver. 4; Gen. 18:24; II. Pet. 2:6-9; I Kings 14:13). II. Garments not defiled—the garments of grace are easily defiled and corrupted (ver. 4; Isa. 61:10; Gal. 3:27; Eph. 5:27; Jas. 3:2; II. Pet. 3:20; II. Cor. 7:1; Rev. 19:8). III. "Walk with me in white" (ver. 4; Gen. 17:1; Zech 3:7; John 17:24; Rom. 8:17; Ezek. 1:12, 20; Rev. 14:4). IV. "They are worthy" (ver. 4; Matt. 10:10; 22:8; Luke 20:35; 21:31; II. Thess. 1:5, 11; Rev. 16:6; Rom. 1:32; 6:23).

IV. The Promise. I. "White raiment"—immortality (ver. 5, I. Pet. 1:4; Rev. 21:27; II. Cor. 5; Matt. 13:43). II "Not blot out his name" (ver. 5) Some men are (a) Not written in the book of life (Rev. 13:8; 17:8; 20:12, 15).

(b) Some are written (Esther 6:1-3; Mal. 3:17; II. Cor. 3:3; Dan. 12:1; Luke 10:20; Phil. 4:3; Heb. 12:22; Rev. 21:27).

(c) Some who are written in it are afterwards blotted out (Psa. 51:1; Acts 3:19; Deut. 29:20; Exo. 32:32, 33; Psa. 69:28; Rev. 22:19).

THE SUPREME IMPORTANCE OF PASTORAL WORK—No. 2.

The Example of God as Given in the Old Testament Glorifies the Pastoral Office.

In the dawn of the world's history ties of solidarities began to entwine themselves around the increasing population. The relationship of brotherhood is met with at the very threshold. The first child born into the world denied this relationship with all its obligations and responsibilities. "Cain was of that wicked one, and slew his brother" (I. John 3:12). He raised the question, "Am I my brother's keeper?" (Gen. 4:9). God answered that he was; and for his despicable failure to "keep" his brother, the Lord "cursed him from the earth" (Gen. 4:11), because he had committed a sin too great to be forgiven (verse 13, margin). Thus early in the morning of the world's history God gave us a marvelous forgleam of brotherly duty—a forgleam which outran the sunrise and painted a rare vision of our duty towards our brethren upon the sackcloth of night. We are our "brother's keeper." Cain in refusing to fill this office toward his brother was cast out of the Lord's favor as guilty of a sin "greater than may be forgiven" (Gen. 4:13)—a vile "fugitive and vagabond" (verse 14)—an appropriate type of that "evil servant" who says in his heart, "My Lord delayeth his coming," and immediately begins to "smite his fellow servants" (Matt. 24:48, 49).

Perhaps we can best see our duty of being our "brother's keeper" by looking at the example of God. Does his example in the Old Testament show him as making a speciality of evangelization, or does it exhibit him preeminently as a shepherd or pastor? God's example we may safely follow. As children the more god-like we become, the more we reflect our Father, the better. What, then, is the example of God as pictured in the Old Testament? His example shows that he thinks pastoral work supreme—he glorifies the pastoral office.

He begins as an evangelist in Gen. 12:1 by calling Abraham out from his country and kindred. He continued his evangelistic campaign until, for the "father's sake" he set his love upon Israel (Deut. 7:7, 8) and delivered them out of Egypt. Here his evangelistic endeavor had begotten a family; to him they were a "peculiar treasure, above all people." (Exo. 19:5) Does not reason stop in here and say, Lord, the chief thing now, the great burden of your heart now, is to take care of your children. If evangelistic effort is to continue it must be merely a "side line." If Israel is "above all people," you can never think as much and do as much for sinners as for them. Our God is a reasonable God. In harmony with reason, common sense, the Bible and everything else good, God dropped out almost wholly evangelistic features and began pastoral work as the supreme and primary work of all endeavor.

Addressing Israel, his people, the Lord says: "What nation is there so great who hath God so nigh unto them, as the Lord our God is in all things that we call upon him for? And what nation is there so great, that hath statutes and judgments so righteous as all this law?" (Deut. 47, 8); "The Lord thy God hath chosen thee to be a special people unto himself, ABOVE ALL PEOPLE THAT ARE UPON THE FACE OF THE EARTH" (7:6); "YOU ONLY HAVE I KNOWN OF ALL THE FAMILIES OF THE EARTH." (Amos 3:2).

Dear reader, you must see by these texts that no other nation had God "so nigh unto them" as Israel; that no other nation had statutes and judgments "so righteous" as they; that no other people were so "special" to God as they—that they were "above all people upon the face of the earth." "You only" is the exclusive way Amos 3:2 words it, "You only have I known of all the families of the earth." From this it appears that it is not God the evangelist but God the pastor. He became so absorbed with the care of his "special people," his time was so unreservedly given to his people, who, to him, were so far "above all other people," that he quite ignored the others—almost forgot to evangelize anybody! 'Tis true he sent prophets "betimes" but these were not sent to evangelize the sinners of the gentiles, but to Israel, "because he had compassion on his people, and on his dwelling place" (II Chron. 36:15) His "backsliding children" (Jer. 3:14) were supplied with "pastors according to mine heart," which says he, "shall feed you with knowledge and understanding." (Jer. 3:15). Almost without exception the ministry of the prophets was a pastoral ministry. While pastors to feed his people "knowledge and understanding" were provided by a kind heavenly Father, "according to his heart," evangelistic activity almost ceased. Hear Paul and Barnabas: "God which made heaven and earth, and the sea, and all things therein, in times past suffered all nations (but Israel) to work in their own way." (Acts 14:15, 16). The only modification they make in this startling, sweeping declaration is that he did not leave himself entirely without witness, in that he, in a general way he "did good, giving rain, fruitful seasons," etc. (verse 17). God did not prosecute evangelistic enterprises with much fervency at this age of the world certainly. That he should leave "all nations" in heathenish darkness without trying even to evangelize them, is an insoluable riddle if men have immortal souls. His theodicy, however, is plain when we learn that "all nations" are to him "as a drop in a bucket," "as the small dust of the balance," and "as nothing" (Isa. 40:15, 17). Suffering them to walk in their own way is deportment which harmonizes with his estimate of humanity. Evangelism he could easily dispense with and practically did dispense with it.

For a time he let all nations walk in their own ways; that was a trivial matter; but he took good care that his people were led like a shepherd feeds his flock; he graciously gathered up the lambs in his arms lest they should weary with fatigue, and oh, how tenderly he held them in his bosom near his heart! And with what gentleness did he lead those with young! (Isa. 40:11).

"The Lord is my shepherd:
I shall not want. He maketh me to lie down in green pastures; he leadeth me beside the still waters. He restoreth my soul: he leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for his name's sake. Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil; for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me. Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies: Thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over. Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life; and I will dwell in the house of the Lord forever." (Psa. 23).

COMMUNICATIONS.

Dear Brother Huggins:

A series of meeting were held in the church at Salem, Ohio, commencing Sunday, December 31, and closing January 14. Brother and Sister Robison spoke the first Sunday. I arrived in Salem on Tuesday, and spoke every night after that and twice on Sundays till the special meetings closed. The weather turned extremely cold, and part of the time with a very high wind; the result was that most nights we had only a small attendance, but on the first Sunday night I spoke we had a good crowd, and all were very attentive to what was said.

Brother Robison spoke on the subject, "The Bible its Own Interpreter." I pointed out that the Bible was written by persons at long different periods apart, but that it was perfectly harmonious; that the ancient histories of Nineveh, Babylon, Egypt, Greece and Rome, proved in contradistinction to the so-called higher critics that the books must have been written at the time they claim to have been; that this book must be a divine revelation, and consequently every one should give the greatest heed to its teachings. I showed that the promises made to the fathers were sure to be fulfilled; that salvation could not possibly be obtained by any one unless he believed just what God had promised, and obeyed just what he has commanded. I pointed out that the large mass of the so-called Christian world has changed his promises, altered his requirements, and so brought death instead of life upon themselves. I showed that God in condemning Adam to return to the dust on account of his sin, was in perfect harmony with natural laws: that if the brain is injured it loses its power just in proportion to the injury inflicted; and when the brain is destroyed, "man knows not anything;" that the only way to attain to eternal life is by and through Jesus the Christ; that "God only has immortality," and will only give it to those (when Jesus Christ comes here again) who have believed and obeyed him and formed Christ-like characters. I showed that Jesus must have been the Son of God, as the prophets foretold, the angel announced to his mother, John declared, Jesus claimed, and the apostles testified. That if he had been the son of Joseph as some have claimed, he could not have been the spotless lamb prefigured in all the sacrifices; that Adam through his transgression threw his brain (so to speak) off the balance, and none have been back on the proper balance since, save Jesus the Christ.

I gave one night a talk on phrenology, showing that it was in perfect harmony with the Scriptures, and explained the reason for the great difference of character amongst mankind. I spoke one evening on the "Apostle [illegible] and his wonderful character; the condition of things existing in Jerusalem on his last visit there. Also the condition of things at Rome which led up to his death and the destruction of many more Christians by Nero. I stopped with brother and sister Robison while at Salem, and they treated me with the greatest of kindness.

C. A. WALLACE MASON.
Troy, O.

Dear Brother Huggins:—I thought perhaps the readers of The Restitution would like to hear from the discussion between T. J. Hines and myself, that was held in this town, beginning on December 27th, and lasting four days. The propositions were: 1st. "The Scripture teach that the kingdom of Christ (God), was established on the first Pentecost after the resurrection of Christ. T. J. Hines, affirmed; T. J. Daniel denied, and, The Scriptures teach that man is wholly mortal, and unconscious from death till the resurrection. T. J. Daniel, affirms; J. T. Hines, denies.

The first proposition discussed was the kingdom question. Eld. Hines lead out by trying to prove that church and kingdom were synonymous terms, and labored to show that the kingdom could not have been established before the day of Pentecost. I showed that they were not synonymous terms, that you could not use them interchangeably and make good sense; more than this, they were from different words in the Greek, and had entirely different meaning. Kingdom was from Basileia, and meant a country ruled by a king. Church was from ekklesia, and meant "called out." Hines claimed that Christ had been highly exalted to God's right hand and given a "name above every name, that at his name every knee should bow, and every tongue confess that Christ was Lord to the glory of the Father." All of which I admitted, and admitted that he was king, was born king, but the time for him to reign had not come, and would not until he put all things under him. "The Lord said unto my Lord, sit thou on my right hand until I (God) make thy foes thy footstool," until then, Christ's reign had not come to reign.

Hines then said that Christ gave unto Peter the keys of the kingdom, and if kingdom did not mean church, Peter burglarized the church with the keys. I answered, "True, Christ gave Peter the keys and he used them; that Mr. Webster defines the term 'key' to mean 'anything that explains, unfolds or makes clear a mystery,' and that Christ had been speaking unto them of the kingdom in parables ,because it was not given unto the multitude to understand the mysteries of the kingdom, but unto the apostles it was given to know them. Knowledge of the mysteries, therefore, was the keys of the kingdom; they understood them, and not one of them taught that the kingdom was set up on Pentecost; but on the other hand they all showed that the kingdom was in the future. That Paul fourteen years after Pentecost, said, 'It is through much tribulation that we are to enter into the kingdom of God.' James said we were 'Heirs of the kingdom, which he had promised to them that love him.' Peter told the church, the very ones the gentleman says is the kingdom, that if they would add to their faith all the Christian graces, they should have an abundant entrance into the kingdom. That Paul said the Lord would "judge the quick and the dead" when his kingdom came: all showing that the kingdom had not been set up on Pentecost."

Hines then said that Christ was the heir to David's throne, and that it had been transferred to heaven and that Christ was seated on it, for Peter said Christ was raised up to set upon his throne. I admitted that Christ was the heir of David's throne, but that it had not been transferred to heaven, but on the other hand it had been "cast down to the ground" (Psa. 89), and would remain there until Christ returned, when he would rebuild the tabernacle of David, take his seat upon David's throne, and rule the world in righteousness. As proof of this, James says, "Simon hath declared how that God at the first did visit the gentiles to take out of them a people for his name, and to this agree the words of the prophet, as it is written, After this, saith the Lord, I will return, and build again the tabernacle of David which is fallen down, and I will build again the ruins thereof, and I will set it up, that the residue of men might seek after the Lord, and all the gentiles upon whom my name is called, saith the Lord." This visit to the gentiles is not yet; the Lord has not "RETURNED," and in as much as the tabernacle of David was to be rebuilt when he "returned," it had not been rebuilt, and therefore Christ had not taken his seat on it. More than this, the throne of David was Christ's throne, and he said, "To him the overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I am also overcome and am set down with my Father in His throne." Hence Christ was with his Father in his throne, and not on his own throne, and would not be till he comes again; hence he has not begun his reign.

Hines then said, "The kingdom is established from the fact Paul says we have been translated into the kingdom of his dear Son." I showed that if the gentleman was debating with a Baptist, the Baptist would quote the Scripture where it said they were in the kingdom before Pentecost, and that he, Hines, would claim that it meant that they were in the preparatory or preached state of the kingdom, not in the kingdom itself. Now, since the gospel of the kingdom was to be "preached into all the world for a witness unto all nations, then shall the end come," we are still in the preached state of the kingdom, and that was the only sense in which we had been "translated into it." More than this, the proposition is, in this place, was often translated "for" and by rendering it for in this place, it made Paul in harmony with himself. It was translated "for" in Acts 2:37, where it says, "Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ (eis) for the remission of sins." In this place the gentleman will tell you that it means "in order to," or "for." Again, in Luke 9:63, it is translated "for," and the gentleman will not deny but it is correctly rendered. Then, if it means "for" in Acts 2:37, and "for" in Luke 9:63, why should it not mean "for" in Col. 1:13? To this argument there was no answer. I also showed that it was rendered "for" in the Emphatic Diaglott.

I then introduced a line of negative argument showing that Christ would not take his seat on his throne until he comes again. "When the son of man shall sit upon the throne of his glory, ye shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel." Again, "When the son of man shall come in his glory with all his holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory." These, and many other text were adduced to prove that Christ would not take his seat upon his throne until he came again, therefore could not begin his reign till then.

I next showed that the saints would not possess the kingdom until the judgment. Daniel says, "I beheld, and the same horn made war with the saints, and prevailed against them, until the ancient of days came, and judgment was given unto the saints of the most high, and the time came for the saints to possessed the kingdom." When would judgment be given unto the saints? "Judge nothing before the time, till the Lord comes." This settles the question, for the saints were not to possess the kingdom until judgment was given unto them, and judgment could not be given unto them until the Lord comes. Therefore the saints would not possess the kingdom until the Lord comes. Again, Christ says that when he comes in his glory, and all nations are gathered before him, that he shall separate them one from another as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats," THEN shall the King say unto them on his right hand, Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." This is in harmony with the above, and shows that the saints will possess the kingdom at the judgment. Hence Paul says Christ shall judge the quick and the dead, "at his appearing and his kingdom." Then the nobleman shall have returned, and makes his servants rulers according to their several ability. Then the "dominion and kingdom and greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven shall be given to the saints of the Most High."

I tell you, Brother Huggins, every one there could see that we were right. But this article is already too long, but I would have liked to have told you some of the arguments on the second proposition, and more of the arguments on the kingdom. But space forbids. Suffice it to say that I showed beyond a shadow of a [illegible] that he would yet reign upon it in Mount Zion and in Jerusalem, and that all "kings would fall down before him, and all nations would serve him." I showed that God would send forth the "rod of his strength out of Zion," and that Christ would rule "in the midst of his enemies," and would "wound the heads over many countries." That after his kingdom shall have been established, and all things that "offend" gathered out of it, that "then should the righteous shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father." That "swords would be beat into plowshares and spears into pruning hooks, that nation would not lift up sword against nation, neither should they learn war any more," because the "kingdom would be the Lord's, and he would be the governor among the nations." So grand was the subject, that many could not refrain from shedding tears at my closing speech. I am sure much good will result, for many came and heard the debate that would not hear us otherwise. If this does not find its way into the waste basket, I will write again and tell you some more of the arguments on this and the second proposition.

We are proud of The Restitution, and are not ashamed to hand it out to our friends. God bless you in your work of love.

Your loving brother,
T. J. Daniel.

P. S.—We want Bro. Almus Adams to come this way when he makes his tour south. We are anxious to get acquainted with some of you brethren north, as we have stood alone here for thirty years and fought the battles for the truth. Of course we are poor, and are not able to pay Bro. Adams much, but we hope those who are able will pay his way, so he can come here. We have a good house of worship here, and it is deeded to me, and I want to deed it to the Church of God. I can find out to whom to make the deed in trust. What about this? Have we some one to whom we can deed the property of the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith? If not, why not?

Magazine, Ark.

(Both editor and reader are anxious for Bro. Daniel to continue the report of his debate. Articles so well written and upon such living and vital Bible truths do not get into the waste basket. We hope brother Adams can arrange to give you a meeting.

As to you holding the deed of the Church at Magazine, we are not qualified to speak on legal matters authoritatively, but we understand that church property cannot be held by the church when deeded to an individual. The only legal way of transferring property to the Church of God, or any other church, is to have it incorporated, and then in making out the deed use only the incorporated name of the church, taking care not to mention any one's name. If the names of persons are mentioned, the church cannot hold the property.—Editor).

SUNDRY SUBJECTS OF INTERREST WITH EDITORIAL STRICTURES

The Scriptures abound in proof of Christ being king—prospectively—over Israel, and probation for the gentiles during the millenium. If he was born to this end, will he not be king of Israel when he wields the scepter? He was born a king to rule Israel, but they would not accept him, as a nation, hence his reign was delayed until he takes his bride—the full number—out of Jew and gentile for his name. Then Israel will be restored (Isa. 54:6). Rom. 11:25, 26). The bride the Lamb's wife, is to reign with him a thousand years. (Rev. 5:10; 20:4-6). And he shall speak peace unto the heathen: And his dominion shall be from sea, even unto sea, and from the river to the ends of the earth. (Zech. 9:10).

Dear reader, did our Lord ever reign one moment or have a dominion while here preaching the gospel of the kingdom? No, verily! But he did say "The Son of man hath not where to lay his head." Will his word fail? No! He did say, "My word shall never fail." Do we believe him? If Rev. 20:4-6 is in the past, where and when was it fulfilled? John says "When the seventh angel sounds the kingdoms of this world shall become the kingdom of our Lord and his Christ." So the little flock knows that the seventh angel has not sounded yet, nor won't until the appearing of our Blessed Lord.

Behold a king shall rule in righteousness, and a prince shall rule in judgment. (Isa. 32:1). He cometh to judge the earth: with righteousness shall he judge the world (Ps. 98:9). Again, "And the Lord shall be king over all the earth: in that day shall there be one Lord and his name one (Zech. 14:9).

I understand "the Lord" of this text to be our Lord Jesus Christ when he shall take the authority to rule the nations at his coming, together with all that shall be born during his reign until he subdues all things to himself that is opposed to his Father. Then cometh the end. (1 Cor. 15:24-25). Remember the word "end" in the final is always in Scripture when he is accepted of the Father, that God may be all in all. "The end" at no time is applicable to the coming of Christ or to the end of this age. When the end is spoken of in Matt. 24:14, it is not applied to the end of this age; for the gospel of the kingdom was preached to every creature under heaven by the apostles; Paul says so (Col. 1:23). But the gospel of the kingdom shall be preached by the bride of Christ as a witness; that it is set up in the next age, to all nations.

You should see, dear reader, that there is a difference between the gospel of the kingdom which the Apostles were to preach and did preach, and which we are preaching to those that the apostles did not preach to on account of their death, and the gospel as a witness to those in the next age, with Christ at the head of government at Jerusalem. John said he was to prophesy again "before many peoples, and nations, and tongues, and kings." He said this after the seventh angel sounded (Rev. 10:7 11: Ps. 22:30, 31: Jer. 33:26). In Psalms and Jeremiah you will find a seed called "a generation" that will proclaim the gospel to a nation that is to be born after Christ comes; also to those that are on the earth at his coming.

Christ is not king—priest yet. He is only our mediator at the right hand of God interceding for us. Our Lord will be king—priest after the order of Melchisedic when he begins his reign. Oh, happy day! Come, Lord Jesus.

The woman spoken of in Rev. 12:1, 6, that flew into the wilderness is the Jewish church or Israel (Rom. 9:4, 5). Some say it was the Christian church. That this woman is not the body of Christ is evident from the following facts: First, this woman brought forth the man child who was to rule all nations with a rod of iron. This child was Jesus (Ps. 2:6-12; Rev. 19:15). Secondly, Christ was about thirty years old before he commenced preaching (Luke 3:21-23). Thirdly, there was no body of Christ before he began to preach, therefore it was not the church of Christ (Rev. 12: 6, 16) that went into the wilderness, unless the man Christ Jesus was at least thirty years older than his mother, and that could not possibly be.

The woman of Rev. 12:1 is Israel (Rom. 9:4, 5). So the woman clothed with the sun was the Jews; enshrouded with the gospel of the son of God, which was preached by Christ through all their cities (John 1:19. Matt. 9:35). This lifted them above the moon, the light of the law, when compared with the sunlight of the gospel. The twelve stars that crowned her head were the twelve apostles, each one of them being an Israelite, and made the apostles of Christ and of the gospel. This same woman brought forth the man child—the Christ—and fled into the wilderness.

The mother church that our Lord was born of was the Jewish church. Born of a woman, born under the law. That church has been scattered to the four winds from the time Titus besieged Jerusalem. And they are in the wilderness "until the fulness of the gentiles be come in" (Rom. 11:25) When the abomination is taken away then all Israel alive—shall be saved (Rom. 11:26; Matt. 24:29).

Immediately after the tribulation, the sun shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven." Then their tribulation shall cease, and their long punishment shall end. No one can understand the gospel of the kingdom and the nature of Christ's reign, except they believe God's word concerning the restoration of Israel.

Many people believe our Lord will immediately destroy all the unpenitent when he comes in the clouds of heaven. Such is not the case. If it were so then all the families of the earth would not be blessed. Let us see if a prophesy uttered by an angel is all fulfilled in one day or one year. The angel said to Mary that she should have a son. He was born 1912 years ago. Next: "He shall be great, and shall be called the son of the highest." This has come to pass. "And the Lord God shall give him the throne of his Father David, and of his kingdom there shall be no end." This promise has not been fulfilled, nor will it be until he takes the throne. So we see in a few utterances that many years must elapse between the things promised before all are fulfilled (Luke 1:30-33). God has promised Israel blessings after he is ceased to punish them for their sins, and has said, "Considerest thou not what this people have spoken, saying, the two families which the Lord hath chosen, saying"—a class of people say this yet—"he hath even cast them off? Thus they have despised my people—the two families—that they should be no more a nation before them. Thus saith the Lord: If my covenant be not with day and night, and if I have not appointed the ordinances of heaven and earth, then will I cast away the seed—fleshly seed—of Jacob and David my servant so that I will not take any of his seed—David's spiritual seed, Christ and his saints—to be rulers over the seed of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, for I will cause their captivity to return and have mercy on them" (Jer. 33:26).

Now, dear reader, if God has not appointed the ordinances of heaven and earth, then the Christ and his saints will never be rulers over the fleshly seed of Israel. But the Bible student knows that they will rule them in the future. Israel's restoration to their own land is unconditional. (A little too strong, brother. Read Ezek. 20:33-39.—Editor) "But I had pity for mine holy name which the house of Israel had profaned among the heathen. Therefore say to the house of Israel, thus saith the Lord God, I do not this for your sakes, O house of Israel, but for mine holy name's sake." (Ezek. 36:21-38; Rom. 11:25-33).

In Rom. 11:29, Paul positively declares that the "gifts and calling of God are without repentance." This calling back to their former estate is without repentance but a free gift as God hath declared. (Here again the facts of the case are overstated. See the Greek text of Rom. 11:29.—Ed). Christ's title is good as an heir to David's throne, for he is of the seed of David according to the flesh and will reign over Israel during the millenium. And as Jesus is heir to his father David's throne, and also the son of God by the resurrection from the dead, his title is good.

Some deny this fact and say "It won't do for an immortal king to reign over mortal subjects." What about God the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ reigning over mortal Israel before they called another king to reign over them? (Matt. 25:31: Then shall he sit upon the throne of glory. Matt. 25 is all about the kingdom. If God's oath is worth anything then the fruit of David's loins will sit upon his throne. Therefore being a prophet, and knowing—not guessing—that God had sworn with an oath to him that of the fruit of his loins he would raise up Christ—from the dead — to sit on his throne (2 Sam. 7:12-16; Acts 2: 30). Of course we all are anxious to know when our Lord shall come and reign, but there is no definite time that we may know except what the angel said to Daniel when he was informed that God was going to destroy Jerusalem by Titus and the Roman army. then Daniel heard one saint speaking, and another saint said unto that certain saint which spake, how long shall be the vision concerning the daily sacrifice and transgression of desolations to give both the sactuary and the host to be trodden under foot? And he said unto me, unto two thousand and three hundred days, then shall the sactuary be clean" (Dan. 8:13, 14). The two thousand three hundred days we understand to be two thousand three hundred years, a day for a year. And in the seige of Jerusalem by Titus in fulfillment of God's judgment upon his people, spoken by Moses (Deut. 28), the daily sacrifice was taken away, as Josephus well says, for there was nothing left to sacrifice. From that time until now tribulation and God's wrath have been upon the Israelites and will be until Christ shall take it off, which you will see in Acts 24:21. He says, immediately after the tribulation of those days shall the sun be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven, and the powers of the heavens shall be shaken. Then—after the tribulan shall end—shall appear the siga of the son of man in heaven (Matt. 24:29, 30). Jesus said there never had been such tribulation as was to befall on the Jews nor never will be again. Hear him: "For in those days shall be affliction such as was not from the beginning of creatim which God created unto this time, neither shall be" (Mark 13:14-20). From that time unto the coming of their king that affliction is to stay on them (Luke 21:20-24).

Can any subject be plainer than this? Is not Jerusalem trodden down yet by the Gentiles? But Jesus said they would call him "Blessed" when he comes to restore them as they were in the days of old. The Jews shall say, "Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord" (Matt. 23:39).

"For a small moment I have forsaken thee, but with great mercies will I gather thee." In a little wrath I hid my face from thee for a moment, but with everlasting kindness will I have mercy on thee, saith the Lord thy Redeemer" (Isa. 54:7, 8). If God's time of casting his people off on account of their sin for 2330 years is only a moment in his sight, we should be satisfied. "Behold the days come, saith the Lord, that I will raise up unto David a righteous branch. A king shall reign and prosper, and he shall execute judgment and justice in the earth." No mortal ruler has ever brought righteousness to the earth. "He shall have dominion also from sea to sea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth." "They that dwell in the wilderness shall bow before him, and his enemies shall bring presents: The kings of Sheba shall offer gifts, yea, all kings shall fall down before him; all nations shall serve him" (Psa. 72:10). This don't look as if all the people on the earth shall be immediately destroyed at his presence, does it dear reader? Blessed be his holy name, "all nations shall call him blessed" (v. 17). All nations do not call him blessed now. The prayer of David was ended after foreseeing the grand and glorious reign of his son according to the flesh, blessing and executing righteousness in all the earth. May God help us to study his word, and so live as to have a share in that day.

Let us hear from David what shall be said by all Israel at the end of the millenulum, when he and all the faithful shall come up in the last resurrection: "Praise ye the Lord. Sing unto the Lord a new song, and his praise in the congregation of saints. Let Israel rejoice in him that made him; let the children of Zion be joyful in their king. Let the saints be joyful in glory; let them sing aloud upon their beds. Let everything that hath breath praise the Lord." O what a joyful time this will be when our Lord shall have conquered all enemies in the final resurrection of all things spoken of by all the holy prophets since the world began.

Editor's Reply

This article is good—so good that we gladly give it room in our editorial page—yet it contains several mistakes that we fell duty bound to point out. The writer's name is omitted so he will not feel himself criticized, and with no feelings hurt, he can better profit by the kind and brotherly strictures following:

I. "The End." When our contributor says that this expression "at no time is applied to the coming of Christ, or to the end of this age," he is not guarded enough in his statement. "The end of your faith" in 1. Pet. 1:9 and "hope to the end" in verse 13, are two ends which terminate "at the revelation of Jesus Christ," or at his "appearing" (vss. 13, 7). "The end of this world" in Matt. 13:40 is defined to be when the son of man "sends forth his angels," which is at his second advent (25: 31). and when the righteous "shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father" (vss. 41, 43). Our liberty of speech is limited to the oracles of God (1. Pet. 4:11).

The distinction our writer makes between the gospel as it is proclaimed now and as it will be proclaimed in the next age is a scriptural one, but the texts used to prove it are an unfortunate selection. Take what he says about "the end" in Matt. 24:14 and see what an absurdity is involved. Addressing "the disciples" (ver. 3) he says, "Take heed that no man deceive you." Then he tells them of the dangers confronting them: the false Christs, rumors of war, rising of nations against nations, famines, earthquakes, etc. "Many false prophets shall rise, and deceive many. And because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold. But he that endureth unto the end, the same shall be saved" vss. 4-13). If "the end" is always applied to the end of the millennium, as our writer alleges, then the reign of Christ will be a reign of false prophets, false Christs, wars, famines, earthquakes, deception, iniquity abounding and love waxing colder and colder! "He that endureth to the end," that is, "the disciples" he is adressing must face and "endure" through these perilous times "to the end," that is, after they have waded through these evils for a thousand years successfully, "the same shall be saved!" We want nothing to do with an "end" like this.

II. The woman of Rev. 12. The three reasons assigned by our writer against this woman being the Christian Church are entirely insufficient and pointless. To make Christ the "manchild" of this woman is to make historic what is prophetic. The apocalypse was written in A. D. 96. John begins by stating that he is going to write of things future from his day; the book is expressly called a "prophecy" (Rev. 1:1, 3). From the 4th chapter onwards the whole book deals with "things which must be hereafter" (Rev. 4:1). Christ had been born 96 years before Rev. 12 was written. To make Rev. 12 historic is to deny the "hereafter" or prophetic characteristic of the book.

III. "All Israel." When our writer quotes Rom. 11:26 and interjects the word "alive" into the passage, he nullifies the text itself and all other Scripture which bears upon Israel's restoration. The passage does not say that "all Israel alive shall be saved," but all Israel whom the Deliverer in Zion "turns away from ungodliness in Jacob.' All living Israelites are not saved when Christ comes. "Two parts shall be cut off and die; (that is, to live out his good resolutions and promises to God in every day life, no matter what comes or goes), and say: God helping me, I will! and not stop at this, but do it. But the question is often asked: What is the use of a man striving all his life with every effort to become great? When he gets ready to die he cannot carry one iota of his honor or greatness with him. He must leave it, and what benefit is it to him if he does make some one better? "For there is no knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave whither thou goest." Then why should we strive or care to be recognized as foremost among men? Let us ask the question straight as it is recorded: "What profit hath a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul, or what can he give in exchange for his soul?" Has the man who has a vision to the highest office in his country gained anything when he is on his death-bed? We say he has set a good example for others; true enough, but when he is dead he will not know anything about it.

But there is another side to this question. In the first place, while this man was working for this position he was using all his energy in this line of work; he had no time to associate with the debauched any more than was necessary. He knew if he was to be successful he must always be not only busy, but clean; his thoughts must be clean and his aims of the highest or he cannot control himself when the darker hours come, when it seems that everything goes wrong. If, when he made up his mind to "be something" and to try for his first position of responsibility, he had habits that would in anyway be a drawback to him, he had to drop them, and the only way that could be done was to forget them, and the only way to forget them is to keep his thoughts upon purer, holier things all the time. Follow for another example, a pessimistic character like our subject, through one day—what conversation do we hear? Is it not of the lowest, immoral subjects? This is just the reason he never has any luck: he never gives luck a chance at him. His mind and life are full of just such things as we hear him talk about. What is the business man's conversation? Why, business; that is what his mind is on, and that is the reason he succeeds. Then we see from a moral standpoint that it is better to live for something. But there is a more vital reason than this, since the gold, the knowledge and the wisdom of this world must perish with the man who absorbs them "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind." If we do this we will not have time to brood over bad luck, or to seek some position of high rank or honor, merely for the money or honor, we get out of it. "Love not the world, neither the things of the world." Man that is in honor and understandeth not, is like the beasts that perish. Now the question arises often, how can this be done? Does this mean to hate money and these men of honor, or the business man? No! because they each have their place in God's great plan. The latter helps to make the world morally better, but if we would live for a purpose, live to make a record of good things, and to set a good example for some one else, we must make our lives worthy of seeing the good we have done after this world, or there is not much consolation in doing these things. In order for us to be successful in striving for eternal life we must keep ourselves pure. How? "Behold, thou desirest truth in the inward parts, and in the hidden part thou shalt make me to know wisdom" (Psa. 51:6). "He that loveth pureness of heart, for the grace of his lips the king shall be his friend." "The way of man is forward, and strange, but as for the pure, his work is right." We must first purify our hearts. How? By putting the past under our feet, no matter what it has been, with a firm resolution say, I will, and do it. God will help us and "His grace is sufficient," for "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee." saith the Lord.

We know there are Bereans among us who are honest, true followers of Christ, but seemingly they are afraid to take hold of the work for fear some one will offend them with some remark about their awkwardness. If we never start to do anything we will never get anything done; that is sure. Let us not allow the things of this world to hold us from being what God wants us to be. "God is our all." He is king and will not suffer his subjects to be defeated if they are loyal. Then, beloved, let us put away all things not pleasing in God's sight. You say it is impossible to quit some habit, or to perform some duties. Read the tenth chapter of 1. Corinthians, in the 13th verse we find these words: "There hath no temptation taken you but such as is common to man; but God is faithful who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able, but will with the temptation also make a way to escape, that ye may be able to bear it." Then with this blessed hope within us, let us "press on toward the mark of the high calling;" shoulder to shoulder, rejoicing in the great love the Father hath bestowed upon us, incessantly praying on

BEREAN DEPARTMENT.

What Are We Living For?

We often hear in our daily life, among the young or middle aged men, who have never been successful or made a noticeable impression, a statement something like this:—Well, I never had a chance to make a big name for myself as some fellows have: I never got a "pull" like Bill did; and I wouldn't be a grafter like Jim if I never had anything. Of course some of these fellows worked for what they've got, but luck was with them, but luck was always against me. Some fellows are born lucky, but I was born unlucky. Everytime I undertake to do anything I have bad luck. Whenever I get a good job something goes wrong and I lose it, and every time I make a start for religion something goes wrong and I lose out; I guess I'll never amount to anything, nobody cares anyway.

What can we say to a man like this? Can we drop a good seed here? In the first place, what is a name (a big name), and of what benefit? Is it a wise man you want to be? Paul says in 1 Cor. 3:18-20. "Let no man deceive himself; if any man among you seemeth to be wise in this world, let him become a fool that he may be wise, for the wisdom of this world is foolishness with God, for it is written, he taketh the wise in their own craftiness. And again, the Lord knoweth the thoughts of the wise, that they are vain." In Jno. 5:44 Jesus says: "How can ye believe, which receive honor of another and seek not the honor that cometh from God only? Then why seek these things? The men that are doing the most for their fellowmen are not the men who have had a "pull," nor grafters; neither are they the men who depended upon luck. "Pluck is a hero, luck is a fool." The man who spends his idle time brooding over his bad luck and blaming someone else for his predicament, or coveting some other person's position, or money, is only heaping coals of fire upon his own head, and making himself a burden to the men he is accusing for the condition of things, when it is such men as himself who are to blame. We all know that covetousness is one of the commonest sins and often leads to crime; then why covet when it is plain to be seen that there is nothing gained but all lost?

The writer depended upon luck to bring him to some great position of honor or wealth until it was found out that the longer a person stops to think about luck the less he has, and that the only way to succeed is to put one's whole life into whatever he is going to do, (that is, to live out his good resolutions and promises to God in every day life, no matter what comes or goes), and say: God helping me, I will! and not stop at this, but do it. But the question is often asked: What is the use of a man striving all his life with every effort to become great? When he gets ready to die he cannot carry one iota of his honor or greatness with him. He must leave it, and what benefit is it to him if he does make some one better? "For there is no knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave whither thou goest." Then why should we strive or care to be recognized as foremost among men? Let us ask the question straight as it is recorded: "What for another, and remembering that we are bound by a stronger tie, for "whosoever doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven, the same is my mother, my brother and my sister." Therefore remembering these words, that "a good man out of the good treasure of his heart bringeth forth that which is good, and an evil man out of the evil of his heart bringeth forth that which is evil; for out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh." Have a clean heart and do not be afraid to speak good things. We are not wafers, or calamity howlers, but we are making the best of everything ad seeking the knowledge and wisdom that will make us equal unto the angels of heaven and joint heirs with Christ. What are we living for? We are living to live again, a more happy life than we ever dreamed of: for "eye hath not seen, ear hath not heard, neither hath it entered into the heart of man, the things that the Lord hath in store for him." So, laboring on in the Master's vineyard, truth being our motto for the word of God is truth, let us not tell others what to do when we can show them. "Ye are bought with a price." Remember what this price is—A man came into the world by lowly birth, in a manger; a man "of sorrows and acquainted with the grief;" labored through his young life, then for three years suffered hunger, thirst, rebuke, derision, was denied by his own servant, then betrayed and at last killed: the most costly price that is possible for God to give to man. The only way we can make ourselves worthy of this price is to do our best all the time: work, watch ad pray; reprove, rebuke with all longsuffering and doctrine, for Jesus is coming soon. Keeping our lamps filled, trimmed and burning lest He "come like a thief in the night" and find us asleep or in the dark like unto the foolish virgins. May we be ready to meet him. This is a busy world, no one is absolutely idle; every one has some influence, either for good or bad. Thus helping everybody we can, shall we not seek to do the will of God that we may "be able to stand" and hear him say: "Well done, thou good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joys of thy Lord." "For behold I come quickly." Even so, come Lord Jesus. Amen.

LEO E. ROCK.

Avon, Iowa.

PASTOR WANTED

A church in Ohio desires to obtain a pastor who can enter upon his duties about the first of April. Any one who is sound in the faith, and is open to this call may address the Editor of The Restitution. 10623 Lee Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

We, whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones.

This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of their paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

Mrs. B. Coleman	.50
Mrs. C. E. Perego	.50
Mrs. Lydia R. Freer	1.00

DID SAMUEL'S SOUL APPEAR?

For the want of a better proof that a personality outlives the body, we are frequently informed that the disembodied soul of the prophet Samuel appeared to King Saul after the death of Samuel's body, and conversed with him.

From the record in I. Sam., xxviii., we learn the following facts:

(1) Not a word is said about Samuel's soul—they only guess it means his soul.

(2) Whatever appeared, came at the bidding of a witch.

Have wicked witches power over the departed souls of saints?

(3) Saul said, "Bring me up Samuel;" and the witch said, "I saw gods ascending out of the earth;" and Samuel said, "Why hast thou disquieted me to bring me up?"

Do the souls of saints go into the earth at death?

If not, then Samuel's soul did not appear.

If they do, then they do not go to heaven at death.

(4) Saul saw nothing himself, but inquired of the witch, "What form is he of?" She replied, "An old man cometh up."

Do some souls look older than others?

And from her description "Saul perceived that it was Samuel."

(15) He states to Saul, "To-morrow shalt thou and thy sons be with me."

If he was in bliss, those wicked men were to be in bliss too, if he spoke the truth: but Saul did not die for several days afterward: so it was not Samuel that talked, as a falsehood was told.

(16) Either the witch was purposely deceiving Saul, or it was a freak of demonology—demons appearing—one personating Samuel, and talking in his stead, and lying as usual. These "gods" existed prior to the death of men (Gen. iii. 5); consequently cannot be disembodied human souls. Ancient witchcraft was connected with demonology.—W. Sheldon.

Scripture Searchers Assistant

A very valuable help to all who are studying the Scriptures—a reprint of one of our beloved Brother Joblin's works. Trents of thirty different subjects with about four hundred references. All should possess a copy for ready reference. Price by mail six cents. Address W. S. Tomlinson, 10825 Orville Ave., N. E., Cleveland, O.

A SONG BOOK.

Songs of the Kingdom.

Recommended by Bro. Huggins and nearly all of our preachers, as by far the best song book for our people. 138 pages, flexible cloth, 25 cents each; postpaid. Address, Chas. E. Crowe, St. Paul, Neb.

Book and Tracts by Bro. W. H. Wilson.

"A Bible Study of Hades, as compared with our modern ideas," is the title of a new tract just issued by Bro. W. H. Wilson. It is a critical study of the subject of Hell. It shows that the meaning attached to this word today is different fro mthe meaning given to it years ago. It also shows how this change was made, and who made it. The price is 15 cents each, or 5 for 50 cents.

Student's Text Book, a cloth bound book 200 pages.

It deals specifically as How to study the Bible and why people fail to rightly understand God's Word. Price 50 cents.

Pine Woods Bible Class, a book of 480 pages bound in cloth. Studies are carried on as between a class and its teacher. Price $1.25.

Cunningly Devised Fables, 28 pages. Price 10 cents.

Where Will You Spend Eternity? Four pages, 25 cents per 100.

Are You in Need of Money? 4 pages 25 cents per 100.

Will It Pay to Become a Christian? Is the title to a well written book of 96 pages by Brother Jas. W. Wilson. In a clear and convincing manner it sets forth the Christian faith and answers the question indicated in its title affirmatively. The edition should be taken at once and put out to work. It is neatly bound in cloth. The price is 25 cents, very low, and within reach of all.

W. H. Wilson, at 625 North Willow avenue, Austin Station, Chicago, Illinois.

The Bible: Its Principles and Texts

As indicated by the title this book is divided into three sections. The first consists of a remarkable disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "principles" in formulated propositions, and the third expounds in a clear, impressive and homelitic manner particular "Texts." The knotty and perplexing texts of the Bible are united and solved satisfactorily to the most fastidious and critical. More than one hundred and fifteen subjects of intense interest to every Bible student are formally discussed. Both simple and scholarly—the child is fascinated and taught; the scholar is entertained and instructed. Bible lovers, here is a feast for you. Throw open the door of your home; let The Bible—its Principles and its Texts come in and bless you and your family. 309 pages, 5x7 1-2 inches, durably and handsomely bound in whole cloth, with title embossed on back in gold. One copy, $1.10, two copies or more $1.00 each. The Restitution Pub. Co.

Four Page Tracts

Can You Believe? A series of questions setting forth the fundamental points of our faith.

State of Man in Death. A collection of proof texts on this subject.

Life and Death. A short concise statement of the facts in the case.

Age to Come Not a Heresy, by H. V. Reed.

10 for 10 cents, 50 for 25 cents 100 for 40 cents.

The Paternity of Jesus. A pamphlet of 122 pages, by M. Joblin, giving in detail all that can be said on this subject, and completely proving that He is the Son of God, and not the natural son of Joseph. This work ought to be sold at 25 cents a copy, but the author was so anxious that price should not stand in the way of its being read, that he put the price at ten cents, so all can buy them Send to this office for them.

Address The Restitution Pub. Co.

Popular Lectures, By Bro. M. Joblin

Send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled: "The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to Be Saved?" The Foolishness of Preaching and Salvation—what is it?

Each lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price.

TWO TRACTS By J. L. WINCE

"Salvation" and "Resurrection" two tracts by J. L. Wince, can not fail to arouse the interest of every believer. They deal with vital questions in a most convincing manner. The price is 10c each. 12 for $1.00. For sale by S. Roxanna Wince, Pierceton, Ind.

SUBSCRIBE FOR

Words of Life

the publication of the Conditional Immortality Mission of Great Britain, advocating Life and Advent truths.

Terms: 1 copy 37c per annum, 12 copies to one address 25c per copy per annum.

Sample copy on application to

WILLIAM G. ROTHE

1301 Park Pl. Brooklyn, N. Y.

BOOKS AND TRACTS

Bible Pearls—Two-page tracts, suitable for wide distribution. 1. The Gospel. 2. Coming and Kingdom of Christ, by 20,000 Baptists in 1660. 3. Immateriality. 4. Kingdom of God. 5. Nature of Man and Thoughts for Thinkers. 6. Two Advents. 7. What is Religion? 8. Restitution Age. 9. Destiny of the Wicked. 10. Baptism. 10 copies for 5 cents, or assorted packages of 100 for 20 cents.

60 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS · DESIGNS COPYRIGHTS &c.

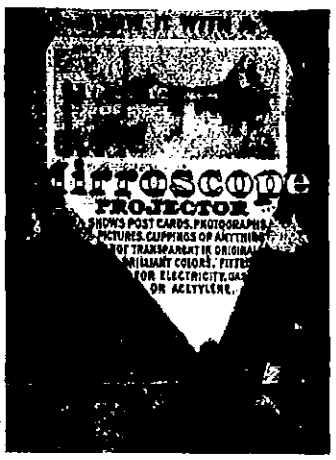
Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the

Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York

Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.



YOU will get genuine pleasure from an hour or two spent with the "Mirroscope" these long winter evenings. Pictures, Photos, Post Cards, Etc. are shown in exact reproduction same as with a high priced Stereoptican, can be used in any home and operated with Electricity, Gas or Acetylene. Prices $2.50, $5.00, $7.50, $10.00, $15.00, $20.00, according to size. Sent anywhere in the U. S. Send for one today.

HOME ILLUMINATED PICTURE CO.

311 SCHOFIELD BUILDING CLEVELAND, OHIO

Less than Half a Cent a Day

The Restitution costs a Dollar and a Half a year, that's less than half A Cent a day or three cents a copy. You can't afford to be without it. If you are a subscriber get some one else to subscribe.

Help to Get Them on the List

Sample Copies of The Restitution

May be obtained for a stamp. Send for one.

Census Blank

MEMBERSHIP CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA

Name .....

Address .....
Street Town State

By whom Immersed ..... Date .....

Fill out the above and send to "The Census Editor," The Restitution, 803 Parkwood Drive, Cleveland, O.

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co.

WHOLESALE OPTICIANS

We make a specialty of High Grade Prescription Work, and carry a full line of all kinds of Optical goods. All orders filled same day as received.

"S. K. N." SERVICE

Means prompt returns, careful work, moderate prices. Goods shipped to all parts of the country.

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co. 313 SCHOFIELD BUILDING CLEVELAND, OHIO

SPECIAL OFFER!

IN ORDER to increase the circulation of The Restitution, the following special offer is made:

One new subscriber for 1 year, choice of:

W. H. Wilson's "Student's Text Book," regular price.....50c
Or 5 Copies of "Cunningly Devised Fables," reg. price 50c
Or 5 Copies of "Bible Study of Hades," reg. price 50c

For Two New Subscribers

One Copy "Pine Woods Bible Class," 480 pages, rg. price, $1.25
Or "The Bible, Its Principles and Texts," 309 pages, reg., $1.25
Or One Hundred of Bro. Joblin's Tracts, regular price $1.20

Here is a chance to get some of the books you all should own. By making special arrangements with the authors we are able to offer them to you without the payment of a cent on your part, just a few minutes effort. We cannot afford to continue this offer long, so take advantage of it at once, get some new subscribers today.

THE RESTITUTION, 803 Parkwood Drive

"A LETTER TO A FRIEND"

This tract needs no introduction further than to say that it is one of the most convincing Gospel sermons ever written. Originally written as a letter to a friend by Sister C. C. Woodruff it was published and has sold extensively in tract form. In its present edition it is a 32 page tract, the price is

10c each; 12 for $1.00

There is no better way of spreading the Gospel than handing out one of these tracts wherever you have the opportunity.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.

803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

"Future Probation,

is that Awaiting any of the Unrighteous?"

Here is a work by Wm. Glenn Moncrieff that every one should read. It is one of the best things on the subject ever written and will appeal to every student of the word. It is a book of 150 pages, made to sell at 25c. We have a limited number left which we will sell at the special price of

10c each; 12 for $1.00

Send for some at once.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.

803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

Ladies! Save Money and Keep in Style by Reading McCall's Magazine and Using McCall Patterns

McCall's Magazine will help you dress stylishly at a moderate expense by keeping you posted on the latest fashions in clothes and hats. 60 New Fashion Designs in each issue. Also valuable information on all home and personal matters. Only 50c a year, including a free pattern. Subscribe today or send for free sample copy.

McCall Patterns will enable you to make in your own home, with your own hands, clothing for yourself and children which will be perfect in style and fit. Price—none higher than 15 cents. Send for free Pattern Catalogue.

We Will Give You Five Premiums for getting subscriptions among your friends. Send for free Premium Catalogue and 64-page Fancy Work Booklet.

THE McCALL COMPANY, 236 to 246 West 37th St., NEW YORK

Oregon Bible College
Oregon, Illinois

The Restitution
IS THE OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA.

The Restitution.

Founded in A. D. 1852

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Lk. 19:12-15), who will be King of Kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-58); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17), and belief in, the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Lk. 13:3), and obedience by Baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:28), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ." (Acts 8:12; 28:22, 31).

ROBT. G. HUGGINS, Editor.

—Terms of— Subscription
ONE YEAR, $1.50;
SIX MONTHS 75 CTS. IN ADVANCE

VOL. 60. CLEVELAND, OHIO, JANUARY 30, 1912. No. 54

A SEVENFOLD WALK.

To walk in the light is a grand thing, brethren, and is associated with a glorious promise; for you know it is written, "If we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his son cleanseth us from all sin" (I. John 1:7). To walk in the light involves, besides that of practical walk so far as relates to our actions, a conformity to the truth in its doctrinal aspect: the two are inseparable to that acceptance which is pleasing to the Father. Many who ignore the latter phase of walk are ready enough to quote Micah vi:8—"He hath showed thee, O man, what is good; and what doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?" A wise reader will, however, discern in those beautiful words that obedience to God's commands is required ere justice and humility can be acceptably observed. Joshua did say, "but as for me and my house, we will serve the Lord" (chap. xxiv.:15), and the people promised him, "The Lord our God will be served, and his voice will we obey" (verse 24). Let us say the same "today" and keep it, then most assuredly eternal life will be ours. The Lord is our basis, in how we are, so let us regard this

First—Walk. "As ye have therefore received Christ Jesus the Lord, so walk ye in him." (Col ii.:6). What a noble beginning, brethren! Washed, sanctified while kindness and love wrought of the Father for us by Jesus Christ, we stand from the starting line. Let us keep the "distance lines" ever before us; they mark off the track very perfectly and the light shineth more and more as we near the perfect day. To walk in Christ is to keep our thoughts in subjection to him, to note his attitude toward his Father and men, and follow his example to the best of our power.

Secondly—Let us walk in love. "Be ye therefore followers of God, as dear children: and walk in love, as Christ also hath loved us, and hath given himself for us an offering and a sacrifice to God for a sweet-smelling savour" (Eph. v., 1, 2). No commandment is so often enjoined as this relating to love; it truly represents God himself "Beloved, let us love one another; for love is of God; and every one that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God. He that loveth not knoweth not God; for God is love" (I. John iv.:7, 8). When we remember that eternal life is associated with this knowledge here enjoined its incentive is invaluable; thus it is written: "And this is life eternal that they might know thee the only true God and Jesus Christ, whom thou has sent." Had the Jews loved God as they ought this recognition would have been theirs in a much larger sense than it was; may we profit by their neglect and walk in love.

Thirdly—Let us walk in the world "circumspectly, not as fools but as wise, redeeming the time because the days are evil" (Eph. v:15, 16). Whilst this order of things continues we are more or less compelled to be in the world, our business relations all being in it; the danger lies not in it, but in our being of it. We could not very well suffer trial if we were not in it, and our probation would lose its force. We ardently long for the desired "change" and it will come bye and bye, in the meantime let us walk as the Spirit enjoins us and we shall be conquerors and rejoice that we paid heed thereto. Men that walk in the world contrariwise are described as, "They bend their tongues like their bow for lies; but they are not valiant for the truth upon the earth: for they proceed from evil to evil, and they know not me, saith the Lord."

Fourthly—Let us walk in the Spirit, having been "born of water and the Spirit" (Jno. iii:3-5) in the sense in which at our baptism we were brought into relation to one Birth comprising both water and spirit. Some may say, you are a little too premature, brother, in asserting our relationship to the birth of Spirit. I think not. We must remember that Christ died, and that the power of the Spirit was exercised whereby he was raised from the dead, and the apostle Peter refers to the same thus: "For Christ hath once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God, being put to death in the flesh but quickened by the Spirit" (Rev. iii:18). Thus it is that we are quickened, for "when we are dead in sin God hath quickened us together with Christ" (Eph. ii:5). Again, God "hath raised us up together and made us sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus (Ibid v. 6). He is the Lord, the Spirit, whose kindness towards us will be manifest in the ages to come. We know it now, but it will then be known of others. Our birth was the beginning in Spirit (Gal. iii:3). Having by the grace of God received this unspeakable gift let us obey the exhortation, "This I say then, Walk in the Spirit, and ye shall not fulfill the lust of the flesh" (Gal. v:16). No, brethren, you will be preserved from the deadly influences of following the works of the flesh, and the fruits of the Spirit you will bear as a sweet-smelling savior unto God. You will not require another birth, all this is completely provided for all the faithful who walk in the Spirit; in God's "due time" that "change" will surely be made. To my mind this guards against my new birth with its state of grace, reconciliation, benefit, favor and peace is one of the present manifest blessings and goodness of God to those who are the called according to his purpose, and a prominent theme of the Scriptures.

Fifthly—Let us walk in the truth. The second epistle of John although opening as addressed to "The elder unto the elect lady and her children" whom, says John, "I love in the truth," bears on the face of it, I think, its intention as addressing the espoused of Christ and so is applicable to us as to all the intervening ecclesias who were such. That John found such walking in the truth and he rejoiced in heart thereby is manifest from his statement: "I rejoiced greatly that I found of thy children walking in the truth as we have received a commandment from the Father" (verse 4). To walk in truth is to be with Christ and true followers of him. He declared himself to be the truth. Verily in him is localized and we see the whole purpose of our heavenly Father from whatever phase or standpoint of that truth and purpose we view him; truly great indeed is the privilege offered to us to be permitted to walk in the truth. We had no claim to this distinction, but such is indeed ours. "Having therefore, brethren, liberty to enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus, by a new and living way, which he hath now made for us through the veil, that is to say, his flesh; and having a high priest over the house of God, let us draw near with a true heart in full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water let us hold fast the confession without wavering" (Heb. x:19-23). "Our feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace" we are shod with an imperishable covering which waxeth not old but is ever new, and so God helps us to walk in the truth. Let us then commit our way unto him day by day that we be enabled to walk in the truth.

Sixthly—Walk in the light. That the Spirit in his wisdom should have deemed it necessary to give us all these injunctions is not surprising when we consider our proneness not only to forget but to practice contrary things if not mindful of the guidance given. The apostle Paul in writing to the brethren at Thessalonica told them, "Ye are all children of light" (1. Thes. v:5). They had been constituted such by the same means as ourselves, viz., by belief, faith and obedience: so we then are or ought to be "children of light." Being so let us remember and obey. "For ye were sometimes darkness but now light in the Lord; walk as children of light" (Eph. v:8). Our English translation does not convey the force of the original which conveys the truth that the Lord is the light in whom we are, and the exhortation is to reflect that light. Here again what a glorious privilege are we called unto; viewed in its right light we look right ahead to the time when we shall be consubstantially of the light with him and physically reflect him as we now morally are enjoined to do. Being members "of his body, of his flesh and of his bones," verily a relationship which the world cannot claim, to be physically "changed" by and by, brethren, if we have reflected him now.

Seventhly—Walk in peace. "Finally, brethren, farewell. Be perfect, be of good comfort, be of one mind, live in peace; and the God of love and peace shall be with you all" (II. Cor. xiii:11). Truly an important ending to a wonderful epistle, and if we only acted upon the advice thus given what a perfectly happy and peaceful community we should be. What hinders? The flesh—Yes 'tis too true; policy too frequently has the precedence of principle; this is not conducive of a peaceful walk, contrariwise, let us every one arouse ourselves and act in accordance with the wisdom which is from above. To act aright is the principal thing. We may write, we may talk and be acclaimed here and there, but are we walking in perfect peace? We must, dear brethren, if we would be approved of Christ. "The wisdom which is from above," writes James, "is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality (margin, wrangling) and without hypocrisy, and the fruit of righteousness is sown in peace of them that make peace" (James iii:17, 18).

W. WHITEHEAD.
New Romney, England.

RELIGIOUS CHANGES

In Belief and Practice Between the Resurrection of Christ and the Death of Constantine in 337.

XI.—The Rise of the Clergy.

One of the most prominent characteristics of the old Adam nature is the desire for titles, position and honor; to obtain these, men have often resorted to the meanest and basest of practices, and have waded through rivers of blood in order to glorify themselves.

Christ founded his religion on principles directly opposed to this human desire. The Adamic craving came out on various occasions among his disciples. "By the way they had disputed among themselves who should be the greatest And he sat down, and called the twelve, and saith unto them. If any man desire to be first, the same shall be last of all, and servant of all. And he took a child, and set him in the midst of them; and when he had taken him in his arms, he said unto them. Whosoever shall receive one of such children in my name, receiveth me: and whosoever shall receive me, receiveth not me, but him that sent me" (Mark ix. 34-37). Again, in Mark x. 42-44, he gave them this warning: "Ye know that they which are accounted to rule over the gentiles exercise lordship over them: and their great ones exercise authority upon them. But so shall it not be among you: but whosoever will be great among you, shall be your minister (or servant): and whosoever of you will be the chiefest, shall be servant of all (or slave)."

The word "minister," used by the Master, has in course of time by usage come to mean one power and authority in the church, instead of its original meaning, a humble servant. During the first century those who were most able in the church were the most ready to serve, and that in any capacity: witness Paul working with his own hands at his trade of tentmaking, that he might not be a burden to any; and until the end of that century there were no paid officials, but every one in need was helped. By the end of the second century there was a distinct order of clergy. They had then also one bishop over each church; under him were subordinates called presbyters, and also the deacons; but this change was brought about somewhat gradually, partly by fraud and partly by taking shrewd advantage of beliefs and customs among the gentiles as well as the Jews.

Let Mosheim bear testimony to this fact. Speaking of the second century, he says: "The Christian doctors had the good fortune to persuade the people that the ministers of the Christian church succeeded to the character, rights and privileges of the Jewish priesthood: and this persuasion was a new source both of honors and profit to the sacred order. This notion was propagated with industry some time after the reign of Adrian, when the second destruction of Jerusalem had extinguished among the Jews all hopes of seeing their government restored to its former lustre. . . . And, accordingly, the bishops considered themselves as invested with a rank and character similar to those of the high priest among the Jew, while the presbyters represented the priests, and the deacons the Levites. * * This notion, once introduced, produced its natural effects, and these effects were pernicious. The errors to which it gave rise were many; and one of its immediate consequences was the establishing a greater difference between the Christian pastors and their flock than the genius of the gospel seems to admit." Mosheim, of course, writes from his own standpoint that the Christian people are supposed to be a separate class or laymen, and the preachers another class; but such was not the case from the beginning. They were all "an holy priesthood, to offer up spiritual sacrifices, acceptable to God by Jesus Christ. . . . A chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation" (I. Peter ii. 5, 9). When this condition which Mosheim describes was brought about, the people were then the laity and later were not allowed to preach until they were ordained by one of the man-made mighty ones.

Dr. Kurtz, speaking of this clerical development, says: "The idea that a priestly mediation between sinful men and a gracious deity was necessary had been so deeply implanted in the religious conscience of pre-Christian antiquity, Pagan as well as Jewish, that a form of public worship without a priesthood seemed almost as inconsiderable as religion without a God." And Philip Smith, in his Church History says: "As the clergy became a distinct order, they were more and more separated from secular business, and supported from the church treasury, which was supplied by voluntary contributions week by week on the Sunday. . . . The celibacy of the clergy began to be advocated, though not laid down as a duty, or enforced as a law."

This word clergy is derived from the Greek word kleros, which means a lot or inheritance. When one bishop began to have a pre-eminence over the others, he was generally known as the bishop; and those who had previously been associated with him on equal terms all in one church—it might be small or large, but they all belonged to one congregation—the others, his fellows, were then known as presbyters; and, as they progressed, claiming honors to themselves which the master had not allowed in the beginning, they were then called the clergy, as if they were a "lot" or "inheritance" separate from the common people; and this idea has been industriously propagated through the ages. To get proofs to back up their pretensions, a large amount of forgery was resorted to. It is not known who these forgers were, but doubtless they were some of the parties who were to be benefited by such misrepresentations.

Ignatius, who was put to death probably about the year 107, wrote several letters to the churches, it is a disputed question among learned men whether we have any of these as they were written. There is scarcely any question, however, that many letters handed down to us, professing to be written by him, are forgeries; and even of those which are supposed to be genuine, there are longer and shorter editions. Gardner, in his Credibility of the Gospel History, says: "I have carefully compared the two editions of Ignatius' letters, and am very well satisfied upon that comparison that the larger are an interpolation of the smaller, and not the smaller in epitome or abridgment of the larger. . . . But whether the smaller themselves are the genuine writings of Ignatius, bishop of Antioch, is a question that has been much disputed, and has employed the pens of the ablest critics. . . . This expression of uncertainty was repeated in substance by Jortin, Mosheim, Grieshach, Rosenmuller, Neander, and many others; some going as far as to deny that we have any authentic remains of Ignatius at all; while, though admitting the seven shorter letters as being probably his, yet strongly suspected that they were not free from interpolations."

One object of this extensive forgery of Ignatius' name was to bring in the authority of one bishop over each church: for instance, in the longer edition of his letter to the Magnesians these passages occur: "Now it becomes you also not to despise the age of your bishop, but to yield him all reverence according to the will of God the Father, as I have known even holy presbyters do; not having regard to the manifest youth of their bishop, but to his knowledge in God. . . . It is becoming, therefore, that ye also should be obedient to your bishop and contradict him in nothing; for it is a fearful thing to contradict any such person." And, again, in the letter (longer edition) supposed to have been sent by Ignatius to the Trallian church, we find this passage: "And do ye also reverence your bishop as Christ himself, according as the blessed apostles have enjoined you. He that is within the altar is pure, wherefore also he is obedient to the bishop and presbyters: but he that is without is one that does any thing apart from the bishop, the presbyters and the deacons. Such a person is defiled in his conscience, and is worse than an infidel." In the letter (the same edition) addressed to the church at Philadelphia, he writes: "There is but one altar for the whole church, and one bishop, with the presbytery and deacons, my fellow-servants. . . Let governors be obedient to Caesar; soldiers to those that command them; deacons to the presbyters, as to high priests; the presbyters and deacons and the rest of the clergy, together with all the people and the soldiers, and the governors, and Caesar, to the bishop, the bishop to Christ, even as Christ to the Father."

Thus were these forgers preparing the way—unknown to themselves, no doubt—for the development of the papacy of later days under one great head, Christ's supposed vicegerent upon earth. Well may critics question the authenticity of these letters, for when Ignatius was put to death there were no clergy, nor as yet only one bishop presiding over each church.

About the middle of the second century councils began to be formed, and before the end of the century they were very common, and helped to strengthen the idea of one prominent bishop in each church; for, from among the bishops having at first equal authority in a church, one had to be chosen to represent his church at these councils: and in this way one gradually gained the pre-eminence along with the help of the means at hand already detailed.

Another consequence of these assemblies was the putting forward of one amongst them to a place of prominence. They in their Adamic pride forgot the Master's instruction, and strove for position and power, and they took to themselves many titles never sanctioned by the Master; and these high-sounding titles and positions have been added to and transmitted down to the present day. Among these early titles, when the title bishop was not great enough, were metropolitans and patriarchs. Mosheim, speaking of them, says: "Such was the nature and office of the patriarchs, among whom, at length, ambition being arrived at its most insolvent period, formed a new dignity, investing the bishop of Rome and his successors with the title and authority of prince of the patriarchs."

A. WALLACE MASON.

SELF-EXAMINATION.

Self-examination is important in the lives of us all. Our daily lives being so taken up with business we are all likely to depart more or less from the standard of our faith. If once in a while we stop and examine ourselves, we may be able to make amends.

Paul says, "Examine yourselves whether ye be in the faith: prove your ownselves: know ye not your ownselves that Jesus Christ is in you, except ye be reprobates" (I. Cor. 14-5).

Self-examination is of utmost importance to every responsible being who is living for eternity. Without it we can have no certain knowledge of our present condition, nor feel a well-grounded security for time to come. To neglect it is to remain ignorant of our own moral states, and to rush blindly upon the scenes of the future, without knowing what awaits us there.

We must investigate our moral condition, and test our characters as Christians. We must examine ourselves in regard to the soundness of our religious theory: whether or not we believe the truth as taught by Christ and his apostles, which truth is the instrument of our salvation. We must examine ourselves in regard to the correctness of our practice and our habits of life, asking ourselves if they have been in harmony with the word of God, and have promoted his cause and glory. We should examine our motives as well as our actions, and also in regard to the soundness of our Christian experience. We may ask ourselves if we have retained the blessing of God's pardoning and justifying grace. We may ask ourselves what our present condition is: and to settle this, compare our present state with past experience on one hand, and with the claims of Christianity on the other. If Christ be in us we shall possess his mind and his disposition, and not only feel it, but show it in our lives.

I pray, dear brothers and sisters, that we may all be able to say as Paul did, that he could do all things through Christ who strengthened him.

VIOLA GAZELY.
Cleveland, O.

Oregon Bible College
Oregon, Illinois

The Restitution

Issued weekly by

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING COMPANY.

Entered as second-class matter under act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

TERMS.

One year $1.50; six months 75 cents. In advance.

ROBT. G. HUGGINS.....Editor
BUELL W. NUTT.....Manager

BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Burton H. Lang, Harry Pott,
Chas. A. Goss, Robt. G. Pate,
Buell W. Nutt, D. C. Robison,
W. S. Tomlinson.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

All remittances should be sent by bank draft, post office money order or express money order to The Restitution Publishing Co., 803 Parkwood drive, Cleveland, Ohio.

All communication intended for publication should be sent to the editor, Robt. G. Huggins, 10523 Lee avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

It is necessary to adhere strictly to the rule of not returning unused manuscripts. Writers will please keep copies, or risk the loss.

While the editor exercises a general supervision over the articles appearing in The Restitution, his endorsement does not extend to the interpretation of details nor the exegesis of particular texts in the writings of contributors.

Cleveland, Ohio....Jan. 30, 1912

EDITORIAL

Until February 10th Bro. Almus Adams may be addressed at Santa Rosa, New Mexico.

A sister asks how she is to know what "Sept. 2" means on the address of her paper. It means she has paid for The Restitution to September, 1912.

Bro. D. C. Robison has been at home for some time because of indisposition. A letter from him states that he is getting better now and will soon be in a meeting at Uhrichsville, O. The Lord's blessing attend him in his labor.

We have been flooded with questions for the last few weeks. We find it impossible to muster time enough to answer them. Here is one from Bro. R. A. Frazier which is so important that we give it, hoping that some of our writers will give us an article in explication of it: "What is the 'seal of God' spoken of in Rev. 14:9-10; 15:2-3? When will the sealing be done?"

EDITOR'S SERMON NOTES ON THE APOCALYPSE.

Subject: Christ's Message to the Philadelphian Church.

Text: Rev. 3:7-13.

I. The Key of David. 1. Not the key of knowledge, but the symbol of power (vs. 7; Mal. 2:7; Luke 11:52; Rev. 1:18; 20:1; Matt. 16:19). II. Shebna ("to lead captive") and Eliakim (all-yahkim, "God shall set up"), are names symbolic of Israel in two states (Ezek. 34:23, 24; Isa. 22:15-25; Gen. 22:17; Isa. 9:6; Luke 1:32). III. "An open door"—both evangelistic and political (ver. 8; 1 Cor. 16:9; II. Cor. 2:12; Acts 14:27; Col. 4:3; Rev. 4:1). IV. "Worship (pay homage, Diaglott) before thy feet" (ver. 9; Isa. 49:23; 60:12, 14; Mic. 7:16, 17). V. "Keep thee from (ek, "out of", not exempt from) the hour (horas, "time," I. John 2:19) of temptation" (ver. 10; Deut. 4:34; 7:19; 29:3; Rev. 9:20, 21; 16:9, 11, 21; Isa. 26:20, 21; Dan. 12:1)

II. The Promise. 1. Pillar in the temple (ver. 12; Gen. 28:11-22; I. Tim. 3:15). II. "Go no more out"—the church in two states; mortal and immortal. Even in the immortal state the saints are exhibited in two attitudes: militant (as brass); triumphant and peaceful (as gold) (Exo. 27:9-17; Cant. 3:7; Jer. 1:18, 19; Exo. 26:31, 32; Gal. 2:9; Matt. 25:10; Luke 13:25; John 8:35; Isa. 22:23).

THE SUPREME IMPORTANCE OF PASTORAL WORK—No. 3.

The Example of Jesus Christ as Given in the New Testament Glorifies the Pastoral Office.

Last week we pointed out that the example of God glorified the pastoral office, and that it is incumbent upon us to be "followers of God" (Eph. 5:1). The example of Christ, too, is constantly held before us by inspired writers for our imitation (Matt 11:29; John 13:15; Rom. 15:3, 5; Phil. 2:5; I. Pet. 2:21). Does his example exhibit evangelism as primary and pastoralism as secondary; or is pastoralism with him the fundamental work and evangelism incidental? Guided by his example we are taught by the Sinless One the supreme importance of the pastoral office. Do you wish to see the proof of this? Then give attention to the propositions following:

(a) Jesus the Evangelist was soon lost in Jesus the pastor. Soon as he had been baptized and tempted, "From that time Jesus began to preach, and to say, Repent: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." Following this evangelistic proclamation of the kingdom—gospel he said to Simon, Andrew and others, "Follow me" (Matt. 4:17-19). "They immediately left the ship and their father, and followed him" (ver. 22). He now has a body of disciples. Will he go on evangelizing to the neglect his own followers? Watch the narrative closely. "Great multitudes of people from Galilee, and from Decapolis, and from Jerusalem, and from Judaea, and from beyond Jordan" (ver. 25), followed him. With such multitudes attendant upon his ministry if he has set his heart upon evangelizing he has the opportunity now and will prosecute his purpose of life vigorously. Did he? Hear the inspired reporter of his life: "And seeing the multitude, he—evangelized them? Did he get elated over the crowds attending his preaching and say, My great purpose in life is to evangelize sinners, and to this end I will lhend all my energies; my disciples can look out for themselves? Instead he left the "great multitude": "he went up into a mountain" to get away from them, "and when he was set, his disciples came unto him: and he opened his mouth, and taught them" (Matt. 5:1-2). He turned away from this golden opportunity to evangelize, sought the seclusion of the mountain top, and there, away from the "multitude," with none but "his disciples" as auditors, he "taught them" the sermon on the mount, the report of an discourse occupying the entire fifth, sixth and seventh chapters of Matthew—the most completely reported sermon in the New Testament. Jesus was an evangelist until he obtained some disciples; then he became their pastor.

(b) His disciples, who were under him, were given a commission to evangelize, but it was a limited commission. "These twelve Jesus sent forth, and commanded them, saying, Go not into the way of the gentiles, and into any city of the Samaritans enter ye not: but go rather to the lost sheep of the house of Israel" (Matt. 10:5, 6). Notice the limitation our Lord makes here to the evangelistic labors of his chosen apostles. Like his Father in Old Testament times, "the lost sheep of the house of Israel" were primarily in his heart; these must have the gospel first. When Paul says the gospel is the power of God unto salvation to believers, he adds this order: "To the Jew first" (Rom. 1:16). Addressing the Jews, Paul and Barnabas said: "It was necessary that the word of God should first be spoken to you" (Acts 13:46). It was "necessary" because when Christ sent out the apostles he "commanded them" to preach only to the "lost sheep" of Israel. This does not mean that he was opposed to evangelizing the gentiles; it does not mean that he was anti-evangelistic, but it does mean that from the viewpoint of importance Israel, "the lost sheep," were to be sought, found, and corralled, "first." What man of you, having an hundred sheep, if he lose one of them, doeth not leave the ninety and nine in the wilderness, and go after that which is lost, until he find it, and when he hath found it, he layeth it on his shoulders, rejoicing" (Luke 15:4, 5). This is the way Christ vindicates himself in parable. Not a "man" can be found who would not miss a sheep out of his flock; not a "man" but what would seek to find his lost sheep; not a reasonable "man" who would let the sheep go and get out among the goats and capture one and bring it home upon his shoulders, satisfied and "rejoicing." The sheep—the lost sheep—come first. This explains the limited commission our Lord gave to his disciples. Evangelizing sinners is a valuable and important work, but our Lord subordinates it to shepherd work of saving lost sheep. To see these "scattered abroad, as sheep having no shepherd," touches his "compassion" (Matt. 9:36); hence that the pastoral office might be conserved and dignified above the evangelistic he gave his apostles a circumscribed embassage.

PUTTING OFF MY TABERNACLE.

"As long as I am in this tabernacle" are words of Peter (II. Pet. i. 13-14) which are eagerly laid hold of to prove that a man is really an immortal soul caged for a while in a mortal body. Yet in ver. 15 the apostle himself tells us what he means when he says that "the putting off of my tabernacle cometh swiftly." It is another way of speaking of "my decease" or death. He was to die a violent death, as foretold by Jesus (John xxi. 18). He had no idea of being transferred alive and awake to another world. Speaking of the fathers who had put off their tabernacles, he uses the phrase "fell asleep." The popular understanding of "putting off my tabernacle" is exactly put forth by a well-known novelist, who writes: "At length his jaw fell, and, with a sigh, the body departed from Double Sanny, and he went to God." But Peter never spake of "going to God" when he died. He speaks of "a salvation ready to be revealed in the last time," i.e., "at the revelation of the glory of Jesus Christ." It is "when the chief shepherd shall be manifested, ye shall receive the crown of glory" (I. Peter i. 5, 7, 13; iv. 13; iv. 13; v. 4). An eloquent description of this putting off of this tabernacle is to be found in Eccle. xii, where is described the gradual decay and passing away of the whole manhood, winding up with the declaration, "the dust returns to the earth as it was, and the spirit returns unto God who gave it." But the spirit is not the man ("the man goeth to his long home," i. e., the grave, ver. 5): the spirit is the principle of life which animates the man and causes him to be a live man. At its withdrawal he is a dead man. See Job xxvii. 3: xxxii. 8; xxxiii. 4 xxxiv. 14-15. This last text asserts, "If God gather unto himself his spirit, man shall turn again unto dust." See also Psa. 104:29. "Putting off my tabernacle" is well expressed in the line of the hymn, "I lay me down and die." But a question. If Peter an immortal soul, can come out of his bodily tabernacle at death, where was Peter existing before the time when, as an immortal soul, he entered his mortal body in his mother's womb? Are we to believe the Hindoo doctrine of the transmigration of souls? A modern writer says of himself and wife, "We were Greeks in the days of Pericles (B. C. 440) and Praxiteles was my most intimate friend. My wife soothed the sorrows of Aspasia on the banks of the Meeander, but today our souls are here in the cold northern city. Yesterday in Athens! Today in London!" Is it true that an immortal soul nineteen hundred years ago entered a little body, which was called Peter at its birth and emerged therefrom when the body became old and died? If so, who shal deny the possibility—nay, the probability—that Peter's soul was and has been incarnate in various bodies and under various names before and since it became known by the name of Peter.

THE WORM THAT DIETH NOT.

In this passage in Mark ix. 47 is to be received as teaching that something is immortal? Then clearly it teaches the immortality of worms, for it says where their worm dieth not. If anyone chooses to believe worms immortal-ity of worms will do nothing to say one way or the other. But if the passage teaches certain worms shall live forever it does not say a single word as to how long unrepented sinners shall live. This is the point which advocates of the "Life only in Christ" doctrine employ freely and boldly in combatting the mediaeval perversion of eternal suffering in the fiery sentimentalism prevalent in our own age concerning the Fatherhood of God, who will cast out of sight and mind a solemn truth that (apart from it) our God is a consuming [illegible] (Heb. xii, 29). Jesus was [illegible] to the Jews, and in [illegible] them of future punishment [illegible] quoted from Isaiah (lxvi. 24) [illegible] the passage carefully) [illegible] ment you see the words [illegible] ing to do with what we [illegible] rnity." It has to do with the earth during the millennial age, and is in harmony with Proverbs xi. 31: "The righteous shall be recompensed in the earth, how much more the wicked and the sinner?"

On the south side of Jerusalem is a valley called "the valley of Hinnom," the Greek form for which is Ge-henna. Into this defile the Jews threw the refuse of the city, the dead bodies of animals, with all kinds of putrid and offensive matters, which would be alive with worms. Fires, which were never quenched, were burning in order that the consuming flames might devour the carcases and destroy the germs of fever and disease that otherwise would poison the inhabitants of the city. The Jews had no word for the place of future punishment, but applied thereto the name of the worst part of the valley of Hinnom—the name "Tophet" (Is. xxx. 33; 2 Kings xxiii. 10; Jer. vii. 31). Our Lord used the more comprehensive word "Gehenna," and threatened that as putrid carrion, impenitent sinners being morally corrupt (their whole corrupted being, "soul and body") shall be "destroyed" as truly and completely as they saw destroyed the defiling refuse in that dreadful valley. Not five things were there tortured, but dead things by means of worms and fire were made non-existent. It is the worm and fire of the carcase. "Their worm!" To what does the pronoun "their" refer? To the preceding noun, "the carcases of the men that have transgressed against me." And note, the worms were consumed as well as the bodies, and the fires have ceased to burn long ago. The worms and the fire lasted till their work was done. God's fire will hereafter be unquenchable till its work is done. The idea that the worm signifies the sting of an immortal conscience, which shall torture an ever-burning yet undying human being is the wickedest, most revolting, most God-dishonoring (even ludicrous, because so opposed to the figure that Christ used) invention of which theologians have ever been guilty. No words in human language can more strongly set forth than Mk. ix. 47 that corruption and absolute destruction is the one and inevitable end of all unrighteousness.

COMMUNICATIONS.

Brother Huggins:—I am writing to let you know that The Restitution is still a welcome visitor at my home, and that I am still strong in the faith of the gospel, and striving to walk in the narrow way that leads to life eternal. I wish to thank the writers of The Restitution for the many excellent articles which appear each week in the paper; I do enjoy them so much. We never hear a gospel sermon except when Bro. W. H. Wilson or Bro. A. S. Bradley comes this way, and that is not often, so you see we have a lonely time. But not so lonely as used to be, since Sister Zella Gregg came into the faith. Now we are three in number, and Mrs. Gregg is a strong believer in the gospel of the kingdom, but has not yet become obedient, and as they live next door to us, we spend many hours together talking of the blesed hope.

A few days ago I received a card from an editor of a paper soliciting my subscription to his paper, in which he says, "Ours" is the only paper our people have that will allow them to express themselves freely on Bible subjects." Now I think this is a mistake. The Restitution is just the paper that will allow us to express ourselves freely on Bible subjects, but will not publish man-made doctrines. I am so glad that we have a paper that will not mix up with all kinds of theories, such as Josephitism, Sabbath-keeping, Pre-existence of Christ, and so on. Such teaching has no foundation in the Scriptures of truth. I for one have no use for a paper that advocates such doctrines. Time is too short to spend in studying man-made doctrines.

Our blessings through the past year have been many. How thankful I am to our Heavenly Father for his loving kindness and tender mercies toward us, for the exceeding great and precious promises contained in his word. "Every word of God is pure, he is a shield to them that put their trust in him." And above all, I am so thankful that he has led me out of darkness into light, glory to his name.

I wish to speak a word for Bro. Wilson's new book before I close—"The Destiny of Russia and the Signs of the Times." I can say it is just the book we need, as it is especially devoted to prophecy. All who are interested should read it in order to know what is shortly coming upon the earth.

Thanking you again for the dear paper, I extend to one and all the greetings of the season, coupled with the wish that happiness and prosperity in the Lord's work may be your portion during the coming year. With much love to our editor and the writers of The Restitution, I am as ever in the blessed hope.

MRS. A. J. MARTIN.

Dear Bro. Huggins:

The continued cold weather, and the fact that the writer is an assistant housekeeper, has resulted in much time being passed in the house this winter. When not occupied in active household duties he has devoted the time to reading, studying and general thinking; and as the mind, like a horse in pasture having the liberty of the whole field, has quite a range, and no doubt the mind like solid bodies moving, will follow the line of least resistance, what is more natural than to run back to the past? This no doubt was suggested by looking over the columns of The Restitution, "founded A. D. 1852." Sixty years ago! And for a full half century the writer has had access to its columns filled with the choicest thoughts of earnest devoted Christian writers; and with this thought there passes in review a long list of brave sturdy defenders of the ancient faith, but time would fail me to speak their precious names, and as we feel that the list is recorded in God's roll of honor, this passing tribute to their memory must suffice. The writer has feasted upon the choice viands of truth that fell from their holy lips. There are many things of interest pertaining to the past history of these noble pioneers in the truth, but space is too valuable in the columns of our paper to present them. It would be interesting to give a brief history of the literature that helped so largely in planting the truth at that time. Many valuable works are at present out of print, but this deficiency is now happily supplied by the recent publications of our brethren. And the beauty of our present literature is that it has such a wide range of subjects. Fifty years ago it was not necessary to establish the divine inspiration of the Bible: there existed then a veneration for the word of God, that as a general condition is now almost absent. The writer was ten years old when he heard the first infidel speak against the Bible. What is the condition now in the world? Millions of books brazenly deny the Bible; papers like the leaves of autumn are scattered everywhere unfriendly to it. We are living in an age that is marked with peculiarities that have not belonged to any other age, hence the necessity for the varied literature that we fortunately possess at present.

All honor, then, to the noble work that has been accomplished by students of the Bible. People who have but a limited knowledge of the Bible, at a small cost, can be furnished with that excellent work, "The Bible, Its Principles and Texts." To counteract the horrible doctrine of endless torture in hell, just order a copy of "A Bible Study of Hades." And to all who realize the fact that the Lord is coming soon, we recommend a copy of a work just from the press, "Destiny of Russia And Signs of the Times," by Bro. Wilson. This latest addition to our valuable literature is a small volume of 96 pages, large clear type; the mechanical execution is the most excellent. The subject, of course, is one that has a fascination for all who are looking for our blessed Master, and as the author has treated the subject in his [illegible] style, the reader of [illegible] work can say [illegible] meat in due season.

In [illegible] permit me to extend hearty thanks to the contributors to the columns of The Restitution; all articles are good, but, the one entitled "Work Is Like Apples of Gold in Pictures of Silver," to him we wish to say, write again, my dear brother.

In the blessed hope,

J. F. WAGONER.

Rochester, Ind.

ON THE WAY SOUTH.

Wednesday evening, January 10th, we started for the South, as previously announced. Brother Newell was going to visit his sister in southern Texas, and Sister Johns was going to visit her daughters in New Mexico, so we all traveled together as far as Kansas City. Brother Newell and I stopped here to visit the brethren at this place. The weather was very cold and stormy, so it was almost impossible to get a gathering for meting. However on Sunday evening a few gathered at Bro. Whitton's, and after a song service we talked to them on the signs of the times. In the year 1888 I held my first series of meetings near Kansas City. Having seen a call in The Restitution from Sister Calkins for some one to come there and hold a meeting, I felt impelled to respond, although I had never conducted a meeting of the kind before. The arrangements were soon made, and after remaining for four weeks, baptized fifteen. We have visited these brethren some times every year; and again a longer period would elapse before we would meet. Upon this visit it was gratifying to face some of those who heeded the call at my first effort as evangelist. Though twenty-four years have gone into the misty past, yet we noticed how their faces lit up and their hearts warmed by the gospel radiator. Yes, for these many years these brethren have stood true to their calling, and have no pleasure in those that draw back.

In response to a call from Bro. Steeber of Ft. Gibson, Okla., on Tuesday the 16th, we bid the brethren goodby, and took the train for that point. As Brother Newell was going to Coffeeville on the same road, we journeyed together; and as he wanted to see some of Oklahoma, he decided to go on to Ft. Gibson for a few days. Upon arriving there we found Bro. Steeber lived in the country and had not received our letter, which compelled us to hire a team to drive out to his place. We found him located on the bank of the Arkansas river. Bro. Steeber is a very earnest, devoted brother, but circumstances were against him. They had experienced the coldest weather ever known there, and after the snow melted the roads were a menace to man and beast. The school house was located on top of Green Leaf Mountain, and here on Sunday we wended our way. A few came out, and after talking to them at some length on the hope of the resurrection, four or five seemed much interested, and a plan was started that they have me return at a time when people could get out. Who can tell what the visit was for, and what the few seed sown may develop into? God alone knows; and we believe he had a purpose in leading us that way.

While there we visited the old "Fort," and noticed this cut in a store above the door of one old building: "The 10th cavalry left here May 12, 1842." We thought while standing there if those men who left there 70 years ago could return, what a different scene would present itself. They then received their supplies by boats coming up the Arkansas river—A wild wooded country. Standing by the old building erected in 1823 looking west they would behold the large iron bridge of the Iron Mountain railroad across Grand River, and still further west across the Arkansas, Muscogee, a city of 40,000 people, could plainly be seen. The old fort has decayed and cities of phenomenal growth have sprung up where then the Indian and highwaymen roamed. While the soldiers are not needed there any more they are needed somewhere, and he will be till the king of peace reigns when all forts like [illegible] have gone with decay.

On the 27th [illegible] urban car [illegible] of 40,000, [illegible] twelve years [illegible] ems and paved [illegible] ery way they [illegible] A couple of [illegible] "Midland Valley" [illegible] Tulsey, a city of 30,000 inhabitants. Here we had a two hours wait. This place has a wonderful growth because of the oil fields surrounding it, as well as a rich soil. But I fear when the oil gives out they will discover they are too large for themselves. In the evening we arrived at Enid, where we now are, and which is one of the principal points on our trip south. We will speak of our visit here in our next communication.

ALMUS ADAMS.

Enid, Okla.

God has not chosen to flatter our curiosity by any of his revelations. What he reveals to man is the end assigned him, and the means of attaining that end. Doctrine and morals constitute an essential part of these means.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON NOTES, FEB. 11, 1912.

The Boy Jesus in the Temple, Luke 2:40-52

Golden Text:—"How is it that ye sought me? Wist ye not that I must be about my Father's Business?" Luke 2-49

In our last Sunday's lesson we studied how the wise men were led by the star to the birth place of Jesus, and how they brought gifts to lay at his feet. There is a considerable lapse of time, about twelve years, between last Sunday's lesson and the time of this lesson.

Jesus' home was in Nazareth, and this story of his boyhood was enacted in Jerusalem at the temple. Herod died not long after the visit of the wise men. At this time a Roman governor was over Judea. Herod Antipas, son of Herod The Great, was Tetrarch of Galilee during the whole of Jesus' life after he was brought to Nazareth. The emperor of Rome was Augustus Caesar until August, A. D. 14, when he was succeeded by Tiberius when Jesus was nearly eighteen years old.

In our last lesson we left Jesus at Bethlehem. Soon after the visit of the wise men Jesus was carried to Egypt by his parents to escape the cruelty of Herod, who sought to slay him because he "was born King of the Jews." To make sure that the young Jesus was destroyed, Herod ordered all the children of Bethlehem who were under two years of age to be slain.

Having returned to Nazareth from Egypt, the child grew and waxed strong. Nazareth is situated in lower Galilee, five and one-half miles west of Mt. Tabor. It lies thirteen hundred feet above the sea. It was a small walled town, situated in a beautiful cup-like valley above, and to the south overlooking the great Esdraelon Valley, the garden of Palestine and the scene of so much of the history of Israel. Travelers tell us that the view from the place where Jesus grew up is one of the most beautiful on the face of the earth. It has been inferred from Nathanael's "Can any good thing come out of Nazareth," that Nazareth had a very bad moral reputation.

The modern city has a Christian church, schools, hospitals and telegraph, and is not far from a railroad. It is said to contain six to eight thousand inhabitants. Histories tell us that the school that Jesus attended was the audience room of the synagogue—the meeting house, the Jewish church. It was a day school and Sunday school in one. The school was for boys only. When Jesus was six years old his parents sent him to this school. The languages as taught in that day were Hebrew, Greek, and Aramic, one form of Syriac, which was the common language of Palestine in that day.

His parents went to Jerusalem every year, as commanded, and when Jesus was twelve years old he was taken with them to attend the great religious meeting. This age in a Jewish boy is a kind of turning point from childhood, and he becomes a "son of the law," the age of responsibility when he is wont to keep the law and to go up to the festivals with his father. This great religious meeting lasted seven days, and is known as the feast of the passover.

Upon their return home they missed Jesus in company with whom they were making the journey, and they turned back seeking him. After 3 days reckoned from the departure of the caravan from Jerusalem they found him in the Temple sitting in the midst of the doctors, hearing them and asking them questions. They were greatly astonished at his understanding and answers. Josephus tells us that at the request of the governor the high priests estimated that there were two million seven hundred thousand worshipers at a passover in A. D. 64-66.

Upon finding Jesus his first question was, "How is it that ye sought me?" which we take as an exclamation of surprise. Then we find him explaining to them why he had certain business to transact for his Heavenly Father.

It is as a direct result of his early training that Jesus became the ideal boy and the perfect man which is an example to us that if we study to show ourselves approved of God and continue to grow in his favor, we shall be overcomers and shall sit down with Jesus in his Kingdom, ruling over the re-established kingdom of Israel.

CHAS. A. SANFORD.
Cleveland, O.

OBITUARY.

May F. Appleyard.

May F. Appleyard, daughter of L. W. Page and Mercyetta Page, was born at Auburn, N. Y., June 9, 1856. She came with her parents to Ogle County, Ill., and located near White Oak Grove, near Kate River. Here, amid the scenes of this rural home, May and her sister Jennie, grew to womanhood. It was a pleasant home, and its hospitality was always open to its many friends, and the preachers of the gospel were especially welcome. May was baptized, confessing faith in the gospel of the Kingdom of God, by Bro. Geo. Moyer. In fact he immersed the whole family. Her faith in the promises of God was comprehensive and firm, and was her comfort and stay through all the trials of life, and was exhibited by her exemplary character and hope, even to the day of death.

She married John W. Appleyard, a Christian man of noble qualities, April 22, 1871, with whom she lived until his death, on February 25, 1903. Since then, she had lived most of the time with her three children, until she died, December 21, 1911, aged sixty-five years, six months and thirteen days.

Funeral services conducted by the writer and Bro. Geo. Moyer, in the home of her daughter, Mrs. T. J. Ellis, at Waterloo, Iowa. Interment at Oakdale, Ia. The services by her request was very simple—the reading of I. Cor. 15th chapter, prayer and short address expressive of sympathy and hope for the future. May we all meet again in the kingdom.

A. J. EYCHANER.
Cedar Falls, Ia.

EVANGELIST REPORT FOR DECEMBER.

Sermons.

Moorefield, 1st to 6th	4
North Star, 8th to 12th	6
Total	10

Money Received.

Joe Hinton	$1.00
Irvin Hinton	1.00
Total	$2.00

Expense.

Cambridge to Holbrook	$ .18
Holbrook to Omaha	5.00
Total	5.18
	$2.00
	$3.18

Expense less amount Received

Salary	$15.00
Expense	3.18
Amount due	$18.18

We were at Moorefield when we made our last report. We stayed there until the 6th, with the interest good till the last. On the 8th we went to the North Star school house where we stayed till the 12th with a good turn out, and as always at this point, a good interest. Mr. Hinton drove us to the home of Bro. Stevens, where we stayed all night and enjoyed a good visit. The next morning Bro. Stevens took us to Cambridge, stopping on the way for dinner at Bro. and Sister James Steadman. Whoever stops with this worthy couple and don't have a pleasant and profitable time, it is their own fault.

After dinner we proceeded on our way to Bro. Jas. Gamble's, four miles from Cambridge, where we rested and took supper. Sister Gamble is not in good health, but is still looking for that age when sickness never comes. After supper we resumed our journey to Cambridge. From there we proceeded to Holbrook, where we visited a couple of days with father and sister. On account of sore throat and hoarseness we had to stay by the fire, and was unable to visit any of the brethren at this point. Arrived home the morning of the 18th, and had about time to greet the home folk before starting for the wedding at Blair, which has already been reported.

We ask the blessing of God upon the efforts of this trip. May the Lord keep us all sound in the faith.

ALMUS ADAMS,
Evangelist.
Omaha, Neb.

CORN SHEAVES

Gathered from Everywhere.

Meat to Eat.

He that must lead, must feed.
He that must reap, must weep.
He that must live, must give.
He that would thrive, must strive.
He that would grow, must sow.
He that would possess, must bless
He that would not stray, must always pray.
He that would sit in the gate, must wait.
He that would walk in white, must first walk in light.
He that would others save, must himself behave.
He that would teach, must often beseech.
He that would see good days, must keep from evil ways.
He that would win, must cease from sin.
He that would have the new name, must now suffer shame.
He that would inherit lands, must have clean hands.
He that would obtain might, must now do right.
He that would escape from hell, must now do well.
He that would have the prize must now be wise.
He that life would find, must conduct mind.
He that would inherit the earth, must have second birth.
He that would share the throne, must firstly groan.
He that would be ready, must be steady.
He that would rule, must first endure ridicule.
He that would reign, must not faith feign
He that would rise from the dust, must crucify lust.
He that would be a king, must bid pride take wing.
He that would be saved, must not be depraved.
He that would please, must not live at ease.
He that would enter the "new heaven," must purge out old leaven.
He who would abide for ever, must from the world sever.
He who would be blameless found, must now in faith be sound.
He who would have Christ at last, must now from folly fast.
He who would grow in grace, must earnestly run the race.
He who would be strong in faith must heed what the word saith.
He who would be made eternal, must now be green and vernal.
She who would commend the truth, must be like earnest Ruth.
They who would have the spirit's ache must be like patient Job.
They who would be like the Lord, must wield the Spirit's sword.
They who would stand with Paul, must make Christ their all in all.
They who would reign with Jude, must not be foul and rude.
They who would be like righteous Abel, must not give heed to tickling fable.
They who would be saved with Mark, to his blest words must hark.
He who would be a future duke must listen to the word of Luke.
They who would live the earth upon, must hearken to the word of John.
They who would know all the facts, must study well the book of Acts.
They who would have higher aims, must carefully read the book of James.
They who would attain to Spiritometer, must well digest the works of Peter.
They, who on types, desire right views, must read the letter to the Hebrews.
They who need the thing that calms, must rest their minds on David's Psalms.
They who for the bridegroom long, will get a glimpse in Solomon's song.
They who would be as "the dew of herbs," must learn the lessons of Proverbs.
They who would know the kingdom's "things," must study well the books of Kings.
They who would eschew canonicals, must closely read the book of Chronicles.
They who would get clear of evil omens, must well consider the letter to the Romans.
They who would know all God says to us, must not omit the Exodus.
The who would to the future look, must read the book of Habakkuk.
They who would all truth buy, must not forget the burden of Malachi.

And they who would not be guilty of libel, must thoroughly credit all the Bible

A Ludicrous Explanation.—A clergyman, anxious to introduce some new hymn books, directed the clerk to give out a notice in church in regard to them immediately after the sermon. The clerk, however, had a notice of his own to give with reference to the baptism of infants. Accordingly at the close of the sermon he announced:

"All those who have children they wish baptized please send in their names at once."

The clergyman, who was deaf, supposing that the clerk was giving out the hymn book notice, immediately arose and said—

"And I want to say for the benefit of those who haven't any, that they may be obtained from me any day between three and four o'clock; the ordinary little ones at fifteen cents, and special ones with red backs at twenty-five cents each."

THE NEW BORN YEAR—1912

Shall we resolve that: By God's grace we will, during this New Year, 1912, 'offer ourselves as living sacrifices, holy, acceptable, to God, which is our reasonable service'? (Rom xii. 1).

Shall we resolve that: "We will 'stand fast in the Lord' (Phil. iv. 1), since 'in the Lord' is the only secure 'standing' ground for our faith?"

Shall we resolve that: "We shall 'be of the same mind in the Lord (Phil iv. 2), and to this end continually ask ourselves, 'Have we the mind of Christ as the apostles had? (I Cor. ii. 16). For "Whosoever transgresseth, and abideth NOT in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God; he that abideth in the doctrine of Christ hath both the Father and the Son." (2 John i. 9). What is Christ's doctrine? (not the doctrine of MEN).

Shall we resolve that: "Whatsoever things are true, honest, just pure, lovely, of good report and virtuous, we will think on, and DO these things?" (Phil. iv. 8).

Is the blighting curse of "strong drink," and its attendant evils, true, honest, just, pure, or of good report?

No! Then let us fight them "tooth and nail," and let us fight them NOW!

As a support for the maintenance of these resolutions we have the assurance that: "The peace of God, which passeth all understanding, shall keep our hearts and minds through Christ Jesus;" that "the God of peace shall bruise Satan," and that "my God shall supply all our needs (not all our wants) by and through Christ Jesus."

W. E. M.

Waihi, New Zealand.

GOLD DUST.

Faith is the root; hope, the stem; love, the fruit.

The Christian who follows his Master cannot fail to find chances to help.

A silent man's words are not brought into court.

Religion will never mean much until you find it in the least things.

Men are born with two eyes, but with one tongue, in order that they should see twice as much as they say.

Those who are just and true in all their dealings are glad that God is a witness of their actions.

No one is useless in the world who lightens the burden of any one else.

Honest investigation after truth enriches the mind and develops true character.

Those who bring sunshine into the lives of others, cannot keep it from themselves.

Read not to contradict and confute, nor to believe and take for granted, nor to find talk and discourse, but to weigh and consider.

One of the uses of adversity may be to teach us patience in judging others.

Truth—the open, bold, honest truth—is always the safest, for any one, in all circumstances.

Life is full of golden chances, but only wisdom sees them, and only labor reaps their harvest.

Don't build on any man's foundation. Christ is the only foundation you can build on to please God. Each of us is individually responsible for the way we build and the sooner we shake loose from all man-made institutions, the sodner we become meet for the Master's use.

We may have in our natural dispositions a tendency to repine, to grumble, to bemoan afflictions which come to us even in the service of the truth; but as we become more and more developed in the heavenly character, the Lord will surely expect of us that we gradually attain more and more to that standard which he sets for us.

If we would grow, we must study true things. If we would grow, we must speak true things. If we would grow, we must do true things.

ANNA DREW.

Dixon, Ill.

THE TESTIMONY OF THE TABERNACLE.

[NOTE:—Much of the following article consists of excerpts from a volume called "Shadow and Substance," by W. H. Walker, of Pittsburg, to whose high literary ability and spiritual insight we are indebted for many helpful and beautiful suggestions. —C. A. Goss.)

All Scripture given by inspiration of God is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness, that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works (2 Tim. 2:16, 17).

By the passage just quoted we see that no part of the Scriptures can be neglected without our losing something which we need to the perfecting of ourselves for the Christian's battle of life, and we should have the same respect to any part of the revealed will of God or for any manner of teaching in accordance with that Word, as for any other.

We have the best reason for studying the books of Moses in the fact that Jesus himself commanded all to "search the Scriptures"—not search some of the Scriptures, but all the Scriptures. And beginning at Moses and the prophets, he expounded unto him all things concerning himself (Luke 24:27).

About one-fourth of the book called Leviticus is devoted to the Tabernacle service, priesthood or worship, while in Exodus there are several chapters giving details of its construction and ordering of the worship. In the New Testament, the epistle to the Hebrews is a divinely inspired commentary upon these things. Without knowledge of the books of Moses this exceedingly rich and profound exposition of divine truth would be almost meaningless, while with its inspired help, we find every personage, institution and part of the Tabernacle illuminated with new light, and Christ in sacred symbolism out of the dim past as never before realized.

In all ages divine revelation has been progressive in its nature. At first, man was only able to take in a very partial revelation of God, and the great God of all the earth makes his capacity for receiving the limitation or measure of his revealtion of himself. He spoke at sundry times and in divers manners as man was able to comprehend. God was preparing a way for the fuller revelation that he had in store in the fulness of time.

When God spoke to Moses it was from the midst of the cloud and smoke of Sinai. When Moses asked of God, "I beseech thee, show me thy glory." God answered him by putting him into the cleft of the rock and allowing him to see only his back parts (Exod. 33:18-23). This is the only view the law could give of God; with his face away from man, for man had broken God's law, thus becoming a transgressor, subject to the wrath of God—the penalty being death. So when God took up his abode among his people Israel, he hid himself behind the vail in the holiest of all in the Tabernacle, the Holy Spirit thus signifying that the way into the holiest of all was not made manifest (Heb. 9:8).

God has now, in effect, come out to man in the person of Christ, and we are invited to behold his glory in the face of Jesus Christ, and even to enter into the holiest of all, by faith in our great high priest, by whose sacrifice and mediation we are purged from our sins and so may worship the Father in spirit and in truth.

The Tabernacle helps us to understand many passages in the New Testament which would otherwise convey little or no meaning. The figures used by the Holy Spirit to convey the fuller truth the Old Testament symbolism of to our minds have their origin in the Tabernacle. In its revelation we find those principles of righteousness and grace, according to which intercourse could be yet maintained with a sinful and rebellious people.

The voice of God from the Mount was so terrible that the people requested that they might not hear it again only through a mediator (Ex. 20:19). God then retired into the sacred enclosure of the Tabernacle—a testimony on the one hand of the sin of man, and on the other of the rich grace of God. Though man had become unfit for God, yet he was disposed to help him up again to the level where he might approach God on the principle of grace, based on perfect righteousness. Thus, around the thick darkness and gloom of Sinai, these premonitions—these foreshadowings of grace were permitted to shine forth to a rebellious people. In the very place where the offense abounded, grace did much more abound, and shadows of good things to come were to be seen (Rom. v. 21).

The pattern of the Tabernacle was given to Moses by God—nothing was left for the wisdom of Moses to supply. "See thou make it according to the pattern shown thee in the Mount," is the command no less than five times recorded, and seven times the record says, "Moses did according to the commandments of the Lord"—that is, in reference to the setting up of the Tabernacle.

We must remember that these things were patterns of things in the heavens (see Heb. 8:5), and were shadows of good things to come, therefore a minuteness of detail and great care was necessary. The pattern must agree with the things pointed to, or a change in the things themselves is implied.

In Exod. 25:1 to 8 we have a record of God's command to build. "Speak unto the children of Israel that they may bring me an offering: of every man that giveth willingly with his heart ye shall take my offering." Then are specified the materials required. God required that the offerings for the building of the Tabernacle should be given voluntarily by the people—they were not taxed for its cost or for its maintenance afterward—according to their means was the measure of the requirement. How quickly and how willingly they responded, so that Moses had to ask them to stay their gifts when enough, and more than enough had been given. What an example of open-handed, large-hearted liberality we find in this conduct of Israel. Sometimes we are inclined to feel a little self-satisfied and something akin to pride for what we call our advanced light and greater privileges, but lest we forget that the proportion of those blessings is the measure of responsibility, let us each ask ourselves the question: "Have I yielded to God a corresponding consecration of myself and all I possess?" There are some Christians who give one-tenth of all they have to God, and thus satisfy themselves as Jacob of old. There are many more, perhaps, that do not give that much, but leaving them out of the question for the present—we ask What about the nine-tenths? Is the answer Christ-like that says in effect, "Oh, that is for ourselves." The idea that this belongs to me, and that belongs to God, needs to be gotten rid of by all who profess his name and hope in his coming.

Cleveland, O. C. A. GOSS

SELECTIONS.

A thousand years in thy sight are but as yesterday.—Isa. 90:4.

Love is greater than spectacles to make everything seem great.—Sidney.

He that loveth not, knoweth not God: for God is love.—I. John 4:8.

The man who is always having his feelings hurt, is about as pleasing a companion as a pebble in a shoe.—The Philistine.

It is faith in something and enthusiasm for something that makes a life worth looking at.—Holmes.

Oftimes nothing profits more than self-esteem, grounded on just and right, well managed.—Milton.

The doctrine of love, purity and right living, has, step by step, won its way into the hearts of mankind, and has filled the future with hope and promise.—William McKinley.

So then neither is he that planteth anything, neither he that watereth; but God that giveth the increase.—I. Cor. 3:3. E. A. B.

It is easier to be enthusiastic in the beginning of an enterprise, than to be loyal to its completion. Not all of those who cheered so loudly when the foundation of the second temple was laid, did the work of building without grumbling.

Jesus, as subject to bodily infirmities, like ourselves, must pass through temptation on the road to conquest along which he would lead us.

IS IT ASSUMED?

Did the Scripture writers assume that man is immortal without attempting to prove it? We are often told by learned men, who claim immortality to be the inherent property of man, "that the doctrine is assumed in the Scriptures, the same as the existence of God is assumed, without attempting to prove it." This dust and chaff readily fill the eyes of many. Let us wipe it away that you may see the facts as they exist.

(1). Were man immortal, incorruptible, and this fact so manifest that he need not have it proved to him, how could he believe in the veracity of God, who threatened him with death for disobedience when he knew he could not die? How could he understand the statements of Scripture, which declare man to be "dust," and that he shall "return to dust," "shall perish," "consume," and "be devoured," and represent him by such figures as "stubble," "chaff," "grass," "flower of grass," "hay," "wood," "smoke," vapor," "a shadow,"? Why is a man never declared immortal? Do not the Scriptures declare that there is a God?

(2) The very terms everywhere used in the Bible when applied to a man in this world are directly contradictory to an assumed idea that he is immortal, in whole or in part.

(3) The offer of Eternal Life, through faith in Christ; of the resurrection of life; the statement that God only hath immortality; the putting immortality before dying man as a proffered gift for obedience; the bringing of this promise and prospect to light through the gospel, by our Lord Jesus Christ, as an inducement for man to seek for it; the statement of Paul, when the gift of immortality is to be bestowed upon the saints—by the Lord, afford palpable proof that the Scriptures do not assume man to be immortal.

Does the Bible assume there is a God?

(1) If it does, it is unlike the assumption claimed for man's immortality. If the Bible constantly claimed that there is no God, but might be one hereafter, we should have a parallelism.

(2) The God of the Bible more than assumes to be. God declares that he exists, and then takes special care to prove to man that he does exist, and that he caused all things else to exist. He directs man to examine his works, to contamplate his wisdom, his might. He shows himself to Moses, and reveals his purposes to his people. He declares things to come, and they do not fail. He asks man to reason, and determine between him and the gods of the heathen. He challenges the gods to produce works to show that they are gods.

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

We, whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones.

This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of their paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

Sadie Green	.50
Gertrude Carpenter	.50
Richard Pascoe	1.00
Stephen Hogarth	1.00
Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Pascoe,	6.00
A Friend of the Poor	6.00

DID SAMUEL'S SOUL APPEAR?

For the want of a better proof that a personality outlives the body, we are frequently informed that the disembodied soul of the prophet Samuel appeared to King Saul after the death of Samuel's body, and conversed with him.

From the record in I. Sam., xxviii., we learn the following facts:

(1) Not a word is said about Samuel's soul—they only guess it means his soul.

(2) Whatever appeared, came at the bidding of a witch.

Have wicked witches power over the departed souls of saints?

(3) Saul said, "Bring me up Samuel:" and the witch said, "I saw gods ascending out of the earth:" and Samuel said, "Why hast thou disquieted me to bring me up?"

Do the souls of saints go into the earth at death?

If not, then Samuel's soul did not appear.

If they do, then they do not go to heaven at death.

(4) Saul saw nothing himself, but inquired of the witch, "What form is he of?" She replied, "An old man cometh up."

Do some souls look older than others?

And from her description "Saul perceived that it was Samuel."

(5) He states to Saul, "To-morrow shalt thou and thy sons be with me."

If he was in bliss, those wicked men were to be in bliss too, if he spoke the truth: but Saul did not die for several days afterward; so it was not Samuel that talked, as a falsehood was told.

(6) Either the witch was purposely deceiving Saul, or it was a freak of demonology—demons appearing—one personating Samuel, and talking in his stead, and lying as usual. These "gods" existed prior to the death of men (Gen. iii. 5); consequently cannot be disembodied human souls. Ancient witchcraft was conected with demonology.—W. Sheldon.

Scripture Searchers Assistant

A very valuable help to all who are studying the Scriptures—a reprint of one of our beloved Brother Joblin's works. Treats of thirty different subjects with about four hundred references. All should possess a copy for ready reference. Price by mail six cents. Address W. S. Tomlinson, 10825 Orville Ave., N. E., Cleveland, O.

A SONG BOOK.

Songs of the Kingdom.

Recommended by Bro. Huggins and nearly all of our preachers, as by far the best song book for our people. 138 pages, flexible cloth. 25 cents each; postpaid. Address, Chas. E. Crowe, St. Paul, Neb.

Book and Tracts by Bro. W. H. Wilson.

"A Bible Study of Hades, as compared with our modern ideas," is the title of a new tract just issued by Bro. W. H. Wilson. It is a critical study of the subject of Hell. It shows that the meaning attached to this word today is different fro mthe meaning given to it years ago. It also shows how this change was made, and who made it. The price is 15 cents each, or 5 for 50 cents.

Student's Text Book, a cloth bound book 200 pages.

It deals specifically as How to study the Bible and why people fail to rightly understand God's Word. Price 50 cents.

Pine Woods Bible Class, a book of 480 pages bound in cloth. Studies are carried on as between a class and its teacher. Price $1.25.

Cunningly Devised Fables, 28 pages. Price 10 cents.

Where Will You Spend Eternity? Four pages, 25 cents per 100.

Are You in Need of Money? 4 pages 25 cents per 100.

Will It Pay to Become a Christian? is the title to a well written book of 96 pages by Brother Jas. W. Wilson. In a clear and convincing manner it sets forth the Christian faith and answers the question indicated in its title affirmatively. The edition should be taken at once and put out to work. It is neatly bound in cloth. The price is 25 cents, very low, and within reach of all.

W. H. Wilson, at 625 North Willow avenue, Austin Station, Chicago, Illinois.

The Bible: Its Principles and Texts

As indicated by the title this book is divided into three sections. The first consists of a remarkable disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "principles" in formulated propositions, and the third expounds in a clear, impressive and homelitic manner particular "Texts." The knotty and perplexing texts of the Bible are united and solved satisfactorily to the most fastidious and critical. More than one hundred and fifteen subjects of intense interest to every Bible student are formally discussed. Both simple and scholarly—the child is fascinated and taught; the scholar is entertained and instructed. Bible lovers, here is a feast for you. Throw open the door of your home; let The Bible—Its Principles and Its Texts come in and bless you and your family. 309 pages, 5x7 1-2 inches, durably and handsomely bound in whole cloth, with title embossed on back in gold. One copy, $1.10, two copies or more $1.00 each. The Restitution Pub. Co.

Four Page Tracts

Can You Believe? A series of questions setting forth the fundamental points of our faith.

State of Man in Death. A collection of proof texts on this subject.

Life and Death. A short concise statement of the facts in the case.

Age to Come Not a Heresy, by H. V. Reed.

10 for 10 cents, 50 for 25 cents 100 for 40 cents.

The Paternity of Jesus. A pamphlet of 122 pages, by M. Joblin, giving in detail all that can be said on this subject, and completely proving that He is the Son of God, and not the natural son of Joseph. This work ought to be sold at 25 cents a copy, but the author was so anxious that price should not stand in the way of its being read, that he put the price at ten cents, so all can buy them. Send to this office for them.

Address The Restitution Pub. Co.

Popular Lectures, By Bro. M. Joblin

Send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled: "The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to Be Saved?" The Foolishness of Preaching and Salvation—what is it?

Each lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price.

TWO TRACTS By J. L. WINCE

"Salvation" and "Resurrection" two tracts by J. L. Wince, can not fail to arouse the interest of every believer. They deal with vital questions in a most convincing manner. The price is 10c each, 12 for $1.00. For sale by S. Roxanna Wince, Pierceton, Ind.

SUBSCRIBE FOR

Words of Life

the publication of the Conditional Immortality Mission of Great Britain, advocating Life and Advent truths.

Terms: 1 copy 37c per annum, 12 copies to one address 25c per copy per annum.

Sample copy on application to

WILLIAM G. ROTHE

1301 Park Pl. Brooklyn, N. Y.

BOOKS AND TRACTS

Bible Pearls—Two-page tracts, suitable for wide distribution. 1. The Gospel. 2. Coming and Kingdom of Christ, by 20,000 Baptists in 1660. 3. Immateriality. 4. Kingdom of God. 5. Nature of Man and Thoughts for Thinkers. 6. Two Advents. 7. What is Religion? 8. Restitution Age. 9. Destiny of the Wicked. 10. Baptism. to copies for 5 cents, or assorted packages of 100 for 20 cents.

YOU will get genuine pleasure from an hour or two spent with the "Mirroscope" these long winter evenings. Pictures, Photos, Post Cards, Etc. are shown in exact reproduction same as with a high priced Stereopticon, can be used in any home and operated with Electricity, Gas or Acetylene. Prices $2.50, $5.00, $7.50, $10.00, $15.00, $20.00, according to size. Sent anywhere in the U. S. Send for one today.

HOME ILLUMINATED PICTURE CO.

311 SCHOFIELD BUILDING CLEVELAND, OHIO

Less than Half a Cent a Day

The Restitution costs a Dollar and a Half a year, that's less than half A Cent a day or three cents a copy. You can't afford to be without it. If you are a subscriber get some one else to subscribe.

Help to Get Them on the List

Sample Copies of The Restitution

May be obtained for a stamp. Send for one.

60 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS DESIGNS COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the

Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York

Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

Census Blank

MEMBERSHIP CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA

Name .....

Address .....
Street Town State

By whom Immersed ..... Date .....

Fill out the above and send to "The Census Editor," The Restitution, 803 Parkwood Drive, Cleveland, O.

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co.

WHOLESALE OPTICIANS

We make a specialty of High Grade Prescription Work, and carry a full line of all kinds of Optical goods. All orders filled same day as received.

"S. K. N." SERVICE

Means prompt returns, careful work, moderate prices. Goods shipped to all parts of the country.

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co. 330 SCHOFIELD BUILDING CLEVELAND, OHIO

"A LETTER TO A FRIEND"

This tract needs no introduction further than to say that it is one of the most convincing Gospel sermons ever written. Originally written as a letter to a friend by Sister C. C. Woodruff it was published and has sold extensively in tract form. In its present edition it is a 32 page tract, the price is

10c each; 12 for $1.00

There is no better way of spreading the Gospel than handing out one of these tracts wherever you have the opportunity.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

SPECIAL OFFER!

IN ORDER to increase the circulation of The Restitution, the following special offer is made:

One new subscriber for 1 year, choice of:

W. H. Wilson's "Student's Text Book," regular price.....50c
Or 5 Copies of "Cunningly Devised Fables," reg. price 50c
Or 5 Copies of "Bible Study of Hades," reg. price 50c

For Two New Subscribers

One Copy "Pine Woods Bible Class," 480 pages, rg. price, $1.25
Or "The Bible, Its Principles and Texts," 309 pages, reg., $1.05
Or One Hundred of Bro. Joblin's Tracts, regular price $1.00

Here is a chance to get some of the books you all should own. By making special arrangements with the authors we are able to offer them to you without the payment of a cent on your part, just a few minutes effort. We cannot afford to continue this offer long, so take advantage of it at once, get some new subscribers today.

THE RESTITUTION, 803 Parkwood Drive

"Future Probation,

is that Awaiting any of the Unrighteous?"

Here is a work by Wm. Glenn Moncrieff that every one should read. It is one of the best things on the subject ever written and will appeal to every student of the word. It is a book of 150 pages, made to sell at 25c. We have a limited number left which we will sell at the special price of

10c each; 12 for $1.00

Send for some at once.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

Ladies! Save Money and Keep up Style by Reading McCall's Magazine and Using McCall Patterns

McCall's Magazine will help you dress stylishly at a moderate expense by keeping you posted on the latest fashions in clothes and hats. 50 New Fashion Designs in each issue. Also valuable information on all home and personal matters. Only 50c a year, including a free pattern. Subscribe today or send 10c. for sample copy.

McCall Patterns will enable you to make in your own home, with economy and ease, clothing for yourself and children which is well fitting in style and fit. Price—none higher than 15 cents. Send for free Pattern Catalogue.

We Will Give You Fine Presents for getting subscriptions among your friends. Send for free illustrated premium and Cash Prize Offer.

THE McCALL COMPANY, 236 to 248 West 37th St., NEW YORK

J.L.Winoo

The Restitution
IS THE OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA.

The Restitution.

Founded in A. D. 1852

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF
The Inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:16, 17) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:18, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Jk. 19:12-15), who will be King of Kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-53); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17), and belief in, the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Lk. 13:3), and obedience by Baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:17-1; and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ." (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31).
ROBT. G. HUGGINS, Editor.

—Terms of— Subscription
ONE YEAR, $1.50;
SIX MONTHS 75 CTS. IN ADVANCE

VOL. 60 — CLEVELAND, OHIO, FEBRUARY 6, 1911 — No 55

OUR FUTURE HOME.

We're coming, we're coming, dear Saviour now to thee;
We're leaving all our sins to gain eternity;
We're praying, we're praying, thy kingdom soon to come;
Where we may safely dwell in our eternal home;
We're longing, yes longing, to reach thy Kingdom fair,
How happy we shall be, to meet the saints all there;
In glory, in glory, we will forever dwell,
Submitting to our king, who doeth all things well.

Chorus.

Oh, glory, Oh glory, how happy we shall be,
Dwelling with our Saviour, thru all eternity.

O Saviour, dear Saviour, the time it must be near,
When we shall hear the trumpet, and then you will appear;
We'er waiting, yes waiting, to hear the joyful sound,
Come go with me ye saints, who'er sleeping in the ground;
The saints who are alive, will in a moment change,
From sinful mortal man, to an immortal age,
Where death shall reign no more, and sorrow never come,
We'll dwell forever there, in our eternal home.

Chorus

The nations they are angry, preparing for a war;
God's prophets said they should, let all the saints beware;
We'll rejoice, yes rejoice, to see one war begin;
For the coming conflict will surely bring the end;
When all the saints will rise together in the air,
So shall we ever be, in glorious splendor there;
To reign with Christ on earth, over nations far and near;
Is what the saints will do, when Christ he does appear.

Oh, let us take courage, and strive with all our might,
To overcome our sins, and ever do the right,
Rewarded we'll then be, with an eternal home;
In our Eden restored, when our Saviour does come.
The promised heirs will be, the saints that will arise;
Their future home is earth, and not beyond the skies;
No promise in God's word, to Abraham was made,
Of dwelling anywhere, outside this earthly glade.

E. W. KNAPP.
Monkland, Ore.

POSSESSION, SERVICE, DELIVERANCE.

Dan. 6:16.

Some one has said "that the world reads our lives more than the Bible," hence they say "this man has religion" and "that man has none." The king had been reading Daniel's life and he saw in him one who served God "in spirit and in truth;" and when Daniel was cast into the den of lions he spake these words of encouragement, "thy God whom thou servest continually, he will deliver thee."

It seems to me that these words must have been of great encouragement to Daniel, and may they be of encouragement to us today. May we hear him say to us, "I will be with thee." The God of Daniel can do for us, for his power is the same today.

I. Possession:—"Thy God." One of the first essentials in securing help from God in times of need is that we have God on our side, and in order to have him on our side we must be on his side. If we would call him our God we must get into relationship with him.

Christ tells us that many at the last day shall call for help from on high, but he shall say unto them, "Depart, I never knew you." No, beloved, we cannot go through life strangers to God and then expect at last to turn to him for help in our troubles and when destruction faces us, and expect deliverance from him. Christ said, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness."

We need first of all, Possession, "Thy God." Daniel was among that number who could say, "I know in whom I have believed. He is mine and I am his." What a precious thing to claim him as ours! What a wonderful possession! "Christ within the hope of glory." Many say "a God" or "the God," but Daniel could claim him as "his God." Christ came that we might claim the God of our fathers as "our God." Will we accept him as our God? Will we enter into covenant relationship with him? "Behold what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God;" "And ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow citizens with the saints." Bless God for the relationship that we have in the Royal Family. "He is mine and I am his."

II. Service:—"Whom thou servest." Daniel was a servant of the most high God, and we must also be if we would claim him as our God. Our service is not because of fear, but because we love him. We delight to obey him. We find pleasure in doing his will, and can say as did one of old, "I delight to do thy will;" and "thy ways are ways of pleasantness, and all thy paths are peace." Christ declared to the world that his "yoke was easy and his burden light." There comes to us in this gospel age the call to come and enlist ourselves in the service of the God of Daniel, and being in his service we can claim his promises. "He that servest me," says Christ, "him shall my Father delight to honor." God asks that those who would claim him as their God, "should serve him. "If we love him we will keep his commandments." Religion, as I understand the Bible definition, is not what we think, or believe, but it is what we do. James says (1:26, 27), "To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world. I like the language of the prophet Micah (6:8), "What doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God" May we follow these rules of Christian living and thus do those things that shall build us up in the faith, and also glorify our Lord and Master. "To do good and to communicate" we shall not forget, for with such sacrifices God delights.

III. Deliverance:—"He shall deliver thee." Daniel's God did not forget him, but he delivered him. It pays to serve such a God. He has the power and he is willing to help. He delivers from the bondage of sin and adopts us into his family.

He delivers us at last from the power of death, and gives us eternal life (Rom. 6:23). What a great deliverer is the God of Daniel! How happy to have him as our companion, and to be able to trust his power at all times.

C. C. MAPLE.
North Ridgeville, O.

WORK. No. 2.

S. H. Thomas.

It is a good thing to preach, provided the doctrine proclaimed be good and true. And it is equally good to practice what we preach. If we preach and forget, or neglect to practice, who will heed our preaching? Therefore, since writing the first article of this series, we have commenced to put some of our plans as outlined into practice, and herewith make report, that others may know that we propose to practice what we preach.

Our aged mother, now 82 years of age, and every member given talents, old, and a faithful sister of 90 years standing, has placed a loose-leaf note book in each, are expected, yea commanded to just finished it tonight, as her part of the work; and as it lies before me, I fancy I can see little golden threads of prayer from this devoted sister, woven through it. Prayer that much of the good seed which will be scattered from it may fall in good and honest hearts, and bear abundant fruit, to the glory and honor of God.

The writer has just received two packages of Bro. Joblin's tracts, and Bible pearls, from the Restitution office as a starter, and tomorrow, if the Lord wills, he expects to trudge away to town, to find a promising place to establish our little bureau of information concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ. Should he meet with refusal or ridicule at the first place, he will go on to the next, and so continue until he finds a resting place for his company of little evangelists. Should Satan tear it down, or destroy it, grandmother will plat another, and we will try it again. Meanwhile, good has already resulted from this single modest little effort. The Restitution office has received a little cash for tracts, which will aid them to hold aloft the standard of truth. As some of these tracts are by our late Bro. Joblin, a part of the purchase price will go to our bereaved sister Joblin, and all to provide for her the necessary things of this life. If one little effort may result in all this good, what may not result if hundreds of brethren and sisters will do as we are doing? Not impulsively or spasmodically for a few days, or weeks, and then neglect, but earnestly and persistently keep it up for years to come, if the Lord tarry, and we live, keep it up until every man, woman and child in the neighborhood grows familiar with your free literature box and its contents, keep it up until the minister of your neighborhood feels it necessary to preach a sermon against the dangerous new idea, not orthodox, that are troubling his flock. When this point is reached then rejoice and be glad and redouble your efforts, for it is an eloquent sign that your labor is bearing fruit. Doubtless the best place to hang your "good seed" box, is in the waiting room of a railway station, or steamship line, or any waiting room where the traveling public pass back and forth. Persons waiting for trains will welcome anything to read to pass the time or will gladly take one to read on train or boat, and perchance it is left on the seat, and another weary traveler picks it up, and the gospel is preached to him also.

Now dear reader, what I shall now write is to you individually. Don't you think it a good idea for you to join this little band of workers and labor a little for Jesus. If so, sit right down now and make out an order to The Restitution for as many tracts or books as you can afford, and while they are coming to you, get busy perfecting your plans how best to scatter them. Don't stop to speculate whether others are doing so or not; your reward is sure even though you are alone. But my word for it, you will learn later that you have plenty of helpers in the good work. A little spring bubbles weakly from the mountain side, and slowly its waters flow downward, unconscious that other little springs are also bubbling out waters: Soon it is joined by another weak little stream, and then another and another, until a multitude have joined their waters and become a mighty river rushing irresistably down to the sea. Thus while one little effort in itself is weak, yet a multitude of such efforts working together in unison become a power for good.

Our Lord has gone like a nobleman to a far country to receive unto himself a Kingdom, and to and every one has given talents, some more some less, and each work in the Master's vineyard during his absence. Dear Brother or Sister, if the Lord should return today could YOU point with joy unspeakable to live faithful ones brought to a knowledge of the truth and obedience to its requirements by your efforts? Could you say, Lord, thou delivered unto me five talents, behold I have gained beside them five talents more?" Could you even point to one as the just increase of the talent which the Lord placed in your keeping? If not, it is time you were up and doing, for the night is far spent and the day is at hand. I do not insist that your work be done along lines that I may suggest, but I do wish you to get busy and do your part in proclaiming the gospel message. God is no respector of persons. His word nowhere infirms us that a few of his people must shoulder the burdens while the remainder are privileged to live out their lives in ease and comfort, thinking only of their own pleasure and worldly business. I had rather see written on my headstone, "He brought one poor soul from darkness into light, and pointed out to him the way of life," than to see recorded there, "He conquered a nation and caused the knee of two nations to bend in homage."

Proctor, Mont.

GOD'S GOODNESS AND SEVERITY TO ISRAEL.

Jas. T. Auld.

"Behold, therefore the goodness and severity of God; on them which fell, severity; but toward thee, goodness, if thou continue in his goodness; otherwise thou also shalt be cut off" (Rom. 11:22).

I wish to call attention to the just sentence of God upon his ancient people for their rejection and disobedience to all the commandments of God, leading them at last to the climax of sin and crime, and to high treason against heaven itself. And all this as foretold by Moses, Daniel, all the prophets, and our Lord himself.

First we will notice the prediction of Moses in Dnt. 28 chapter. After enumerating the abundant blessings that would follow Israel if they were obedient to the commands and precepts made known to them, Moses also enumerates many judgments that would come upon them if disobedient, among which he says: "The Lord shall bring a nation against thee from afar, from the end of the earth, as swift as the eagle flieth; a nation whose tongue thou shalt not understand; a nation of fierce countenance which shall not regard the person of the old, nor show favor to the young. And thou shall eat the fruit of thine own body, the flesh of thy sons and of thy daughters which the Lord thy God hath given thee; in the siege and in the straightness wherewith thine enemies shall distress thee. . . . The tender and delicate woman among you which would not adventure to set the sole of her foot upon the ground for delicateness and tenderness, her eye shall be evil toward the husband of her bosom, and toward her son, and toward her daughter. She shall eat them for want of all things secretly, in the siege and straitness wherewith thine enemy shall distress thee in thy gates" (Deut. 28:49, 53, 56, 57). Read the whole chapter.

Taking the life of our Lord by condemning him to the cross was not a fulfillment of the destruction of Jerusalem, nor of Israel, but a fulfillment of all things that was written of them up to that time. Now, was this fulfilled, and did the terrible state of things here predicted really come to pass upon the Hebrew people?

We will quote from Josephus, the Jewish historian, that gives us a minute account of the siege, and destruction of Jerusalem by Titus in his own time. He says: "I am going to relate a matter of fact, the like to which no history relates either among the Greeks nor Barbarians. It is horrible to speak of it, and incredible when heard. There was a woman that dwelt beyond Jordan; her name was Mary; her father was Eleazar of the village of Bethezab—which signifies the house Hyssop. She was eminent for her family and her wealth, and had fled away to Jerusalem with the rest of the multitude, and was with them besieged therein. . . . It was now impossible for her to find any more food while the famine pierced through her very bowels and marrow. . . . She then attempted a most unnatural thing, and snatching up her son, who was a child sucking at her breast, she said: "O thou miserable infant, for whom shall I preserve thee in this war, this famine, and this sedition. . . . Come on be thou my food, and be thou a fury to these seditious varlets and a bye-word to the world, which is all that is now wanting to complete the calamities of us Jews—she must have read Dut. 28). As soon as she had thus said, she slew her son, and then roasted him, (not his remains), and ate the one-half of him, and kept the other half by her concealed. Upon this the seditions came in presently, and smelling the horrid scent of this food, they threatened her that they would cut her throat immediately if she did not show them what food she had gotten ready. She replied that she had saved a very fine portion of it for them; and withal uncovered what was left of her son. Hereupon they were seized with a horror and amazement of mind, and stood astonished at the sight, when she said to them: "This is mine own son, and what hath been done was mine own doing; come, eat of this food; for I have eaten of it myself."

Now, dear brethren, let us clear up a few errors of some who misapply Daniel's prophecy, as found in chapter eight of the book of Daniel. Did God warn Daniel of the judgment impending over his people? We believe he did. In the vision that Daniel saw, he, or rather Gabriel, describes the four powers that were to arise after the great horn was broken, and out of one of the four was one to arise and destroy Jerusalem and his people—for at the time appointed the end shall be." He then explains the meaning of the "ram" and also the "rough goat," and the first horn and four latter horns, and adds: "In the latter time of their kingdom, (the kingdom of the four horns or powers), when the transgressors (wicked Jews) are come to the full, a king of fierce countenance (Titus) and understanding dark sentences shall stand up. And his power shall be mighty. And he shall destroy wonderfully and shall destroy the mighty and the holy people, (or people of the holy ones, see margin). And through his policy also he shall cause craft to prosper in his hand, and by prosperity (margin) he shall destroy many. He also shall stand up against the prince of princes, (the high priest of the seditious Jews), but he shall be broken without hand, and the visions of the evening and the mourning which was told is true: Wherefore shut thou up the vision, for it shall be for many days." (Dan. 8:19-26).

All this was true as was told Daniel and God selected Titus and the Roman power that Moses told the Jews that they would not know their language. Titus confessed his power was not his own, but was from God. So says Josephus. He destroyed wonderfully, prospered and practiced against the Jews, and at last he was not broken by man's hand, for he conquered and fulfilled the mission God had assigned him and retired. Thus Titus has gone down in history as a minute account of the siege, and destruction of Jerusalem by Titus in his own time. He says: "I am going to relate a matter of fact, the like to which no history relates either among the Greeks sure he knew (Matt. 24:21-22) or Barbarian

The Restitution

Issued weekly by

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING COMPANY.

Entered as second-class matter under act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

TERMS.

One year $1.50; six months 75 cents, in advance.

ROBT. G. HUGGINS.....Editor
BUELL W. NUTT.....Manager

BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Burton H. Lang, Harry Pott,
Chas. A. Goss, Robt. G. Pate,
Buell W. Nutt, D C. Robison,
W. S. Tomlinson.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

All remittances should be sent by bank draft, post office money order or express money order to The Restitution Publishing Co., 803 Parkwood drive, Cleveland, Ohio.

All communication intended for publication should be sent to the editor, Robt. G. Huggins, 10623 Lee avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

It is necessary to adhere strictly to the rule of not returning unused manuscripts. Writers will please keep copies, or risk the loss.

While the editor exercises a general supervision over the articles appearing in The Restitution, his endorsement does not extend to the interpretation of details nor the exegesis of particular texts in the writings of contributors.

Cleveland, Ohio.....Feb. 6, 1912

EDITORIAL

Bro. T. N. Frantz kindly sends the following notes which he found written in the blank pages of his old Bible:

Life—Eternal life.

The secret of God not being with man, but a hope of its revelation in us, is the prime factor of our salvation.

The secret of the why and wherefore is in our ability to realize on the language and translations, according to the purpose and will of God.

Man's ability is only measured by God's grace.

Our desire will be the gift of God.

Based on faith, hope and baptism.

Our salvation foreknown and finished from the beginning.

Our work is our capital stock: salvation our dividends.

Subscribe ——.

EDITOR'S SERMON NOTES ON THE APOCALYPSE.

Subject: Christ's Message to the Laodicean Church.

Text: Rev. 3:14-22.

I. Introductory. 1. Six cities bore the name of Laodicea. This one on the Lycus in southern Phrygia near Colossee (Col. 4:13, 15, 16). Its earliest name was Diospolis (Pliny). Rebuilt and adorned by Antiochus II., king of Syria, who called it Laodicea after his wife Laodice, who afterwards poisoned him. Its commerce great; celebrated for wool rich in color and fine in texture; also oil, ointments, etc.—"The beginning of the Creation of God" (vs. 14; Col. 1:15; Eph. 2:10).

II. Things in the Church which Christ condemns. 1. "Neither cold nor hot" (vs. 15:18; Acts 18:25; Rom. 12:11; Cant. 8:6; Luke 24:32; 7:36-47; II. Pet. 2:20-22). II. "Spue thee out of my mouth" (Lev. 18:28; 20:22; Rev. 2:5; Jer. 48:10, margin).

III. Means used to restore them to spiritual life (vs. 19; Mal. 3:2, 3; Prov. 3:12; Job. 5:17; Heb. 12:6; II. Chron. 33:11-13; Psa. 94:12; Isa. 38:13-16; Rev. 3:20; Cant. 5:2-6).

IV. "My Throne." (vs. 21; Matt. 19:28; Luke 22:29, 30; John 17:22, 24; II. Tim 2:12; I. Kings 2:19; Matt. 20:21).

MILLENIAL DAWN WHEAT

Brooklyn, N. Y., Sept. 22.—"Miracle wheat," which when sown to one-fourth of ordinary thickness produces fourteen times as much as common or garden wheat, is now on sale at the tabernacle of Pastor Russell, a devoted worker in the vineyard of the Lord, who is selling it at $60 a bushel—to the elect.

Although no guarantee goes with the wheat, and although the pastor admits that he I nonly selling it because it was donated to him, the devoted followers have purchased between $1,800 and $2,100 worth of the divine substance, and orders are still coming in.

Pastor Russell known in the church circles as one of the devoutest believers that the Lord will provide, declared today that the Lord would reward the faithful ones who had paid $1 a pound for "miracle wheat," and gave his personal assurance that heaven would bless them.

"But suppose heaven doesn't?" Pastor Russell was asked.

He blinked slowly and impressively.

"Then, my dear brother," said he, "they will have no cause to regret their generosity."

"If the miraculous powers of the wheat are a little weak, will money be refunded?" he was asked.

"Certainly not," replied the pastor, indignantly.

What agricultural experts failed to find, Brother Bohnet discovered on his farm in Ohio four years ago. By careful experimentation and copious prayer he evolved the miraculous wheat and agreed to donate it to Pastor Russell. Brother Bohnet occasionally lectures in Pastor Russell's church.

Orders for wheat are sent to Brother Dockey, who has established his headquarters near the Tabernacle. Whenever any questions are asked as to the right of the church to sell this favored brand of wheat, Brother Dockey refers the curious person to an unknown lawyer, who promptly announces that no guarantee goes with the wheat, and he who charges Pastor Russell with deceit is a liar.

Pastor Russell's church has accumulated $150,000 in the last year through the sale of church literature and donations. The pastor admits that the "miracle wheat" is the most lucrative thing he has hit on yet.—Washington Herald.

Pastor Russell will have to look sharp, writes A. W. Young in the Firm Foundation, or some of his followers will find out what we have known all the while, viz.: that he should be called "Crafter Russell." But I am surprised that the "elect" should care about wheat of that kind, with only two more crop years. Surely if they believe their "Pastor's" 1914-15 prediction they can make out with a less expensive variety the remainder of the time. Notwithstanding the fact that this "miracle wheat" produces so wonderfully, as a result of the Russellite's prayer, yet it is better not to guarantee it. Pastor Russell is wise enough to know that Uncle Sam might get in after such a guarantee. It produces fourteen times as much, of course it does, when planted by an "elect" sower, but when the non-elect get hold of it, and it fails; they have contributed their money to a good cause. (?) It is clearly a lack of faith on the part of the non-elect sower, when it fails. Pastor Russell tried to deny this miracle wheat business, but the Brooklyn Eagle proved it on him, and he had to come out and make the best he could out of it. If any Texas Russellite has a pound of that wheat I wish he would send me a grain or two. But I will not get the thing wished for, as the poor dupes who bought it, will not let any one know they did so. Russell will have enough money to enter into the "millenium" in 1914, and he won't even need to try to explain how he missed it in his calculations, though I suppose he will do so, at so much per explain.

THE SUPREME IMPORTANCE OF PASTORAL WORK. No. 4

(C) The subordinate place of evangelism is a principle of our Lord's teaching. The limited evangelistic commission our Lord gave to his disciples is based upon a principle which he repeatedly enunciated during his ministry. "Give not that which is holy unto the dogs, neither cast ye your pearls before swine," was one of his axiomatic sayings (Matt. 7:6). From an incident which occurred during our Lord's sojourn in the coasts of Tyre and Sidon, we gather that "Give not that which is holy to the dogs" is not an absolute but a comparative command. Were it absolute in its requirements, evangelistic endeavor would be entirely forbidden. He only means to show that evangelism is not a compeer with pastoralism. When a woman of Canaan besought Jesus, saying, "Have mercy on me, O Lord, my daughter is grievously vexed with a devil," he who had said, "Give not that which is holy to the dogs," "answered her not a word" (Matt. 15:22, 23). The disciples seem to have understood his command as absolute and said, "Send her away" (ver. 23). He who had given the command not to give that which is holy to dogs, when solicited by a "woman of Canaan" (ver. 22), a dog without the Jewish fold (Rev. 22:15), was placed in a precarious situation. Had evangelism been fundamental with our Savior, his way would have been clear—he could and would have healed this woman's daughter without word or hesitation. But pastoralism with him has no compeer in evangelism; more, "I am not sent but unto the lost sheep of the house of Israel" (ver. 24). The world, fond of expatiating upon "the Fatherhood of God and brotherhood of man;" some mistaken brethren who represent God as loving the sinner more than the saint—these should see their sentiments here broken to smithereens by the son of the highest. "Have mercy on me, O Lord," this Canaanitish woman importunately entreats while Jesus remains reticent—"he answered her not a word." When he breaks silence it is only to say, "I am not sent but unto the lost sheep of the house of Israel"—not to you. In spite of the barriers before her she continued her exigent pleading and prayer. "Lord, help me" (ver. 25). Still unmoved still having in his mind the superiority of God's people and pastoralism over sinners and evangelism, he said, It is not meet to take the children's bread and to cast it to dogs" (ver. 26).

Here our Lord enunciates a great principle: let us grasp it. In normal households the principle is generally acted upon, unconsciously and instinctively perhaps, but for all that, it is acted upon. The children are fed first, then the dogs, because they are loved better than the dogs. Only a few times have we witnessed this rule reversed. Once or twice we have visited homes (?) in the south where the dogs were fed first, then the remnants were cast to the children not decorous behavior, to say the least! The woman of Canaan admitted the superiority of children over dogs, her inferiority to Israel, the subordination of evangelism to pastoralism; and when Jesus said it was not meet to cast the children's bread to dogs, she admitted the principle, saying, "Truth, Lord". The "truth" of this fact cannot be denied by the "dogs" themselves. She argues that her request can be granted without infringing upon the children's rights from the fact that "the dogs eat of the crumbs which fall from their master's table" (ver. 27). The divine order is: Bread for the children; "crumbs which fall from their master's table," for the dogs. The human order is: Crumbs for the children; bread for the dogs!

The principle deductible from the evidence before us is, not hostility to evangelism in moderate bounds, but "let us do good to all men, especially unto them who are on the household of faith" (Gal. 6:10). Let the "children" first be fed; any surplusage, any "crumbs" of superabundance that may fall under the table, the "dogs" may have. Opposers of pastoralism may say, "We are all right; we need nothing; Instead of selfishly expending monies on ourselves, let us make evangelism fundamental." That, dear brother is just the way the Church in Laodicea reasoned and thought. "I am rich" she said, "and increased with goods, and have need of nothing" (Rev. 3:17). That is what she thought about herself; but the Lord thought differently. While the Church thought she had "need of nothing," and was trying to pull the beam out of sinner's eyes, the Lord thought she was wretched, poor, miserable, blind, naked and lukewarm, fit only to be spued out of his mouth (Rev. 3:16, 17). God have mercy upon that church which is resting upon its oars, self-satisfied, "needing nothing" herself, but everlastingly trying to evangelize "needy" sinners; pulling away at the mote in others' eyes, with a beam in her own eye! "Thou hypocrite, first cast out the beam out of thine own eye; then shalt thou see clearly to cast out the mote of thy brother's eye." (Matt. 7:5).

Brother, you may think you "need nothing," needing nothing, pastoralism may look to you like a superfluity; but what does Christ think about these matters? The disciples, observing that Christ always addressed sinners in parabolic drapery, asked him, "Why speakest thou unto them in parables?" His answer is, "Because it is given unto you to know the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven, but to them it is not given" (Matt. 13:10-11). He imparted to his disciples "mysteries" he never dreamed of divulging to sinners. That these mysteries might not be comprehended by the carnal multitude, he spake to them in parables, "and without a parable spake he not unto them" (ver. 13). Even the disciples could not penetrate the veiled truths hidden in our Lord's parables. These, however, he expounded to them privately. Jesus sent the multitude away, and went into the house, and his disciples came to him, saying, declare unto us the parable of the tares of the field" (ver. 36). With the "multitude" absent, the Lord uncovered the "mysteries" he had veiled to sinners, imparting to his disciples secrets kept secret from the foundation of the world (Matt. 13:35). They never once said: "We need nothing," why don't you tell sinners these things?" When Paul wrote to the brethren at Rome, "beloved of God" (Rom. 1:7), and said "I long to see you, that I may impart unto you some spiritual gift (ver. 11), the brethren never said: Your surveillance of the church is absurd. Paul, we "need nothing;" go to sinners and impart your "spiritual gifts;" they need them. You hear nothing of this or anything like it, for the disciples had learned from both Paul and Christ that pastoralism was supreme.

COMMUNICATED

Dear Brothers and Sisters in Christ:

The money you sent to defray my expenses south is bearing fruit, and we hope all will see some of the results in the kingdom. We received plenty to pay all expenses of the trip contemplated, but have had to leave off some side calls. There is always some extra expense we do not figure on, and again the fare here is three cents per mile, which adds one-third more, so if I make a visit much out of the way I am liable to be short. I have a letter from Bro. Daniels, of Arkansas, whom most of you know. He says he has an interest aroused there through a debate lately held, all of which he carried on at his own expense, and now wishes me to come and help stir that interest into action. Can't some who did not respond before send a little to insure this meeting?

Think of what Bro. Daniels has done for the truth without money and without price. I am willing to help him just for my expense. "We are laborers together with God." If you wish to help Brother Daniels out send a little free will offering to me by return mail to Santa Rosa, New Mexico, and I will receipt you. I am going to help Brother Daniels out if the Lord wills, even though I have to make an added sacrifice.

Yours for the advancement of the truth.

ALMCS ADAMS.

Santa Rosa, New Mexico.

CORN SHEAVES

Gathered From Everywhere

$550,000 for Jerusalem — Some time ago there died in India a rich Jew from Babylon or Mesopotamia, Joseph Abraham Shalom. During his lifetime Shalom supported many Jewish institutions in Jerusalem and took a deep interest in Palestinian Jewish affairs. It was expected that his will would contain some interesting bequests for Jerusalem charities. It has now become known that the deceased bequeathed a large sum, amounting to $550,000 as a permanent fund, out of the proceeds of which a large structure should be erected in Jerusalem near the Misgah Ladach hospital, opposite the place of the Temple Mount. In this building provision should be made for a Beth ha-Midrash, a Yeshibah and twenty dwellings for twenty learned men, who should be supported entirely from the fund and who should do nothing else but devote themselves to study. Ten of them should study the Talmud and its literature and ten should devote their time to the study of mystic lore. A few smaller sums out of the proceeds of this fund should be applied to the expenses of several institutions in Palestine and India.

"I Will Bless Them"— January 22nd, 1912, Rev. Alexander S. Taylor, pastor of St. Mark's Reformed Episcopal church, Chicago, Ill., in his sermon on "A Much Despised Blessing," closed as follows: "'I will bless them that bless thee and curse them that curse thee.'

"There is a curse hanging over every Jew hating and Jew baiting land. Russia is cursed; with her serfdom, her lying ministers of state, her political murders, her Siberian dungeons, her persecution of the Jew. This is not my opinion. God says so. Note on the other hand the situation in Great Britain and the United States, where the Jew is granted political freedom. God has a blessing in store for our own land in what positive form we do not not know, for her present attitude to the Jew in his relation to the passport question in Russia.

"Let us be careful how we act towards them, speak of them [illegible] to them, for in these things [illegible] is either a curse or a blessing. Let us beware of following the silly crowd. God's word is more important than man's. He says, "I will bless them that bless thee and curse them that curse thee." Try for this blessing also."

SYMBOLS OF REV. 13 CHAPTER.

George Francis

Here John saw another symbol, cosmopolitan in its constitution. It comes up out of the sea, and has ten horns. The sea, and the "ten horns" indicate that it is some phase of Daniel's fourth beast: And being like a leopard, with the feet of a bear, and mouth of a lion, is proof positive that it is a symbol of the empire of Rome. Rome had incorporated into her dominion a part, if not all, of the people and territory of Babylon, Medo-Persia, and of Greece:—Therefore the likeness of a leopard, the feet of a bear, and the mouth of a lion. But in chapter 12, Rome's symbol was the dragon: yes, but the dragon was cast out of the heaven, and the party that cast him out, took his place in the heaven of the empire. The empire having changed its religion, made a change in the symbol necessary, especially when the dragon symbol is represented as being cast out of the heaven. This change commenced in the forepart of the fourth century, in the time of Constantine, and was according to Gibbon, finally completed in from 390 to 420 A. D. By a close study of chapter 12 and 13 we find that the events noted are given in consecutive order, and that in that order we find their correspondence in history.

In the last part of verse two it is written, "And the dragon gave him his power, and his seat, and great authority." That is, Rome pagan gave its power and authority to Rome Christian. The next event is the wounding of one of his heads, see verse three. The head or form of government at this time was the imperial: This deadly wound, as we learn by verse 14, was by a sword. And by the history of these times we learn that it was by the sword of the Goths and Vandals. The first blow of the sword was by Alaric, King of the Goths, A.D. 410; next by Attila, King of the Huns, A. D. 447; thirdly, the sack of Rome by Genseric, King of the Vandals, A. D. 455; and fourthly, by Odoacer, King of the Heruli, who became King of Italy A. D. 476. This date is known as the time of the fall of the Roman empire. The effect of this invasion by the northmen was to divide the empire into ten kingdoms—as represented by the ten horns on the head of the symbol: and if we consult Daniel 7:8, we will find that we have arrived at the time of the rise of the eleventh horn or Papal power.

It appears that the first work of the papacy was to heal the wound: so the next event noted in the prophecy is the giving to the beast "a mouth speaking greater things and blasphemies." A noted Catholic historian remarks "that had it not been for the rise of the papacy, Rome would have perished from the earth." To prove that the mouth given to the beast is the papacy, it is only necessary to read the acts of the beast, after he receives the "mouth," with the rise of the eleventh horn. The time that the beast is to continue after the reception of the mouth is 42 months: the same that is allotted to the little horn of Daniel. After the rise of the little horn among the ten, it becomes the controlling power up to the time of the judgment: so that the papacy is the last phase of the Roman empire; or as stated in chapter 17:8, "He is the eighth, and is of the seven, and goeth into perdition."

In our investigation we have seen that the imperial head came to an end in A. D. 476, and that the papal head did not arise until sometime after the rise of the ten horns. The imperial being the sixth (Rev. 17:10), and the papal the eighth; there is the seventh head to come in between the imperial and the eighth head. Some hold that Odoacer the first Barbarian, King of Italy, was the seventh head: this hardly fills the requirements of the prophecy. Adoacer was King only of Italy, and not of the whole empire; and in speaking of the eighth head is speaking of the eighth head it is of the seventh" (Rev. 17:11). The Exarchs of Ravenna better fill the requirements of the prophecy. "The sovereignty of the Exarchate melted away in the hands of the popes" (Gibbon, vol. 5:33).

John is not informed as to who gave the mouth to the beast; but history supplies what is here lacking. The Emperor Justinian labored in this work by favoring the claims of the bishop of Rome to the primacy over all the churches: this was about A. D. 538. Then the Emperor Phocus in 608 to 610 acknowledged the supremacy of the Roman bishop, and finally the work, Charlemagne gave him as a present the states of the church; thus constituting him a civil ruler, in token of which the pope to this day wears the tiara or triple crown. From that time the pope has been the eighth head, and mouth of the Roman empire (Rev. 17:11). Then as verse 9, we have the often repeated words of the Master. "If any man have an ear, let him hear." "He that leadeth into captivity shall go into captivity." The pope a prisoner in the vatical proves the rule.

Albany, Wis.

THE INSPIRATION OF THE BIBLE No. 4.

That there are difficulties in the way of accepting a view of inspiration like this goes without saying. But to the finite mind there must always be difficulties connected with a revelation from the infinite, and it cannot be otherwise. This has been mentioned before. Men of faith, and it is such we are addressing, and not men of the world, do not wait to understood or resolve all the difficulties associated with other mysteries of the Bible before accepting them as divine, and why should they do so in this case?

Moreover, Archbishop Whately's dictum is generally accepted that we are not obliged to clear away every difficulty about a doctrine in order to believe it, always provided that the facts on which it rests are true. And particularly is this the case where the rejection of such a doctrine involves greater difficulties than its belief as it does here.

For if this view of inspiration be rejected, what have its opponents to give in its place? Do they realize that any objections to it are slight in comparison with those to any other view that can be named? And do they realize that this is true because this view has the immeasurable advantage of agreeing with the plain declarations of Scripture on the subject? In other words, as D. Burrell says, those who assert the inerrancy of the Scripture autographs do so on the authority of God himself, and to deny it is of a piece with the denial that they teach the forgiveness of sins or the resurrection from the dead. No amount of exegetical turning and twisting can explain away the assertions already quoted in these pages, say nothing of the constant undertone of evidence we find in the Bible everywhere to their truth.

And speaking of this further, are we not justified in requiring of the objector two things? First, on any fair basis of scientific investigation, is he not obliged to dispose of the evidence here presented before he impugns the doctrine it substantiates? And second, after having disposed of it, is he not equally obligated to present the scriptural proof of whatever other view of Inspiration he would have us accept? Has he ever done this, and if not, are we not further justified in saying that it cannot be done? But let us consider some of the difficulties.

1. There are the so-called discrepancies or contradictions between certain statements of the Bible and the facts of history or natural science. The best way to meet these is to treat them separately as they are presented, but when you ask for them you are not infrequently met with silence. They are hard to produce, and when produced, who is able to say that they belong to the original parchments? As we are not contending for an inerrant translation, does not the burden of proof rest with the objectors?

But some of these "discrepancies" are easily explained. They do not exist between statements of the Bible and facts of science, but between erroneous interpretations of the Bible and immature conclusions of science. The old story of Galileo is in point, who did not contradict the Bible in affirming that the earth moved round the sun, but only the false theological assumptions about it. In this way advancing light has removed many of these discrepancies, and it is fair to presume with Dr. Charles Hodge that further light would remove all.

To Be Continued

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

FEBRUARY 18, 1912.

Ministry of John Baptist.

Mark 1:1-8; Luke 3:1-20.

Golden Text:—Repent Ye for the Kingdom of Heaven is at hand.

The place of today's lesson is the wilderness of Judea. The ruler at that time was Tiberius Caesar, Emperor of Rome, Pilate, Governor of Judea, first year. John was about thirty years old when he began to preach. His mission was to prepare the way for Christ, and he preached for six months, making this preparation. The scene of his labors is described as stretching over the whole eastern part of Judea, beginning almost at Jerusalem and reaching away under different names to the Dead Sea of the South Desert as its distant limits. It was a dreary waste of rocky valleys. In some parts there were rock clefts which had been shattered by earthquakes.

His direct field of action extended northward along the Jordon, two-thirds of the way to the Sea of Galilee. Here it is presumed John found several requisites for his mission, solitude, safety, natural food, including locusts and wild honey. The appearance of John was like that of the good prophet Elijah. He was clothed in coarse rough cloth, called sack cloth in the Scripture. It was cheap but admirable for keeping out the heat, cold and rain. This mantle was bound around him with a leather girdle, and his food consisted of locusts and wild honey.

The common brown locust was about three inches in length, and the general form was that of a grasshopper. They were very abundant and consequently were cheap food and are still used as food. They are sold at one cent a pound in Biskra an oasis in the desert of Sahara. John was to prepare the way for Christ and did so by preaching repentance and baptism, Mark 3:2; Matt. 1 and 4: This repentance was to be followed by confession and baptism, Matt. 3:6; Mark 1 and 5, and in consequence of which remission of sins was promised. There are nine terms in the Bible to express sin. There are as many expressions for forgiveness as for sin—forgive, remit, take away, cover up, blot out, destroy, wash away, cleanse, remember no more. The assurance of forgiveness is a strong motive for repentance. The coming of John the Baptist was the direct fulfillment of the prophesy as found in Isa. 40: 3 to 5. John is represented as a voice crying in the wilderness, because the message was a voice from God, and the emphasis lay upon the truth spoken, and probably because he was insignificant in the world's eye.

He was preparing the way by making sharp appeals to the conscience. Among the crowds were Pharisees and Sadducees, the two leading sects of Jews. They came not to be made better, but to endeavor to hinder the work as is evident from John's treatment of them, in calling them generations of vipers. The viper was the most venomous of the many poisonous snakes in Syria. It was small in size, gave no warning rattle, and closely resembled the gray rock where it lived. The question: "Who hath warned you to flee fro mthe wrath?" was a very appropriate one. This was not a denunciation but a warning, Matt. 22-13 and Rom. 2-9, that they must bring forth fruit worthy of repentance, for only thus could they prove their repentance sincere, as the fruit is the proof of the tree. He warned them further not to say, "We have Abraham as our father," with an intent of showing that this would give them a direct claim on the kingdom and further serves to prove that they must work out their own salvation.

John tells them he came to baptize with water, but that one, mightier than he, would come; who would baptize them with the Holy Spirit and with fire, and who would purge them and burn out the chaff.

Fire is the most efficient purifying power in the physical world. It is a fitting symbol of the Holy Spirit. The chaff spoken of refers to those who refuse to repent and become good grain. There is no power on earth that could save them as long as they remain chaff. There is a strong lesson for us, in that having been purified of our former sins we be diligent, to remain pure, and keep our garments unspotted; so that at the time of the searching judgment, we may be able to stand the test and be accounted worthy to sit down with Jesus in his kingdom.

S. A. SANFORD.

Cleveland, O.

THE TESTIMONY OF THE [illegible]ERNACLE. No. 2

Chas. A. Goss

Trusting that the time already occupied has not been unprofitably spent, I will pass from general to particular truths concerning the Tabernacle.

The Tabernacle was a tent—that being the meaning of the Hebrew word. All Israel were dwelling in tents in the wilderness, and Jehovah came down to their condition. This seems to me the first suggestion of "Immanuel" or God with us—the title given Jesus by inspiration through the prophet Isaiah (7:14). Moses in Exod. 15th chapter had spoken of preparing an habitation for God. That tabernacle was the dwelling place of Jehovah and not the dwelling place of the people.

The tabernacle was a Sanctuary (See Exod. 25:8, 9; 29:45). "And let them make me a sanctuary, that I may dwell among them. According to all that I show thee, after the pattern of the tabernacle, and the pattern of all the instruments thereof, even so shall ye make it. And I will dwell among the children of Israel and will be their God."

It was a Holy Place for a holy God and a holy people. It was set apart for sacred purposes and its courts could only be traversed by holy feet. It was the place of worship for Israel. Its outer court, holy place and most holy place, represent the different degrees of nearness to God in the progressive life of this people, and each person individually as well, showing again the progressive nature of God's revelation of himself and his plan of salvation.

The Levites entered the court only, the priests the holy place, and the high priest the most holy place once a year, and that not without the shedding of blood. But thanks be to God for his abundant mercy and grace that through the blood of Jesus Christ, the great High Priest and Mediator of the New Covenant, we have liberty at all times to enter into the holiest of all and may there worship in spirit and truth.

As a sanctuary it must be reverenced (Levit. 19:30). As a sanctuary it became a sacred shelter or refuge (Psa. 61:1-4). David says: "Hear my cry, O God; attend unto my prayer. From the end of the earth will I cry unto thee, when my heart is overwhelmed; lead me to the rock that is higher than I. For thou hast been a shelter for me an da strong tower from the enemy. I will abide in thy tabernacle forever. I will trust in the covert of thy wings." In many others of David's Psalms we find its beauty and strength extolled—reference to it as a place to learn God's ways—a place of praise and a place of help.

The Tabernacle was a figure of the wilderness life of God's redeemed people, which gave place in due time to another condition typified by the more perfect and enduring temple—glorious alike within and without. It is likewise a type of him who fulfilled all types. He had no fixed abiding place, nowhere to lay his head, yet was filled with the Holy Spirit without measure. And now victorious over death, he, like the glorious temple, is glorified and abideth forever.

The chief interest to us of the tabernacle comes from its typical character. It was a part—and a very prominent part—of a typical system. There was a typical sanctuary, a typical service, a typical priesthood, a typical victim was slain and typical sacrifices were offered by priests who were themselves types of the Lord — our great high priest. It was typical of Christ, of the church, of the individual believer.

First—"The Word was made flesh and tabernacled among us, and we beheld his glory, the glory of the only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth" (1 Jno. 1:18) As God was in the tabernacle, so God was in Christ reconciling the world unto himself, not imputing their trespasses unto them (2 Cor. 5:19-21).

Second—It was typical of the church: The church is now the dwelling place of God (See Eph. 1:22), though like the tabernacle, not outwardly glorious in this present age.

Third—It is typical of the individual Christian, because the believer is now the temple of God, who by his Spirit dwells in his body (1 Cor. 3:16, 17; 6:19; II Cor. 6:16). As God was in Christ so now is he in the Christian. It was likewise typical of the eternal state when the tabernacle of God shall be with men and he will dwell with them and they shall be his people and he shall be their God (Rev. 21:3).

To begin a description of the tabernacle is a task not easily performed, for to describe its appearance only would convey no idea of its details. We will begin with the court however, since we would naturally come to that first in approaching it. It is described in detail in Exod. 27:9-17, which all should read. The length of the court shall be an hundred cubits, and the breadth fifty cubits everywhere, and the height five cubits of fine twined linen and their sockets of brass.

The cubit was about a foot and a half of our measure or about 19 1-2 inches in length, to be exact. This makes the court of the tabernacle about 162 1-2 feet in length by about 80 in breadth, and in form a perfect rectangle. It was formed of sixty pillars, twenty being on the south and twenty on the noth sides; ten on the west and ten on the east sides. On the west end of this court stood the tabernacle, the door or entrance being on the east end.

These sixty pillar were about eight feet high and the same distance apart.

They were about half the height of the boards of the tabernacle and were called brazen pillars, being either made of brass or of wood covered with brass. They stood upright in position, and were ornamented with a piece of silver at the top. The pillars sustained the curtains, being themselves kept in place and prevented from falling inward or outward by cords and pins. There is considerable that might be said of the lessons suggested by the pillars and their fastenings, but I must pass on to consider other parts.

The next thing we notice about the court is the curtains or hangings. These were of fine twined linen, and suggest thoughts of righteousness. Thus righteousness and purity encircle the habitation of God, excluding everything impure or defiling, and emphasizing the fact that there is an inside and an outside with a clearly defined line of separation between them. The only way in was through the gate or door-way, suggesting Christ, who said, "I am the door; by me if any man enter in, he shall be saved." (Jno. 10:9). The curtains were suspended from silver fillets, and were transparent so that the people outside could see what was going on in the court into which they could not enter.

The gate of the court was composed of a curtain suspended from four pillars. It was never to be drawn, but looped up in the center so that the moment that the worshipper stood at the gate he might see the tabernacle. So the sinner who comes to God through Christ, the door, may see the end of his journey from the beginning. The material and colors of the gate were the same as the vail, but there were no figures of cherubim upon it. The colors of blue, scarlet and purple, of which this entrance had each a peculiar meaning or suggestiveness. Blue is the heavenly color, reminding us that the Lord from heaven brought life and immortality to light, and that through him we partake of a heavenly calling—that our citizenship or allegiance is registered there — that we are like the patriarchs and prophets of old mentioned in 11th chapter Hebrews—looking for an heavenly country. The scarlet reminds us of the object of his coming in the flesh—shedding his blood for the remission of our sins. And the purple proclaims his royalty—the son of David, the King of Kings and Lord of Lords.

The gate was always toward the east or sun-rising, reminding us of the need of spiritual light in order that we may enter the court. There was but on gate, so there is but one Saviour—ONE WAY TO GOD, and that by him.

Its width was particularly noticeable—being thirty feet wide, but very low in proportion. In this it was the reverse of the door of the tabernacle, which was both narrow and high. As we stand at the wide open gate of the court we are reminded of the words of Paul in Eph. third chapter. He prayed that they might be able to fully comprehend with all saints what is the breadth and length, depth and height, and to know the love of Christ, which passeth knowledge, that they might be filled with all the fullness of God. Notice the order in which the apostle speaks of the love of Christ—it is first its breadth, though most frequently quoted as though it were the other way—length and breadth.

The apostle begins with the breadth of love, just where it is needed to embrace the sinner who comes to the gate which is Christ, and entering that way the sinner can begin to learn its length, depth and height.

The court, which I have endeavored in my feeble way to outline, rather than to describe, was not the place to abide, but a place through which to pass into the sacred presence of God, who dwelt between the cherubim over the ark in the tabernacle. Upon entering the court through the gate the first object we meet is the brazen altar, which stood facing the gate. It was made of wood, but covered with strong brass plates to protect it from fire. It was about 7 1-2 feet square and 4 1-2 feet high. While there is much of interest in this altar, I must pass it by, and likewise the brazen laver, which stood between the tabernacle and the altar. Purpose of the laver is described in Exod. 30: 17 to 21, but there is no description of it nor its size. There are some beautiful suggestions in this laver and its uses, but time will not permit to go into them here. You may look up an inspired comment upon it for yourselves, however, in the 13th chapter of John.

Cleveland, Ohio.

THE PATH OF THE JUST

Miss Viola Gazeley

The wise King Solomon says: "Enter not into the path of the wicked, and go not in the way of evil men," for "the way of the wicked is as darkness; they know not at what they stumble." "But the path of the just is as the shining light that shineth more and more unto the perfect day." (Prov. 4:18).

As the sun at first produces an imperfect vision in the early dawn but continues to shine more and more until it reaches the zenith, and renders perfect day; just so is the life of one who grows clearer and brighter until he reaches the perfect state.

By "path" is meant manner of life, or progressive existence. The great light for which we are striving and toward which we are traveling is as a lighted city upon a hill. As we approach it our path becomes brighter, and the way of sinners (which if we pursued, would lead us into total darkness) grows dark as we advance.

Have we chosen this path of light, or are we traveling down the path of darkness which leads into the realms of blackness and despair? Let us consider this and find out for ourselves which path we are in, and let us ask ourselves if we are walking by faith toward God, who is light, and in whom there is no darkness.

In recent reading I became especially interested in a statement that some people think there is a great chasm of darkness beneath our feet, and that the earth is a mere crust (which is the firmest substance of human happiness) spread over this chasm, and that if we step a little heavier than usual we will sink down into the realms of darkness and oblivion. It does not seem as though there is such a chasm of darkness and despair beneath our feet, only that which our own evil digs. If we feel aware of the presence of such a chasm, let us bridge it over with loving thoughts and actions, and journey safely to the other side, having in view our Blessed Hope, the great light for which we are striving. I pray, brothers and sisters, that we may all journey safely over the path of the just, and at last gain a worthy entrance into the Kingdom.

Cleveland, Ohio.

GOLD DUST

A clear conscience can bear any trouble.

"The graces of character grow not through special efforts, but in ordinary duties."

"Get into the habit of looking for the silver lining of the cloud, and when you have found it, continue to look at it, rather than the leaden gray in the middle. It will help you over many hard places."

"Anyone can carry his burden, however heavy, till night fall. Any one can do his work, however hard, for one day. Any one can live sweetly, patiently, lovingly, purely till the sun goes down, and this is all that life ever really means."

"God has given us a book to which we do well to give heed as to a light shining in a dark place; and there is not a single dark place that it does not illumine—not a single question that it does not answer—not a single relation in life with respect to which it is not an all sufficient guide."

"There is injustice in the earth, there is oppression, for man rules, and until Christ reigns there will be imperfection and injustice."

ANNA DREW.

Dixon, Ill.

THOSE SIGNS

We do not mean those signs of the times which tell us so plainly that the day of the Lord is at hand, yet they are among them; but we mean those outward signs of inward vanity, pride, desire to please the world and the flesh rather than God. That gold chain and watch suspended so conspicuously to the gaze of others, that diamond ring and other jewelry, and that dress of costly make and fabric which took days of time that ought to have been devoted to growth in grace and gospel work.

When men go out of business and the store is vacated of its old stock, they usually take all the signs down from the outside lest they mislead some one. If we have gone out of the fleshly business, left the world with its vanity fair and love of display far, far behind us; if the Holy Spirit has transformed us by the renewing of our mind and taken the love of the world, the lust of the eyes and the pride of life all out of us, why not remove all the outward signs of the inward possession of these things! Some dead leaves will cling to trees in spite of winter's frost and rain but when the root-life flows up into those branches in the spring those old leaves drop and give place to beautiful new ones. If the life of God is flowing all through us, how is that so many dead leaves—signs of the old life—remain? Beloved, let us take down all the signs of the old fleshly life, for if we live after the flesh we shall die.—Sel. by O. J. A

OUR OWN RIGHTEOUSNESS IS ALL FILTHY RAGS

Mrs. Chas. Thomas

How often we judge another and weigh his or her faults and think and say how far short they come of measuring up to what Christ requires of them in such or such a thing. Did you ever stop to think, brethren that we are unable to see right sometimes; for we cannot see the motive and heart that prompts the act. For example: A brother may be tired and time again overtaken in a fault, and we cannot understand why he does so, and we say, does he not see what the word teaches in regard to that point? Yes, but if we could see the heart we might be surprised for we might find that the said brother or sister had fought and struggled to overcome that same weakness and failed again and again, until they had cried out as Paul did: "O wretched man that I am! Who shall deliver me from the body of this death?" But he adds: "I thank God through Jesus Christ our Lord. So then with this in mind I myself serve the law of God, but with the flesh the law of sin" (Romans 7:24-25).

To those who thus struggle, another comforting verse is: "There hath no temptation taken you, but such as is common to man, but God is faithful who will not suffer you to be tempted above that you are able, but will with the temptation also make a way to escape, that ye may be able to bear it" (I Cor. 10-13). We are heirs of sin, and while we are in this mortal, weak body, we will have in our possessions things we have inherited. If we are heirs of a gift we surely have nothing to glory in either way. Paul says we must not be "puffed up, for one against another. For who maketh thee to differ from another? And what has thou that thou didst not receive? Now if thou didst receive it, why dost thou glory, as if thou hadst not received it?" I. Cor. 4-7). If we are gifted to write, it is a gift, and we have nothing to glory in, but should rather give thanks and use the gift no matter how small, for our Master. If we are gifted to talk, we should talk always to help and uplift one another, and for all good points and talents we should give thanks, and cultivate them, but not despise or judge one with more weakness, for we have nothing of ourselves. If we are to judge by outward appearances we would pick out the young man who had kept all the commandments from his youth up, but the Saviour, seeing the heart, knew the lack, and would know that he or she would fall when put to the right test. A righteousness that will not sell all and follow him, will become as filthy rags. Such will be found to be like the man in the parable of the marriage of the king's son, in Matt. 22:13; who was cast out, because he wore his own garment instead of one furnished him by the Master of the house.

So let us not judge if we are wrong where another is weak. Help him when we can, and remember that it is more glory to overcome a weakness than it is to be strong and be puffed up.

Proctor, Montana.

ON THE WAY SOUTH.

When I wrote last I had just arrived in Enid, Okla. You will remember when I made the appeal in The Restitution for funds to make a trip south. I said a lady had written that she wanted to hear a few sermons with a view to being baptized. Well, she lived at Enid, Okla., and although Enid is a city of some 15,000 or 16,000 inhabitants, no place at this time could be secured to hold meetings; so it was decided to hold them in our friend's commodious home, a few of the neighbors came in, and we discoursed to them on the origin of man. We told them that the Bible gave us the only account of man's nature that would stand the test of rigid investigation. Science teaches that all the elements of man's composition are foun din the earth, and this proves that man is of the "earth, earthly." This tallies exactly with the Bible account: Man was formed of the dust Gen. 2:7).

We then told them that Plato taught the immortality of the soul and why he did it was easy to account for. God had not revealed himself to them yet, and knowing of no power that could raise the dead, the grave was as far as they could go. Plato reasoned that it was no more improbable that man should live again than that he lived or had a being the first time, but how was the question. I have said they had no revelation, and they could go as far as the grave and look while it received its victims; but no further could they go. If they at this point could have known of the resurrection of the dead, the problem would have been solved, and no place for the immortality of the soul would ever have been necessary. But not knowing of the resurrection how natural to fall into the belief that there must be something in man that does not die. That was the only way they could see out of it. After God has taught us plainly by word and example that the dead will rise again, is there, any excuse for believing that man lives on? If the resurrection would have settled the question with the heathen philosophers, it ought to settle it with us! If not, where do we belong? And has the resurrection taught us any thing? Finding that man was made of the dust and returned to dust, with those ancient people, we followed them to the grave, and there we told the people we would leave them till the next evening.

Having assembled again we proceeded with the subject. We told them that if Plato was right then he had solved the problem of future life for us before God did; that on this subject at least God had made no revelation—simply a reiteration of what had already been revealed. But we showed that God in his word had taught us that the only hope of the dead was laid in the resurrection, and therefore God was as much at variance with Plato as with the subject in the beginning. The doctrine of the immortality of man and the resurrection are directly opposite, and opposed one to the other. If man is immortal, that solves the problem of future life; if he is not, then the resurrection is a necessity, and that is the solution. They all saw the point. You may ask how I know they saw it. There are many ways of finding out these things. Sometimes after we close a meeting people show anger, and that proves they have been listening so is not always as bad a sign as it appears. That was not so in this case, however. One old gentleman and his daughter-in-law came to hear the two above discourses. I told them the next night I would talk of one of the most important criminal trials on record. By the way, a lawyer was attending and that seemed to interest him. Our old gentleman was a Baptist, and the third evening when the daughter-in-law came she was asked if Mr. —— was not coming. She said when she got ready she asked him if he was not going, and he felt of his wrist and said he had lost his pulse. He claimed to have some kind of spells and he could not find his pulse. This was a new experience to me, I had been used to their pulse getting too rapid. I think that was the case with him during the discourse, but went home and said he was perfectly satisfied where he was, and what he was, so fell into a state of lethargy, and his pulse fell below normal. Yes, they feel perfectly satisfied and don't want to be disturbed before their time. If their own doctrine should be true, judging from their indifference, I anticipate a time when they are going to have a sudden rise of temperature and pulse beat that will not be hard to locate. After they dropped out we decided to just gather around the table with Bible in hand and study by subjects and ask questions, which proved very beneficial.

The lady that was the means of our going, proved to be one of the most earnest students it was ever my lot to instruct. She had already interested her husband, and he too, was an earnest searcher. They belonged to the Christian Church, and had a great deal to consider, but never hesitated in a known duty. I have instructed many who were searching for truth, but mostly confine their search to doctrine, but this sister wished to learn how to live and what would be expected of them as believers. Having learned all to their satisfaction, Monday evening we drove out in the auto to a creek just out of town, and planted them in the likeness of Christ's death, and take pleasure in presenting to the household of faith Brother and Sister Pendarvis.

We can truthfully say that all you who contributed to the fund have been well repaid. Bro. Pendarvis holds a position of trust in one of the banks in Enid, and is a gentleman of honor. Sister Pendarvis is going to be a worker: She don't believe that being baptized is all there is to it. Brethren pray for these worthy ones of the faith, and hope that we may see the results of our little efforts in the kingdom. This shows what a little co-operative work will do. We thank all for their help. The Lord will certainly bless you.

ALMUS ADAMS.

Enid, Okla.

CAN OR CAN'T.

Can would begin it,
Can't isn't "in it,"
When there is work to be done.
Can is awake,
Can't is a fake,
This is the way the world is run.
Can is at school,
Can't is a fool,
And always is thinking of fun.
Can is a worker,
Can't is a shirker,
And never is up with the sun.
Can't means disaster,
Can is a master,
To everything life has begun.
Can is a man,
Let Can't be Can,
With success, then, will life's work be done.

—Sel.

Instruct me from the Word of God.
Don't teach me pagan lies;
The record of God's Word is true,
The soul that sinneth dies.

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

We, whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones.

This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of their paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

Mrs. Emily Collett	$1.00
Mrs. C. N. Howard	1.50
One in the Faith	5.00

DID SAMUEL'S SOUL APPEAR?

For the want of a better proof that a personality outlives the body, we are frequently informed that the disembodied soul of the prophet Samuel appeared to King Saul after the death of Samuel's body, and conversed with him.

From the record in I. Sam., xxviii., we learn the following facts:

(1) Not a word is said about Samuel's soul—they only guess it means his soul.

(2) Whatever appeared, came at the bidding of a witch.

Have wicked witches power over the departed souls of saints?

(3) Saul said, "Bring me up Samuel;" and the witch said, "I saw gods ascending out of the earth;" and Samuel said, "Why hast thou disquieted me to bring me up?"

Do the souls of saints go into the earth at death?

If not, then Samuel's soul did not appear.

If they do, then they do not go to heaven at death.

(4) Saul saw nothing himself, but inquired of the witch, "What form is he of?" She replied, "An old man cometh up."

Do some souls look older than others?

And from her description "Saul perceived that it was Samuel."

(5) He states to Saul, "To-morrow shalt thou and thy sons be with me."

If he was in bliss, those wicked men were to be in bliss too, if he spoke the truth; but Saul did not die for several days afterward; so it was not Samuel that talked, as a falsehood was told.

(6) Either the witch was purposely deceiving Saul, or it was a freak of demonology—demons appearing—one personating Samuel, and talking in his stead, and lying as usual. These "gods" existed prior to the death of men (Gen. iii. 5); consequently cannot be disembodied human souls. Ancient witchcraft was conected with demonology.—W. Sheldon.

Scripture Searchers Assistant

A very valuable help to all who are studying the Scriptures—a reprint of one of our beloved Brother Joblin's works. Treats of thirty different subjects with about four hundred references. All should possess a copy for ready reference. Price by mail six cents. Address W. S. Tomlinson, 10825 Orville Ave., N. E., Cleveland, O.

A SONG BOOK.

Songs of the Kingdom.

Recommended by Bro. Huggins and nearly all of our preachers, as by far the best song book for our people. 138 pages, flexible cloth, 25 cents each; postpaid. Address, Chas. E. Crowe, St. Paul, Neb.

Book and Tracts by Bro. W. H. Wilson.

"A Bible Study of Hades," as compared with our modern ideas," is the title of a new tract just issued by Bro. W. H. Wilson. It is a critical study of the subject of Hell. It shows that the meaning attached to this word today is different fro mthe meaning given to it years ago. It also shows how this change was made, and who made it. The price is 15 cents each, or 5 for 50 cents.

Student's Text Book, a cloth bound book 200 pages.

It deals specifically as How to study the Bible and why people fail to rightly understand God's Word. Price 50 cents.

Pine Woods Bible Class, a book of 480 pages bound in cloth. Studies are carried on as between a class and its teacher. Price $1.25.

Cunningly Devised Fables, 28 pages. Price 10 cents.

Where Will You Spend Eternity? Four pages, 25 cents per 100.

Are You in Need of Money? 4 pages 25 cents per 100.

Will It Pay to Become a Christian? is the title to a well written book of 96 pages by Brother Jas. W. Wilson. In a clear and convincing manner it sets forth the Christian faith and answers the question indicated in its title affirmatively. The edition should be taken at once and put out to work. It is neatly bound in cloth. The price is 25 cents, very low, and within reach of all.

W. H. Wilson, at 625 North Willow avenue, Austin Station, Chicago, Illinois.

The Bible: Its Principles and Texts

As indicated by the title this book is divided into three sections. The first consists of a remarkable disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "principles" in formulated propositions, and the third expounds in a clear, impressive and homelitic manner particular "Texts." The knotty and perplexing texts of the Bible are united and solved satisfactorily to the most fastidious and critical. More than one hundred and fifteen subjects of intense interest to every Bible student are formally discussed. Both simple and scholarly—the child is fascinated and taught; the scholar is entertained and instructed. Bible lovers, here is a feast for you. Throw open the door of your home; let The Bible—Its Principles and Its Texts come in and bless you and your family. 309 pages, 5x7 1-2 inches, durably and handsomely bound in whole cloth, with title embossed on back in gold. One copy, $1.10, two copies or more $1.00 each. The Restitution Pub. Co.

Four Page Tracts

Can You Believe? A series of questions setting forth the fundamental points of our faith.

State of Man in Death. A collection of proof texts on this subject.

Life and Death. A short concise statement of the facts in the case.

Age to Come Not a Heresy, by H. V. Reed.

10 for 10 cents, 50 for 25 cents, 100 for 40 cents.

The Paternity of Jesus. A pamphlet of 122 pages, by M. Joblin, giving in detail all that can be said on this subject, and completely proving that He is the Son of God, and not the natural son of Joseph. This work ought to be sold at 25 cents a copy, but the author was so anxious that price should not stand in the way of its being read, that he put the price at ten cents, so all can buy them. Send to this office for them.

Address The Restitution Pub. Co.

Popular Lectures By Bro. M. Joblin

Send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled: "The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to Be Saved?" The Foolishness of Preaching and Salvation—what is it?

Each lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price.

TWO TRACTS By J. L. WINCE

"Salvation" and "Resurrection" two tracts by J. L. Wince, can not fail to arouse the interest of every believer. They deal with vital questions in a most convincing manner. The price is 10c each, 12 for $1.00. For sale by S. Roxanna Wince, Pierceton, Ind.

SUBSCRIBE FOR
Words of Life
the publication of the Conditional Immortality Mission of Great Britain, advocating Life and Advent truths.
Terms: 1 copy 37c per annum.
12 copies to one address 25c per copy per annum.
Sample copy on application to
WILLIAM G. ROTHE
1301 Park Pl. Brooklyn, N. Y.

BOOKS AND TRACTS

Bible Pearls—Two-page tracts, suitable for wide distribution. 1. The Gospel. 2. Coming and Kingdom of Christ, by 20,000 Baptists in 1660. 3. Immateriality. 4. Kingdom of God. 5. Nature of Man and Thoughts for Thinkers. 6. Two Advents. 7. What is Religion? 8. Restitution Age. 9. Destiny of the Wicked. 10. Baptism. 10 copies for 5 cents, or assorted packages of 100 for 20 cents.

50 YEARS' EXPERIENCE
PATENTS
TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.
Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the
Scientific American.
A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.
MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

Census Blank

MEMBERSHIP CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA

Name .....

Address .....
Street Town State

By whom Immersed ..... Date .....

Fill out the above and send to "The Census Editor," The Restitution, 803 Parkwood Drive, Cleveland, O.

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co.
WHOLESALE OPTICIANS
We make a specialty of High Grade Prescription Work, and carry a full line of all kinds of Optical goods. All orders filled same day as received.
"S. K. N." SERVICE
Means prompt returns, careful work, moderate prices.
Goods shipped to all parts of the country.
The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co. 332 SCHOFIELD BUILDING CLEVELAND, OHIO

SPECIAL OFFER!

IN ORDER to increase the circulation of The Restitution, the following special offer is made:

One new subscriber for 1 year, choice of:

W. H. Wilson's "Student's Text Book," regular price 50c
Or 5 Copies of "Cunningly Devised Fables," reg. price 50c
Or 5 Copies of "Bible Study of Hades," reg. price 50c

For Two New Subscribers

One Copy "Pine Woods Bible Class," 480 pages, reg. price, $1.25
Or "The Bible, Its Principles and Texts," 309 pages, reg., $1.25
Or One Hundred of Bro. Joblin's Tracts, regular price $1.00

Here is a chance to get some of the books you all should own. By making special arrangements with the authors we are able to offer them to you without the payment of a cent on your part, just a few minutes effort. We cannot afford to continue this offer long, so take advantage of it at once, get some new subscribers today.

THE RESTITUTION, 803 Parkwood Drive

YOU will get genuine pleasure from an hour or two spent with the "Mirroscope" these long winter evenings. Pictures, Photos, Post Cards, Etc. are shown in exact reproduction same as with a high priced Stereopticon, can be used in any home and operated with Electricity, Gas or Acetylene. Prices $2.50, $3.00, $7.50, $10.00, $15.00, $20.00, according to size. Sent anywhere in the U. S. Send for one today.

HOME ILLUMINATED PICTURE CO.
311 SCHOFIELD BUILDING CLEVELAND, OHIO

Less than Half a Cent a Day

The Restitution costs a Dollar and a Half a year, that's less than half A Cent a day or three cents a copy. You can't afford to be without it. If you are a subscriber get some one else to subscribe.

Help to Get Them on the List

Sample Copies of The Restitution
May be obtained for a stamp. Send for one.

"A LETTER TO A FRIEND"

This tract needs no introduction further than to say that it is one of the most convincing Gospel sermons ever written. Originally written as a letter to a friend by Sister C. C. Woodruff it was published and has sold extensively in tract form. In its present edition it is a 32 page tract, the price is

10c each; 12 for $1.00

There is no better way of spreading the Gospel than handing out one of these tracts wherever you have the opportunity.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

"Future Probation,

Is that Awaiting any of the Unrighteous?"

Here is a work by Wm. Glenn Moncrieff that every one should read. It is one of the best things on the subject ever written and will appeal to every student of the word. It is a book of 150 pages, made to sell at 25c. We have a limited number left which we will sell at the special price of

10c each; 12 for $1.00

Send for some at once.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

Ladies! Save Money and Keep in Style by Reading McCall's Magazine and Using McCall Patterns

McCall's Magazine will help you dress stylishly at a moderate expense by keeping you posted on the latest fashions in clothes and hats, 50 New Fashion Designs in each issue. Also valuable information on all home and personal matters. Only 50c a year, including a free pattern. Subscribe today or send for free sample copy.

McCALL Patterns will enable you to make in your own home, with economy and style, clothing for yourself and children which will be perfect in style and fit. Price—never more than 15 cents. Send for free Pattern Catalogue.

We Will Give You Fine Presents for getting subscriptions among your friends. Send for free Premium Catalogue and Cash Prize Offer.

THE McCALL COMPANY, 370 to 378 West 37th St., NEW YORK

The Restitution
IS THE OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA.

The Restitution.

Founded in A. D. 1852

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Lk. 19:12-16), who will be King of Kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-53); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17), and belief in, the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Lk. 13:3), and obedience by Baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 2:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ." (Acts 8:12; 28:23,31).

ROBT. G. HUGGINS, Editor.

—Terms of— Subscription
ONE YEAR, $1.50;
SIX MONTHS 75 CTS. IN ADVANCE

VOL. 60 · CLEVELAND, OHIO, FEBRUARY 13, 1912 · No. 56

"ONLY A LITTLE WHILE"

"Weeping may endure for the night, but joy cometh in the morning" (Psalm 30:5)

"Only a little while
Of walking with weary feet,
Patiently over the thorny way
That leads to the golden street.

Suffer, if God shall will,
And work for him while we may;
From Calvary's cross to Zion's crown,
Is only a little way.

Only a little while
Of toiling, a few short days,
And then for the rest, the quiet rest,
And eternity's endless praise."
—The late Sister Cozier, sent by Sister Addie M. Tanner.

GIVE A SMILE

Lillie H. Willis.

As you pass through the world
With its ups and its downs,
Its sorrow, its want, and its strife,
Don't think that you are the only one
That knows all the bitter of life;
There is trouble and care
All over our land;
There are homes that no sunshine know,
There's darkness and misery everywhere,
You'll find it wherever you go.

In the hovels of the rich,
And homes of the poor,
In palace, hall and cot,
Search where you will, you'll never find
A place where it cometh not.
There are hearts that ache 'neath the ermine,
And brows that throb 'neath a crown;
And sorrow is there,
And real want and care,
Though millions and lands they may own.

So, give a smile or a hearty handshake,
A laugh, or a word of cheer;
'Twill lift the burden
From many a life
That else would be dark and drear.
And when you reach the other home,
Where the skies are always blue,
Some of those you've helped along
Will surely come up to you,

And with a smile
And a greetings that's glad,
Will tell how you helped along,
With your kindly looks,
Or words of cheer,
When everything else went wrong,
And will say—"All for me that eternity holds
Whatever I have in view.
The life that's endless,
The city of gold,
I owe them, my friend, to you."
So give a smile
As you journey through life,
A hand-shake, or word of cheer;
The good they do to earth's teeming throng
Can never be measured here.
'Neath the jeweled crown,
'Neath the purple
Are hearts that break;
So give of your love as you pass along,
Before it is too late.
Galva, Ill.

IS THERE A SECRET PHASE TO THE SECOND COMING OF CHRIST?

Wm. N. Pile.

No doctrine has been more perverted than that of the Second Advent. While the Scriptures teach the literal and visible return of the "same Jesus" who ascended, the passages relating to it have been applied to the day of Pentecost, the destruction of Jerusalem, death, to the appearance of some new teacher, or doctrine, etc. And even among those who repudiate these false theories of the coming and adhere to its literal nature, the doctrine is perverted by making two future comings when there is but one, or, as some put it, two stages of one coming—the secret and the open. Notwithstanding the caution of Christ against all secret views of his return (See Matt. 24:26), we are told that he will first descend from heaven to "the air," secretly, and then raise the dead and translate the living saints, who will be caught away to the "secret chambers," there to remain with him for a time; some believing it to be for a few years and some longer.

Of this secret stage of the coming neither the waiting church nor the world is to have a moment's warning, the saints being first apprised of it by their heavenward flight, and the world by the departure of "the missing ones." After the pouring out of great judgments, and the conversion of great multitudes by unparalleled revivals of religion, Christ and his immortalized saints, with the angelic host, are to be manifested to the world by their visible descent in great power and glory to establish the kingdom of God upon earth. This view is said to be supported by the use of the two words parousia and epiphaneia as referring to the Advent, the former applying to the secret, and the latter to the visible coming. So far as I can ascertain, there is not a trace of this two-stage view to be found in the writings of early Christians. I think it even more modern than Whitby's theory of "the world's conversion." I have no doubt that it is one of the many delusions of "the last days."

Of the word parousia little need be said; it is conceded to refer to a personal coming or presence. It is used of the "coming" of Stephanus, Titus and Paul. See 1 Cor. 16:17; 2 Cor. 7:6; 10:10 (here rendered presence—see also Phil 2:12); Phil 1:26. Parousia is defined by Robinson, "the being or becoming present; presence; a coming advent;" by Liddell and Scott, "a being present; presence; arrival." This word then, so frequently used to express the coming of Christ, can only mean a personal coming.

As little need be said of the word epiphaneia. It occurs six times in the New Testament, and is rendered "appearing" five times and "brightness" once. Robinson defines it thus: "an appearing; appearance." The word is used in the New Testament only with reference to the appearing of Christ.

It will be seen from the foregoing that there is no more difference between parousia and epiphaneia, as applied to Christ's coming, than between our English words "coming" and "appearing." One states the action of the coming, by which he becomes present, while the other states, in addition to this, his appearance to those who witness it. The word parousia does not describe the coming, but simply announces it; hence its aspect must be decided by qualifying terms. It follows, therefore, that unless the parousia is somewhere described as secret, this modern idea cannot be sustained. But, on the contrary, it is declared to be open and visible.

The disciples came privately to Jesus on the Mount of Olives, saying, "What shall be the sign of thy coming (parousia), and of the end of the world?" Matt. 24:3. It seems from this that the disciples believed that the parousia was to be open, visible, and announced by a "sign." Instead of correcting this impression, Jesus says in reply, "If they shall say unto you, Behold, he is in the desert, go not forth; behold, he is in the secret chamber; believe it not. For as the lightning cometh out of the east and shineth unto the west, so (visible) shall the coming (parousia) of the son of man be." Ver. 26, 27. This was said especially to guard believers against this idea of a secret coming. As the lightning flash is visible to all, so is Christ's parousia to be.

Again, the disciples associate in their question the "end of the world," or age, with the parousia, but with those who believe in the secret coming the end does not come with the parousia, but with the subsequent epiphaneia. Both cannot be right. Christ's parallel also forbids the secret coming; "But as the days of Noah were so shall also the coming (parousia) of the son of man be. For as in the days that were before the flood they were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, until the day that Noah entered the ark, and knew not until the flood came, and took them all away; so shall also the coming (parousia) of the son of man be. Ver. 37-39. The flood did not come unperceived upon the world, nor was the destruction of the Antediluvians postponed to some manifestation after the flood. In the very nature of things, the flood drowned them all; even so will the parousia bring the destruction of the wicked.

The parousia of Christ is admitted to bring the resurrection and translation of saints; but these events are heralded and accompanied by great physical demonstrations; therefore the parousia is not secret, but open. Christ's resurrection was accompanied by "a great earthquake," and the appearance of an angel who was seen not only by the woman at the sepulchre, but also by the Roman "keepers," who "became as dead men." Matt. 28; 2-4. It is fair to infer, therefore, that the resurrection of the saints will be like that of their Lord. At the grave of Lazarus Jesus cried with a loud voice which was heard by saints and sinners present; and in response to his voice "Lazarus came forth." All the dead whom Christ raised came in obedience to an audible voice. See Luke 7:14; 8:54.

But we have more than type or inference for a demonstrative parousia. "For this we say unto you by the word of the Lord, that we which are alive and remain unto the coming (parousia) of the Lord, shall not prevent (go before) them which are asleep. For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first; then we which are alive and remain, shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air." 1 Thess. 4:15-17. If language can convey the idea of a noisy, trumpeted, visible coming, this does. Will Christ "shout" that his voice may die away in space, and reach no human ear? or will there be an answering shout of "this is the Lord; we have waited for him?" Will the voice of the archangel reach only angels' ears, or will it penetrate even to the caverns of the dead? Will the trump of God be muffled, or will it, as on Sinai's top, wax louder and louder, till the earth trembles beneath the blasts? There is no secrecy here! It is open, visible, noisy; yet it is Christ's parousia, his coming for his saints, and not a subsequent epiphaneia.

But again, "For the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed." 1 Cor. 15:52. And in ver. 23 this is declared to be the parousia. Christ also teaches the same: "And then shall appear the sign of the son of man in heaven; and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory. And he shall send his angels with a great sound of a trumpet, and they shall gather together his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other." Matt. 24:30, 31. As we have seen, this coming is thrice said to be the parousia (ver. 27, 37, 39), and likened to the lightning flash. A great sound of a trumpet, then, is to precede the gathering of the elect; and yet these moderns tell us that these elect are to be the subjects of a secret rapture!

All these texts imply that the parousia is also the epiphaneia; for when Christ comes his sign, his glory and his person are seen and his trumpet heard. But here, again, we are not left to inference, but have the most positive testimony to the fact. "I charge thee therefore before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing (epiphaneia), and his kingdom; preach the word; be instant in season, out of season; reprove, rebuke," etc. We have already seen that the decisions concerning the quick (living) and dead are given at the parousia, and the righteous are saved. The kingdom also, according to this passage, comes with the parousia, for as we have seen, the parousia brings the resurrection, which is in response to the last trump at the sounding of which "the kingdoms of this world become the kingdom of our Lord and of his Christ." This is also "the time of the dead, that they should be judged." Rev. 11:15-18. Again the commission to preach the word, rebuke, exhort, etc., does not expire until the epiphaneia; but all the preachers of God's word are delivered at the parousia. It is certain, therefore, that they are simultaneous. Christ declared that "the wheat and tares" are to remain together in the field until the harvest or end of the age; while this secret rapture theory teaches that all the wheat is removed, and the tares left standing, before the end.

Paul exhorts Timothy thus; "That thou keep this commandment (to follow righteous, etc.) without spot, unrebukable, until the appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ." It is evident from this that the saints' probation continues until the epiphaneia, which could not be true if they are made immortal by a previous parousia. The "blessed hope," for which we are to look, and until the consummation of which we are to "live soberly," etc., is the glorious (epiphaneia) appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ. Titus. 2:11-13. "What a man seeth, why doth he yet hope for?" The hope continues until the epiphaneia. There is a crown laid up for Paul, and for "all them also that love his (Christ's) appearing (epiphaneia)." Will they then receive it at a previous parousia? No!

The climax of the argument, however, on this point, is reached in 2 Thess. 2:8: "And then shall that wicked (the man of sin) be revealed, whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy with the (epiphaneia tees parousias autou) brightness of his coming." Here both words are applied to one action, epiphaneia being rendered "brightness," and parousia, coming. The idea is that the power and glory, the lightning flash of his parousia, shall destroy the great papal hierarchy and church, when the rising church shall "rejoice over her." Rev. 18:20-24; 19:1-7. This passage proves first, that the parousia and epiphaneia are simultaneous; and, second, that the career of the man of sin ends instead of begins at the parousia, when the saints are delivered, and does not extend to a subsequent epiphaneia, as some of those secret coming people believe.

Strange to say, 1 Thess. 5:23 is sometimes offered as evidence of this two fold coming of our Lord. The passage reads thus: "To the end he may establish your hearts unblamable in holiness before God, even our Father, at the coming of our Lord, Jesus Christ with all his saints." As these "saints" are said to come with Christ, it is supposed that they were previously resurrected or translated. If this were said to be the epiphaneia, there might be some show of arguments from this verse in favor of a previous parousia; but 'coming," here, is parousia; so if it proves anything concerning "saints" it is that they are with Christ when he descends from heaven to "the air," which, as we have seen, the apostle in the next chapter contradicts; for there Christ is said to "descend from heaven" before the resurrection or translation. The truth is that those who comes with Christ at his parousia are not saints but angels. Those who in the text are said to be "unblamable before God" are all embraced in the pronoun "your;" and they are not those who come with Christ, but are to be established "before" or in the presence of Christ and those who come with him—the angels. The word hagios here rendered "saints," means "holy," or "holy ones." In Mark 9:31 we read: "Whosoever therefore shall be ashamed of me and of my words in this adulterous and sinful generation, of him also shall the son of man be ashamed, when he cometh in the glory of his Father with the holy angels." See also Rev. 3:5. MacKnight here renders hagios "holy angels," and says, "It is of them, and not of the righteous, that the apostle here speaks; for the righteous will not appear till they are raised from the dead, so cannot come with Christ from heaven." These "holy angels" will be sent to gather the saints, as we have seen.

From all the foregoing considerations, I can but characterize this "secret coming" as one of the most grating of errors; and it is one that has already wrought much mischief. "Let no man deceive you!" If they say, "Behold, he is in the secret chambers, believe it not!" The mighty voice, the loud sounding trumpet, the quaking earth, the pasing away of the heavens "with a great noise," the resurrection and translation of saints, and the destruction of sinners, will all attend the parousia of the Son of God. God grant that for that soon coming day we may all be ready. (This article may be obtained in booklet form for 2 cents per copy, or 15 cents a dozen, of the Herald of Life, New Haven, Conn.—Editor).

THE TESTIMONY OF THE TABERNACLE—No. 3.

Chas. A. Goss.

The tabernacle proper was an oblong rectangular form, 45 feet long, 15 feet wide, and the same height. As you already know, it stood at the west end of the court, being like the court, longest from east to west. It had a side for every quarter of the globe, yet was one tabernacle. It was made of forty-eight boards, which were covered with gold, and stood upright and firmly fixed in sockets of solid silver. The boards were joined together by bars, five in number extending the whole length of the structure. Four of them passed through rings, but the fifth was shot through the boards edge wise from end to end, like a bolt, but could not be seen. A type of the Holy Spirit. The door of the tabernacle was made by five pillars, which stood in sockets of brass, from which a vail, called the first vail, hung. The whole structure was covered by four coverings.

In the tabernacle with its four sides, some writers and students of Scripture symbols have discerned a type of the four Gospels in their testimony of the one Christ as king in harmony with Old Testament prophecy and hope. In that gospel we are constantly pointed to the prophets, and the expression "that it might be fulfilled which was spoken of the prophets, is peculiar and characteristic of Matthew. The genealogy of Christ in Matthew is that of the king. The birth of Christ is at Bethlehem, the city of David—or Royal City where the king should be born. The wise men come seeking one born to be king in the second chapter, while in third John the Baptist comes as herald of the kingdom and introduces both king and kingdom. Many other references might be made showing that Matthew's view of Christ is harmonious throughout to the claims made in the first chapter that he was the royal heir—the son of David. How different the view presented by Mark, yet equally true, but taken from another standpoint. Mark presents Jesus in the character of a servant, doing perfectly the will of him who sent him. Here he says, "I do always those things which please him." Always about his Father's business. Two words characterize this book of Mark's—they are "straightway" and "immediately", for as a servant he only needed to know what to do, and then do it. We notice the absence of the genealogy in Mark's gospel. That was also in harmony with the character in which he depicts Jesus as a servant.

In Luke Jesus is presented as the son of man—the Saviour born for all the people—not of the Jews only. Everything human in Christ is emphasized. He presents himself as a man for lost men. There are nearly two chapters of genealogy of Christ in Luke, tracing him up to Adam, who was a son of God by creation, but not tracing him to David or Abraham, as in Matthew.

In the gospel of John we have the highest presentation of Christ as son of God. There is no genealogy in John. We begin with the word—and the word was made flesh and dwelt among us, and we beheld his glory.

There is no temptation in John's gospel, for a son of God was announced from the beginning, and the temptation must belong to another phase of his manifold character and offices.

The agony in the garden is omitted, and in the recorded events of the crucifixion we are occupied with those which strongly marked his divine character. There is no rending of the vail in John't gospel, for the one whose place had been behind the vail was out now in full manifestation—God manifest in the flesh of his son.

These differences of the gospels have been set forth in ancient symbolism. The cherubim with their four distinct faces, the face of a lion, ox, man and eagle, have been made to teach these truths. The gospel by Matthew is represented as the lion; Mark as the ox; Luke, the face of the man; John, by the eagle. Men have tried to write a harmony of the four gospels, and the imperfect results of the efforts are the best evidence of their failure to do it. God did not intend them to be harmonized. Their great value consists in their characteristic differences rather than in any harmony that can be made of them. Differences are not contradictions.

Let us now draw near the tabernacle proper and look at its coverings, which are four in number. The first in the outside was made of badger's skins; the next ram's skins dyed red, then the goat's hair, and last of all, fine twined linen. The animal which supplied the badger's skins for the outward covering of the tabernacle is believed to have been the seal from the shores of the Red Sea. They were not dressed but rough, unpleasant in appearance—a first class rain and dust proof covering. The ram's skins underlaid the outer covering, but whether of real utility or only for their symbolic meaning I have not learned. And as the badger's skins were

(Continued on Page Two)

The Restitution

Issued weekly by

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING COMPANY.

Entered as second-class matter under act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

TERMS.

One year $1.50; six months 75 cents, in advance.

ROBT. G. HUGGINS.....Editor
BUELL W. NUTT.....Manager

BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Burton H. Lang, Harry Pott,
Chas. A. Otis, Robt. G. Pate,
Buell W. Nutt, D. C. Robison,
W. S. Tomlinson.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

All remittances should be sent by bank draft, post office money order or express money order to The Restitution Publishing Co., 803 Parkwood drive, Cleveland, Ohio.

All communication intended for publication should be sent to the editor, Robt. G. Huggins, 10812 Lee avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

It is necessary to adhere strictly to the rule of not returning unused manuscripts. Writers will please keep copies, or risk the loss.

While the editor exercises a general supervision over the articles appearing in The Restitution, his endorsement does not extend to the interpretation of details nor the exegesis of particular texts in the writings of contributors.

Cleveland, Ohio....Feb. 13, 1912

EDITORIAL

What is resignation? It is putting God between one's self and one's grief.

To have ideas is to gather flowers. To think is to weave them into garlands.

Let our lives be pure as snowfields, where our footsteps leave a mark, but not a stain.

Good is slow: it climbs. Evil is swift: it descends. Why should we marvel that it makes great progress in a short time?

Human life is an open book, where we read in every line a justification of God's law.

The heart of the true Christian cannot be opened without there escaping thence gold, incense, and —alas!—myrrh also.

Don't growl, the dog can do that; don't scold, the hen can do that; don't scream, a parrot can beat you at that; don't sulk, an opossum can do that better than you. Smile, there is no other creature that can do that.

The Christian's God is a God of metamorphoses. You cast grief into his bosom: you draw thence, peace. You cast in despair: 'tis hope that rises to the surface. It is a sinner whose heart he moves. It is a saint who returns him thanks.

What we comprehend of God is, not what he is in himself, but what he wills that we should comprehend. The treasure of divine knowledge is twofold: the full, entire, and final verity, which is God himself; and those minor vestiges—eternal, indeed, but only half revealed—which he enjoins, that is to say, imposes, on the children of men.

THE SUPREME IMPORTANCE OF PASTORAL WORK. No. 3.

(d) Among the divine and numerous titles of Jesus Christ the pastoral is the peerless one. There are one hundred and three appellations applied to Jesus in the Old and New Testaments expressive of the names, titles, and offices of the Christ. That the pastoral office preponderates in those we show below by printing in black face type those in the list which refer directly and indirectly to his pastoral function.

Adam, the Second (I. Cor. 15: 45, 47).
Advocate, an (I. John 2:1).
Alpha and Omega (Rev. 1:8; 22:13).
Amen (Rev. 3:14).
Author and finisher of our faith (Heb. 12:2).
Author of eternal salvation (Heb. 5:9).

Beginning of the Creation of God (Rev. 3:14).
Blessed Potentate (I. Tim. 6: 14).
Branch (Zech. 3:8; 6:12).
Bread of Life (John 6:35).
Captain of Salvation (Heb. 2: 10).
Child, holy (Acts 4:27).
Child, little (Isa. 11:6).
Christ, the (Matt. 16:16).
Corner stone (Eph. 2:20).
Counsellor (Isa. 9:6).

David (Jer. 30:9).
David, son of (Matt. 9:27; 21: 9).
Day-spring (Luke 1:78).
Deliverer (Rom. 11:26).
Desire of all nations (Hag. 2:7).

Emmanuel (Isa. 7:14).
Everlasting Father (Isa. 9:6).

Faithful Witness (Rev. 1:5).
First and last (Rev. 1:17).
First begotten of the dead Rev. 1:5).

God Isa. 40:9).
God blessed forever (Rom. 9: 5).
Good Shepherd (John 10:11).
Governor (Matt. 2:6).
Great High Priest (Heb. 4:14).

High Priest (Heb. 5:10).
Holy Child Jesus (Acts 4:27).
Holy, the most (Dan. 9:24).
Holy one (Luke 4:34).
Holy thing (Luke 1:35).
Horn of Salvation (Luke 1:69).

I am (Exo. 3:14).
Image of God (II. Cor. 4:4; Col. 1:15).

Jehovah (Isa. 26:4).
Jesus (Matt. 1:21).
Just One (Acts 3:14).

King of Israel (John 1:49).
King of the Jews (Matt. 2:2).
King of Kings (I. Tim. 6:15).
Lamb of God (John 1:29, 36).
Lawgiver (Isa. 33:22).
Life, the (John 14:6).
Life, bread of (John 6:35).
Life of the world (John 8:12).
Light, true (John 1:9).
Lion of Judah (Rev. 5:5).
Living Stone (I. Pet. 2:4).
Lord (Matt. 3:3).
Lord God, Almighty (Rev. 15: 3).
Lord of all (Acts 10:36).
Lord of Glory (I. Cor. 2:8).
Lord of Lords (I Tim. 6:15).
Lord our Righteousness (Jer. 23:6).

Maker and preserved (John 1:3, 10).
Mediator (I. Tim. 2:5).
Mediator of New Covenant (Heb. 12:24).
Messiah (Dan. 9:25).
Mighty God (Isa. 9:6).
Mighty one of Jacob (Isa. 60: 16).
Morning Star (Rev. 22:16).

Nazarene (Matt. 2:23).

Passover, our (I. Cor. 5:7).
Priest forever (Heb. 5:6).
Prince (Acts 5:31).
Prince of life (Acts 3:15).
Prince of Peace (Isa. 9:6).
Prince of Kings (Rev. 1:5).
Prophet (Deut. 18:15).

Redeemer (Job. 19:25).
Righteous, the (I. John 2:1).
Root and offspring of David Rev. 22:16).
Root of David (Rev. 5:5).
Ruler in Israel (Mic. 5:2).

Same yesterday, today, etc. (Heb. 13:8).
Savior (Luke 2:11).
Shepherd and Bishop (I. Pet. 2:25).
Shepherd in the land (Zech. 11: 16).
SHEPHERD OF THE SHEEP, THE GREAT (Heb. 13: 20).
Shiloh (Gen. 49:10).
Son, a (Heb. 3:6).
Son, the (Psa. 2:12).
Son, My beloved (Matt. 3:17).
Son, only begotten (John 1:14).
Son of David (Matt. 9:27).
Son of God (Matt. 8:29).
Son of Man (Matt. 8:20).
Son of the Highest (Luke 1:32).
Star, bright and morning (Rev. 22:16).
Star and Sceptre (Numb. 24: 17).

Truth (John 14:6).

Vine, the (John 14:5).
Vine, true (John 15:1).

Way (John 14:6).
Witness (Rev. 1:5; 3:14).
Wonderful (Isa. 9:6).
Word (John 1:1).
Word of God (Rev. 19:13).

(Continued from Page One)

supposed to be typical of the outward or human aspect of Christ, as he appeared to men as described in the 53rd chapter of Isaiah, so the ram's skins dyed red were understood to represent the lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world—the blood of Jesus Christ, God's Son, cleanseth us from all sin (I Jno. 1:7). As the badger's skins represent the human or outward view of Christ, and the ram's skins dyed red represent the object of his humanity—obedience unto death, even the death on the cross, so the goat's hair covering brings to mind the complete putting away of sin. On the great day of atonement two goats were presented before the Lord, lots were cast and the goat on whose head the lot fell was slain as a sacrifice, while the other goat, after the sins of the nation had been confessed upon its head, was set free and permitted to escape into the wilderness, this meaning that on the basis of the sacrifice of the first goat all the sins of Israel for that year were put away and gone forever. The goat's hair curtains also set forth the stranger-ship of Jesus. These skins were used for tents in the east, and the meaning of a tent is that we have no settled home—a stranger and a pilgrim.

In the curtain of the fine twined linen we have an emblem of the spotless purity of the man Christ Jesus set forth. Inward purity not discerned by outside observation.

These different coverings all teach some truth for the sinner, but space does not permit us to look at them now. The door of the tabernacle—the bars—each have their lesson, and so also has the holy place with its door, the table of shew bread, golden candle stick, the golden altar. Other interesting and profitable points of study are the most holy place, the vail, ark, mercy seat, and cherubim, which may be considered at another time.

Cleveland, Ohio.

AS WELL BE RIGHT AS WRONG.

Almus Adams.

In The Restitution of January 23, in an article entitled, "Sundry Subjects," the writer in speaking of the birth of Christ, says this took place 1912 years ago. It might not be important whether this is exactly correct or not, but still we might as well be right as wrong when we can. That this is 1912 A. D. no one doubts, but what about the beginning of the year of our Lord? If you will consult the Encyclopedia Britanica, you will gather the information that A. D. began four years this side of the birth of Christ. Why? However, this being true, 1912 is 1916 A. D. from the birth of Christ. The question is in using Bible times and figures whether we should refer to and count from the birth of Christ, or from A. D. four years this side. History tells us that Herod died B. C. 2, which would make Jesus just two years old at the death of Herod, which agrees exactly with the Bible account in Matthew.

In the same article Paul is quoted where he says, "The gifts and calling of God are without repentance." This is true. God sent his son to the world as a gift but we have something to do before that gift will save save us. God's call is free, we have to heed the call: When the children of Israel return they must say ultimately, "Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord." "Jesus came to his own, but his own received him not." His visit and call were free, but they rejected them and their kingdom was left in a desolated condition. That the restoration of the kingdom was predicated upon the acepetance of their Messiah, and not on the free gift, is evident from the statement of Jesus himself. Listen: "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them that are sent unto thee, how oft would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not. Behold, your house is left unto you desolate."

The brother unguardedly quoted the one class of Scripture and seemingly forgot the other that goes with it, therefore put his own interpretation upon it, when the Bible interprets it differently; and this leads us to say, how careful we should be! Apollos had the way expounded to him more perfectly, and we read nowhere that he felt hurt. May the Lord lead us into all truth, and righteousness, and fit us for the soon coming of the Master.

Santa Rosa, New Mexico.

CORN SHEAVES

Gathered from Everywhere.

"Moses was right"—Dr. Martin Friedrich, says the Jewish Independent, while discussing the recent cases of trichinosis in this city, resulting in several deaths and serious illness, referred incidentally to the dietary regulations as promulgated by Moses, adding that the great lawgiver was many centuries ahead of his time in the making of laws to save human life.

"Those laws of Moses," said Dr. Friedrich to a reporter for The Jewish Independent, "were merely sanitary regulations, because he wanted his people to keep in healthy condition, and he knew which of the animals were fit and which unfit for food. These laws were absolutely sanitary and cannot be attributed to anything else. They bore a suggestion of religion, of course. In those days religion, health, the administration of justice and all other public matters were merged in one. At this late day scientists and authorities on sanitary measures agree that Moses was right."

Dr. Friedrich is not a Jew.

Plans Farms for Jews.—Sister Lang has kindly handed us this news item clipped from the Plain Dealer: Coming from Palestine with a message that bears on the solution of the Jewish problem, Dr. Benzion Mossinsohn will arrive in Cleveland Sunday, February 11. He is one of the most prominent men associated with the Zionist movement and has plans for Jewish colonization in Palestine. A committee of 100 has been selected to meet Dr. Mossinsohn upon his arrival here. The first public reception will be held at B'ne Jeshurun temple February 11. Upon his arrival in this country Dr. Mossinsohn was tendered a large reception in Cooper hall in New York.

"Palestine is the land in which to solve the Jewish problem," Dr. Mossinsohn said recently. "The land is prepared for us and the young Turks have told us positively that we are welcome.

"We have proved that a nation of farmers can be developed in one generation. We have taken men of excellent education—many of them sons of rich men—and, with the spirit of pioneers, they have adapted themselves to the soil. Ultimately, we expect the country to become the haven for millions of oppressed Jewish citizens of Russia. We will build up again a Jewish culture and a Jewish nation."

THE INSPIRATION OF THE BIBLE. No. 4

Continued From Last Issue

2. There are the differences in the narratives themselves. In the first place, the New Testament writers sometimes change important words in quoting from the Old Testament, which it is assumed could not be the case if in both instances the writers were inspired. But it is forgotten that in the Scriptures we are dealing not so much with different human authors, as with one divine author. It is a principle in ordinary literature that an author may quote himself as he pleases, and give a different turn to an expression here and there as a changed condition of affairs renders it necessary or desirable. Shall we deny this privilege to the Holy Spirit? May we not find, indeed, that some of these supposed misquotations show such progress of truth, such evident application of the teaching of an earlier dispensation to the circumstances of a later one, as to afford a confirmation of their divine origin rather than an argument against it?

We offered illustrations of this earlier, but to those would now add Isa. 59:20, quoted in Rom. 11: 26, and Amos 9:11, quoted in Acts 15:16. And to any desiring to further examine the subject we would recommend the valuable work of Prof. Franklin Johnson, of Chicago University, entitled, "The Quotations in the New Testament from the Old."

Another class of differences, however, is where the same event is sometimes given differently by different writers. Take that most frequently used by the objectors, the inscription on the cross, recorded by all the evangelists, and yet differently by each. How can such records be inspired, it is asked.

It is to be remembered in reply: that the inscription was written in three languages, calling for a different arrangement of the words in each case, and that one evangelist may have translated the Hebrew, and another the Latin, while a third recorded the Greek. It is not said that anyone gave the full inscription, nor can we affirm that there was any obligation upon them to do so. Moreover, no one contradicts any other, and no one says what is untrue.

Recalling what was said about our having to deal not with different human authors, but with one divine author, may not the Holy Spirit here have chosen to emphasize some one particular fact, of the inscription for a specific and important end? Examine the records to determine what this fact may have been. Observe that whatever else is omitted, all the narratives record the momentous circumstances that the sufferer on the cross was the King of

Could there have been a cause for this? What was the charge preferred against Jesus by his accusers? Was he not rejected and crucified because he said he was the king of the Jews? Was not this central idea Pilate was providentially guided to express in the inscription? And if so, was it not that to which the evangelists should bear witness? And should not that witness have been borne in a way to dispel the thought of collusion in the premises? And did not this involve a variety of narrative which should at the same time be in harmony with truth and fact? And do we not have this very thing in the four gospels?

These accounts supplement, but do not contradict each other. We place them before the eye in the order in which they are recorded.

This is Jesus, the king of the Jews.

The king of the Jews.

This is the king of the Jews.

Jesus of Nazareth, the king of the Jews.

The entire inscription evidently was, "This is Jesus of Nazareth, the king of the Jews;" but we submit that the foregoing presents a reasonable argument for the differences in the records.

3. There is the variety of style. Some think that if all the writers were alike inspired and the inspiration extended to their words, they must all possess the same style—as if the Holy Spirit had but one style.

Literary style is a method of selecting words and putting together which stamps an author's work with the influence of his habits, his condition in society, his education, his reasoning, his experience, his imagination, and his genius. These give his mental and moral physiognomy and make up his style.

But is not God free to act with or without these fixed laws? there are no circumstances which tinge his views or reasonings, and he has no idiosyncrasies of speech, and no mother tongue through which he expresses his character, or leaves the finger mark of genius upon his literary fabrics.

It is a great fallacy then, as Dr. Thomas Armitage once said, to suppose that uniformity of verbal style must have marked God's authorship in the Bible, had he selected his words. As the author of all styles, rather does he use them all at his pelasure. He bestows all the powers of mental individuality upon his instruments for using the Scriptures, and then uses their powers as he will to express his mind by them.

Indeed, the variety of style is a necessary proof of the freedom of the human writers, and it is this which among others things convinces us that, however controlled by the Holy Spirit, they were not mere machines in what they wrote.

Consider God's method in nature. In any department of vegtable life there may be but one genus, while members are classified into a thousand species. From the bulbous root come the tulip, the hyacinth, the crocus, and the lily in every shape and shade, without any cause either of natural chemistry or culture. It is exclusively attributable to the variety of styles which the mind of God devises. And so in the sacred writings. His mind is seen in the infinite variety of expressions which dectates the wording of every book. To quote Armitage again, "I cannot tell how the Holy Spirit suggested the words to the writers any more than some man can tell how he suggested the thoughts to them. But if diversity of expression proves that he did not choose the words, the diversity of ideas proves that he did not dictate the thoughts, for the one is as varied as the other."

William Cullen Bryant was a newspaper man but a poet; Edmund Clarence Stedman was a Wall street broker and also a poet. What a difference in style there was between their editorials and commercial letters on the one hand, and their poetry on the other! Is God more limited than a man?

JAS. M. GRAY.

AN "ENEMY."

Instead of saying that "death" is a curse, the modern Bible-interpreters place a diadem on the brow of death, and crown the "last enemy" with great pomp! The "enemy" that so disguises himself that he translates the mourner's tears into dewdrops of hope and life; that fiend that masqueradea as a blessing and cheats us out of our hopes and prospects; that cursed creature that steals into the silent death-chamber and thrusts his hideous and benighted visage into our midst; that thief and robber that diadems his poisonous darts and christens them the smiles of hope; that transmutes dying into bliss and the grave into paradise; that crowns all our aspirations, hopes and comforts with the awful procession of death—HE is an "enemy." He comes but for to kill and destroy (I Cor. 15-26). He has deceived thousands upon thousands, and led the fairest to the slaughter. But he cannot deceive a man or woman who holds an open Bible in hand.

Those with the "oracles of God" before them see him as the one who enters the death-room to kill and crush; to inflict grief and woe; to bring tears and heart-rendings, separation and pain. They see him as the warrior who comes with open ensign; and whose banner is pain and whose insignia is sadness and sighing. They see him as the heartless monarch who strikes at the nestling child in its cradle; who deals the deathblow to youth, and who with uplifted hand makes known his foul intent. They see him as the forerunner of all that is sad; the dreaded visitant who weaves the mantle of mirth in the home into the veritable shroud of death; whose pale walk leaves no joy in his tracks; who bears away to a narrow, lonely bed the embodied hopes of our family futurities and the trophies of our fondest ambitions.

They see him as the hostile and cruel bane to all that makes man happy, the insatiate king who rules with merciless power, and whose every demand is blood, blood, and into whose ears the appeals of swaddled babyhood, the cries of virtue, the pleadings of purity, the entreaties of holy men and women come not, and whose heart of stone is not touched nor melted by the widow's tears, nor by the prayer of the saint, nor yet by the solemn march to the cemetery.

You may poetize death if you will! You may crown his cruel brow with rhetoric if you must! You may diadem his loathsome face with laurels if you please! Take him up as you may; the day is coming when Almighty God will destroy him (Heb. ii.14; Hosea xiii. 14; Rev. xx. 12-15), and cast him into nothingness; when he shall himself be annihilated (I Cor. xv. 26). God calls things by the right name. He says that death is an "enemy." All the writers on earth cannot transmute this "enemy" into a friend.

EDITOR'S SERMON NOTES ON THE APOCALYPSE

Subject: The Stone-Man on the Rainbowed Throne.

Text: Rev. 4:1-4.

I. Introductory. I. A door opened in heaven "after this" ("after these things," Greek). Ver. 1; 1: 19; Luke 4:5-6; 10:18; Rev. 2:26-27; Dan. 7:27. II. The first voice, trumpet-like, speaks to him again, and he "looks" expectantly (ver. 1; 1:10; Lev. 23:24; Numb. 10: 4; Zech. 9:14). III. "Come up hither" ("ascend hither," Greek) to the throne (vss. 1, 2; 3:21; 11: 12).

II. The Stone-Man. I. A jasper (spirit) and sardine (flesh) stone. Combination of flesh and spirit (ver. 3; Gen. 49:24; Isa. 8: 14; Rev. 21:11, 23; Zech. 2:5, 10; Ex. 28:9, 12; I. Pet. 2:8.)

III. The Rainbowed Throne. I. The rainbow appears as a guarantee of the stability of the throne and glory revealed (Gen. 6:18; 9: 12, 16; Psa. 89:3, 4, 36, 37). II. It is seen after storm and after peace has come to the elements (ver. 5; Ezek. 1:26; Mal. 3:1, 2; Isa. 18:3, 4; Rev. 14:1; 15; II. Sam. 23; Psa. 72; Deut. 32:1, 2; 33:26-28; Isa. 55:10, 11).

Therefore, come what may, hold fast to love. Though men should rend your heart, let them not embitter or harden it. We win by forgiveness. Oh, strive to enter into something of that large, celestial charity which is meek, enduring, unretaliating, and which even the overbearing world cannot withstand forever. Learn the new commandment of the Son of God. Not to love, but to love as he loved.—F. W. Robertson.

GOD'S GOODNESS AN SEVERITY TO ISRAEL. —No. 2.

Jas. T. Auld.

My subject now requires that we examine Daniel's vision, as in verses above given, which we may clearly understand, as we have Gabriel's explanation. The power that was to destroy Daniel's people is the one we are looking for, and this comes after "the great horn was broken." Now let us notice: "Out of one of them—on of the four notable ones—came forth a little horn—Roman power—which waxed exceeding great toward the south, and toward the east, and toward the pleasant land." Did not Vespasion and Titus wax great before coming to the pleasant land and to Jerusalem? Read Josephus. "And it (Roman power) waxed great, even to the host of heaven (Jerusalem and the people in the city) and it (Titus' army) cast down some of the host (Jewish host) and of the stars (high priests) to the ground, and stamped upon them. Yea, he—Titus—magnified himself—he had a right to—even to the prince of the host; and from him (see margin)—the high priest—the daily sacrifice was taken away, and the place of his sanctuary was cast down. And an host was given him against the daily sacrifice by reason of transgression—they destroyed and slaughtered themselves—and it—(the sedition) cast down the truth to the ground, and it (Titus) practiced and prospered."

Daniel was anxious to know how long should be the vision concerning the daily sacrifice, and the transgration of desolation, to give both the sanctuary and the host—the transgressers—to be trodden under foot." This was the answer of the angel: "Unto two thousand and three hundred days—years—then shall the sanctuary be cleansed" (Dan. 8:13, 14).

Now, dear reader, we understand that the city of Jerusalem is to be trodden under foot by the gentiles, and the abomination is to remain on the Jews from that very moment, for two thousand three hundred years; and when the fullness of the gentiles become in then all—the remnant of Israel Israel indeed that are alive at this epoch—"shall be saved" (Rom. 11:25). Dear reader, do you not know that where the majority of the Jews are now; they are yet slaughtered as they were when dispersed? Read about them in Russia, how they are butchered, and they have received like treatment in nearly all countries since their dispersion from Jerusalem. O what a judgment God brought upon his rebellious people! But it will never occur again (Matt., 23:38, 39). They will call him "blessed."

Christ will come at the time appointed and the desolation and abomination will be ended and the sanctuary cleansed, by Jesus rebuilding Jerusalem and sitting upon the throne of his father David (Amos. 9:11, 12; Acts 15:15-18). In Daniel 9:23-19 we have Daniel's prayer that what he had seen in vision might be averted, but it could not be. Daniel knew he had seen the judgment of God upon his people, and he confessed before God the justice of their punishment. I concluded that the 2300 years begins with the destruction of Jerusalem, and will end at the expiration ofthat period. God will fulfill his word. The Turk is not in God's way. The Turk has nothing to do as some think—with keeping the Jew out of the Holy Land. They are a friend of the Jews. In Jerusalem thousands have built, and are farming thousands of acres of land. But some day Russia will figure in prophecy, when she comes down from the north to compass Jerusalem, the city without the walls.

The exile of the Jews is the decree of God. It never occurred to Daniel that what he saw applied to any other than his own people. Read Deut. 28 and Dan. 8 together and you will plainly see that the nation of fierce countenance in Dut. 28:50, is the same as the king of fierce countenance that should destroy Daniel's people: fulfilled in Titus and the Roman army. The Scriptures cannot be broken, and all propheeies will be fulfilled in God's appointed time. We should not forget this dear reader.

"Seventy weeks are determined upon thy people—remember, upon Daniel's people—and thy holy city—Jerusalem—to finish the transgression—their transgressions by not obeying God—and to make an end of sins—all the sins they had committed up to that time, for Moses and Daniel had warned them of it—and to make reconciliation for iniquity, and to bring in everlasting righteous, and to seal up the vision and prophecy—and to anoint the most holy" (Dan. 9:24). We will now turn to the ninth chapter of Daniel, selecting a few verses that pertain to our subject, and omitting those that refer to the time of Christ's birth and when he was to be cut off. The angel Gabriel said to Daniel: "Seventy weeks (490 years) are determined upon thy people—no other people but Daniel's—and upon the holy city, to finish the transgression"—where they had transgressed against God. Four hundred and ninety years from that time Jerusalem was destroyed, fulfilling the prediction of Gabriel: "And the people of the prince shall come—the Roman army under Titus the prince—and shall destroy the city and the sanctuary—Jerusalem and the temple—and the end thereof shall be with a flood, and unto the end of the war desolations are determined.

And he—Titus—shall confirm the covenant with many for one week, he—Titus—shall cause the sacrifice and oblation to cease, and for the overspreading of abominations he—Titus—shall make it—Jerusalem—desolate, even until the consummation"—until Jesus comes at the end of this age, when "the fullness of the gentiles be come in" Rom. 11:25; Acts 15:15-18; Luke 21:23, 24).

This was a judgment of God predicted by Moses in Deut. 28th chapter that should and was accomplished, as Josephus testifies, during the siege of Jerusalem. Jesus himself confirms this, telling the Jews after they rejected him: Behold your house is left unto you desolate" (Matt. 23:38). This desolation will continue until Christ's return, after which Jerusalem restored, will be "safely inhabited" (Zech. 14:8-11.)

That Daniel understood the terrible destruction to be visited upon his people, as shown in his vision and made known by the angel Gabriel, there can be no doubt, from the fact that he was so affected as to faint and be made sick for several days, and also from the fact that he afterwards prayed that it might be averted, referring to the prediction of evil to come upon them made by Moses. Read all Daniel's prayer in Dan. 9:12-19.

We must not get the two princes that Daniel speaks of mixed in our minds. In chapter 9:25, it is Messiah the Prince. In verse 26 Messiah is spoken of as "cut off." This, of course, is Christ, and his death at the hands of the Jews. But after this in the same verse it speaks of the people of the prince "that shall come," etc. This can only be Titus, the "prince" or commander-in-chief of the Roman army. Remember also that during this 490 years, though Daniel's people were to be destroyed by Titus, it was not until Christ should be born and "cut off, but not for himself." He gave his life for the world, not for himself.

Now we will let Jesus tell us when the tribulation placed on the Jews for their transgration shall be taken off. He informs us in the reply to his disciples' question concerning the sign of his coming, as found in Matt. 24:29, saying: "Immediately after the tribulation of those days." Notice that there is no "starving time" spoken of here, nor can be; and "after" must signify that tribulation had ended; also note that tribulation is not destruction. This tribulation and dispersion of the Jews is yet upon them. What then, Lord? Why, "the sun shall be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven, and the powers of the heaven shall be shaken." Then what? "Then shall appear the sign of the son of man in heaven, and then shall all tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory." Blessed hope indeed! Jesus says that as soon as the Jewish tribulation ceases, those other signs will "immediately" follow. Now we see why the generation that sees these things will not pass until all is fulfilled. The Jews as a people or nation are called a generation; also the Christians are called a royal priesthood, a holy generation. So you see those two classes of people have been here ever since our Lord uttered these words, will not pass away even after he comes. I conclude then that the sun and moon have not been darkened to fulfill this prophecy, and when they are, no one will have any doubt about it. May the reader and writer so live as to be raised in the first resurrection and see the son of man coming in all his glory.

Ulrichsville, O.

COMMUNICATIONS.

Dear Brother Huginș:—I am well pleased with the dear old Restitution. Have been a reader of it more than forty years; I could not do without it. It is the only preaching I hear. May God help and bless you in your labor to give the church a good pure and clean paper, one that sets forth the fundamental principles of the truth as the church has always understood them.

I think the paper has improved under the present management. Just go right ahead, turn not to the right or left. Boldly proclaim the truth that we, as a people, have so long contended for. In love and hope, I remain your brother in Christ,

A. F. RENNER.

OBITUARY.

I am writing to inform you of the death of Levi L. Wilkins, who has been a subscriber at Pratt Kas., until we came here recently and I suppose that the paper is still going there, and this is to saye you sending it there longer. He has been a subscriber to The Restitution for twenty-five years or more, I think, and valued it most highly, and died a firm believer in the faith, and seemed ready to meet his Saviour in the great judgment day. He died near Barnes, Kas., December 29, 1911.

A. A. WILKINS

Barnes, Kan.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON NOTES

Feb. 25th, 1912

The Baptism and Temptation of Jesus. Mark 1:9-13; Matt. 4:1-11

Golden Text:. "For in that he himself hath suffereth, being tempted, he is able to succor them that are tempted." (Heb. 2:18).

His baptism ocurred probably in January A. D. 27 and the temptation immediately after and continued 40 days. The place of baptism was in the river Jordan (Mark 1:9) probably near Bethabara, east of Jordan (John 1:28). The temptation took place in the wilderness; in some unknown part of the great wilderness of Judea, which included the whole slope of the central mountains to the Jordan. There is a mount called Quarantania, known as "Mount of the 40 days," where the temptation is presumed to have taken place.

Jesus had now come to the time when he was to enter upon his life work. He shines out clearly as an example and model for all as they stand upon the threshold of the decisive choice of the kind of life they are going to live. There are always two things as in this lesson, the consecration and the testing. Matthew gives the fullest account of the baptism of Jesus. He presented himself to John as a candidate for baptism. John would have hindered him as not belonging to the class of people whom he was calling to repentance, which is evidenced by his remark, "I have need to be baptised by thee." But Jesus answered, 'Permit it to be so now, for thus it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness."

Jesus did what all men are called upon to do who profess to follow after him; that is, to place themselves publicly before the world as belonging to the kingdom of God. The mode of baptism is very clearly defined in our lesson: "Coming up out of the water," which proves conclusively that there must have been an immersion and not a sprinkling. Luke 3:22 states that the Holy Spirit descended not only in the manner of a dove but in the bodily shape of a dove. In order to give visible impression that would strengthen and enforce the fact of invisible reality. The dove is considered the symbol of gentleness, of the power by which Jesus was to gain his victory. His power lay not, as is subsequently evidenced, in the storm, earthquake and fire, but rather in the still small voice. The greatest of all known forces are silent and gentle, as for instance, light, gravitation, formation of ice, etc.

Immediately after his baptism he was led forth to be tempted. He was led into the wilderness, sylliently because that was the place of duty and the necessary preparation for his work. It was not his duty to run away but to resist, fight and gain the victory. One writer has told us that "The allurements of a temptation are nothing more than the means by which the test is applied. They are never the temptation itself, never the main issue." We do not know whether Jesus knew what was to take place in the wilderness or not. He simply obeyed the Spirit's guidance. In order to understand the three great temptations which Jesus was subjected to, it is necessary that we see clearly three things in respect to each of them.

First, the allurement, second, the wrong, third, the means of victory. The first temptation was fasting forty days and forty nights. This was to show the intensity of the temptation to turn stones into bread. "If thou be the son of God, command that these stones be made bread." The wrong in yielding to this temptation was in satisfying his hunger in such a way as to destroy his power to help the tempted, for had he so done, he would not have been tempted like we are. A means of victory was in an appeal to the word of God and the principles he laid down. "Man shall not live by bread alone." (Deut. 8:3). The reference in this quotation is the Israelites' bitter complaint of the manna.

The second temptation was to prove himself the son of God, by casting himself down into the midst of the worshiping crowds, who would in turn welcome him as Prophet-King.

The third was promising him the kingdom of the world and the glory of it. In a measure Satan did have these things. Christ later called him "the prince of this world." Any one of these temptations is powerful in itself.

The lesson we learn in our study today is to so curb the desires and appetites of our own hearts, which appear innocent in themselves, that we may at last be overcomers and be accounted worthy to hear the "Well done, ye good and faithful servants, enter ye into the joy of the Lord."

S. A. SANFORD.

Cleveland, Ohio.

A LETTER TO A FRIEND.

Dear Friend: I am not able to think, talk, or write very much, but Ella tells me that you appear to be interested in the study of God's Word, and that interests me, for it surely is the grandest study that the world knows anything about. A knowledge of, and obedience to, God's Word, gives comfort in this life after everything else fails, which is well worth all of our efforts.

Dear friend, we all make many mistakes, but none so awful disastrous as the mistakes that we make concerning our eternal welfare. The majority of the professed Christian world believe and teach that honesty and sincerity will save, regardless of what we believe; but see what Paul says in Gal. 8-9: "Though we, of an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you, let him be accursed. So say I again, If any many preach any other gospel unto you than that ye have received, let him be accursed." This surely sounds like there is something definite for us to believe. Solomon says in Prov. 4:7, that wisdom is the principal thing; and in Prov. 2:3-6 we are told to search for it as silver, and as for hidden treasures; and in 3:14, "The merchandise of it is better than the merchandise of silver, and the gain thereof than fine gold." It is surely necessary for us to have knowledge and understanding, and the surest and best way to get it is from the Bible, for a great majority of teachers (though honest) will teach us tradition instead of God's word.

Dear friend, even though I am apparently at death's door, I know what I am talking about, for when I was a boy, my honest parents, the preacher, and the Sunday School teacher, taught me that I had an immortal soul (which is not mentioned in the Bible); and if I was wicked I would go into hell fire at death, and be eternally punishing; and if good I would be taken to heaven at death. I find by searching the Scripture (John 5:30), that there is no such threat of punishment in the Bible, and that there is no promise between the lids of the Bible of any one going to heaven at death; or any other time. Just to the contrary; for we are told in Prov. 10:30 that "the righteous shall never be removed, but the wicked shall not inhabit the earth;" and in Psa. 37:29: "The righteous shall inherit the land, and dwell therein forever;" 34th verse: "When the wicked are cut off, thou shalt see it." Please read all of the 37th Psalm; it is plain, and in perfect harmony with all other Scripture, except Gen. 3:4, where the serpent said. "Ye shall not surely die." We are told in John 8:44 that the author of that statement is a liar and the father of it, and there is no truth in him. Surely plain enough, but we can's possibly make out that he told a lie, if man's thinking part, the part that God and the serpent were talking to, is immortal and can't die. God says in Gen. 2:17: "Thou shalt surely die." The great majority of the professed Christian world, with most all of the heathen nations, believe what the serpent said to the woman. Dear friend, which will you believe? I believe what God said, for it is in perfect harmony with the rest of his word, and also with reason, observation, and true science. The immortal soulist, when pressed for one promise of going to heaven for faithful obedience in this life, will quote Eccl. 12:7, where Solomon says that the spirit returns to God who gave it. Please read what the same writer says in the third chapter, 19th verse: Man and beast all have one breath (spirit); the spirit of man goeth upward, and the spirit of the beast goeth downward to the earth. This teaches plainly that man and beast both have spirit. So the statement that the spirit returns to God who gave it, is no more of a promise to the saint, than it is to the vilest sinner. Read Job 34:14-15: "If he (God) gather unto himself his spirit and his breath, all flesh shall perish together," showing that the spirit that returns to God is the breath that he breathed into man at creation that caused man (not what was breathed in) to become a living soul. See the account of man's creation in Gen. 2:7. I could give you scores of plain statements in this line, but I will give just one more: In Psa. 146:4, David in speaking of man in death says: "His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth, in that very day his thought perish." As there is no contradiction to this verse in the Bible, (except Gen. 3:4), it should forever settle the question of any conscious entity apart from the body.

There are many grand and glorious promises in the Bible that I would like to cite you to, but can't at this writing; but will give a few that come readily to my mind. In the 37th Psalm we have many plain promises of inheriting the land, and dwelling therein forever; and Daniel 7:27 says that the kingdom and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the most high, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him" (Christ). This is the kingdom that we pray to come. Read Isaiah 11:6-10, and see what perfect harmony there will be even among the animals, after this promised kingdom comes. Then will be the time that we read of in Rev. 21:4, when God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes, and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain. For one that has had affliction, and many disappointments, these promises seem too grand to even hope for. But we read in Gal. 3:27-29 that as many as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ; there is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female; for all are one in Christ Jesus. And if ye be Christ's, then ye are Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise. So then we have received the birthright, and if we don't trade it for a mess of pottage, as Esau did, then we will receive the inheritance or promise. It is not a promise of going to heaven, for we have no such promise. See Gen. 13:14-17 for the promise: "The Lord said unto Abram, after that Lot was separated from him, Lift up now thine eyes, and look from the place where thou art, northward, and southward, and eastward, and westward; for all the land which thou seest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed forever. And I will make thy seed as the dust of the erath, so that if a man can number the dust of the earth, then shall thy seed also be numbered. Arise, and walk through the land, in the length of it; for I will give it unto thee." Read in connection Gen. 26:3-5, and 28:13-15; also 17:8; Acts 7:4-5. If you think that those promises have been fulfilled to Abraham and his seed, read the 11th chapter of Hebrews, which says that Abel, Enoch, Noah, Abraham, Sarah, Isaac, Jacob, and all of that innumerable company of ancient worthies, died in faith, not have received the promises. The faithful have many grand and glorious promises in the Bible. The Lord is not slack concerning his promises, so we should study to know what his promises are, and not accept things concerning our eternal welfare that he has not promised.

I think it a good thing to commit to memory the words that we are told to comfort each other with in II. Thess. 4:13-18. They surely are comforting words to me, for they are in harmony with the rest of God's promises that I believe will soon be fulfilled. The words that we are told to comfort each other with, can't be very comforting to the person that expects to go to heaven at death. I hope that you will not throw this letter in the waste basket, without careful consideration, for it is no more unpopular than what Noah preached for a hundred and twenty years. None believed but his own family; and we are told in Matt. 24:37-39 that as the days of Noah were, so shall also the coming of the son of man be. We should be careful what we accept or reject, for popularity will not save people at Christ's coming.

I send you a list of questions (Can You Believe) with this letter. I hope you will be careful in answering them, and after due consideration can say no to each of them. I fear that my letter is getting to long, so close, hoping to be among that company that shall meet the Lord when he comes.

Your True Friend,
G. W. CALDER

REPENT, BELIEVE, OBEY

E. W. Knapp.

Repent: "Repent ye therefore, and be converted" (Acts 3:19); Except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish (Luke 13:3-5); God commandeth all men everywhere to repent (Acts 17:30).

Believe: Jesus preached repent ye, and believe the gospel (Mark. 1:15). And he said, Lord I believe (John 9:38). He that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live. I believe that thou art the Christ, the son of God (John 11:25, 27).

Obey: He that believeth and is baptized, shall be saved (Mark 16:16). Then they that gladly received his word were baptized (Acts 2:41). We ought to obey God rather than man (Acts 5:29). But ye have obeyed, from the heart that form the doctrine which was delivered you (Rom. 6:17).

Facts to prove that to become probationers for immortality or eternal life; there must be a belief in the Scriptures of the Old and New Testament, with baptism into the name of Jesus the Christ of God, and an obedience to the faith taught and enjoined by Jesus and his apostles. And these words, which I command thee this day shall be in thine heart; and thou shalt teach them diligently unto thy children, and shalt talk of them when thou sittest in thine house, and when thou walkest by the way, and when thou liest down, and when thou riseth up" (Deut. 6:5-9). This book of the law shall not depart out of thy mouth; but thou shalt meditate therein day and night, that thou mayest observe to do according to all that is written therein; for then thou shalt make thy way prosperous and thou shalt have good success (Josh. 1:8. Go ye enquire of the Lord for me, and for the people, and for all Judea, concerning the words of this book that is found; for great is the wrath of the Lord that is kindled against us, because our fathers have not hearkened unto the words of this book, to do according unto all that which is written concerning us (II. Kings 22:13). So they read in the book to the law of God distictly and gave the sense, and caused them to understand the reading (Neh. 8:8). The law (doctrine, Marg.) of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul (Ps. 19:7). O let me not wander from the commandments Thy word have I hid in mine heart, that I might not sin against thee. Blessed art thou, O Lord, teach me thy statutes. Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path (Ps. 119:11, 12, 105). Who so despiseth the word shall be destroyed, but he that feareth the commandment shall be rewarded (Prov. 13:13). Who so keepeth the law is a wise son; he that turneth away his ear from hearing the law, even his prayer shall be abomination (Prov. 28:7, 9). To the law and to the testimony; if they speak not according to the word, it is because there is no light in them (Isa. 8:20). The word of our God shall stand forever (Isa. 40:8). Is not my word like fire? saith the Lord; and like a hammer that breaketh the rock in pieces? Therefore I am against the prophets, saith the Lord, that steal my words every one from his neighbor. Behold, I am against the prophets, saith the Lord, that use their tongues and say, he saith. I am against them that prophesy false dreams, saith the Lord, and do tell them, and cause my people to err by their lies, and by their lightness; yet I sent them not, nor commanded them; therefore they shall not profit this people at all, saith the Lord (Jer. 23:29, 32). Come, I pray you and hear what is the word that cometh forth from the Lord, they hear thy words, but they will not do them; for with their mouth they shew much love, but their heart goeth after their covetousness (Ezek. 33:30, 31). But thou, O Daniel, shut up the words, and seal the book even to the time of the end (Dan. 12:4, 9). Think not that I am come to destroy the law or the prophets; I am not come to destroy but to fulfill. Till heaven and earth pass, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law, till all be fulfilled. Whosoever shall break one of these least commandments, and shall teach men so he shall be called the least in the kingdom of heaven; but whosoever shall do and teach them the same shall be called great in the kingdom of heaven (Matt. 5:17, 20). If they hear not Moses and the prophets, neither will they be persuaded though one rose from the dead (Luke 16:31). And beginning at Moses and all the prophets, he expounded unto them in all the Scripture the things concerning himself. And he said unto them, These are the words which I spake unto you, while I was yet with you that all things must be fulfilled, which were written in the law of Moses, and in the prophets, and in the Psalms, concerning me. Then opened he their understanding, that they might understand the Scriptures, and said unto them, Thus it is written and thus it behooved Christ to suffer and to rise from the dead the third day; and that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations beginning at Jerusalem (Luke 24:27, 44 to 48). Search the Scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life and they are they which testify of me. For had ye believed Moses ye would have believed me; for he wrote of me; but if ye believe not his writings, how shall ye believe my words? (John 5:39, 46, 47. And many other signs truly did Jesus in the presence of his disciples, which are not written in this book. But these are written that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the son of God; and that believing ye might have life through his name (John 20:30, 31.

These were more noble than those in Thessalonica, in that they received the word with all readiness of mind, and searched the Scriptures daily, whether those things were so (Acts 17:11).

And a certain Jew named Apollos an eloquent man and mighty in the Scriptures, come to Ephesus, this man was instructed in the way of the Lord; and being fervent in the spirit, he spake and taught diligently the things of the Lord, knowing only the baptism of John. And he began to speak boldly in the synagogue; whom when Aquila and Priscilla had heard, they took him unto them, and expounded unto him the way of God more perfectly. And when he was disposed to pass into Achai, the brethren wrote, exhorting the disciples to receive him; who, when he was come helped them much which had believed through grace. For he mightily convinced the Jews, and that by publicly shewing by the Scriptures that Jesus was Christ (Acts 18:24, 28). And when they had appointed him a day, there came many to him, unto his lodging to whom he expounded and testified the kingdom of God, persuading them concerning Jesus both out of the law of Moses, and out of the prophets from morning till evening (Acts 28:23, 30, 31). So then faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God (Rom. 10:17).

(To be Continued in Next Issue)

Scripture Searchers Assistant

A very valuable help to all who are studying the Scriptures—a reprint of one of our beloved Brother Joblin's works. Treats of thirty different subjects with about four hundred references. All should possess a copy for ready reference. Price by mail six cents. Address W. S. Tomlinson, 10825 Orville Ave., N. E., Cleveland, O.

A SONG BOOK.

Songs of the Kingdom.

Recommended by Bro. Huggins and nearly all of our preachers, as by far the best song book for our people. 138 pages, flexible cloth. 25 cents each; postpaid. Address, Chas. E. Crowe, St. Paul, Neb.

Book and Tracts by Bro. W. H. Wilson.

"A Bible Study of Hades, as compared with our modern ideas," is the title of a new tract just issued by Bro. W. H. Wilson. It is a critical study of the subject of Hell. It shows that the meaning attached to this word today is different fro mthe meaning given to it years ago. It also shows how this change was made, and who made it. The price is 15 cents each, or 5 for 50 cents.

Student's Text Book, a cloth bound book 200 pages.

It deals specifically as How to study the Bible and why people fail to rightly understand God's Word. Price 50 cents.

Pine Woods Bible Class, a book of 480 pages bound in cloth. Studies are carried on as between a class and its teacher. Price $1.25.

Cunningly Devised Fables, 28 pages. Price 10 cents.

Where Will You Spend Eternity? Four pages, 25 cents per 100.

Are You in Need of Money? 4 pages 25 cents per 100.

Will It Pay to Become a Christian? is the title to a well written book of 96 pages by Brother Jas. W. Wilson. In a clear and convincing manner it sets forth the Christian faith and answers the question indicated in its title affirmatively. The edition should be taken at once and put out to work. It is neatly bound in cloth. The price is 25 cents, very low, and within reach of all.

W. H. Wilson, at 625 North Willow avenue, Austin Station, Chicago, Illinois.

The Bible: Its Principles and Texts

As indicated by the title this book is divided into three sections. The first consists of a remarkable disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "principles" in formulated propositions, and the third expounds in a clear, impressive and homelike manner particular "Texts." The knotty and perplexing texts of the Bible are united and solved satisfactorily to the most fastidious and critical. More than one hundred and fifteen subjects of intense interest to every Bible student are formally discussed. Both simple and scholarly—the child is fascinated and taught; the scholar is entertained and instructed. Bible lovers, here is a feast for you. Throw open the door of your home; let

PASTOR WANTED

A church in Ohio desires to obtain a pastor who can enter upon his duties about the first of April. Any one who is sound in the faith, and is open to this call may address the Editor of The Restitution, 10623 Lee avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

We, whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones.

This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of their paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

Almira Balch	.50
Mrs. E. L. Cronk	.50
Leota B. Henson	2.00
Mrs. C. W. Howard	1.50

DID SAMUEL'S SOUL APPEAR?

For the want of a better proof that a personality outlives the body, we are frequently informed that the disembodied soul of the prophet Samuel appeared to King Saul after the death of Samuel's body, and conversed with him.

Ladies! Save Money and Be Correct in Style by Reading McCall's Magazine and Using McCall Patterns

McCall's Magazine will help you. Authoritative, reliable, helpful. Invaluable to the home dressmaker. Only 10 cents. Including a free pattern. Subscribe today or send for sample copy.

McCall Patterns will enable you to make your own gowns, with fourteen fashion publications for yourself and children which will be perfect in style and fit. Price never more than 15 cents. Send for free Pattern Catalogue.

We Will Give You Five Premiums for getting one subscriber among your friends. Send for free Premium Catalogue and Prize Offer.

THE McCALL COMPANY, 238 to 248 West 37th St., NEW YORK

The Bible—its Principles and its Texts come in and bless you and your family. 309 pages, 5x7 1-2 inches, durably and handsomely bound in whole cloth, with title embossed on back in gold. One copy, $1.10, two copies or more $1.00 each. The Restitution Pub. Co.

Four Page Tracts

Can You Believe? A series of questions setting forth the fundamental points of our faith.

State of Man in Death. A collection of proof texts on this subject.

Life and Death. A short concise statement of the facts in the case.

Age to Come Not a Heresy, by H. V. Reed.

10 for 10 cents, 50 for 25 cents. 100 for 40 cents.

The Paternity of Jesus. A pamphlet of 122 pages, by M. Joblin, giving in detail all that can be said on this subject, and completely proving that He is the Son of God, and not the natural son of Joseph. This work ought to be sold at 25 cents a copy, but the author was so anxious that price should not stand in the way of its being read, that he put the price at ten cents, so all can buy them. Send to this office for them.

Address The Restitution Pub. Co.

50 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS DESIGNS COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents.

Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the

Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York

Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

Popular Lectures, By Bro. M. Joblin

Send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled: "The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to Be Saved?" The Foolishness of Preaching and Salvation—what is it?

Each lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price.

TWO TRACTS By J. L. WINCE

"Salvation" and "Resurrection" two tracts by J. L. Wince, can not fail to arouse the interest of every believer. They deal with vital questions in a most convincing manner. The price is 10c each, 12 for $1.00. For sale by S. Roxanna Wince, Pierceton, Ind.

SUBSCRIBE FOR

Words of Life

the publication of the Conditional Immortality Mission of Great Britain, advocating Life and Advent truths.

Terms: 1 copy 37c per annum, 12 copies to one address 25c per copy per annum.

Sample copy on application to

WILLIAM G. ROTHE

1301 Park Pl. Brooklyn, N. Y.

BOOKS AND TRACTS

Bible Pearls—Two-page tracts, suitable for wide distribution. 1. The Gospel. 2. Coming and Kingdom of Christ, by 20,000 Baptists in 1660. 3. Immateriality. 4. Kingdom of God. 5. Nature of Man and Thoughts for Thinkers. 6. Two Advents. 7. What is Religion? 8. Restitution Age. 9. Destiny of the Wicked. 10. Baptism. 10 copies for 5 cents, or assorted packages of 100 for 20 cents.

Census Blank

MEMBERSHIP CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA

Name .....

Address .....
Street Town State

By whom Immersed ..... Date .....

Fill out the above and send to "The Census Editor," The Restitution, 803 Parkwood Drive, Cleveland, O.

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co.

WHOLESALE OPTICIANS

We make a specialty of High Grade Prescription Work, and carry a full line of all kinds of Optical goods. All orders filled same day as received.

"A. K. N." SERVICE

Means prompt returns, careful work, moderate prices. Goods shipped to all parts of the country.

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co. 311 SCHOFIELD BUILDING CLEVELAND, OHIO

SPECIAL OFFER!

IN ORDER to increase the circulation of The Restitution, the following special offer is made:

One new subscriber for 1 year, choice of:

W. H. Wilson's "Student's Text Book," regular price 50c
Or 5 Copies of "Cunningly Devised Fables," reg. price 50c
Or 5 Copies of "Bible Study of Hades," reg. price 50c

For Two New Subscribers

One Copy "Pine Woods Bible Class," 480 pages, reg. price, $1.25
Or "The Bible, Its Principles and Texts," 309 pages, reg., $1.25
Or One Hundred of Bro. Joblin's Tracts, regular price $1.00

Here is a chance to get some of the books you all should own. By making special arrangements with the authors we are able to offer them to you without the payment of a cent on your part, just a few minutes effort. We cannot afford to continue this offer long, so take advantage of it at once, get some new subscribers today.

THE RESTITUTION, 803 Parkwood Drive

YOU will get genuine pleasure from an hour or two spent with the "Stereoscope" these long winter evenings. Pictures, Photos, Post Cards, Etc. are shown in exact reproduction same as with a high priced Stereopticon, can be used in any home and operated with Electricity, Gas or Acetylene. Prices $2.50, $5.00, $7.50, $10.00, $15.00, $20.00, according to size. Sent anywhere in the U. S. Send for one today.

HOME ILLUMINATED PICTURE CO.

311 SCHOFIELD BUILDING CLEVELAND, OHIO

Less than Half a Cent a Day

The Restitution costs a Dollar and a Half a year, that's less than half A Cent a day or three cents a copy. You can't afford to be without it. If you are a subscriber get some one else to subscribe.

Help to Get Them on the List

Sample Copies of The Restitution

May be obtained for a stamp. Send for one.

"A LETTER TO A FRIEND"

This tract needs no introduction further than to say that it is one of the most convincing Gospel sermons ever written. Originally written as a letter to a friend by Sister C. C. Woodruff it was published and has sold extensively in tract form. In its present edition it is a 32 page tract, the price is

10c each; 12 for $1.00

There is no better way of spreading the Gospel than handing out one of these tracts wherever you have the opportunity.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

"Future Probation,

is that Awaiting any of the Unrighteous?"

Here is a work by Wm. Glenn Moncrieff that every one should read. It is one of the best things on the subject ever written and will appeal to every student of the word. It is a book of 150 pages, made to sell at 25c. We have a limited number left which we will sell at the special price of

10c each; 12 for $1.00

Send for some at once.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

The Restitution
IS THE OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA.

The Restitution.

Founded in A. D. 1852

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:16, 17) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Lk. 19:12-15), who will be King of Kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-53); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17), and belief in, the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Lk. 13:3), and obedience by Baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ." (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31).

ROBT. G. HUGGINS, Editor.

—Terms of— Subscription
ONE YEAR, $1.50;
SIX MONTHS 75 CTS. IN ADVANCE

VOL. 60 CLEVELAND, OHIO, FEBRUARY 20, 1912 No. 57

THE LORD IS COMING

"The Lord our Saviour will appear;
His day is nigh at hand;
The signs bespeak his coming near,
And all may understand.

Behold, he comes! he comes to reign
On earth with all his saints;
Jesus, the Lamb of God, once slain,
Will end our long complaints.

The prince of darkness he'll destroy;
The hosts of sin o'erthrow;
Satan shall then no more annoy,
But Christ shall reign below.

Then those who suffer in his name
And did obey his word,
Shall rise in glory and proclaim
The goodness of their Lord."

Selected by
JESSIE M. WILSON.

FORGOTTEN WORKERS

They lived and they were useful; this we know,
And naught beside;
No record of their names is left to show
How soon they died;
They did their work, and then passed away,
An unknown band;
But they shall live in endless day, in the Fair shining land.

And were they young, or were they growing old?
Or ill, or well?
Or lived in poverty, or had they wealth of gold?
No one can tell;
Only one thing is known of them, they faithful were, and true
Disciples of the Lord, and strong through prayer
To save and to do.

But what avails the gift of empty fame?
They lived to God;
They loved the sweetness of another name,
And gladly trod
The rugged ways of earth, that they might be
Helper, or friend,
And in the joy of this their ministry,
Be spent, and spend.

No glory clusters round their names on earth;
But in God's heaven
Is kept the book of names of greatest worth,
And there is given
A place for all who did the Master please,
Though here unknown;
And there lost names shine forth in brightest rays
Before the throne.

Oh, take who will the boom of fading fame!
But give to me
A place, among the workers, tho' my name
Forgotten be;
And if within the book of life is found
My lowly place,
Honor and glory unto God redound
For all his grace!

Selected by
BRO. R. A. HUMPHREYS.

RELIGIOUS CHANGES

In Belief and Practice Between The Resurrection of Christ and the Death of Constantine in 337.

XII.—General Summary at End of Second Century.

Baptism during the second century was by immersion of the whole body, so commanded by Christ and practiced by the apostles. This was done after the candidate had heard and believed the gospel. On repentance and confession the person was taken to running water, if it was handy, and if not, to any place where sufficient water could be had, to bury them with Christ in water and raise them again to walk in newness of life.

At the beginning of the second century they were immersed at once, and any one who was himself a baptized believer might baptize another into Christ, although this generally was done by some official in the Church, and when the Church was assembled to witness the ceremony. But toward the end of the century, when the clergy were developed, the consent of the bishop had to be given before a baptism could take place, and some of the clergy performed the rite. Occasionally a candidate was baptized, even in the beginning of the third century, by one who was not a member of the so-called clergy but this was generally discouraged by them.

When a person was very ill, not having been baptized, but wishing it to be done, if it was considered dangerous to move the applicant he was sprinkled over with water in bed. This was called "clinical baptism," but if he recovered, he was afterwards immersed the same as the others. This was the first of our modern sprinkling, mis-called baptism.

Toward the end of the second century a great controversy sprang up in regard to the baptism of children. Up to that time they had been content to carry out the Lord's instructions in Mark xvi. 15 and 16: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; and he that believeth not shall be damned." They baptized those who gave evidences of faith, whether old or young; but now they wished to be wise above what was written, and baptize infants who could neither understand nor believe.

Tertullian, a presbyter of the church of Carthage, and who is believed to have been a lawyer at Rome in his younger days, wrote many works at the end of the second century and the beginning of the third. Tertullian, speaking of this custom which was beginning to creep into the Church says: "And so, according to the circumstances and disposition, and even age, of each individual, the delay of baptism is preferable; principally however, in the case of little children. For why is it necessary that the sponsors likewise should be thrust into danger? Who both themselves, by reason of mortality, may fail to fulfil their promises and may be disappointed by the development of an evil disposition in those for whom they stood. The Lord does indeed say: 'Forbid them not to come unto Me.' Let them come then while they are growing up; let them come while they are learning whither to come; let them become Christians when they have become able to know Christ. Why does the innocent period of life hasten to the remission of sins? More caution will be exercised in worldly matters; so that one who is not trusted with earthly substances is trusted with divine. Let them know how to 'ask' for salvation, that you may seem to have given to 'him that asketh.'" This is good sound logic, from a scriptural standpoint, on the part of Tertullian, but the advice was soon thrown to one side, and infant baptism became an established custom in the third century.

Tertullian also speaks of the growing custom of postponing baptism to certain periods, which became common later. He says the Passover affords a more than usually solemn day for baptisms, when withal the Lord's passion, in which we are baptized, was completed, but he adds further on, "However every day is the Lord's; every hour, every time, is apt for baptism. If there is a difference in the solemnity there is none in the grace."

Justin, in his Apology says: "But we, after we have thus washed him who has been convinced and has assented to our teaching, bring him to the place where those who are called brethren are assembled, in order that we may offer hearty prayers in common for ourselves and for the baptized."

Christ's Reign on the Earth.

The second coming of Christ, and resurrection of the dead saints who are to reign with him on the earth, was the devout hope and expectation of the early Church. They at first had no greater expectation than this. Arthur Cushman M'Giffert, Ph.D., D.D., Professor of Church history in the Union Theological seminary, New York, in his History of Christianity in the Apostolic Age, says: "Our sources show that Jesus, his disciples, and almost the entire Church after them, continued to believe that an earthly kingdom was yet to be founded by Christ. But if the time for its establishment was postponed by Jesus' departure from the earth, it was evident that the work of preparation must still go on, and that there was thrust upon the disciples a new and unexpected duty. . . . To say then that the disciples of Jesus regarded his departure from earth as his induction into the office of Messiah, does not mean that Jesus himself looked upon it thus. . . . His followers distinguished sharply between his earthly and heavenly existence, and saw in his entrance upon the latter the assumption of Messianic authority, and thus the pledge and guarantee of his return to exercise that authority on earth. . . . The disciples, therefore, lived in the future as truly as their unconverted brethren."

The disciples remained in this state of mind, looking for the coming of the Lord from heaven, and laid their dead away in the sure hope that he would raise them to reign with him when he came. When the deadly heathen doctrine of the immortality of the soul began to creep into the Church, it weaned this hope and desire, and when it had become a leading feature of the teachings of the fathers, they gradually discarded the idea that Christ was to come again to establish a kingdom here on earth, and latterly this idea was considered a heresy. Christ's kingdom to be on the earth was still taught by most writers until about the close of the century, and Tertullian, who lived until about 220, to the end of his life still taught Messiah's personal reign on the earth, although he believed in the immortality of the soul. He considered that the soul, at death, did not go to heaven, but to hades, and remained there until the resurrection, but he taught that martyrs only went to paradise. He says, speaking on the resurrection of the flesh: "For no one, on becoming absent from the body, is at once a dweller in the presence of the Lord; except by the prerogative of martyrdom, he gains a lodging in paradise, not in the lower regions."

Such was the beginning of the unscriptural theory that the saints at death went to heaven, in opposition to Christ's positive teaching (John iii, 13): "And no man hath ascended up to heaven;" and John xiii. 33: "Little children, yet a little while I am with you. Ye shall seek me: and as I said unto the Jews, whither I go, ye cannot come; so now I say unto you." And Peter on the day of Pentecost, when filled with the Holy Spirit, said (Acts ii, 29-34): "Men and brethren, let me freely speak unto you of the patriarch David, that he is both dead and buried, and his sepulchre is with us unto this day. . . . "For David is not ascended into the heavens." David, the man of God, being both dead and buried, and not having gone to heaven, destroys the theory that good people go to heaven at death.

The Lord's Day.

John, in the Revelation, says: "I was in the spirit on the Lord's day." Among the early disciples there never was any difference of opinion as to what day was the Lord's day. All accepted this day as the first day of the week, called Sunday. On this day they always met together, when possible, and remembered the Lord's death and resurrection by breaking bread and drinking wine. This they did generally either very early in the morning, or late at night, for at first many of them were slaves, and they had to steal away to this meeting as best they could.

It was impossible for many to keep it as a holy day, that is to refrain from all work, and Christ never required this of them. He himself finished on the cross the law, given by Moses, and inaugurated a new dispensation, fitted for all nations and all ages, until he should come again and himself commence another dispensation.

The early Christians never called the first day the Sabbath, or ever imagined that Christ, or any of his apostles, had commanded them to keep the Sabbath. There is no dissenting voice among the gentile Christians to this fact during the second century.

There were many Jewish Christians during the second century who kept the laws of Moses as best they could, with the temple destroyed. They kept the Sabbath and abstained from work, but also met on the first day of the week, as the Lord's day, in remembrance of him, as did the gentile brethren.

The Roman law permitted the Jews to keep their Sabbath, but made no provision for the Christians keeping any day. The gentile Christians at that time were quite contented with the decision of the Holy Spirit, and the apostles. When the matter of keeping the law was brought up before the latter, they sent this message to the gentile brethren, which is in force for all time until the king comes again: "For it seemed good to the Holy Ghost, and to us, to lay upon you no greater burden than these necessary things: That ye abstain from meats offered to idols, and from blood, and from things strangled, and from fornication: from which if ye keep yourselves, ye shall do well. Fare ye well" (Acts xv. 28, 29). If it had been necessary for the gentile Christians to have kept the Sabbath, they would have so stated.

Ignatius in his epistle to the Magnesian Church, in the shorter epistle, says: "If, therefore, those who were brought up in the ancient order of things have come to the possession of a new hope, no longer observing the Sabbath, but living in the observance of the Lord' day, on which also our life has sprung up again by him and by his death." In the longer epistle, which was written no doubt some time in the second century, it says: "But let every one of you keep the Sabbath after a spiritual manner, rejoicing in meditation on the law, not in relaxation of the body, admiring the workmanship of God, and not eating things prepared the day before, nor using luke-warm drinks, and walking within a prescribed space, nor finding delight in dancing and plaudits which have no sense in them. And the observance of the Sabbath, let every friend of Christ keep the Lord's day as a festival, the resurrection day, the queen and chief of all days."

Justin, in his First Apology, says: "And on the day called Sunday all who live in cities or in the country gather together to one place, and the memoirs of the apostles or the writings of the prophets are read, as long as time permits; then, when the reader has ceased, the president verbally instructs, and exhorts to the imitation of these good things. Then we all rise together and pray, and as we before said, when our prayer is ended, bread and wine and water are brought, and the president in like manner offers prayers and thanksgivings, according to his ability, and the people assent, saying, Amen; and there is a distribution to each, and a participation of that over which thanks have been given, and to those who are absent a portion is sent by the deacons." Also, in Justin's Dialogue with Trypho the Jew, we read: "But this is what we are most at a loss about: that you, professing to be pious, and supposing yourselves better than others, are not in any particular separated from them, and do not alter your mode of living from the nations, in that you observe no festivals or Sabbaths, and do not have the rite of circumcision; and further resting your hopes on a man that was crucified, you yet expect to obtain some good thing from God, while you do not obey his commandments.' To which Justin replies: 'Wherefore, Trypho, I will proclaim to you, and to those who wish to become proselytes, that divine message which I heard from the Man. Do you say that the elements are not idle, and keep no Sabbaths? Remain as you were born. For if there was no need of circumcision before Abraham, or of the observance of the Sabbaths, of feasts and sacrifices, before Moses; no more need is there of them now. . . . But the gentiles who have believed on him, and have repented of the sins which they have committed, they shall receive the inheritance along with the patriarchs, and the just men who are descended from Jacob, even although they neither keep the Sabbath, nor are circumcised, nor observe the feasts. Assuredly they shall receive the holy inheritance of God."

Clement of Alexandria, writing at the end of the second century, in his Stromata says: "The Christian in fulfillment of the precept, according to the gospel, keeps the Lord's day, when he abandons an evil disposition, glorifying the Lord's resurrection in himself."

Tertullian, one of the most rigid of all gentile Christians, had this to say to those who demanded Sabbath observance, in his work on Idolatry, speaking of the Jews: "Not the Lord's day, not Pentecost, even if they had known them, would they have shared with us; for they would fear lest they should seem to be Christians. We are not apprehensive lest we seem to be heathen! By us to whom Sabbaths are strange, and the new moons and festivals formerly beloved by God."

And the same writer, in an answer to the Jews, says: "It follows, accordingly, that in so far as the abolition of carnal circumcision and the old law is demonstrated as having been consummated at its specific times, so also the observance of the Sabbath is demonstrated to have been temporary." Also in his book against Marcion, he says: "Concerning the Sabbath also I have this to premise, that this question could not have arisen if Christ did not publicly proclaim himself the Lord of the Sabbath. Nor could there be any discussion about his annulling the Sabbath, if he had a right to annul it."

A. WALLACE MASON.
Troy, Ohio.

I WONDER.

(We wish the reader to note the circumstances under which this article was written. Bro. Thomas himself thus explains them):—My dear wife has been ill almost unto death, but thank God, is now better, and we have hope. (Thank the Lord—Editor) We have a neighbor here who holds the truth, and also the error that Jesus is the son of Joseph. They have endeared themselves to us in many ways, and we could love them were it not for this gulf that lies between us. Last night my dear wife dreamed that she was having an earnest argument with her neighbor upon this subject, and in her dream was able to bring argument which completely silenced her opponent, and upon awakening she told me her dream and her arguments. They were so good that I reached for my pencil and scratch pad, and adding a little to them, I enclose same herewith. Perhaps you may find use for it."—Editor.)

When Jesus asked his disciples, "Whom do you say that I am," and they answered him saying, "Thou art John the Baptist, some Elias, and others Jeremias, or one of the prophets. He saith unto them, But whom saith ye that I am? And Simon Peter answered and said Thou art the Christ the son of the living God." Suppose Peter had answered, thou art the natural son of Joseph. I wonder if the Lord would have said in reply, "Upon this rock I will build my church." I wonder if he would?

"And the high priest answered and said unto him, I adjure thee by the living God, that thou tell us whether thou be the Christ, the son of God. Jesus saith unto him, Thou has said." If the high priest had said, Tell us if thou art the natural son of Joseph, I wonder if the Lord would have replied, "Thou has said. I wonder if he would?

The gospel according to Mark begins as follows: "The beginning of the gospel of Jesus Christ the son of God." If Mark was with us today and we were to ask him to change that verse and make it read, the beginning of the gospel of Jesus Christ the natural son of Joseph, I wonder if he would make the change. I wonder if he would?

When Philip preached to the Eunuch the glad tidings concerning Jesus Christ, and the Eunuch asked to be baptized, Philip said, "If thou believest with all thine heart thou mayest." The Eunuch replied: "I believe that Jesus Christ is the son of God". If the Eunuch had replied, I believe that Jesus Christ is the son of Joseph, I wonder if Philip would have taken him down into the water and baptized him into that kind of a Saviour. I wonder if he would?

In Paul's youth he believed that Jesus was the son of Joseph, but after his conversion we read straightway he preached Christ in the synagogues that he is the son of God. I wonder why he should do this if the belief of his youth were true. I wonder why?

Saint John says: "Whosoever shall confess that Jesus is the son of God, God dwelleth in him and he in God." I wonder if God also dwells in the man who insists that Joseph is the father of Jesus. I wonder if he does?

We read in six different Scriptures that Jesus is the only begotten son of God, but not once in the entire Bible that he was begotten by Joseph. I wonder why any intelligent brother or sister should deny the faith and exchange their birthright for such a foul and useless mess of pottage. Oh God in heaven, I wonder why?

S. H. THOMAS.

Bro Adams writes from Santa Rosa, New Mexico, and says he is speaking the truth in the M. E. church of that town. His address till March the 1st, is Buffalo, Texas.

He will not send thee into a wood to fell an oak with a penknife. When he calls the to work thou never didst, he will give thee strength thou never hadst.—John Mason.

Many a one who is honest in his dealings with his fellows, cheats God out of what belongs to him, the offering not of his substance alone, but of love and service.

Religion should be to every man not merely a creed, but an experience; not an insurance for the next world, but a program for the present world.

Hope contemplates a possibility, faith converts the possibility into actuality; love is the resulting disposition.

Human memories are sometimes treacherous where benefits are concerned, but God never forgets those who love and serve him.

The Restitution

Issued weekly by

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING COMPANY.

Entered as second-class matter under act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

TERMS.

One year $1.50; six months 75 cents, in advance.

ROBT. G. HUGGINS.....Editor
BUELL W. NUTT.....Manager

BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Burton H. Lang, Harry Pott,
Chas. A. Goss, Robt. G. Pate.
Buell W. Nutt, D. C. Robison,
W. S. Tomlinson.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

All remittances should be sent by bank draft, post office money order or express money order to The Restitution Publishing Co., 803 Parkwood drive, Cleveland, Ohio.

All communication intended for publication should be sent to the editor, Robt. G. Huggins, 10623 Lee avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

It is necessary to adhere strictly to the rule of not returning unused manuscripts. Writers will please keep copies, or risk the loss.

While the editor exercises a general supervision over the articles appearing in The Restitution, his endorsement does not extend to the interpretation of details nor the exegesis of particular texts in the writings of contributors.

Cleveland, Ohio....Feb. 20, 1912

EDITORIAL

The Christian's cup may be brimful of sorrow; but for him the overflowing drop is never added.

Tuesday morning, February 20, Sister Huggins fell down stairs and broke her left arm. At this writing she is resting fairly well.

There are but two future verbs which man may appropriate confidently and without pride: "I shall suffer," and "I shall die."

We may say to many Christians whose actions do not correspond with their words, "The voice is Jacob's voice, but the hands are the hands of Esau."

Alas for him, who, in the tranquility of his heart, desires death; while there are yet sacrifices for him to make, happiness to secure, wants to anticipate, or tears to wipe away.

China, the oldest empire in the world, is no more. Still the last day scoffers will continue to ask, "Where is the promise of his coming?" and declare that "all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation."

"He fenced it, and gathered out the stones thereof, and planted it with the choicest vine, and built a tower in the midst of it, and also made a winepress therein. . . . and it brought forth wild grapes. . . . What could have been done more to my vineyard, than I have done in it?" (Isa. 5:2,4). I know not of one thing "more" the Lord could have done for his vineyard. However, "Pastor Russell," who is selling miraculous wheat to his blindfolded followers at $10 per bushel, can accept the Lord's challenge—he can tell him dozens of things "more" he could have done to save his vineyard. He can also tell him how to raise wheat.

I understand contempt for actions. Contempt for men I do not allow myself to feel; and I find no trace of it in holy writ. For who, let me ask, is the man whom we despise today? One whom we may be forced to admire tomorrow. In the infinite resources which God has placed in the depths of every human soul, there is a power of reaction, reparation, and rehabilitation, which transcends the utmost limits of evil. By God's grace the most abject of his creatures may rise to the rank of a celestial force. Only things that cannot change deserve contempt—the void left by pleasures ardently pursued, the honors and emoluments which the sages of this world are so far from despising.

EDITOR'S SERMON NOTES ON THE APOCALYPSE.

Subject:—The Throne in Twofold Capacity.

Text: Rev. 4:4-7.

I. The Throne of Judgment. Lightenings, thunderings, and voices (ver. 5; Ex. 9:23, 28; 19:16; I. Sam. 7:10; 12-17, 18; Dan. 7:10; Zech. 12:6; Mark 3:17). II. "Seven lamps (torches borne aloft), seven spirits" (ver. 5; John 4:24; Heb. 1:7; 12:29; Ezek. 1:13, 14; Judges 7:16, 20; Nahum 2:3, 4; Isa. 4:4; Mal. 4; Zech. 4:6; Rev. 5:6; 14:4.

II. The Throne of Peace. I. "Sea of Glass," translucent-like crystal; clear, calm, unruffled by wind, vitrified, ethereal clearness, purity, calmness. (ver. 6; Ex. 24:10; Ezek. 1:22; Job. 37:18; Isa. 26:19; Psa. 36:6; Ezek. 26:3; Dan. 7:2, 3; Rev. 17:1, 15; Isa. 57:20; Rev. 16:3; 15:2; 20:8; 21:1; Jer. 30:11).

III. Composite Attributes of Throne; or Judgment Mingled with Mercy. I. Oriental thrones of two kinds: Richly cushioned divan (called a "bed" in Est. 7:8); and ornamented armchair (I. Kings 10:18-20).

(a) Lion-strength (Prov. 28:1; 30:30; Rev. 5:5, 6).

(b) Calf-strength combined with sacrifice. (Mal. 4:2, 3; 1, 8, 13).

(c) Man-intelligence, sympathy and mediation (Job. 4:17; I. Tim. 2:5).

(d) Eagle-swiftness in both judgment and mercy (Job. 9:26; Deut. 28:49; II. Sam. 1:23; Isa. 40:31).

THE SUPREME IMPORTANCE OF PASTORAL WORK—No. 5.

(e)—Christ the Great Shepherd of the Sheep.—One correspondent writes that while he has enjoyed the series of editorial articles on the "Supreme Importance of Pastoral Work," he is afraid we have gone to "an extreme in making God's revelation so exclusively Israelitish." "It militates," he continues, "against ——". No matter what it "militates" against, brother. If some theory goes down, we are not concerned in the least by its downfall; not. Does it militate against some theory, but is it the teachings of God's word? is the query with us. Paul points out in his Roman letter (3:1, 2) that the "chief" advantage of the Jew over other nations consists in the fact that to them "were committed the oracles of God." "I have written to him the great things of my law" (Hos. 8:12). "He showeth his word (Heb. Words) unto Jacob, his statutes and his judgments unto Israel." Now for the exclusively Israelitish part of it: "He hath not dealt so with any nation: and as for his judgments, they have not know them" (Psa. 147:19, 20). If this "militates" against something, just let it militate.

Speaking of the "mighty God of Jacob" but prophetically of Christ, Jacob in blessing Joseph says, "From thence is the shepherd, the stone of Israel" (Gen. 49:24). He is denominated by writers of the New Testament as the "Shepherd and Bishop of souls" (I Pet. 2:25); "Chief shepherd" (5:4); and the "Great Shepherd of the Sheep" (Heb. 13:20). These inspired writers have only voiced his own claim as he personally enunciated it in John 10:14, "I am the good shepherd." This primary office of the Master was ignored and other aspects of his mission were exalted instead as soon as the Catholic apostacy began to develope. Illustrations in point are the Madonna and child; the crucifix; the Judge, etc. There is no allusion to him as the good Shepherd in St. Thomas Aquinas; in the Tridentine formulae; in the confession of faith; in the XXXIX articles. But go to the Bible—how different! Go to the catacombs of Rome which were used by the early Christians as a burying place—choked up and forgotten in the fifth century, but re-discovered in the seventeenth century. The early Christian thought concerning life and death, as shown by epitaphs and inscriptions, was preserved through all the changes of the Christian world during the twelve centuries (Stanley's Christian Institutes, p. 273). Here is a voice from the dead; what does it say about the matters now before us? No instance is found in the catacombs of the cross; or crucifix; or skull; or hour glass; or cypress, etc., etc., but as showing the hold which the pastoral office of Christ had upon the early Christian—everywhere the figure of the Good Shepherd!

The Bible abounds with testimonies which depict the deplorable condition of those destitute of shepherd care. "Let the God of the spirits of all flesh," prayed Moses, "set a man over the congregation, which may go out before them, and which may go in before them, and which may lead them out, and which may bring them in." Why do you want a man "set over the congregation," Moses? His answer is, "That the congregation of the Lord be not as sheep which have no shepherd" (Num. 27:16, 17). "They were scattered (why?) because there is no shepherd;" "My flock became meat to every beast of the field, because there was no shepherd" (Ezek. 34:5, 8); "I saw all Israel scattered upon the hills, as sheep that have not a shepherd: and the Lord said, These have no master" (I. Kings 22:17); "They went their way as a flock, because there was no shepherd" (Zech. 10:2); "He was moved with compassion on them, because they fainted, and were scattered abroad as sheep having no shepherd" (Matt. 9:36). So the Scriptures teach, and our Saviour in having "compassion" upon us has provided for our needs in this respect. His life, as we have seen, was a shepherd-life, "keeping" the disciples in his Father's name (John 17:12), and at last dying for them (John 15:13). "Having loved his own which were in the world, he loved them unto the end" (John 13:1). After the resurrection his sheep were still idolized in his heart. He tarried on earth forty days before taking his leave for heaven, and during this sacred sojourn of our immortal Lord upon earth, "he showed himself alive", "not to all the people, but unto witnesses chosen before by God, even to us" (Acts 10:41). Speaking of the "apostles whom he had chosen," Luke says, "To whom also he showed himself alive after his passion by many infallible proofs, being seen of them forty days, and speaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God" (Acts 1:1, 2). "He loved them to the end." And brother, you may talk of our Lord's "unfairness," to sinners, his brotherhood "exclusiveness," his "clannish" propensities, etc., etc., but the fact remains unshaken by these "hard speeches against him" (Jude 15) that he loved "his own," and loved them "to the end;" that when the end hour of departure came he "led them out as far as to Bethany, and lifted up his hands, and blessed them" (Luke 24:50). Who then is a faithful and wise servant, whom his Lord hath made ruler over his household, to give them meat in due season? BLESSED IS THAT SERVANT, WHOM HIS LORD WHEN HE COMETH SHALL FIND SO DOING" Matt. 24:45, 46).

COMMUNICATIONS.

Dear Bro. Huggins and Brethren:

I want to thank you for helping me in securing Bro. Adams to come to Enid, also the good brethren, who, with their financial aid, made it possible for him to take this trip south.

It seemed impossible to procure a suitable place for public meetings, and the doctrine having never been preached her before, we felt sure that there would be but a few come out, so we asked some of our neighbors to our home, and Bro. Adams talked to us for several evenings, and we certainly did enjoy hearing the gospel message.

On Monday before he left, my husband and I were baptized. Although we feel that we are isolated members, we will stand firm for the faith, and always when we have any opportunity, speak of our faith and hope to others.

I hope that we may sometime have the pleasure of meeting some of the brethern and talking with them of the gospel; however the Restitution comes every week, and we learn in that way of the good work being done.

Your sister in Christ,

MRS. E. A. PENDARVIS.

[redacted] once each week with a [redacted] fat things," [redacted] so rich that we cannot help from speaking from the heart. The articles by Bro. Mason on "Religious Changes," should be bound up in book form and kept in the library of every one who wishes to contend for the one faith. Then your notes on the book of Revelations should also be enlarged upon, giving the full sermon, and substantially bound. I cannot look for much results from your correspondence with Advent preachers; for they usually are so afraid of any age to come idea as the usual personal of a rattle snake; yet I have heard them say of preachers who believed in probation after the second advent of Jesus that they are the strongest men we have on the kingdom question. It seems to me that they are, because there are so many passages that can be used that Adventists must let lay quiet. True, there are extremists on our side of the question, who go so far as to teach that God will raise from the dead every ignorant Hottentot and Indian, and place them on trial for eternal life, after they have been man-eaters and tomahawkers all thru this life, and because they did not get to hear of Jesus while they lived such lives of sin. Paul nips such theology in the bud when he says, "As many as sinned without law shall also perish without law" Prophet says there is "none righteous" among Jews and Gentiles, "no not one." So if the Bible is true all heathens are sinners. Then we are told that the man who wandereth out of the way of understanding shall remain in the congregation of the dead, and that those who understand not, are like the beasts that perish; they are dead and shall not live; deceased, and shall not rise; that God has visited and destroyed them, and made all their memory to perish. So you can see that there is very little chance for the dead heathen, and none except Universalists will contend that enlightened sinners will have another chance, and the Bible emphatically condemns that when it declares, "As many as have sinned under law shall be judged by the law," under which they sinned, of course, and that under Jesus' law, or rather the gospel, all who do not obey it shall be punished with everlasting destruction; so our Adventist brethren should not be too badly scared along this line. The probation of the patriarchal age was for the people who lived in that age, and so with the Jewish and Christian ages; none but those alive passed from one age to the other, and many of them failed to get across; and so will be in the next age. There will be a resurrection of course, of all in Christ who will live and reign over the mortals who will live during that age. We should love those who cannot see as we do, and when they speak evil of us we should pray for them. And we should throw aside all prejudice, and try to know the truth as given by the Holy Spirit. Paul's advice is "Fight the good fight;" "Run with patience the race;" "Look unto Jesus;" and "Be steadfast." Let us make these statements our motto, and if we have to stand alone, with all the world against us; we will be victorious in the end.

In the blessed hope.

J. J. Heckman.

No results are yet visible from our efforts with the Adventists. They are very "quiet" about our offer to appear before any church or body of representative delegates and mutually consider our differences. They have an inkling that we are "an age to come" man, a believer in the restoration of Israel and future probation. They apparently, for this reason, banish us with Universalists, and without giving us even an opportunity to present our case, have decided we belong to the "rattle snake" tribe. Adventists everywhere, particularly Editors Smith and Piper, without committing ourselves editorially to the views of Bro. Heckman as given in above letter, will you not give us the opportunity, either in your church platform or through your papers to explain where we stand on these questions? Are you going to decide that we are a "rattlesnake" without giving us a chance to show you the we are a man—a Christian? Consider soberly; we will soon stand before God in judgment. It will be too late then to consider.—Editor).

CORN SHEAVES

Gathered From Everywhere

The disposition to serve ourselves is intuitive to the animal man; it is one of the primitive instincts implanted for our self-preservation. Regulated by divine law, it has its place, but if this instinct is allowed to be the lord of our life, we get into an evil bondage from which it is difficult to deliver ourselves, and which will inevitably alienate us from the regard of Christ.

The truth concerning Christ is simply and perfectly glorious; he is offered to men for justification unto eternal life, on condition of faith in the good that God has testified of him—that he was the son of God, to take away sin—that he was raised from the dead to immortality and high priestly intercession over his own house; that he will return again to set his house in order, to sit in the high places of the earth, and to give his people honor, glory and immortality in the kingdom he will establish.

The man who, possessing the truth, can hold his tongue out of deference to other people's feelings gives evidence that he is not in earnest, but that, as a mere formalist, he has a creed as worldly people have their creeds, and like them, is not going to allow his creed to interfere with his business or spoil his neighborliness.

It wants courage to act the part of the high calling: we are in danger of playing the coward and bowing as it were in the world's great presence.

Throw in your lot with Christ: loosen your grasp on the present. "Seekest thou great things; seek them not," "Ye cannot serve God and Mammon."

Love in the truth is a high thing in every respect, high in the conditions it requires for its activity—high in the nature of its action; and withal delicate, enduring, refined and tough. It mounts to God, stretches to futurity, and strikes root deeply into the very foundations of being.

Meditation upon the word will develop faith; and the more an honest-hearted man understands of the word, the more enlarged and stronger will his faith become; and the more valiant will he be for the truth, and the more efficient for the work before him.

You have done your duty—snatched your reading—given your countenance to the work of Christ—preferred his assemblies—done what you could in the proclamation of the truth—visited the lambs—relieved the poor—been grieved at the triumph of Christ's enemies, and the faithfulness and unconcern of those who profess his name;—then listen to the words which Daniel heard: "O man greatly beloved, be strong and be of good courage."

THE WAR—No. 1.

"War a Good Warfare" (I. Tim. 1:18).

S. Roxana Wince

"For this is not a battle, but a world-wide war." And we are in it to win the world for Christ. Can we do it? Will we do it? Not unless every soldier keeps his place, and loaded with ammunition fires away at the foe; marching on from victory unto victory, until the final triumph shall come. This year is a campaign year in political circles. Politicians are wide awake, never have they made greater effort than they will make in the months that lie before us, and never have such large sums been spent in any previous campaign as will be spent this year. Already some of our large cities have offered a hundred thousand dollars to secure the nominating convention. And this sum, large as it is, is but as a penny, compared to the total amount that will be spent in the presidential race.

Men will forfeit character, break life long friendships, throw their fortunes into the scale, and beggar their families, that their candidate may win the highest seat in the gift of the nation—poor, fallible, human being though he be! And yet theirs is only a battle, quickly fought, with short-lived results; while our is a war that can never cease until Jesus of Nazareth is firmly seated in the capital city of the whole earth with the reigns of all human governments in his hands, and his faithful followers reigning with him. How then can we be so weak, so stupid, so nerveless, so asleep, so indifferent, so stingy of our money, so terrified over the divisions in our ranks, and at the desertions from our army?

Where is our faith? Do we really believe that we will ultimately triumph over all odds? If we do, let us march ahead. Politicians are not dismayed because of obstacles in their way, nor are their rank and file: they only fight the harder. Not a man of them falters. If there are divisions and desertions, recruiting officers soon fill up the ranks. No one raises the pitiful cry, "Yes! it's money, money, all the time!" but cheerfully gives all and more than he is asked for, knowing that dollars are the sinews of the fight. We ought to be wiser than they, but Jesus said, "The children of this world are in their generation wiser than the children of light."

Dr. Seiss, in his, "The Gospel in the Stars" says of the sign of Libra, "The arms of that tilting beam with its attached bowls, reach out into eternities. The position of that beam, which a feather's weight may change, indicate the fortunes of worlds, the destinies of ages, the estates of immortality. The equipoise of that beam, marks the adjustment of a vast and mighty feud and the bridging over of a chasm deep as hell." It is with these fortunes these destinies, these estates, that our war is connected. We are not fighting for the seating of a four year's ruler, but for one whose reign is for eternities.

And, as a beloved brother says, "Having entered a period of human history that is peculiarly marked by significant signs of the coming of that ruler, why not make it a strong campaign year to herald to a doomed and sleeping world the sure and unmistakable signs of his near coming?"

We have the money and the ammunition, and both are God's to be used for his glory. Let us fit ourselves for the work. Laid away in a napkin, what can money do to hasten the coming of the kingdom? The money we have is "another man's:" We must always keep that in mind. And if we are unjust in handling the little that the father has entrusted to our keeping, will he entrust to us the true riches? The life, the glories, the work of the immortal years? "Take from him that which he hath!" Fateful words! All is lost, if the present is not used. For he who is unjust in giving to God his own in the days of this mortal life, would be unjust in far larger measure in using the wealth of the future and—it will never be his!

"Girded with the whole armor of God," we are ready for work, and there is no point where the enemy can successfully attack us, but, to attack him, we must be adepts at using the sword of the spirit, which is the Word of God. It must be on our tongue's end, to be thrust home at a moment's notice. And plenty of other ammunition must be loaded up in our knapsacks in the shape of tracts, like our four page leaflets, Bro. Joblin's popular lectures, "Bible Pearls, etc." Accompanied by heavier explosives such as Bro. W. H. Wilson's new work on the "Destiny of Russia and the Signs of the Times,"—said by those competent to judge, to be one of the best works on the subject yet published. "Bece Venit," by A. J. Gordon; "The Unspeakable Gift," by J. H. Pettingall, and many more that I have not space to name—not forgetting to put in H. L. Hastings little leaflet, "Will The Old Books Stand?" Some of his "Grape Shot," "Anti-Infidel Library" pamphlets and a good roll of Restitutions. You can sell these and do a great deal for the cause of truth in this way. I know for I have tried it.

The responsibility of sowing good seed that shall bring forth fruit to life everlasting rests on your shoulders, and think you there is not need for the sowing? Let us look at the facts of the case and see. To begin with, there are 8,000,000 children in our country not attending Sunday school, two thirds of them in eight western states: 800,000 in New England. Many thousands in our own state of Indiana, and 2,200,000 in the state of New York.

Alexander Henry says: "The little children are nearest to the kingdom. If we would most speedily and effectively hasten its coming, we must begin by recruiting these little children, and not only recruiting them, but instructing and training them for Christian service." There is an alarming moral decline in the youth of our country; and the Church if it is to live, and be as the salt of the earth to the nation, must give such thought and effort and prayer to the children as it never has before.

And how many grown ups in our land know anything about life only through Christ, or about the glorious kingdom that he is going to set up on this earth? or even of anything else that is in God's blessed book?

Look at Ohio, the ignorance, the crime, the disgrace of her mountaineers, is notorious, and besides these she has five hundred thousand foreigners—Slavic and Italian, who have settled within recent years inside her borders, and who have yet to learn the gospel that saves.

Western Pennsylvania is an appealing and an appalling field. What are we going to do about it? What are we going to do with the Jews who are swarming into our cities from the old world? Who will teach and shepherd these? Who be the mouthpiece of the Lord against Catholicism? Who stem the tide of heathen invasion?

Go! says the Master, "Go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." It is all right to meet in our comfortable churches, to listen to cheering sermons and to worship God, but he has work outside; hard work for every individual follower of Jesus to do.

Pierceton, Ind.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON NOTES, MARCH 3rd, 1912.

The Call of the First Disciples (Mark 1:14-28; Luke 5:1-11).

Golden Text:—The Harvest Truly is Plenteous, but the laborers are few. Pray, ye therefore the Lord of the Harvest, that he will send Forth Laborers into His Harvest (Matt. 9:37, 38).

The time of this lesson was March, A. D. 28, a little more than a year after the temptation in the wilderness, February A. D. 28. The place is in the vicinity of Capernaum on the northwest shore of the Sea of Galilee, which Jesus made the center of the Galilean ministry. This was during the second year of his ministry, the first being spent in Judea, and is recorded chiefly by John. The rulers at that time were Tiberius, emperor of Rome; Pontius Pilate, governor of Judea; and Herod Antipas, of Galilee.

In our last lesson we studied the final preparations of Jesus for entering upon the ministry of his life. We must now glance at the successive stages in the development of his work, in order to understand the epoch which is the main subject of this lesson, for it is well worth noting that all of the first three gospels begin their story of the ministry of Jesus with his work in Galilee more than a year after his baptism. Thus we have what is sometimes called the "year of beginnings," in which the chief events were the first disciples, the first miracle, the first reform, the first discourse, the first tour, the first converts in Samaria. It was natural that Jesus should begin his work in Judea, the central home of the religion of the Old Testament, which contained the prophesies of the Messiah, and which were so necessary to refer to.

Here was the temple of worship. Here it was expected the Messiah would appear. Throughout the wilderness of Judea, John the Baptist had been preaching the coming of the Messiah, and preparing his way in the hearts of men.

There is evry indication, however, that the work did not progress rapidly. One of the leading points in our lesson is the imprisonment of John the Baptist, which event marked the close of his ministry and the beginning of Jesus' long Galilean ministry, March, A. D. 28. Jesus left Judea at that time because he saw it was no longer safe to remain near the scene of John's labors on account of the growing jealousy of the Pharisees (John 4:1 to 3). History shows that it was Jerusalem, and not Galilee, that shed the blood of the prophets. Jesus testified in John 4:44 that a prophet hath no honor in his own country. The mission of Jesus was to bring the blessings of the kingdom of God to all the world by preaching the gospel, the good news or glad tidings, to the people who sat in the darkness (Matt. 4:16-17).

"The time is fulfilled and the kingdom of God is at hand: repent ye and believe the gospel." The reference here is to the Old Testament in which the kingdom of the Messiah was promised. (See Isa. 40). The Israelites had expected the Messiah to appear in great power to free them from Roman oppression and to give them dominion over their enemies. Jesus' first command was, "Repent ye." One of the favorite verses of our late brother Joblin was on repentance. "Repentance is to leave the sin we loved before; and show that we in earnest grieve, by doing so, no more."

Probably the most powerful case of conversion is that of Saul, of Tarsus, into Paul the apostle. The four fishermen who form so important a part in our lesson, were two sets of brothers, Simon and Andrew, James and John. Simon, whose name was later changed to Peter, seems to have been impulsive, fearless, and possessed of good leadership qualifications. Andrew appears to have been a man of business, and more conservative than Peter. James, apparently the elder of the two brothers, and the captain of the boat. John evidently was the embodiment of love, as indicated by his becoming "the disciple that Jesus loved." Of these four the greatest were Peter and John, probably largely due to the greater intensity of their nature.

When Jesus saw Simon and Andrew they were working at their business, casting their nets. "Come ye after me," that is, leave your work and become aids in my work, "and I will make you fishers of men." They were to use all the skill they had gained in learning to fish, but in a more difficult field. "Straightway," without hesitation, they forsook their nets, they gave up their business to follow Jesus.

James, the son of Zebedee, and John his brother, were mending their nets and arranging them in order when Jesus called them. They left their father as well as their business. No doubt these four men had been with Jesus before and had become believers in him, after having seen some of his works, and listened to his teachings. They were peculiarly fitted for this work on account of their training as fishermen, in which they had learned patience, faith, skill, perseverance and conviction. They were everyday men who had been faithful in their work, and had spent long hours alone without success.

The four fishermen were chosen by the Master to hear what he had to say, to see what he did, and to learn what he was; and were then sent forth with a message and a definite program to be worked out by them with the aid of their early training. We, like these fishermen, have been chosen because there is within us the necessary qualifications, which may be active or lying dormant, and it therefore becomes the solemn duty of each one of us to search our characters thoroughly, and having found stunted talents, to strive toward their early development, in an earnest endeavor to show that we in a measure comprehend the fullness and completeness of the great sacrifice he made on our behalf.

STANLEY A. SAXFORD.
Cleveland, O

REPENT, BELIEVE, OBEY

(Continued from Last Issue)

For whatsoever things were written aforetime were written for our learning, that we through patience and comfort of the Scriptures might have hope (Rom. 15:4). If any man think himself to be a prophet, or spiritual, let him acknowledge that the things that I write unto you are the commandments of the Lord (1 Cor. 14:37.

For this cause also thank we God without ceasing, because, when ye received the word of God which ye heard of us, ye received it not as the word of man, but as it is in truth, the word of God, which effectually worketh also in you that believe (1 Thess. 2:13).

I charge you by the Lord that this epistle be read unto all the holy brethren (1 Thess. 5:27).

And that from a child thou hast known the holy Scriptures, which are able to make thee wise unto salvation, through faith which is in Christ Jesus. All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness, that the man of God may be perfect thoroughly furnished unto all good works (2 Tim. 3:15-17).

For the word of God is quick and powerful, and sharper than any twoedged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, and of the joints and marrow and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart (Heb. 4:12).

But be ye doers of the word, and not hearers only deceiving your own selves (James 1:22).

But the word of the Lord endureth forever, and this is the word which by the gospel is preached unto you (1 Pet. 1:25). For the prophecy came not in old time by the will of man: but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Spirit (2 Pet. 1:21).

I testify to every one who hears the words of the prophecy of this book, If any one add to them, God will add to him the plagues written in this book (Rev. 22:18, 19).

Believe, then be baptized: Then went out to him Jerusalem, and all Judea and all the region round about Jordan, confessing their sins, then cometh Jesus from Galilee to Jordan to be baptized (Matt. 3:5, 6, 13, 17). Go ye and preach the gospel, he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved (Matt. 28:19; Mark 16:15, 16. Then Peter said unto them Repent, and be baptized every one of you and in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins (Acts 2:38-41).

But when they believed Phillip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized both men and women (Acts 8:12, 38). And he received sight forthwith, and arose and was baptized (Acts 9:18). And he commanded them to be baptized in the name of the Lord (Acts 10:48). When they heard this they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus (Acts 19:5).

For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ. (Gal. 3:27; Rom. 6:3). With this array of quotations from God's word we see how essential it is to believe what was written in the Old Testament as well as the new. For when Christ commanded them to search the Scriptures the New Testament had not been written. And Paul's charge to Timothy, from a child thou hast known the holy Scriptures, showed that the holy scriptures he referred to was the Old Testament, and if it was necessary for salvation 2000 years ago to understand the Old Testament Scriptures, it is just as necessary today. And it is a fact that the gospel preached to Abrahaun 4000 years ago is the only gospel that saves. And to be saved we must Repent, Believe and Obey by baptism. This is God's plan, and man cannot change it. So we beg of you to accept of it and live.

Yours in hope.
E. W. KNAPP
Monkland, Oregon.

OBITUARY.

Mamie S. Pogue.

Mamie S. Pogue was born in Fairburn, Georgia, May 26, 1876. She was the daughter of William and Pary Pogue, and was married to Nathan Albertus Burch, on March 15, 1895, at Moreland, Georgia. They came to Indiana and went to housekeeping near Lapaz, Marshall county, but later came to Plymouth.

In 1898, she heard the preaching of the gospel and obeyed its requirements, submitting to the ordinance of baptism in Yellow river on a cold winter's day, administered by Brother L. E. Conner. She has since lived a life consistent with her profession as a Christian.

About six years ago they moved to East Chicago, where they resided until her failing health caused them to return to Plymouth last August. She had been in ill health for some time, and passed away January 25, 1912, aged 35 years, 8 months and 2 days. She was the mother of four children; Thelma, Lora, Walter Melvin, who died in infancy, and William Cecil. She leaves her three children and husband of her own family, her mother, Mrs. M. C. Pogue two sisters, Mrs. W. E. Leonard and Mrs. William Reiter, all of Plymouth, and one brother in Georgia.

Funeral services were held from the residence on Pearl street, Plymouth, Indiana, January 30, 1912, at 10 o'clock a. m., conducted by the writer, and Sister Burch was laid to rest in Oak Hill cemetery, to await the coming of our Lord and Savior, and his resurrection.

D. E. VANVACTOR.
Argos, Ind.

Emily Gifford

EmilyClaire Gifford, wife of the late J. T. Gifford, was born June 5, 1858, and died January 24, 1912.

She was married to M. Gifford, September 25, 1876. To this union eight children were born, the two oldest having preceded her to the grave; three sons and three daughters remain to mourn a much beloved mother.

Mr. and Mrs. Gifford united with the Church of God about twenty-five years ago, and both remained loyal Christian workers until the end, Bro. Gifford having preceded his wife to the grave only a few months.

Sister Gifford was a worthy neighbor, a devoted wife, a loving, helpful mother and a devout Christian. She won many warm friends during her life, who will ever hold her in fond remembrance.

She was apparently in good health until about 8:30 a. m., January 24, when she was suddenly taken with a severe attack of heart failure, which lasted only a few minutes. Her son Eugene, with whom she was living at the time, was called from his work, but before he could arrive, our dear sister had fallen asleep.

The services were conducted by Brother J. L. Winningham, of Dixon, Mo., and at 2 p. m., Saturday, January 27, she was laid to rest in the Church of God cemetery at Morse Mill, Mo., to await the coming of her Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ.

KATHERINE WILLIAMS.
Morse Mill, Mo.

(As we go to press another report of Sister Gifford's death is received from Bro. Winningham. Sister Williams' report, however, is already set up, and doubtless will be regarded by Bro Winningham and all readers as sufficient. —Editor).

T OF CHRISTMAS WORK.

Calla Whitehead.

Because the visiting nurse, who helped us with our Christmas work, was sick and could not send her report, our report on Christmas work has been delayed. We remembered more people with money this year than is our usual custom, for we found them needing so many things, and were able to interest other societies who provided food and clothing. One example of this was a woman having a demented, epyleptic husband and four children (the oldest one feebleminded), who had broken an arm in the struggle and had not been able to work for three months; another, a family where the father was dieing of tuberculosis. We also remembered with money an aged sister in the church, who has three insane daughters, and no income but what is given to her; and an aged couple whose income is so tiny that one could use a microscope nicely in locating it. In all, we remembered seven families with money, and five with provisions.

Just after Christmas, during the bitter cold weather, a sister sent five dollars in memory of her father. This we promptly turned into coal.

Having a friend, who is a visiting nurse, working in the famous Maxwell street district, a hotbed of poverty and misery, we sent her seven dollars to use in her work. I am sure you will read her report with the greatest interest, and when you see how she stretched that seven dollars, you who have no poor in your midst, will think no sum too small to send her. She can also find places for and is very thankful for clothing and soft, clean clothes.

A box of golf gloves and lovely red mittens came to bring Christmas cheer and warmth to many cold fingers. Little Trygve who cried last year for "stwiped mittens") rejoiced greatly in red ones.

We the Chicago Bereans, wish to thank all who helped with the work, and the paper for publishing the notice, and the knowledge of the misery you have helped will be your reward.

Nurse's Report.

Dear Friends:

I desire to thank you for the money sent to me at the Christmas time, as it was a means of blessing [illegible] who received it, and I feel sure the happiness in the channel through which it was given. Let me tell you of some of the homes into which it brought sunshine. This is a few of the many I see:

1. A young woman deserted by her husband with three children dependent upon her and she sick herself and trying to support them.

2. Another young woman, the mother of two children, whose husband is a cripple. Both her father and mother are very poor, and she herself is suffering with tubercular trouble.

3. A woman just home from the hospital with three children and her husband, also has tubercular trouble.

4. A family of seven children, the oldest 14 years, the mother dead and the father sick with an incurable disease, living with them their mother's mother, who also is very poor.

I might tell you of many others. At the dispensary we treat between 500 and 600 per month, and in many of their homes I have visited as a nurse, and I find their need is very great.

Thanking you in advance for any thing you may be able to do for us, I am yours sincerely,

ANNA HEISTAD,
Maxey Home.
1335 Newberry Ave.,
Chicago, Ill.

REPORT OF THE DANIELS-HINES DEBATE

After discussing the kingdom question, I then affirmed that the Scriptures teach that man is wholly mortal, and unconscious from death till the resurrection. I took the position that a living man was composed of body, soul and spirit. That after God formed Adam out of the dust of the ground, he was man before the breath of life was breathed into him, but he was not a living man. Now, after the breath of life was breathed into him, he became a living soul, or man. "Now the question is," said I, "Is this man, mortal, or immortal? Or is he partially mortal, and partially immortal? Let us see. God placed him in the garden which he had planted, and told him that of all the trees of the garden thou mayest freely eat thereof, except the tree of knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it, for in the day that thou eest thereof, thou shalt surely die." I asked Mr. Hines who was God addressing? Was he addressing Adam as a whole being, or was he addressing a part of him? Was he addressing the inner man, or the whole man? If the whole man, the whole man was mortal, for the penalty of the law given was death. If he was addressing the outward man only, the outward man only was the one for whom Christ died, and that the other fellow had no Savior, for Christ died for the man that sinned. If the inner man sinned, he was not immortal, for he must die. If he did not sin, he did not fall, hence Christ did not die for him, and he had no part nor lot in the great plan of salvation. He either addressed one or the other or the men, if it be a fact that man is a dual being, for Paul said it was by the "disobedience of ONE man—not by two—that sin entered into the world, and death by sin." So it was up to him to say which one of the men he addressed. He finally said that God addressed the inner man. I then told him that he had surrendered the whole proposition, for the man who was addressed, was the man that sinned, and the one that had to suffer the penalty, which was death. He said "Yes, but it was not literal death: it was a death in trespasses and in sin." I then told him if that was true, all men would be saved, for Paul said, "As in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." And if he meant that as in Adam all died in sin, even so in Christ shall all be made free from sin, hence universal salvation. I then asked him what about the origin of the inner man. Was it created at birth, or did it pre-exist, or was it transmitted? He said it was transmitted. I told him that he had again surrendered his proposition, for Job said, "A man that is born of a woman, is of few days and full of trouble; he cometh forth as a flower, and is cut down. He fleeth also as a shadow, and continueth not." The gentleman says it is born of a woman, and if so, it is not immortal, for it is of a few days, and fleeth as a shadow, and CONTINUETH NOT: therefore not immortal.

I then asked him which man believed, the inner man or the outer man? He said the inner man. I told him that he again surrendered his proposition, for the man that believed, was the man that was raised from the dead. Hence it went to the grave, therefore not immortal, for Christ said, "I came not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me: and this is the will of him that sent me, that every one that seeth the son and BELIEVETH on him"—the gentleman says the inner man is the man that believes—"might have everlasting life, and will RAISE HIM up at the last day." Hence your inner man, goes to the grave, therefore is not immortal. I then went on to show that in the flood, God destroyed the beasts, fowls, etc., in the way he destroyed man; therefore man was mortal. I then quoted Job where he says, "Shall mortal man be more just than God, shall man be more pure than his maker?" I said, "This could not apply to the body only, for the quality of justice and purety cannot be ascribed to the body only. Hence it must be the rational man. Therefore the rational man is mortal." To this he never replied. He could not.

I then took up the word "soul" and showed that souls died, were killed, destroyed, torn in pieces, etc. I then took up the term "spirit," and showed that any thing that was immortal, did not depend on any thing for its life, for it had life within itself. Isaiah said, "All these things is the life of my spirit." The life of Isaiah's spirit, depended on "these things," what ever they were, therefore Isaiah's spirit was not immortal. What is true of one man's spirit, is true of the spirits of all men, therefore the spirits of all men are mortal.

I then made an argument from similitudes. Job says, "The spirit of man is the (nar) candle of the Lord." Here we have the definition of spirit. It is said to be a "candle." Now both Job and Solomon say, over and over, that the "candle (nar) of the wicked shall be put out." This is affirmed more than a half dozen times. This being true, how can any one claim that the spirit of man is immortal? Since, therefore, the Bible teaches over and over that "man" can die, be destroyed, perish, blotted out, etc., and since it teaches in more than fifty places that the soul can "die," perish, be destroyed, torn in pieces, go to the grave, and since it teaches that the spirit can be "put out," "blotted out," etc., how can they believe that any part of man is immortal? The truth is, the spirit of man is not an entity; not a being that can see, [illegible], taste, and hear, separate and apart from the body, but it is the divine influence from God by which all living beings live. Some times it represents the mind, sometimes an influence from a being, and some times a being as angels, but it never represents a being living inside of man. Mr. Hines quoted, "Then shall the dust return to the dust as it was, and the spirit unto God who gave it." Admitted, but does it return to him as a conscious being? If so there are many more sinners in heaven than Christians, for the inspired writer makes no distinction between the good and the bad. And to prove that it is not a "man," Christ said, "And no man hath ascended up to heaven." Neither the inner man nor outer man, a red man or a black man. "No man." There was no way for Mr. Hines to answer this, and he therefore said that the spirits of all men really went to Sheol, and remained there until the resurrection of the body. Again you have surrendered your proposition," said I. "for Solomon says, "There is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in sheol, whither thou goest." He tried to dodge the force of this by saying that it said the grave. I arose from my seat, and asked him if the original word there, translated grave, was not sheol? He said, "Yes, I think so." "Well," said I, "that settles the question." This was a complete knock-out. Take it all in all, it was a grand victory for the truth.

I must say that Mr. Hines was a perfect gentleman, and the strongest man by far that I ever met, but he was simply on the wrong side. He did not call me an "Advent" one time during the whole discussion, neither did he call me a "Materialist," and the most of them do. He tried to be fair, but he would forget himself occasionally. The older I get, and the longer I study the Bible, the more sure I am that we are right, and it hurts me to think that we are doing so little for the cause. I have spent the better part of my life for it, and now I am growing old and broken in health, with nothing laid up for old age. But I don't believe that my brethren will ever let me suffer. Occasionally some good brother sends us a little help, and it does my dear old wife so much good when I go home and hand it to her, and say, "Wife, the Lord is paying you back for what you did for our church." She gave out of her own hard earnings $80 for our church house. Kept boarders and paid it on the church. God bless all who have helped us, even if it is but little.

Some years ago, I wrote and published a tract on the kingdom at my own expense. Had five hundred published, and sold some of them, and gave them away until they were all gone. I have been urged to reproduce it, but have not been able, but some of the brethren have been sending in a little help to reproduce it, until now we have about twenty dollars. It is a tract of about thirty pages, and will cost one dollar and twenty-five cents a page to get five hundred more printed. I was in hopes that I could have it reprinted before this time, but cannot until I get money enough to pay for the printing of it. I gave the tract to the cause. That is, I told the brethren that if they would reprint it, every cent that it brought, from sale of it, should go to the cause, i. e., should be spent in buying tracts, and helping in our publishing work.

Bro. Huggins, I said the church here was deeded to me: I should have said it was deeded to me in trust for the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith. I knew I could not have it deeded to me individually and hold it as church property. But I did not know but what the Church of God had a Church Extension society, or something to whom we could deed our church property. May God bless all of like precious faith everywhere.

Your Brother,
T. J. DANIELS

It is as easy to deceive ourselves as to deceive those about us but there is no such thing as deceiving God. In Christ's presence we stand revealed for what we are.

All of us expect to be counted on God's side at the last. There is hardly a human being who could choose otherwise. But God says the ones who shall be his on the day when he makes up his jewels are those who have loved him and served him.

PASTOR WANTED

A church in Ohio desires to obtain a pastor who can enter upon his duties about the first of April. Any one who is sound in the faith, and is open to this call may address the Editor of The Restitution, 10623 Lee avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

We, whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones.

This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of their paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

L. C. Authon	.50
Mary A. Patchell	2.00
J. J. Bronson	5.00

THE BIBLE: ITS PRINCIPLES AND TEXTS

As indicated by the title this book is divided into three sections. The first consists of a remarkable disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "principles" in formulated propositions, and the third expounds in a clear, impressive and homelitic manner particular "Texts." The knotty and perplexing texts of the Bible are united and solved satisfactorily to the most fastidious and critical. More than one hundred and fifteen subjects of intense interest to every Bible student are forcibly discussed. Both simple and scholarly—the child is fascinated and taught; the scholar is entertained and instructed. Bible lovers, here is a feast for you. Throw open the door of your home; let The Bible—its Principles and its Texts come in and bless you and your family. 309 pages, 5x7 1-2 inches, durably and handsomely bound in whole cloth, with title embossed on back in gold. One copy, $1.10, two copies or more $1.00 each. R. G. Huggins, 10623 Lee Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

TWO TRACTS By J. L. WINCE

"Salvation" and "Resurrection" two tracts by J. L. Wince, can not fail to arouse the interest of every believer. They deal with vital questions in a most convincing manner. The price is 10c each, 12 for $1.00. For sale by S. Roxanna Wince, Pierceton, Ind.

DID SAMUEL'S SOUL APPEAR?

For the want of a better proof that a personality outlives the body, we are frequently informed that the disembodied soul of the prophet Samuel appeared to King Saul after the death of Samuel's body, and conversed with him.

Pungent Statements.—The grinding process of time is at work everywhere, blotting out and destroying all the ways of man. The busy pompous fools of the day may laugh and jeer at the truth, and blaspheme the God of heaven and earth; but they will soon be as though they had not been; their voices will soon be heard no more; their very names will be forgotten and they shall be chased away as the vision of the night.

Ladies! Save Money and Keep in Style by Reading McCall's Magazine and Using McCall Patterns

McCall's Magazine will help you address acceptably at a moderate expense by keeping you posted on the latest fashions in clothes and hats. 50 New Fashion designs in each issue. Also valuable information on all home and personal matters. Only 50c a year, including a free pattern. Subscribe today or send for free sample copy.

McCall Patterns will enable you to make in your own home, with maximum limit, clothing for yourself and children which will be perfect in style and fit. Price—none higher than 15 cents. Send for free Pattern Catalogue.

We Will Give You Free Premiums for getting subscriptions among your friends. Send for free Premium Catalogue and Cash Prize Offer.

THE McCALL COMPANY, 236 to 246 West 37th St., NEW YORK

"Signs of Character or How to Read Character at Sight"

and

"Health Through Natures Laws"

Two books by Dr. A. Wallace Mason. One is a study of character and how we may read it by the face and head. Brother Mason has made a very close study of this subject for years, and the information given in this book will prove interesting and instructive. Price 25c; 73 Pages.

The other is a work which tells how to gain and keep health as its title says, "through nature's laws." Every family should have a copy.

Address Bro. Mason, care Restitution.

50 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS DESIGNS COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents.

Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the

Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York

Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

WANTED!

Subscription Solicitors

We will pay an actual salary to men and women in all parts of the country, to act as agents for The Restitution. This salary will be based on your ability to take subscriptions, take care of renewals, and make collections, and will be paid weekly. You can devote all or part of your time, and can make a special offer to prospective subscribers, which we will tell you about if you are interested. We will have some announcements to make in the near future that will also help you.

If you want to work, sit down NOW and write for full information.

B. W. NUTT, Manager.

SUBSCRIBE FOR

Words of Life

the publication of the Conditional Immortality Mission of Great Britain, advocating Life and Advent truths.

Terms: 1 copy 37c per annum. 12 copies to one address 25c per copy per annum.

Sample copy on application to

WILLIAM G. ROTHE

1301 Park Pl. Brooklyn, N. Y.

YOU will get genuine pleasure from an hour or two spent with the "Mirroscope" these long winter evenings. Pictures, Photos, Post Cards, Etc. are shown in exact reproduction same as with a high priced Stereopticon, can be used in any home and operated with Electricity, Gas or Acetylene. Prices $2.50, $5.00, $7.50, $10.00, $15.00, $20.00, according to size. Sent anywhere in the U. S. Send for one today.

HOME ILLUMINATED PICTURE CO.

311 SCHOFIELD BUILDING CLEVELAND, OHIO

Less than Half a Cent a Day

The Restitution costs a Dollar and a Half a year, that's less than half A Cent a day or three cents a copy. You can't afford to be without it. If you are a subscriber get some one else to subscribe.

Help to Get Them on the List

Sample Copies of The Restitution

May be obtained for a stamp. Send for one.

Books and Tracts

By W. H. WILSON

A BIBLE STUDY OF HADES.....15c each, or 5 for 50c.
(As compared with our modern ideas).
A critical study of Hell, showing the difference in the word in the past and in the present time.

STUDENTS TEXT BOOK 50c
How to study the Bible and rightly understand God's Word. Cloth bound, 200 Pages

PINE WOODS BIBLE CLASS.....$1.25
Studies carried on between a class and its teacher. Cloth bound, 480 Pages.

CUNNINGLY DEVISED FABLES, 98 Pages.....10c

~~WHERE WILL YOU SPEND ETERNITY~~, 4 Pages, ...25c per hundred

ARE YOU IN NEED OF MONEY, 4 Pages, 25c per hundred

WILL IT PAY TO BECOME A CHRISTIAN?.....25c
By Jas. W. Wilson. A neat Cloth book of 96 Pages which every one should read.

Bro. Wilson's Latest Book

Is Ready for Distribution

THE DESTINY OF RUSSIA AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES
96 Pages, Bound in Cloth, 25c.

W. H. WILSON, 625 North Willow Ave.
AUSTIN STA., CHICAGO, ILL.

Census Blank

MEMBERSHIP CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA

Name .....

Address .....
Street Town State

By whom Immersed ..... Date .....

Fill out the above and send to "The Census Editor," The Restitution, 803 Parkwood Drive, Cleveland, O.

"A LETTER TO A FRIEND"

This tract needs no introduction further than to say that it is one of the most convincing Gospel sermons ever written. Originally written as a letter to a friend by Sister C. C. Woodruff it was published and has sold extensively in tract form. In its present edition it is a 32 page tract, the price is

10c each; 12 for $1.00

There is no better way of spreading the Gospel than handing out one of these tracts wherever you have the opportunity.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co.

WHOLESALE OPTICIANS

We make a specialty of High Grade Prescription Work, and carry a full line of all kinds of Optical goods. All orders filled same day as received.

"S. K. N." SERVICE

Means prompt returns, careful work, moderate prices. Goods shipped to all parts of the country.

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co. 330 SCHOFIELD BUILDING CLEVELAND, OHIO

The Restitution Publications

Send for all of the following books and tracts to

W. S. TOMLINSON, 10625 Orville Ave. N.E., Cleveland

A LETTER TO A FRIEND, 32 Pages 10c each, 12 for $1.00
FUTURE PROBATION, 150 Pages, 10c each, 12 for $1.00

The following tracts by M. Joblin:

THE KINGDOM OF GOD.
OLD MOTHER EARTH TO BE BORN AGAIN.
STRANGERS FROM THE COVENANT OF PROMISE.
VAIN WORSHIP.
NO IMMORTALITY OUT OF CHRIST.
GOD'S LOVE AND SOLICITUDE FOR MANKIND.
WHAT SHALL WE DO TO BE SAVED?
THE FOOLISHNESS OF PREACHING.
SALVATION, WHAT IS IT?

All the above are 16 page tracts, 100 for $1.00 any assortment.

THE PATERNITY OF JESUS, by M. Joblin, 128 Pages, each 10c. A work that proves Jesus was the son of God and not the natural son of Joseph.

THE SCRIPTURE SEARCHERS ASSISTANT, by M. Joblin, each 8c. A valuable aid to the study of the Scriptures, contains 400 references.

FOUR PAGE TRACTS:

Can You Believe? 10 for 10c, 50 for 25c.

State of Man in Death, 10 for 10c, 50 for 25c, 100 for 40c.

Life and Death, 10 for 10c, 50 for 25c, 100 for 40c.

Age to Come Not a Heresy, 10 for 10c, 50 for 25c, 100 for 40c.

TWO PAGE TRACTS

Bible Pearls—Suitable for wide distribution. 1. The Gospel. 2. Coming and Kingdom of Christ by 30,000 Baptists in 1660. 3. Immateriality. 4. Kingdom of God. 5. Nature of man and Thoughts for Thinkers. 6. Two Advents. 7. What is Religion? 8. Restitution Age. 9. Destiny of the Wicked. 10. Baptism. Ten copies for 5 cents, or assorted packages of 100 for 20 cents.

SPECIAL OFFER!

IN ORDER to increase the circulation of The Restitution, the following special offer is made:

One new subscriber for 1 year, choice of:

W. H. Wilson's "Student's Text Book," regular price.....50c
Or 5 Copies of "Cunningly Devised Fables," reg. price 50c
Or 5 Copies of "Bible Study of Hades," reg. price 50c

For Two New Subscribers

One Copy "Pine Woods Bible Class," 480 pages, reg. price, $1.25
Or "The Bible, Its Principles and Texts," 309 pages, reg., $1.25
Or One Hundred of Bro. Joblin's Tracts, regular price $1.00

Here is a chance to get some of the books you all should own. By making special arrangements with the authors we are able to offer them to you without the payment of a cent on your part, just a few minutes effort. We cannot afford to continue this offer long, so take advantage of it at once, get some new subscribers today.

THE RESTITUTION, 803 Parkwood Drive

"Future Probation,"

is that Awaiting any of the Unrighteous?"

Here is a work by Wm. Glenn Mencrieff that every one should read. It is one of the best things on the subject ever written and will appeal to every student of the word. It is a book of 150 pages, made to sell at 25c. We have a limited number left which we will sell at the special price of

10c each; 12 for $1.00

Send for some at once.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

Oregon State College
Oregon State Library

The Restitution
IS THE OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA.

The Restitution.

Founded in A. D. 1852

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Lk. 19:12-14), who will be King of Kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints conjointly with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-58); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17), and belief in, the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Lk. 13:3), and obedience by Baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1: 2-11); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ." (Acts 8:12; 28:23-31).

ROBT. G. HUGGINS, Editor.

—Terms of— Subscription
ONE YEAR, $1.50;
SIX MONTHS 75 CTS. IN ADVANCE

VOL. 60 CLEVELAND, OHIO, FEBRUARY 27, 1912 No. 58

RALLY ROUND THE CROSS

Tune—Rally Round the Flag

Lillie H. Willis

Long ago a little baby was in a manger laid,
Jesus our ever loved Redeemer.
The shepherds and the wise men to him their homage paid,
Jesus our ever loved Redeemer.
Chorus
'Tis Jesus forever.
The true and the tried;
Jesus forever,
The crucified,
Then we'll rally round the cross, friends,
Rally once again,
Shouting the name of our Redeemer.

In the temple now we find him, when but a little boy,
Jesus our ever loved Redeemer;
To do his Father's work was ever his chief joy,
Jesus our ever loved Redeemer.

Chorus.

Now to John for his baptism, we see him wend his way,
Jesus our ever loved Redeemer;
The Father's blest command he's ready to obey,
Jesus our ever loved Redeemer.

Chorus.

Next we see him preaching to people rich and poor,
Jesus our ever loved Redeemer;
Telling them that to obey him means life forevermore,
Jesus our ever loved Redeemer.

Chorus.

Now to Pilate's hall of judgment thy take the sinless one,
Jesus our ever loved Redeemer;
Telling him that he must die for the things that he has done,
Jesus our ever loved Redeemer.

Chorus.

Then to Calvary's hopeless mountain we see him bear his cross,
Jesus our ever loved Redeemer;
For the glory set before him he suffered this for us,
Jesus our ever loved Redeemer.

Chorus.

Then within the tomb of Joseph, they laid the Lord of Day,
Jesus our ever loved Redeemer;
But God's angel came from heaven and rolled the stone away,
Jesus our ever loved Redeemer;

Chorus.

He's risen, Oh he's risen! the Lamb who once was slain,
Jesus our ever loved Redeemer;
He's ascended to the Father, but soon he'll come again,
Jesus our ever loved Redeemer.

Chorus.

From graves on land and ocean his saints will then come forth,
Saved, our ever loved Redeemer;
He will gather home his people from east, west, south, and north,
Jesus our ever loved Redeemer.

Chorus.

Then this earth will be like heaven, he'll rule from sea to sea,
Jesus our ever loved Redeemer;
The people then will love him, and live eternally,
Praising our ever loved Redeemer.

Galva, Ill.

ARE WE BEING CHRISTIANIZED OR HEATHENIZED?

Almus Adams

Do you know that our own America is on the run back to heathenism? The October number of the Hampton Columbian magazine contains a wonderful article by Mabel Potter Daggett. She refers to the religious vagaries of the Hindus in America, claiming that American women are losing fortunes and reason seeking the eternal youth promised by the priests of the east.

To the lovers of truth who are earnestly looking for the Master's return, what does this all mean? The opening words of this remarkable article suggests much: "Eve is eating the apple again. It is offered as a knowledge of the occult that will solve the riddles of existence. Yoga, that eastern philosophy, the emblem of which is the coiled serpent, is being widely disseminated here; and before a charm that seemingly they cannot resist, thousands of converts are yielding to the temptation to embrace its teachings of strange mysteries.

Literally, Yoga means the path that leads to wisdom; actually, it is proving the way that leads to domestic infelicity, and insanity, and death. They are priests from "East of Suez" who, with soft spoken proselytings, have whispered this mysticism into the ears of American women.

While the churches of America are spending twenty million dollars annually in the cause of foreign missions, the Pagans have executed an amazing flank movement: They have sent their emissaries to us. Today the tinkling temple bells ring out with a derisive jarring note in a Christian land.

Seattle, Wash. has its Buddhist temple; San Francisco, has its Hindu temple; Los Angeles, has its Krishna temple. The Vedanta society, of New York, has laid at West Cornwall, Connecticut, the corner stone of a greater temple than these. It is marked, as stones and trees set apart for worship in India, with red paint, the sacred vermilion. Graved deep in New England granite is set the most holy word of the Vedantists, "Om." Chicago, Ill., and Lowell, Massachusetts ,have their Zoroastrian temples to the sun; another which is to be erected at Montreal and a second at Chicago; also the Bahais, a modern Mohammed cult, are building their great Mashrak-el-azkar to represent their sect in the west.

It was the Congress of Religions at the Chicago World's Fair in 1893 that, with a spirit of fine religious toleration, emboldened the first holy men (?) from their fastnesses in the Himalayas; that condescension has been fraught with far reaching consequences. The Swamis and Babas who came to America, discarded in India the simplicity of their sannyasin garb for gorgeous robes more tempered to western taste. They arrived silken-clad and sandal shod, to prove an attraction that outshone the plain American divine, the minister in a frock coat, and white tie. The Easterners were picturesque personalities whom American society welcomed in the drawing room. Others of their order, hearing of this triumphant reception, combed out their matted hair allowed to hang uncared for during the years of sacred meditation, and leaving their begging bowls behind, hurried over to this so much more lucrative field.

When there was started at Green Acre, Maine, in 1896, a summer school of philosophy, which was the outgrowth of the World's Fair Congress of Religions, its platform was an open forum where the Swamis found a welcome. It is via this New England route from Calcutta that nearly every Eastern mystic has arrived and established his vogue in this country. With this introduction from Green Acre, the land o fthe Puritan forefathers, the turbaned teachers from the East set out across the continent. At first their way lay through the populous cities, where the sun rises now on the gilded minarets of their mosques and pagodas. More recently they have reached the smaller towns and villages, where have been formed in order and circles that are exerting a wide increasing influence. On the back of many of these cults is embazoned the serpent, which affects the onlooker as a startling reminder of the evil that entered Eden. It is the symbol that you will see on the gold and enamuled badge pinned on a convert's gown. You will find it on the walls of the assembly rooms, and it appears as the imprim on the literature used at the Yoga classes.

The Yoga class is becoming as popular as the Browning class or the Shakespeare class. It is the direct means by which a Swami reaches the public. Through its aid the Eastern teaching is gathering a wider clientele than it formerly numbered among the society set that first made it fashionable.

Now, reader, if you want to know further what is in our country, listen while I tell you that the leader of the HhadaKrishna religion, with its headquarters at Los Angeles, California, stands and boldly calls his cult "Hinduism with the halo of its own brilliancy." He says, "I have made no effort to westernize it; it is the eternal Hinduism." Strange as it may seem, American women of intelligence, culture and wealth, are giving their all to this vain philosophy. I suppose all outside of real Bible students see in this a religious invasion. The first thing these heathen priests put at the great leaders of so-called true religion was, "You do not agree among yourselves." It may be this that is urging on these same people in an effort to unite all into one body. They were going to show these heathen a few things, and it looks now as though they had been shown. Their doctrine no farther removed from heathenism than it is, has made the minds of the people fertile and ready to receive this or any thing else that comes along. While they were explaining why we do not agree among ourselves, the heathen priests were planning an invasion; for they saw in that their chance. They say "It makes no difference what you believe," which spells the downfall of any religious body, sooner or later. If these so-called followers of Jesus at the World's Congress of Religions had all been of one mind, and all spoke the same thing, these Eastern sun-worshipers would have found no opening. Had they all been standing at the gate wielding the sword of the spirit, this invasion would never have happened. But it is here to stay, and the famine for God's word is on.

Here is a little more on the statistic line. We have fourteen thousand Americans who count themselves as sun-worshipers. Their belief is a mixture of Zoroastrianism and Hinduism. There are Mazdaznan or sun-worshiper centers in thirty cities o fthis country as well as in Canada, South America, England, Germany, and Switzerland, all the growth of the past ten years."

The leader of this cult claims when he first went to Chicago in 1901 as the Prince of Peace, he came direct from Tibet, where he had solved the mysteries of the Dalai-Lama, "which he brought here and placed on the market." Investigation proved that he was a typesetter on the Mt. Desert News .He might have been some time in Persia. His headquarters now are in Chicago, where a great temple is located on one of the chief avenues. The Mt. Desert News is published in Salt Lake City; a good place for the mind to propagate these mystic ideas. If these leaders brought their subjects with them it would be a different story. But strange as it seems, they find their subjects right here in this enlightened country, which proves we are not so far from heathenism; or if so, we are going back to it fast.

Here is an account of their actions: "That the sun my do its perfect work, the cult encourages the wearing of as little clothing as the law will allow. It is Anthony Comstock's prying supervision that has hampered the full exercise of the faith in New York. But in Lowell, Massachusetts, 'Yown sunbaths and dewbaths in angel robes" and as has been testified, even without them—have been sight to startle those of the population still living on the earth-plain of staid New England romance."

Another secret order, that of the Zantrics, is the lowest stage of Hindu religion. Then to think there are said to be thousands of Zantric initiates in America. They are controlled by five gurus or primates. One of these calls himself "Om, the Omnipotent," and has had his headquarters in New York closed by the police. The sacred books of the cult are Tantras, dialogues between the god Siva and his consort, Kali, the divine mother. Let us notice how far we are from Isaiah's time: we are told the rites have much in common with the worship of Baal and Moloch by the ancient Assyrians. Their essential feature is the adoration of a naked woman, the dancing girl, who is trained for the embraces of the priests. Later we will have occasion to prove the American devotees are no less corrupt than these Oriental worshipers. You may draw the conclusion that the converts are drawn from the lower classes, but not so. It is said the Boston headquarters of the Vedantist Society on St. Randolph street, is in charge of an American woman who has taken the vows and the veil of an Indian nun of Ram-Krishna's order. She is a Vassar college graduate, and a rich man's daughter. The Vedantists declare, "We know nothing of former relationships. She now belongs more to us than to her family." Here it is pertinent to ask, how much different is a Catholic nun from this? We see the rich and cultured are the victims of these mystic religions. "My husband and children are no more to me than any others equally deserving of regard," Mrs. Stone, the wife of the Purdue college president, coldly proclaims. "My religion teaches that they have no claim on me, and I am free to seek the perfect life alone." Will this religion do any more for the women in this country than it has for them in the East Why don't our women investigate and prove all things before they accept of these mysticisms that will sooner or later reduce them to slaves? Woman's position in India is the most degraded of any place in the world. Her husband to her is a god, and her salvation comes through him. She serves his food, and waits for hers with her back to the wall, until he has finished. Child marriage is required, and motherhood enforced as early as the age of twelve. Twenty-three thousand child-widows freed by English law from sutter, the rite that formerly burned them on a husband's funeral prye, are reckoned as accursed, and are persecuted by social custom. A returned missionary attended one of the meetings held at West Cornwall, Connecticut, the great summer school of Oriental philosophy of America, and said to the leader publicly, "Swami, I have come from your land after twenty-two years as a missionary there, and your religion, which is three thousand years old, what, let me ask, has it done for the women of India?" The Swami hesitated. He laughted disagreeably. "What has yours done for the old maids in New England?" was his only rejoiner.

Julia Ward Howe once gave a pause to the flow of Vivekananda's eloquence in a Boston drawing room: "Swami," she demanded, "if your gods are so good let your women come and tell us of them." "Our women," he modestly evaded, "do not travel."

One Hindu woman did come to this country and told us of their wrongs, but what good did it do? Think of the churches in every ward in our cities, and villages, and in the country with their Sunday Schools, and "Endeavors" and missions, all combined are unable to cope with the situation. Their own divided condition tells part of the story. Then, again, they are not so far apart as it might seem at a glance. Very often when these heathen leaders are reproved they are met by retaliation, and their answers and rebuffs are so dangerously close to the truth that they silence generally.

I have already called attention to the fact that the serpent plays quite a prominent part in these heathen rites. And now comes the news of the revival of ancient Voodooism among the colored people of the south. It means serpent worship. Why not Christ's followers fall in line? If the serpent had stayed out of the garden and there had been no death, I am at a loss to know how these people would ever get to heaven. Their own doctrine proves that the serpent prepared a way upward instead of downward; so in these last days it seems he is coming into his own. The negroes in the rice belt of the south are indulging in the orgies of this ancient cult to the fullest extent. This kind of worship is very common in Cuba and Hayti. In the latter place Voodoo ceremonies begin with a bath in goats blood, then the sacred serpent is brought out in a cage, and the candidate for high office mounts the box for inspiration, holy recognition, and acceptance. They call themselves the "Sacrifice Sect," and twenty-six in Louisiana have of late been sacrificed. Families having the sacred mudher five are chosen for sacrifice, and they submit, thinking they are going right to glory.

Their ceremonies are rendered hideous by their howling and actions in general, which after all are not so much different from some of the followers of Jesus. Here in New Mexico where I am writing, I have inquired into the worship of the Mexicans, and find there is one sect that spend whole nights or nearly so, in howling and whipping theinselves and each other, cutting their flesh and gouging themselves with sword plants. Surely if Elijah was here in these last days he would find a fruitful field for testing the superiority of gods. Oh the necessity for standing by the truth and the "living God," as Elijah did. Will Jesus find faith when he comes? The foregoing to us is very significant. We are in the last days; let us be faithful.

Written at Santa Rosa, N. M.

THE WAR No. 2.

"War a Good Warfare (I. Tim. 1.18)

"For This is not a Battle, But a World Wide War"

S. Roxana Wince

Yes, God has worked for each one of us to do in "making ready a people for the coming of the Lord," no one being exempt from taking part in bearing the gospel message to every creature. Those ignorant, needy foreigners will never come to us; the Jews will not come, nor will the lower strata of our own people; we must go to them, and "compel them to come in." As J. Shreve Durham says in The World's Crisis for January 31st, 1912: "We cannot save the people unless we teach them, and we cannot teach them unless we reach them. Home visitation will reach everybody, everywhere! It not only reaches every one, but places some one in vital, permanent touch with every one it reaches. It discovers the work and it discovers, enlists and develops the workers. The need everywhere is that people should discover themselves and their great possibilities under God for service."

The most timid, inexperienced person will volunteer to go with another in any well organized movement, and from this experience in personal work begin an active Christian life.

The entire force of the Sunday School and church must have action to live.

Action untiring and constant,
This is the law of our breath,
Live then, O brothers who labor,
For labor that ceases is death.

The Men's Missionary movement uses a great motto: "This is the only generation we can reach; but there is a far more serious fact to me, we are the only people who can reach this generation."

His thoughts are good; his plan worth considering. Carried out, every man, woman and child could do something in the highways and hedges of these latter days, politicians know they must come in touch with every man in every home if their campaign is to be a success. The Woman-Suffragist will win her cause, and winning it, will become a great factor in moral reform, because in her campaign she passes no door.

The missionaries of the American Sunday School Union have also adopted the plan with most gratifying results, some of these visiting between four and five thousand families in a single year, selling and giving away Bibles and Testaments as they go, and afterward founding Sunday Schools and churches. Donato Coscia of Saltzburg, Penn., sold 1300 Bibles and Testaments among his Italian friends in the short space of four years, and found them very anxious to hear the words of God and to listen to the voice of prayer. Miss S. Irene Cooley, who is engaged in personal work among the French, Irish, Finnish, Hungarian, Roumanian, Slavish, Polish, Bohemian, Negro, Italian, German, Austrian, Scotch, Welsh, English Swede, Syrian, Greek, Jew and American people, of Athens county, Ohio, found the foreign children "eager to come to Sunday School, and by far better behaved than American children." And she found most of 'the grown-ups" as ready to respond to good influences as to bad, and that they choose the evil ways because no good things are offered them, strong drink being their greatest enemy.

This plan of personal work has also been largely adopted by our Seventh Day Adventist friends, the result being that few idle and indifferent members are found in their ranks. Their young people are educated to be doers of the word. They write letters of instruction to the unsaved; they go from house to house selling literature; they hold meetings; they talk their faith everywhere, and so this people are "forging ahead" with astounding success, winning battle after battle in this "world wide war," until there is scarce a country or an island on the globe where their standard has not been planted and their literature sown like leaves of the forest. It takes money, but the money comes. We can certainly do as much if we go at it in earnest, like some of our young people do in Oklahoma and other places.

We say that our hearts are fixed trusting in the Lord, and that our anchor holds, being cast within the vail; we talk day after day about the coming of the Lord, and the great blessing that coming is to bring. We point at the sullen attitude of the Mohammedan against Christianity, at his aggressiveness in India, Malaysia, Central Asia, Siberia, Russia, Africa, British and Dutch Guines, Central America and the West Indies, and at the amazing increase of his followers with his constant threats o fan uprising, as sure tokens that our redemption is near at hand. We see in the revo-

Continued on Page Three

The Restitution

Issued weekly by

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING COMPANY.

Entered as second-class matter under act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

TERMS.

One year $1.50; six months 75 cents, in advance.

ROBT. G. HUGGINS.....Editor
BUELL W. NUTT.....Manager

BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Burton H. Lake, Harry Pott,
Chas. A. Goss, Robt. G. Pate,
Buell W. Nutt, B. C. Robison,
W. S. Tomlinson.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

All remittances should be sent by bank draft, post office money order or express money order to The Restitution Publishing Co., 803 Parkwood drive, Cleveland, Ohio.

All communication intended for publication should be sent to the editor, Robt. G. Huggins, 10623 Lee avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

It is necessary to adhere strictly to the rule of not returning unused manuscripts. Writers will please keep copies, or risk the loss.

While the editor exercises a general supervision over the articles appearing in The Restitution, his endorsement does not extend to the interpretation of details nor the exegesis of particular texts in the writings of contributors.

Cleveland, Ohio, Feb. 27, 1912

EDITORIAL

It is by doing right that we arrive at just principles of action.

Exaggerated expressions do not chord with the idea, and wound the ear of an exact mind.

When man revolts against the gospel, he takes another master—himself: one who renders all inferior masters possible.

To do nothing is not always to lose one's time. To do what we do carelessly, is to lose it inevitably. It is weariness without profit.

Situations are like skeins of thread or silk. To make the most of them, we need only to take them by the right end.

Those who have suffered much are like those who know many languages: they have learned to understand and be understood by all.

It must be conceded that, after affection, habit has its peculiar value. It is a little stream, which flows softly, but freshens every thing along its course.

A note from Bro. W. H. Wilson says that he has been in poor health for some time. We hope to hear soon that his health is completely regained.

He who has never denied himself, for the sake of giving, has but glanced at the joys of charity. We owe our superfluity; and, to be happy in the performance of our duty, we must exceed it.

It is very gratifying to report that writers for our paper are constantly increasing, and that both the new and old contributors are doing most credible work for the truth of the gospel. Both have been unusually busy with their pens recently, judging by the size of our mail delivery and the batch of copy now waiting for publication. They are certainly excelling themselves, and we ask the reader to give these devoted servants of God due credit in maintaining the high spiritual and literary standard of The Restitution.

EDITOR'S SERMON NOTES ON THE APOCALYPSE

Subject: The Occupants of the Throne and Their Dual Offices

Text: Rev. 4:4-11.

I. The four beasts and twenty-four elders are the saints in dual capacity (ver. 4; 3:4, 5, 6:11; 7:9, 13, 14; 4:6, 9-11; 5:4-10).

II. As Kings—four beasts (Zoon) (Eph. 1:12). 1. Cherubim (a plural noun, faces). Gen. 3:24 (and," way, is expletive, translated "even" in Mal 3:1); 4: 14; Ex. 25:19-21; 36:35; 1. Sam. 4:4; Psa. 80:1, 7; Ezek. 1:4-14. 11. "Full of eyes" (ver. 6; Matt. 6: 22, 23). III. Four faces (ver. 7; Rev. 5:5; 20:2; Num. 2:2). (a) Camp of Judah, 186,000 men (Num. 2:9); (b) Camp of Reuben, 151,450 men (ver. 16); (c) Camp of Ephraim, 108,100 men (ver. 24); (d) Camp of Dan, 156,700 men (ver. 31). IV. Wings (ver. 8: Ex. 19:4; Psa. 149:9; John 3: Ezek. 1:14; 10:11; Isa. 6: Num. 24:5, 8, 9).

III. As priests—twenty-four elders (vss. 4, 10). 1. The Levites, not incorporate under the four camps of Israel, pitched in the midst as a priestly order—non combatants (Num. 1:45, 47-53; 2: 33, 34). II. In the days of David they were divided into twenty-four priestly orders and officiated alternately (Psa. 132:16; Heb. 9: 9, 23, 24; 1. Chron. 24: 3-5; 25: 1, 3, 7; Rev. 5: 8; Zech. 6:12, 13; Amos 9:11; Rev. 14:2; 15:2-4; Heb. 8:5).

THE SUPREME IMPORTANCE OF PASTORAL WORK—No. 7

Saints Need More Help Than Sinners

This proposition destroys the midsill of popular theology, and shatters the contention of those who claim that evangelism is everything and pastoralism nothing. With them the sinner needs more help than the saint—an orthodox squib that some who profess the truth have not yet thrown away. "Do Christians need more aid to gain eternal life," they ask in astonishment, "than sinners do to become Christians?" "Is not the work of conversion a more difficult work," they ask contemptuously, "than the work of sanctification)" Hence, following in the wake of Christendom astray, they contend more for the work of the spirit in conversion, than for the work of the spirit in sanctification. But their claim, though it passes in orthodox circles as genuine coin, will be rejected by the servant of God as counterfeit. It is wrong inside and out, wrong in its depths and heights, breadths and lengths. For while the commands "believe," "repent," and "be baptized," are never accompanied with any intimation of peculiar difficulty; the commands to the use of the means of spiritual health and life; to form the Christian character; to attain to "the resurrection of the just;" to "lay hold on eternal life"; to make our "calling and election sure," etc., etc., are accompanied with such exhortations, admonitions, cautions, as to make it a difficult and critical affair, requiring all the divine aids of our God, to all the means of grace and untiring assiduity and perseverance on our part; for it seems "the called," who enter the stadium are "many," while "the chosen are few." "Let us labor, therefore, to enter into that rest, lest any man fall after the same example of unbelief." To the struggling saint in the battle for eternal life God has given divine helps; for example, his spirit and the priesthood of his son (Acts 5:32; John 14:17; Eph. 4:1, 2; 1. John 2:1)—helps that he has no where promised or given to the sinner. Since God gives saints more help than sinners, he thinks they need more than sinners. You may think otherwise; but who are you that you should withstand God? (Acts 11:17).

It is more easy to plant than to cultivate the corn, the vine, the olive? It is more easy to enlist in the army than to be a good soldier, and fight the battles of the Lord; to start in the race, than to reach the goal; to enter the ship, than cross the ocean; to be naturalized, than to become a good citizen; to enter into the matrimonial compact, than to be an exemplary husband; to enter into life, than to retain and sustain it for three score years and ten; to believe, repent, and be baptized than to "WORK OUT YOUR OWN SALVATION WITH FEAR AN TREMBLING?" (Phil. 2:12).

Appendix on Evangelism

Paul shows in 1. Cor. 12 that there are various officers in the church, as these are in the natural body. Their functions are different but not antagonistic. He as distinctly says that the evangelist is of divine appointment as he does the "pastors and teachers" (Eph. 4:11). Hence we read of "Philip the evangelist" (Acts 21: 8); and Timothy, you know, was commanded by Paul to "do the work of an evangelist" (II. Tim. 4:5).

We have spent many years of our life in the evangelistic field; we now from experience the privations, the hardships, the ups and downs of evangelistic life. Our heart and prayers go out to our hard-worked and underpaid evangelists everywhere. The brethren with whom we are personally acquainted know that we stand for evangelism loyally, but some of our readers who do not know us personally may infer wrongly from the prominence we have given pastoralism that we are opposed to evangelism. No, never. In the series of articles we have written on "The Supreme Importance of Pastoral Work," we have not opposed evangelism in so much as one word. The church of which we are pastor helps evangelistic effort to the extent of its ability; we encourage it in the work by both precept and example. "Before God we lie not."

(Concluded).

CORN SHEAVES

Gathered from Everywhere

Immortal Soulism a Myth.—Sister E. A. Pendavis sends this news clipping from the Enid Daily Eagle: Immortality of the soul is a myth and without scientific foundation, declares Prof. Ernst Haeckel of the University of Jena, who is generally considered the world's greatest living scientist and evolutionist. The human soul, asserts Prof. Haeckel, is only a purely physical function of a brain cell and ceases at death. All the productions of the human mind, assists the great savant, whether in art, literature or any other branch of intellectual endeavor, are fundamentally mere muscular activities. The immortality of the soul, therefore, says Prof. Haeckel, is merely a myth. Prof Haeckel is now in his seventy-eighth year, but is still mentally and physically as active as many men of fifty.

Joseph's Name in Egypt.—In reading the 41st chapter of Genesis, not a few have wondered at the singular name given to Joseph in Egypt, after he had saved the people from the horrors of famine—the name of "Zaphnath-paaneah." When, in translating the Bible, our English translators came to this word, they saw at once that it was not a Hebrew word, and so without attempting to translate it, they merely transferred it to the pages of our English version, where, in verse 45, we read: "And Pharaoh called Joseph's name Zaphnath-paaneah." But through the researches of Rawlinson and others in Egyptian history and language, we find that these words were Egyptian words, and that they mean "The bread of life;" and the wonderful fitness of the name is at once seen when we remember how Joseph had provided food against the years of famine, and so saved the lives of the people. And so in the 43rd verse, the words which in our version are replaced by "Bow the knee," are now found to be Egyptian words, and our translators gave us that expression because it was so commonly used before their own monarchs as they might go forth in procession among their subjects. But these words, too, are now found to be Egyptian words, and their meaning not "Bow the knee," but "Rejoice." So that when Joseph rode forth in his chariot, arrayed in fine linen, and with Pharaoh's ring on his hand, and a chain of gold about his neck, the heralds cried before him, "Rejoice, rejoice, for the bread of life is coming!" What exquisite beauty, as well as meaning, does this add to the name!

"No More, No Less."—Moses strictly charged the people "Ye shall not add unto the word which I command you, neither shall ye diminish ought from it" (Deut. iv. 2 xii. 32). And almost the last utterance of Holy Scripture (Rev. xxii. 18, 19) is a like solemn admonition neither to add unto nor to take away from the words which God has revealed.

Thirty Years.—David was thirty years old when he began to reign; the age also of Joseph when exalted by Pharaoh, and of our Lord when he began his ministry.

Postdiluvian Kingdoms.—The Egyptians belong to the Hamite family of mankind. In the earliest ages of humanity, before historical times, they left their primeval home in Southern Asia, and took their way to the land of the setting sun. Crossing over the Isthmus of Suez, or, as some think, the Straits of Bab-el Mandeb, they settled on the banks of the river Nile. Here they established the most ancient kingdom yet known to the world, and here "the eldest daughter of civilization" was born.

Appendix to the Book of Judges—Properly speaking there are two appendices to the history of the book of Judges, one in chapters xvii. and xviii., and the other in chapters xix.-xxi. Both refer to an early period, probably as early as the age of Othniel: for in chapter xx. 28 we find that the high priest was Phinas, the son of Eleazar, the son of Aaron; and in the second appendix, Dan appears as the northern extremity of Israel (xx. 1), while the origin of Dan is given in chapter xviii. 29. Also in Samson's history we read of the camp of Dan, or Mahaneh-Dan (xiii. 25), a place named from an event, narrated in chapter xviii. 12. The yare so placed at the end of the book, so as not to interrupt the thread of the connected history; since they have not to do with any individual judge, but rather are meant to illustrate the moral and spiritual weakness of the Hebrew commonwealth without a king. For in those days there was no king in Israel, but every man did that which was right in his own eyes (xvii. 6, xviii 1, six. 1, xxi. 25).

"SOUND IN THE FAITH"

J. F. Wagoner

As faith comes by hearing something as evidence upon which it rests, it logically follows that the basis of faith must also be sound. Now as faith is the assent the mind gives to the truth of a statement made by another, and resting solely and implicitly upon his authority and veracity, it is absolutely essential that the authority and veracity be unquestioned; in other words, sound. Hence the next link in this logical chain must be sound doctrine; and as doctrine is expressed in words, the next link in this chain must be equally strong; we must have sound words. Hence if doubts should be entertained as to the soundness of the faith in question, just hold with a firmer grip that powerful link, faith, in the sound doctrine based upon the sound words of him of whom it is declared, it is impossible for him to lie. Here then is the chain of three links; the first held by one that says, "I know in whom I have believed," and the last link held by the immutable Jehovah. Can you trust such a chain to lift you into the kingdom of God? It all depends upon our ability to hold fast the faithful word: to be steadfast, immovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord.

As faith, then, is such an important factor in God's plan of salvation, how can one be absolutely certain that he or she is sound in the faith? We are told that in human dealings all contracts agreements, and propositions, are plainly stated; each party can tell exactly what to do. Now, if our relation to God could be made equally plain, such questions could be easily answered. The relations between human beings in a contract or agreement are plainly stated; each one is supposed to know exactly what the contract requires of him. How then does our relation to God differ from human relations to each other?

Here is fair statement of the case: God is the party of the first part, in salvation's plan; the human family is the party of the second part. The party of the first part has submitted to the party of the second part a reasonable proposition, but one that will, if accepted, give to the party of the second part the highest and grandest position that can be conceived or imagined. The party of the first part is not only able to perform his part, but is willing to do so. But the conduct of the second party has widely separated him from the party of the first part. Notwithstanding this separation between the parties, the party of the first part has repeatedly called in tones of love and tender mercy to the party of the second part, has pleaded with him as a loving father to his erring child, has assured him that he is not lacking in power to save him, neither will he turn a deaf ear to his cry if he will call upon him. As the parties are separated, what has caused the separation? Listen to the cause as given by God himself: "Your iniquities have separated between you and your God, and your sins have hid his face from you, that he will not hear." Now, honest sinner, do you see the exact relation of the parties? Is it a plain case? Are you trying to bridge over the chasm between you and God? Have you thought out a way to escape that you think will carry you across the chasm? Let me suggest the hopelessness of such an effort to escape. God will deal with you on the exact basis of your relation to him. Your sins, unless pardoned will as inevitably result in death to you as the law of gravitation draws bodies to a common center. Unpardoned sin must suffer the penalty. The fiat of Jehovah has gone forth: "Though hand join in hand, yet shall not the wicked go unpunished." Ever keep in mind that sin can not be condoned; that it never expires by statute limitation; and that it cannot be out-lawed. In vain will some plead for mercy as the last resort; the limit will be passed when all the sweet overtures of mercy shall have been refused. But listen to that sweet voice calling across the dark chasm of sin to the sinner: "Seek ye the Lord, while he may be found; call ye upon him, while he is near." Oh sinner, is not this a limited call? Shall you pass the limit here plainly marked? Some no doubt will, and then they will take up the doleful lament: "The harvest is past, the summer is ended, (fearful thought), and I am not saved."

Each day this call may become fainter and fainter, but ere its last echoes die upon your ear, listen to this exhortation, and may it fill you with a resolution strong enough to heed the call of mercy: "Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts, and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him, and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon. Oh how quickly the response of the sinner to this call would bridge the chasm of sin by the firm, strong bridge of love and obedience! And the joy that fills the heart of a repentant and forgiven sinner does not manifest itself there alone; earnest, loving hearts are made glad, and this noble act extends its influence to the farthest bounds of creation: for God is pleased, the angels rejoice, and if faithful to the end, the results will reach the endless ages. Salvation means something.

Rochester, Ind.

MIRACULOUS BIRTH OF CHRIST—WHY?

J. F. Oelteltey

I read some time ago, in a little paper devoted to religious enquiry, a question that set me to thinking, that some time I ought try to answer. It was to the effect the inquirer would like to hear one reason why the birth of the Christ of God should be miraculous. I don't propose to answer the question to the satisfaction of the enquirer. A good many "enquirers" are like that Scotsman who said he was open to conviction, but he "would like to see the man that could convince him," and although we Scots get blamed for a good deal of that super-decision of character commonly known as "obstinacy" (and we don't care to deny it), still I would like to observe that there are others. Nevertheless there are many readers in the community who are in various stages of mental and spiritual development, and who may require to have such subjects presented to them in a simple way.

Personally I have no bitterness for such people as deny the unusual in regard to the birth of the Lord Jesus (as to what is called miraculous, that can be left for future consideration). It is evident to me that the immediate disciples of Christ did not at first realize to the fullest the peculiar nature of their teacher, and when he asked them plainly, "Whom do ye say that I am?" and Peter gave him enthusiastically a plain reply, he sanctioned and sealed it with the decision, "Flesh and blood hath not revealed this to thee, but my Father in heaven." Now I opine from this that at that period the revelation had not been recorded to all the disciples, and I further opine that today there may be those in the same spiritual condition yet perfectly honest, and we ought to deal with them as the Lord himself did in similar cases, and not be too "previous."

One reason that appeals to me why it was necessary that Jesus as the second Adam should be put back as it were to the position of the first Adam is, that it is recorded of him that he "knew no sin," that is, that he offended in no respect. Sin, if I read right does not mean wickedness, but simply error—that's the meaning of the word—they tell us in the original languages. Now no one can avoid error unless he is entirely cognizant of right and wrong, and so far as I can see, by actual contact with various people in various places, and so far as I have read of all the other races on the face of the earth, with which I have never come in contact, so-called civilized, and so-called barbarous, I am convinced that it is utterly impossible for ordinary humanity, to distinguish between right and wrong in every particular—that's putting it mildly. Indeed, a friend of mine advances a theory "that no human being is sane on all subjects," and my experience and judgment go a long way not only to endorse this theory, but to go one better, and postulate that most of us are only sane on a few subjects, even when we have reached maturity in years and reasoning powers. How much more fallible are we in the years of childhood and early manhood!

We come into the world empty mentally, morally and spiritually, even as we are weak physically and, as I have tried to show in some former papers), unlike any other of the myriad races of beings that with us populate the planet and perform untaught, all kinds of miracles or stunts (which ever way you care to term them) that are wonderful to watch and contemplate. We have to be taught everything, even to take the breast—and from this on all else has to be poured in or pumped in, or hammered in, some of it good, some of it no good, which last after it has got in has, with much trouble to be got out; some times it won't come out anyhow. There is no parallel to this in natural history that I know of. Solomon tells the sluggard to go to the ant and consider her ways, and Christ points to the "lilly of the field;" and what we all need is to come out and take a walk in the fields and woods and we will make the discovery that we really are not the only things that the Lord God has made. The miracles that surround us are so common that we don't notice them.

Now apply these facts in regard to human impotence and inability, especially during the period of childhood, to the case under consideration. When a human babe is introduced into the turmoil of the world, if it is to live at all, it must be taken apart and carefully nursed until its physical, mental, and moral powers develop. During all this period it is subject to the control and tuition of its parents or guardian, from whom it imbibes its ideas, sentiments, and morals, and necessarily ideas common to humanity, or in accordance with nature or truth, but only the ideas of the guardians, as it does the language of the same, all the twists, crooks, moral or linguistic, are embodied and carried forward into the next generation, possibly in a still more exaggerated form. The child-mind is one of the most elastic things in the world. All intelligent people know that. Rome knows it well—the value of "benevolent assimilation"—and the importance of early tuition, and so we have the battle for the babies going on in every land under the sun.

Now think o fany ordinary child, or boy or young man who could raise himself above the influences mentioned, who could exempt himself from the authority of his lawful guardians who could mark out a straight line through and across all their crooks and twists, and keep pure through all the surrounding spiritual defilement; yes who could ever set aside and assert his superiority of the law, "Lord even of the Sabbath day." Where did the light of him that lighteth every man, come from? With correct insight and infallible intuition, he choose of his own initiative the path of righteousness and truth. The answer goes without saying.

Baltimore, Md.

THE NEW AND THE OLD COVENANT.

O. J. Allard

All my life I have heard more or less contention on the Sabbath question, also on the covenants, and the questions seem now as far from settlement as ever. A couple of months ago upon my remarking that I would preach on the tabernacle service, a preacher made the remark, "Look out or you will have a mediator and no law for him to mediate;" referring of course, to the fact that I had contended we were not under the ten commandments. Well, I thought that is so; if there is a mediator there must be a law for him to mediate. Soon as I got home I took my Bible and tried to see what I could find, and here are some of the things that I found:

I turned to Ex. 34:27, 28 and there I read, "And the Lord said unto Moses, write thou these words, for after the tenor of these words I have made a covenant with thee and with Israel. And he was there forty days and forty nights, and he did neither eat nor drink water, and he wrote upon the tables the words of The Covenant"—the Ten Commandments" Then I turned to Deut. 4:13, and read, "And he declared unto you His Covenant, which he commanded you to perform, (ten commands), and he wrote them on two tables of stone." Then I went to Heb. 9:1 and there read: "Verily, the first covenant had also forms of divine service." This made me conclude that the first covenant was such that it demanded a service of some kind, and I saw how it came that it demanded a service, as there cannot be a shadow of a doubt but that the ten were the first covenant, as the foregoing Scriptures plainly teach.

We see that unless there was a service of some kind attached to it, as soon as the law was given, it would only be a question of time when there would be no one to keep the law, as every one would have been killed, as the law demanded death for disobedience, and no one could keep the law: therefore all would have died because of sin.

From Adam to Moses there was no law, no sin was imputed, so of course there was no reward for (O yes, and then I remembered John 6:63, "It is the spirit that quickeneth, the flesh profiteth nothing, the words that I speak unto you, they are spirit and they are life." Then Paul came along and said (I. Tim. 6:3, 4), "If any man teach otherwise, and consent not to the wholesome words, even to the words of our Lord Jesus Christ, and the doctrine according to godliness, he is proud, knowing nothing." This made me wonder still more what are the words here referred to, so I read again in Heb. 9:11, "But Christ being come an high priest of good things to come, by a greater and more perfect tabernacle, not made with hands, that is to say, not of this building;" and again in Heb. 8:1, 2: "Now o the things we have 2: "Now of the things we have such an high priest, who is set on the right hand of the throne of the majesty in the heavens, a minister of the sanctuary and of the true tabernacle, which God pitched and not man." Have we a priest? Yes, what law is he priest of? Unless there was a law there would be no need of a priest.

Now here is the substance of the whole thing, and if we can find the law he is the mediator of the whole thing ought to be easily settled. One says, There was never any other law given but the ten commands, and there could never be any other given; therefore he is the mediator of no other law. Let's see. I will raise up a prophet unto you of your brethren, like unto thee; him shall ye hear in all things whatsoever he shall say unto you." Brethren, how long shall we refuse to hear him who speaketh from heaven through his son? I am astonished that we have not heard him long ago. Listen, ye that want to locate the new covenant, and its order or divine service. Turn with me to Matt. 5, verse 2, "and he opened his mouth and taught them, saying"—then follows the blessings, and an admonition and instruction or two, until we come to verse 17. Now begin to notice, you that are under the law, "Think not that I am come to destroy the law or the prophets; I came not to destroy, but to fulfill." Verse 20. "Whosoever therefore shall break one of the least of these commands (what commands? The ten says I) Verse 20, "For I say unto you except your righteousness exceed the righteousness of the scribes and pharisees ye shall in no wise enter into the kingdom of God." Now what is your law of righteousness? My brother, my sister, listen to him that speaketh from heaven, verse 21. "Ye have heard that it was said by them of old time, Thou shalt not kill." Was this in the old covenant? Sure. "But I say:" who says? The prophet that I will raise up unto you, says so, "But I say unto you, that whosoever is angry with his brother without a cause, shall be in danger of the judgment." Verse 27, "Ye have heard that it was said by them of old time, Thou shalt not commit adultry; but I say unto you that whosoever looketh on a woman to lust after her hath already committed adultry with her in heart" (mind). My friend, do you see anything like a new law that is to be written in the mind and in the heart? Now verse 38, "Ye have heard that it hath been said, An eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth; but I say unto you, that ye resist not evil." Verse 43, "Ye have heard that it hath been said, Thou shalt love thy neighbor and hate thine enemy; but I say unto you, Love your enemies." My brother, my flee of Christ and the law that to be written upon the heart of Israel when the new covenant is made with them, and that is already written in our hearts and in our minds? And it is the law that makes the comer thereunto perfect that accepts the blood of the sacrifice of Christ and the lay that Jesus is mediating today, and makes perfect (verse 48). Read chapters 6 and 7. Now go to verse 24, chapter 7, "Therefore whosoever heareth these sayings, of mine and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man which built his house upon a rock." So we see we get on the rock with the new law or covenant in our minds.

Now a Scripture or two more. Are these the words Paul refers to in 1st Tim. 6:3, that he calls the words of Christ and doctrine of holiness? No doubt at all. Now read James 1:21, "Wherefore lay apart all filthiness and superfluity of naughtiness, and receive with meekness the engrafted word, which is able to save your souls. Be ye doers of the word, and not hearers only." Verse 25, "But whoso looketh into the perfect lay of liberty"—what law is this, the ten commandments? No, indeed. Now turn to James 2, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself," the royal law according to the Scriptures. The royal law, then, is the law that governs loving one another, and is the law of liberty, the one written in our hearts. Notice verse 11. Here he speaks of the old law; verse 12 says so, "Speak ye, and so do, as they shall be judged by the law of liberty." What is the law of liberty that we are to be judged by? Turn to John 12:48; listen: "He that rejecteth me and receiveth not my words, hath one that judgeth him." What words are referred to? The Sermon on the Mount. The next statement shows it, "The words that I have spoken, the same shall judge him in the last day." There is no other conclusion that we can come to, as I view it. The sermon on the mount is the new law covenant. It contains the things that were to be spoken by the prophet God was to raise up, that Moses said they should hear. It is the law of the spirit or life in Christ Jesus, that makes us free from the law of sin and death.

Now turn to Matthew 22:35, "Master, which is the first and greatest command?" Did Jesus quote from the ten commandments or from the royal law, the new covenant? Verse 40, "On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets." These two were the substance that cast the shadow, and the thing that the whole fabric depends on for support. To me the sayings of Jesus in this sermon on the mount is the royal law or new covenant that has an order of divine service, that should be carried on by the church.

I realize that this article is poorly written; but I have tried to give you the idea that I have gotten in studying the question. The man that says we are still under the ten commands "must take Moses for his mediator. I want to take the new law that has Christ or its mediator; and I feel sure it is found in his sayings in his sermon on the mount. He was the giver of the law, as also was Moses of the ten commandments.

THE SEAL OF GOD IN THE FOREHEAD.

Geo. Francis.

In making a covenant between two parties, the sealing of it with the seal of the commonwealth completes the document. Haman sealed the decree of the King Ahasuerus against the Jews, with the king's seal (Esth. 3:12). Therefore the decree was by the authority of the king. Here we are speaking of literal things which are the foundation on which the symbolic rest, and by which we must grasp the meaning of the symbol.

The angel in sealing 144 thousand of Rev. 7, is not using a literal seal, but by our knowledge of the use of the literal—we must grasp the meaning of the work performed by the angel. As the literal seal perfects the document, so the mental work of the angel perfects the mental understanding of the parties sealed in the forehead. Now we are the parties that the angel seals in the forehead,

They are the twelve tribes of the children of Israel. Gentiles may be called Israelites in a spiritual sense, but they are never divided into twelve tribes; to do so would be to stretch our imagination to the breaking point, and especially so as we have the victorious palm bearers, of all nations, and kindreds, tongues, and people standing before the throne, in plain contrast to the parties being sealed: The sealed ones may be included among the palm bearers, after being sealed, but gentile Christians cannot be counted as belonging to the tribes of Israel. The covenant relationship in which the Jews stand calls for such a work as is here represented by the sealing. Paul writes that "blindness in part is happened to Israel." And we know that that blindness is in the rejection of their Messiah. But "there shall come to or out of Zion the deliverer, and shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob. For this is my covenant unto them, when I shall take away their sins" (Rom. 11:27). This 144 thousand is seen again in chapter 14 of the Revelations, standing with the lamb, "having his and his Father's name written in their foreheads" (Diaglott, R. V., Douay, and R. B. V.). The Father's name in the forehead is equivalent to the seal of God. The tribes of Israel do not stand with the lamb, but after they receive the impress of the truth in their forehead it will enlighten them, so they will gladly acknowledge him as their Savior.

And now as the time of the sealing. It comes to view after the opening of the sixth seal. This blindness in part that is happened to Israel, is to last until the fulness of the gentiles become in. It is only in part. They hold the truth as to the unity of the Deity, one God and no more. This truth stands as a bar in the way of the Jew receiving the gospel as preached to them by Trinitarians of the past and present times. When the Jew learns the truth concerning the Messiah, his faith will be perfect. As the Master said, "And this is life eternal, that they might know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou has sent" (John 17:3). That the parties sealed are Israelites, may be argued from the fact that they are called "servants" of our God before they are sealed. The importance of the name or seal of God in the forehead is seen in chapter 9:4. When the armies of Mahommet, under the symbol of locusts are going forth on their conquering mission, where it is written, "And it was commanded them that they should not hurt the grass of the earth, neither any green thing, neither any tree; but only those men that have not the seal of God in their forehead." Mosheim says that Mohommet boldly proclaimed that he was commissioned of God to destroy Polytheism and idolatry. His war cry was, "There is one God, and Mohommet is his prophet." He and his followers, called the image worshiping Trinitarians, infidels; therefore his general's directions to the armies to cleave their skulls but not to hurt those having the seal of God in their foreheads. He, like the Jews, held to the unity of the Deity—one God, and Mahommet is his prophet. Therefore the directions to the army not to molest those that held with them to the unity of the Deity. In Mosheim and in Gibbon we find they treated the Christians that held to the unity of the Deity with moderation. Therefore the agreement between the prediction and its correspondence in the history of the times.

In Rev. 22:4 it is written, "And they (his servants) shall see his face; and his name shall be in their foreheads. It is a serious matter when men turn away from the true and living God, and enthrone in their minds, (the seat of which is in the forehead), a false Deity, robbing the Creator of the glory that in truth and right are his. The first commandment from Sinai says, "Thou shalt have no other gods before men." This is a command resting on the fact that God is our creator; and therefore has a moral right to our adoration. This principle is as enduring as the throne of the eternal; and is not affected by the change of dispensations. "Hear, O Israel, the Lord our God is one Lord: And thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. . . . Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself" (Mark 12:30, 31). This will keep God's name in the forehead.

Albany, Wis.

THE WAR, No. 2

Continued from Page One

lution in China; in the war between Italy and Tripoli; in the state of affairs in Persia, Portugal and Spain; in the movements of Russia; in the decline of faith; in the increased love of the masses for pleasure, and the resulting increase of crime, unmistakable sign that the great battle of Armageddon is in the very near future.

Then let us be "up and doing," each individual a committee of one to help organize and hurry forward the battalions needed in this glorious war, and to give the necessary support to all recruiting officers, who are "sound in the faith," and qualified for the work, seeing to it that none such are laid on the shelf.

Pierceton, Ind.

MARRIED

A wedding at which a number of Des Moines people were guests was that of Miss Mabel A. Evans, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Evans, of Avon, and Mr. Leo Rock. The ceremony was performed February 15th. Miss Eva Evans, sister of the bride, played the wedding march as the couple, unattended, took their places before the officiating minister. Immediately following the ceremony a three course dinner was served. Both the bride and groom are well known and have a host of friends, who extend hearty congratulations.

Brother and Sister Rock are both members of the holy at Avon. Sister Rock was baptized two years ago this spring, and Bro. Rock a year ago, by the writer. Bro. Rock's father was a preacher of the First Day Adventists church at Leon, Ia., several years ago. These two worthy young people are doing their best to be a credit to the brotherhood, and we pray God's richest blessing upon them and a home for them in the kingdom of God.

O. J. ALLARD.

Ft. Dodge, Ia.

YE ARE ABRAHAM'S SEED

D. C. Robison

The above statement was made by the apostle Paul to the Galatian church. He further states that they were heirs according to promise. This blessing came to them conditionally: "If ye be Christ's," or i. e., if ye belong to Christ. The same writer tells them how they became Christ's, viz.: by being baptized into Christ. Jehovah has acknowledged Christ as Abraham's seed by raising him from the dead, or out from among the dead ones. He is the head of a new race that the Deity is choosing out from among the nations, and preparing them to rule the future Cosmos. We are given this age that we may prove ourselves worthy to become rulers in the next. Abraham was called and tested, and was found faithful. The apostle in writing to the Roman church states that "Abraham believed God, and it was accounted to him for righteousness." This righteousness was accounted to him after many severe trials and disappointments. His severest trial came to bi mafter he became the father of the seed promised. The messenger said, "In Isaac shall thy seed be called." It is recorded by Moses that Abraham was required to offer his son as a burnt offering. He did not dispute with God, but obeyed, knowing that Jehovah would make that promise sure. The promise was, "In blessing I will bless thee, and in multiplying I will multiply thy seed as the stars of heaven, and as the sand which is upon the sea shore; and thy seed shall possess the gate of his enemies; and in thy seed shall all the nations be blessed, because thou hast obeyed my voice" (Gen. 22:17, 18). This act constituted Abraham the father of us all. We are counted righteous through our perfect obedience to the law of the spirit of life. The covenant with Abraham concerning his unti seed, Christ, embraced also his numerous spiritual and fleshy seed of the future. Jehovah will fulfill that covenant, not because of their righteousness, but because of his holy name's sake. He will purify Israel when he has gathered them by purging the rebels out and planting them in their own land. Jehovah is now choosing out of the nations a people for his name. This will embrace all individuals who have kept the covenant made with Jehovah. After which he will return to Israel, and build again the tabernacle of David, which is fallen down (overturned), and build the ruins thereof, and set it up." This phase of the covenant includes the land of Canaan to the remnant, and their place in the kingdom as subjects. They will be Jehovah's battleaxe to subdue the nations and establish the kingdom: They are the beloved (subjects) for the Father's sake. Jehovah has promised to make Jerusalem a rejoicing and her people a joy. He has promised to plant them in their land (Canaan), and that they shall be plucked up no more. They shall not labor in vain, nor bring forth for trouble; for they are the seed of the blessed of the Lord, and their offspring with them. At that time the wolf and the lamb shall feed together, and the lion shall eat straw, like the bullock. All animals will become herbiverous. Their desire for flesh as food will be changed and they will live on the product of the earth. They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain, saith the Lord. In his day he shall judge thy people righteously, and the people with judgment. He shall judge the poor of the people he shall save the children of the needy, and shall break in pieces the oppressor. In his days shall the righteous flourish; and an abundance of peace so long as the moon endureth.

These blessings all apply to restored Israel, the remnant that Jehovah saved by shortening the days at the destruction of Jerusalem by the Roman army. This remnant will be brought under the rod and into the bond of the covenant with those left when Christ shall come to his own, and when his own will receive him. This covenant is not based upon Israel's righteousness, but for Jehovah's holy name's sake. This is the gospel of Israel that will bless all nations. Israel must first be blessed and then the nations. If you ignore this gospel to Israel you ignore the gospel that shall bless all nations.

Salem, Ohio.

"YE SHALL LIVE ALSO"

James C. Thompson.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

I have chosen John 14:19 as a foundation for a few remarks: "Yet a little while, and the world seeth me no more; but ye see me; because I live, ye shall live also." These words were spoken by Jesus a short time before his betrayal and death. The world, the age in which he lived, would see him no more. He would soon be beyond the sneers and jeers of that wicked age. But his brethren would see him again, see him in given power, and glory and honor, clothed upon with immortality. And he promises they would live again; they also shall be clothed upon with immortality, and be given power and glor yand honor.

"Because I live ye shall live also." No doubt the disciples understood these words, and they must have been very comforting to them. They had followed Jesus over hill and vale, from city to city, hungry and footsore; they had shown their love for him by standing by him through all the persecutions he had received, and he tells them what the result is to be, "Because I live, ye shall live also." If the disciples had been educated according to the doctrines of the present day, they would have said, or at least reasoned among themselves, "Why does he say that we shall live? Have we not the present life now, and will we not go to heaven when we die? What is the need of him saying that we shall live, because he lives?" But the disciples understood that they were altogether mortal, and in order to live again, they needed a Saviour; they believed that this man was the son of God because of his works. They believed that he was the Saviour whom God had promised. No doubt they expected some such words as these, "Because I live, ye shall live also." How completely these words knock the immortal soul idea out. No one can live forever apart from Jesus, neither is there salvation in any other, "For there is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved" (Acts 4:12).

There would have been no need of him making this promise if they had been immortal. But his disciples were mortal; we are all mortal. "He (man) cometh forth like a flower, and is cut down, he fleeth also as a shadow, and continueth not" (Job 14:2). This life is of short duration. We may take the best of care of ourselves; we may obey the laws of health to the best of our knowledge and ability, but the time comes when we have to lay down this life. Scientists tell us that the organs of the human body could last a few hundred years, some of the organs longer than others. The human body, however, must finally submit to the law of decay, unless God interferes. I have heard it said that we die because of our own transgressions; that we disobey some law and pay the penalty, which is death. It is said we are inclined to make Adam shoulder too much. However, the Bible says, "As in Adam all die." We must all die unless God interferes; because of Adam's disobedience. Yes, unless God sees fit through his son, to change these vile bodies, we shall never obtain eternal life. God has made a way in which we can be saved, and the way is Jesus. He said unto Thomas (John 14:5), "I am the way, the truth, and the life."

(To be continued in next issue)

PASTOR WANTED

A church in Ohio desires to obtain a pastor who can enter upon his duties about the first of April. Any one who is sound in the faith, and is open to this call may address the Editor of The Restitution, 10623 Lee avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

We, whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones.

This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of their paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

Sister's Society of Cleveland $2.50

THE BIBLE; ITS PRINCIPLES AND TEXTS

As indicated by the title this book is divided into three sections. The first consists of a remarkable inquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "principles" as formulated propositions, and the third expounds in a clear, impressive and homelitic manner particular "Texts." The knotty and perplexing texts of the Bible are united and solved satisfactorily to the most fastidious and critical. More than one hundred and fifteen subjects of intense interest to every Bible student are formally discussed. Both simple and scholarly—the child is fascinated and taught; the scholar is entertained and instructed. Bible lovers, here is a feast for you. Throw open the door of your home; let The Bible—its Principles and its Texts come in and bless you and your family. 309 pages, 5x7 1-2 inches, durably and handsomely bound in whole cloth, with title, embossed on back in gold. One copy, $1.10, two copies or more; $1.00 each. R. G. Huggins, 10623 Lee Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

TWO TRACTS By J. L. WINCE

"Salvation" and "Resurrection", two tracts by J. L. Wince, can not fail to arouse the interest of every believer. They deal with vital questions in a most convincing manner. The price is 10c each, 12 for $1.00. For sale by S. Roxanna Wince, Piercetown, Ind.

DID SAMUEL'S SOUL APPEAR?

For the want of a better proof that a personality outlives the body, we are frequently informed that the disembodied soul of the prophet Samuel appeared to King Saul after the death of Samuel's body, and conversed with him.

Pungent Statements.—The grinding process of time is at work everywhere, blotting out and destroying all the ways of man. The busy pompous fools of the day may laugh and jeer at the truth, and blaspheme the God of heaven and earth; but they will soon be as though they had not been: their voices will soon be heard no more; their very names will be forgotten and they shall be classed away as the vision of the night.

Ladies! Save Money and Keep in Style by Reading McCall's Magazine and Using McCall Patterns

McCall's Magazine will help you dress stylishly at a moderate expense by keeping you posted on the latest fashions. It has 250 to 300 fine illustrations in each issue. Also valuable information on all home and personal matters. Only 50c a year, including a free 15c pattern. Send 15c (stamps accepted) today and get a pattern of your choice and a sample copy.

McCall Patterns will be shown in every city, town and village. Ask your dealer for them. Send for free Pictorial Catalogue and Fash Prize Offer.

THE McCALL COMPANY, 238 to 248 West 37th St., NEW YORK

50 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS DESIGNS COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HAND BOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the

Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York

Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

WANTED!

Subscription Solicitors

We will pay an annual salary to men and women in all parts of the country, to act as agents for The Restitution. This salary will be based on your ability to take subscriptions, take care of renewals, and make collections, and will be paid weekly. You can devote all or part of your time, and can make a special offer to prospective subscribers, which we will tell you about if you are interested. We will have some announcements to make in the near future that will also help you.

If you want to work, sit down NOW and write for full information.

B. W. NUTT, Manager.

"Signs of Character or How to Read Character at Sight"

and

"HealthThrough Natures Laws"

Two books by Mr. A. Wallace Mason. One is a study of character and how we may read it by the face and head. Brother Mason has made a very close study of this subject for years, and the information given in this book will prove interesting and instructive. Price 25c; 73 Pages.

The other is a work which tells how to gain and keep health as its title says, "through nature's laws." Every family should have a copy.

Address Bro. Mason, care Restitution.

SUBSCRIBE FOR

Words of Life

the publication of the Conditional Immortality Mission of Great Britain, advocating Life and Advent truths.

Terms: 1 copy 37c per annum, 12 copies to one address 25c per copy per annum.

Sample copy on application to

WILLIAM G. ROTHE

1301 Park Pl. Brooklyn, N. Y.

SHOWS POST CARDS, PHOTOGRAPHS, PICTURES, CLIPPINGS OR ANYTHING NOT TRANSPARENT IN ORIGINAL BRILLIANT COLORS. FITTED FOR ELECTRIC LIGHT OR WELSBACH.

YOU will get genuine pleasure from an hour or two spent with the "Mirroscope" these long winter evenings. Pictures, Photos, Post Cards, Etc. are shown in exact reproduction same as with a high priced Stereopticon, can be used in any home and operated with Electricity, Gas or Acetylene. Prices $2.50, $5.00, $7.50, $10.00, $15.00, $20.00, according to size. Sent anywhere in the U. S. Send for one today.

HOME ILLUMINATED PICTURE CO.

311 SCHOFIELD BUILDING CLEVELAND, OHIO

Less than Half a Cent a Day

The Restitution costs a Dollar and a Half a year, that's less than half A Cent a day or three cents a copy. You can't afford to be without it. If you are a subscriber get some one else to subscribe.

Help to Get Them on the List

Sample Copies of The Restitution

May be obtained for a stamp. Send for one.

Books and Tracts

By W. H. WILSON

A BIBLE STUDY OF HADES.....15c each, or 5 for 50c.
(As compared with our modern ideas).
A critical study of Hell, showing the difference in the word in the past and in the present time.

STUDENTS TEXT BOOK 50c
How to study the Bible and rightly understand God's Word. Cloth bound, 200 Pages

PINE WOODS BIBLE CLASS.....$1.25
Studies carried on between a class and its teacher. Cloth bound, 480 Pages.

CUNNINGLY DEVISED FABLES, 28 Pages.....10c

WHERE WILL YOU SPEND ETERNITY, 4 Pages, ... 25c per hundred

ARE YOU IN NEED OF MONEY, 4 Pages, 25c per hundred

WILL IT PAY TO BECOME A CHRISTIAN?.....25c
By Jas. W. Wilson. A neat Cloth book of 96 Pages which every one should read.

Bro. Wilson's Latest Book

Is Ready for Distribution

THE DESTINY OF RUSSIA AND SIGNSOF OUR TIMES
96 Pages, Bound in Cloth, 25c.

W. H. WILSON, 625 North Willow Ave.

AUSTIN STA., CHICAGO, ILL.

The Restitution Publications

Send for all of the following books and tracts to

W. S. TOMLINSON, 10625 Orville Ave. N.E., Cleveland

A LETTER TO A FRIEND, 32 Pages 10c each, 12 for $1.00
FUTURE PROBATION, 150 Pages, 10c each, 12 for $1.00

The following tracts by M. Joblin:

THE KINGDOM OF GOD.
OLD MOTHER EARTH TO BE BORN AGAIN.
STRANGERS FROM THE COVENANT OF PROMISE.
VAIN WORSHIP.
NO IMMORTALITY OUT OF CHRIST.
GOD'S LOVE AND SOLICITUDE FOR MANKIND.
WHAT SHALL WE DO TO BE SAVED?
THE FOOLISHNESS OF PREACHING.
SALVATION, WHAT IS IT?

All the above are 16 page tracts, 100 for $1.00 any assortment.

THE PATERNITY OF JESUS, by M. Joblin, 128 Pages, each 10c. A work that proves Jesus was the son of God and not the natural son of Joseph.

THE SCRIPTURE SEARCHERS ASSISTANT, by M. Joblin, each 5c. A valuable aid to the study of the Scriptures, contains 400 references.

FOUR PAGE TRACTS:

Can You Believe? 10 for 10c, 50 for 25c.

State of Man in Death, 10 for 10c, 50 for 25c, 100 for 40c.

Life and Death, 10 for 10c, 50 for 25c, 100 for 40c.

Age to Come Not a Heresy, 10 for 10c, 50 for 25c, 100 for 40c.

TWO PAGE TRACTS

Bible Pearls—Suitable for wide distribution, 1. The Gospel. 2. Coming and Kingdom of Christ by 20,000 Baptists in 1660. 3. Immateriality. 4. Kingdom of God. 5. Nature of man and Thoughts for Thinkers. 6. Two Advents. 7. What is Religion? 8. Restitution Age. 9. Destiny of the Wicked. 10. Baptism. Ten copies for 5 cents, or assorted packages of 100 for 20 cents.

Census Blank

MEMBERSHIP CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA

Name .....

Address .....
Street Town State

By whom Immersed ..... Date .....

Fill out the above and send to "The Census Editor," The Restitution, 803 Parkwood Drive, Cleveland, O.

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co.

WHOLESALE OPTICIANS

We make a specialty of High Grade Prescription Work, and carry a full line of all kinds of Optical goods. All orders filled same day as received.

"S. K. N." SERVICE

Means prompt returns, careful work, moderate prices. Goods shipped to all parts of the country.

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co. 328 SCHOFIELD BUILDING CLEVELAND, OHIO

SPECIAL OFFER!

IN ORDER to increase the circulation of The Restitution, the following special offer is made:

One new subscriber for 1 year, choice of:

W. H. Wilson's "Student's Text Book," regular price..... 50c
Or 5 Copies of "Cunningly Devised Fables," reg. price 50c
Or 5 Copies of "Bible Study of Hades," reg. price 50c

For Two New Subscribers

One Copy "Pine Woods Bible Class," 480 pages, rg. price, $1.25
Or "The Bible, Its Principles and Texts," 309 pages, reg., $1.25
Or One Hundred of Bro. Joblin's Tracts, regular price $1.00

Here is a chance to get some of the books you all should own. By making special arrangements with the authors we are able to offer them to you without the payment of a cent on your part, just a few minutes effort. We cannot afford to continue this offer long, so take advantage of it at once, get some new subscribers today.

THE RESTITUTION, 803 Parkwood Drive

"A LETTER TO A FRIEND"

This tract needs no introduction further than to say that it is one of the most convincing Gospel sermons ever written. Originally written as a letter to a friend by Sister C. C. Woodruff it was published and has sold extensively in tract form. In its present edition it is a 32 page tract, the price is

10c each; 12 for $1.00

There is no better way of spreading the Gospel than handing out one of these tracts wherever you have the opportunity.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.

803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

"Future Probation,

is that Awaiting any of the Unrighteous?"

Here is a work by Wm. Glenn Mencrieff that every one should read. It is one of the best things on the subject ever written and will appeal to every student of the word. It is a book of 150 pages, made to sell at 25c. We have a limited number left which we will sell at the special price of

10c each; 12 for $1.00

Send for some at once.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.

803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

Oregon Bible College

The Restitution IS THE OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA.

The Restitution.

Founded in A. D. 1852

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Lk. 19:12-15), who will be King of Kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-53); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17), and belief in, the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Lk. 13:3), and obedience by baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ." (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31).

ROBT. G. HUGGINS, Editor.

—Terms of— Subscription ONE YEAR, $1.50; SIX MONTHS 75 CTS. IN ADVANCE

VOL. 60 CLEVELAND, OHIO, MARCH 5, 1912 No. 59

LET US PRAY

Blessed Father, Through thy mercy another day of hallowed privileges has dawned upon us, and we are thankful. We have much to be thankful for. Oh God, thou has clothed, and fed, and sheltered, and protected us while many of our fellow creatures are perishing for the necessaries of this life — Oh, God we thank thee as the giver of every good and perfect gift. Especially would we praise thee for the bread and water of life everlasting. Oh, God we cannot find words to express our gratitude and love for thy invitation to thy kingdom and glory, while tens of thousands are perishing for lack of knowledge of thy beneficent purposes. Oh, God we will praise thee.

We beseech thee, our Father, to forgive all thy pure eyes have seen amiss in us through the week, whether through word or deed, for we ask it in Jesus' name. Regard in mercy all the members of this congregation. Are any lukewarm and careless? Oh God, use us for thy glory and their benefit we humbly pray. Help us to lead them back to the cross, to the throne of grace, that they may obtain mercy and strength to live to thy praise. Bless all as thou seest they ned. May thy promises be their stay in life, their strength in prosperity, and their support in adversity. Bless the aged and afflicted. May they be the especial objects of thy care, and realize thy Fatherly hand. Do thou bless all thy scattered and lonely ones. Guide them safely through all the trying scenes of life to thy kingdom and glory. And all things we ask, Heavenly Father, that thy kingdom come, that thy will may be done in earth as it is in heaven. And we will ever praise and magnify thy holy name. In Jesus' name.

THE MASTER'S DISCIPLES

Eld. C. C. Maple

The portion of Scripture I wish to consider in this article is found in Matt. 5:3-15. These verses teach us truths which have to do with those who would be Christ's followers.

I. Their Character (verses 3-9). They are poor in spirit; they mourn; they are meek; they hunger and thirst after righteousness; they are merciful; pure in heart, and are peacemakers. It is to these that the promise are made of comfort, of obtaining mercy, of being filled with spiritual blessings. "They shall see God: they shall be called his sons: they shall inherit the earth:" "They are to reign with Christ a thousand years:" "they are to take the kingdom and possess it forever." We are plainly told that it is not for all, but for them for whom it is prepared, or those who are prepared for it. They who do his commandments can claim the reward; for it is not he who says, "Lord, Lord," and makes so much profession, but he that doeth the Father's will shall inherit the kingdom. How exceedingly careful then do we need to be that we possess these traits of character as place us among the Master's disciples, and which makes us heirs to all things.

II. Their Reception (verses 10-12). They shall suffer persecution; they shall be reproached; they shall have all manner of evil said against them, and that falsely. Thus in entering his service we may expect the way to lead into persecution, and we shall need to prepare ourselves for these things. Our faith must remain unshaken, and we must rejoice in it all for a great reward awaits us.

III. Their Influence (verses 13-16). They are "the salt of the earth," that which preserves. How true this is. Where the disciple of Christ is, there is the leaven of righteousness, purity and uprightness.

They are "the light of the world," that which directs. How true again. The follower of Christ furnishes the world with spiritual light. Christ has said, "I am the light of the world;" but the world receives light from him through his followers: they are the reflection of him. Let the light of each of us so shine that the world may be led to glorify our Master.

IV. Conclusion. Much depends upon the followers of Christ. "What manner of persons ought we to be in all holy conversation and godliness?" Let us "put on the whole armour of God," and take our stand for truth and righteousness.

"O for a closer walk with God,
A calm and heavenly frame,
A light to shine upon the road
That leads me to the Lamb."

THE TRUTH DEFENDED—No. 1.

An Ex-Methodist Pleads for the Truth,

Mrs. Chas. Thomas

My Dear Friend:

I will write to you and explain some points on which we differ. Having been a strict Methodist all my life, I was amazed to learn when I came here two years ago that I had taught wrong ideas to my Sunday School class, and that I had been blind. I know you are a deep thinker, that you do not believe a thing because "they say so."

Now for the first thought: How can there be one Bible, one word of God, and yet different beliefs be right? What is the trouble? Just this: All are teaching their own creed. No Reformed Methodist minister would be turned out of church for preaching anything different from what his conference believes; Each one of the hundreds of churches have a minister who preaches entirely different doctrines—all from the one word of God! Where do they get it? See what our Saviour taught, also what his disciples taught: How many different beliefs did they teach? Their teachings are one. If you think well you will see there is something seriously wrong with christendom. It is here: We are living in the times spoken of by the apostle Paul in his letter to the Thessalonians: "Let no man deceive you by any means, for that day shall not come, except there come a falling away first, and that man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition" (II. Thess. 2:3). Every one who reads, studies, or thinks can see we are living in the last times. The fulfilling of prophecy so wonderfully and literally proves without a doubt this fact. So the falling away of thousands, the blind leading the blind, etc., are only what we must expect, but such is not what thousands are looking for. Instead they are believing that this world must be remodeled and made over by man through good works. We must be christened as a child, live good lives, and go to heaven when we die. Do you know there is not one single verse, passage, or example which says we must christen or sprinkle our babies? There is not one passage which says we will go to heaven when we die.

Perhaps you may ask, Where then did we get the idea? We got it from the Methodist church; the Presbyterians got it from the Presbyterian church, and so on, all down the line. I remember when I taught Sunday School. I studied my Bible, and I saw it read, "repent and be baptized;" I saw what Jesus preached the same and all his followers. The Word says we must repent and be baptized in order to inherit eternal life. Read and see that in every case all that took the name of Christ on themselves, did so by repentance and baptism. How can a baby or child that does not know right from wrong, repent? Notice, repentance comes first, then baptism. We arrange the order to suit ourselves—baptism first, then repentance!

Some Methodists think the circumcision spoken of in Gen. 17: 11-13 is binding on us in the form of baptism. How blind! For if we keep circumcision in practice, we must also keep hundreds of other laws given to the Jews before Christ came. We have only to look this up to find that the orthodox churches are not teaching the first steps of God's plan, for the firststeps are repentance and baptism, then the good works come next.

I saw this fact plainly years ago, and wondered why we did not observe the due order in our church; but I did then what thousands continue to do—thought, "Oh well it must be right because the ministers and teachers say so." I followed their lead instead of looking to our One and Only Guide, the word of God. No church or minister has the right to change it.

SUFFERING AND REIGNING

Bessie Nicholls

II. Tim. 2:12: "If we suffer, we shall also reign with him, if we deny him, he also will deny us." This is what Paul wrote in his epistle to Timothy, and Paul, we know, was a great sufferer for the sake of the gospel. The lesson we had last Sunday was very much in line with this, and if it is our desire, which it should be, to take heed to the warnings which were pointed out to us in that lesson, we ought to take more earnest heed to the above verse. People may think it strange that any one should be called upon to suffer after having put on the name of Christ, but in order to be one of God's children we must suffer with Christ, and the proof of this is found in Rom. 8:16-17: "The spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God; and if children, then heirs, heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ, if so be that we suffer with him, that we may be also glorified together." This shows us then, does it not, that suffering with Christ is one of the things that is expected of a Christian?

The question might arise, "Why is it necessary that we should suffer? Isn't believing and obeying God's commandments sufficient for our salvation?" Let us stop and think for a moment how Christ had to suffer. Why did he suffer? I Pet. 2:20-23: "For what glory is it, if, when ye be buffeted for your faults, ye shall take it patiently? but if, when ye do well and suffer for it, ye take it patiently, this is acceptable with God; for even hereunto were ye called, because Christ also suffered for us, leaving us an example, that we should follow his steps: who did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth: who, when he was reviled, reviled not again; when he suffered, he threatened not, but committed himself to him who judgeth righteously." Christ suffered for us; why? 1 Pet. 3:18: "For Christ also hath once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God, being put to death in the flesh but quickened by the spirit." He suffered that he might bring us to God, and in one verse it says, "He bare our sins in his own body on the tree, that we being dead to sin should live unto righteousness."

Here then is the secret of Christ's suffering. All for us that we might have life, and not die in our sins. Could greater love ever have been shown? and ought we to call it or even consider it a hardship to suffer for him, no matter what our suffering may be? No, but rather we should rejoice in our suffering, as we are told in 1 Pet. 4:13-16: "But rejoice inasmuch as ye are partakers of Christ's sufferings, that when his glory shall be revealed, ye may be glad also with exceeding joy. If ye be reproached for the name of Christ, happy are ye, for the spirit of glory and of God resteth upon you: on their part he is evil spoken of, but on your part he is glorified: but let none of you suffer as a murderer, or as a thief, or as an evil doer, or as a busybody in other men's matters; yet if any man suffer as a Christian, let him not be ashamed, but let him glorify God on this behalf."

One of the greatest sufferings, I think, is to deprive ourselves of the pleasures of this world, but we will not find it so hard if we are trying to please God and Christ instead of trying to satisfy our own desires. Let us remember that the pleasures of today are only for a season. We are not called upon to deprive ourselves of the pleasures of this world and to suffer whatever afflictions might come upon us without receiving a reward for it in the end, for our text says: "If we suffer we shall also reign with him." God then, has provided some better things for us if we are striving to be faithful. It is necessary, too, that our faith be tried, and this is how it is tried—through suffering. As Bro. Huggins has told us, if we do not have any trials to overcome and are not chastened of the Lord, there is something wrong, for we read in Heb. 12:6-8: "For whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth. If ye endure chastening, God dealeth with you as with sons, for what son is he whom the father chasteneth not? But if ye be without chastisement, whereof all are partakers, then ye are bastards, and not sons." I think each one of us realizes the importance of the first part of this lesson, that is, suffering in order that we might reign with Christ, and enjoy the glories that are to be revealed when he comes. I hope we will all try to bear whatever trials or afflictions that may come upon us patiently, and try more earnestly to overcome anything we are doing or indulging in which we know is not what we should be doing. What a glorious thing it will be to reign with Christ in his glory and share in all the grand things he has promised to the faithful ones, therefore let us not be lukewarm or cold, for in the last part of this lesson it reads: "If we deny him, he also will deny us." What an awful thing that would be: to have Christ when he comes in his glory to give to the faithful all that has been promised them—to have him deny us the privilege of sharing those glories, because we denied him when we had the privilege of confessing him! Luke 12:8-9: "Also, I say unto you, Whosoever shall confess me before men, him shall the son of man also confess before the angels of God; but he that denieth me before men, shall be denied before the angels of God." If we wish to reign with Christ we must work for him while it is day, for the night cometh when no man can work. We deny Christ by not working for him. Brothers and sisters, let us each one find something to do for Christ to show our appreciation of all he has done for us, and also to show that we want an entrance into his kingdom. Let us not deny him, but rather let us be willing to suffer and deny ourselves anything which is liable to keep us out of God's kingdom.

Cleveland, Ohio.

WORK No. 3.

B. H. Thomas

In foregoing articles of this series, we have outlined work which may be done through the medium of tracts, books, and papers, and we trust that many dear ones are already putting our suggestions into practice. If not, our labor will have been in vain, which would be to us a source of disappointment and sorrow. We will suggest in this number, a different line of labor, which will bring into action the personality, tact, generalship, and conversational powers of the brother or sister, who undertakes it.

It is a well known fact that each individual (it matters not how poor, humble, or unlearned), wields an influence over one or more of his fellow beings. Some one has confidence in each of us. Somebody's life is influenced and guided, either for weal or woe, by contact with us, by the life we lead and words we speak. Therefore in a greater or lesser degree each of us may be said to be our brother's keeper. Now bearing this thought in mind, let each brother and sister, who really and truely desires to do a little work for Jesus, go over in their mind's eye each one of their friends, relatives and acquaintances, and decide which one of them, all would be most likely to listen to and become interested in God's plan of salvation. This selection made, begin the siege by first winning the respect and confidence of the individual. Seek his or her company as often as convenient. Interest yourself in such things and themes as interest him or her: Let your life, language, and sentiment be clean, pure, and beyond reproach, concentrate your mind and labor upon this one individual, and when you feel that you have secured his confidence and esteem, then (and not until then) introduce the glad tidings of Jesus and the kingdom of God. Do not attack the church to which he belongs, nor the one to which his father or mother belongs. Say not one word, (at first) of the errors of Christendom, or the fables of theology. But rather hold out to him beautiful pictures of God's plan of salvation; paradise restored, and the whole earth full of the glory of God, as the waters cover the sea; the curse removed, sin, suffering, sorrow, pain and death all behind us; endless life right here on this same old earth which gave us birth, with joys beyond the mind of man to conceive, before us. Life without end; joys without end; beauties without end. Loved ones restored to life without end; Christ without end; God all in all. Who can resist such a glorious hope? Surely not the friend whose confidence you have cultivated and secured, especially if he can see the purifying effect the blessed hope has had on your daily life.

My dear brother and sister, just one soul besieged and won to Christ in this way, is an achievement of which we may well be proud, the contemplation of which will be a source of joy while life lasts, and the reward of which will follow us into the age to come. Why not try it? Begin now. If each brother and sister would bring just one into the fold, the number of God's people would be doubled, and who can measure the renewing of spirit that we will experience in our effort in behalf of others?

Once upon a time two brothers were caught in a terrible blizzard, and both were about to perish from cold and exposure. But the elder, seeing his beloved brother stagger and fall, forgot his own condition, and began frantically to chafe the hands and limbs of the fallen one. He stripped off his own coat, and wrapped it about the prostrate form, and lifting him gently in his arms, staggered on until overtaken by a rescue party, and both were saved. The energy and exercise, prompted by love in the elder, not only saved his brother from death, but himself also from perishing. Just so, dear ones, an earnest and energetic effort as outlined above, may not only save a soul from death, but at the same time build up our own zeal, and save ourselves from becoming lukewarm.

BEREAN DEPARTMENT

John 6:27

Labor not for the meat which perisheth, but for that meat which endureth unto everlasting life, which the son of man shall give unto you: for him hath God the Father sealed."

Jesus was speaking to the multitude who were following him, because of the food he had provided for them the day previous, of loaves and fishes.

They ask what they should do that they might work the works of God. He told them they should believe on him whom the Father sent. Then they asked what sign he could show them that they might see and believe him.

"Our fathers did eat manna in the desert; as it is written, He gave them bread from heaven to eat." Then Jesus said unto them, "Moses gave you not that bread from heaven; but my Father giveth you the true bread from heaven. For the bread of God is he which cometh down from heaven and giveth life unto the world." Then they said, "Lord, evermore give us this bread." And Jesus said, "I am the bread of life: he that cometh to me shall never hunger, and he that believeth on me shall never thirst. But I said unto you, that ye also have seen me and believe not. All that the Father giveth me shall come to me, and he that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out. For I came down from heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me: And this is the Father's will, that of all which he hath given me, I should lose nothing, but should raise it up again at the last day. And this is the will of him that sent me, that every one which seeth the son and believeth on him, may have everlasting life; and I will raise him up at the last day.

Dear Bereans, let us not allow the cares of this world, the deceitfulness of riches, and the lust of other things, entering in, to choke the word, and become unfruitful, for we know the things of this world all perish, but put our trust in the living God, who giveth us richly all things to enjoy.

FLORENCE LANING

Sister Viola Eaton requests the Bereans to read the 15 chapter of St. John, and to consider it as her communication to them.

"Who shall ascend into the hill of the Lord? or who shall stand in his holy place?" (Ps. 24:3). The earth is the Lord's, for he hath founded it. Who shall rule the earth or ascend into the hill of the Lord?" Who shall abide in thy tabernacle? Who shall dwell in thy holy hill? "We find the character of those who will receive the great blessing and marked distinction of those who attain unto the prize of the high calling (coheirs with Christ in ruling the earth) of God in Christ Jesus. Study well their character. How many of us have it? Here are the in his heart. He that backbiteth uprightly and speaketh the truth in his heart. of that backbiteth not with with his tongue, nor doeth evil to his neighbor, nor taketh up a reproach against his neighbor." Be thoughtful about this, dear Bereans; it is very easy to forget it. Continuing, "In whose eyes a vile person is contemned but he honoreth them that fear the Lord, He that sweareth to his own heart and changeth not. He that putteth not out his money to usury, (or unlawful interest), nor taketh reward against the innocent. He that doeth these things shall never be moved," or will abide in thy tabernacles, or rule the earth with Christ. It is a question of obedience and worthiness. The lamb was found worthy for thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood; and hast made us unto our God kings and priests; and we shall reign on the earth (Rev. 5:9-10).

Who shall ascend into the hill or high place of authority of the Lord? or who shall stand in his holy place?"

Answer, "He that hath clean hands and a pure heart; who hath not lifted up his unto vanity, nor sworn deceitfully." He shall receive the blessing from the Lord, and righteousness from the God of his salvation" (Ps. 24:3-4).

Your sister in Christ,
MRS. C. N. HOWARD.

The Restitution

Issued weekly by

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING COMPANY.

Entered as second-class matter under act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

TERMS.

One year $1:50; six months 75 cents, in advance.

ROBT. G. HUGGINS.....Editor
BUELL W. NUTT.....Manager

BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Burton H. Lane, Harry Pott,
Chas. A. Gosz, Robt. G. Pate,
Buell W. Nutt, D. C. Robison,
W. H. Tomlinson.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

All remittances should be sent by bank draft, post office money order or express money order to The Restitution Publishing Co., 803 Parkwood drive, Cleveland, Ohio.

All communication intended for publication should be sent to the editor, Robt. G. Huggins, 10823 Lee avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

It is necessary to adhere strictly to the rule of not returning unused manuscripts. Writers will please keep copies, or risk the loss.

While the editor exercises a general supervision over the articles appearing in The Restitution, his endorsement does not extend to the interpretation of details nor the exegesis of particular texts in the writings of contributors.

Cleveland, Ohio March 5, 1912

EDITORIAL

There is nothing at all in life except what we put there.

In the age in which we live, the impossible is every day losing ground.

The mind wears the colors of the soul as a valet those of his master.

It is marvelous to think how much cannot be done by those who can do everything.

Postals from Bro. and Sister Frantz, Sister Westfall, and others have been duly noted and appreciated.

Obituaries of Bro. W. L. Skeels and Sister Cornelia Leland are to hand, but unfortunately are too late for this issue. They will appear next week.

I have often seen pious persons very attractive to those who are not so. The life of piety, the unction it breathes, that interior prism radiating outward, exercises a charm inexplicable even to the hearts that feel it.

Before Socrates, it was said, "Let us do good to those who love us, and evil to those who hate." Socrates changed the precept, and said, "Let us do good to our friends, and let us do no evil to our enemies." Only Jesus Christ says, "Bless them that curse you." It belongs to the Saviour of men alone, to train them to supernatural virtues.

Death has again invaded our ranks. Bro. Skeels, a staunch defender of the faith, an active worker in the cause of Christ, and a contributor to The Restitution, has fallen asleep, but he fell at his post of duty. Sister Leland, a sweet Christian worker, is no longer with us to share our burdens and help the gospel along. Happy day when we can say, "O death, where is thy victory?" Lord, hasten it!

FLESH AND BLOOD

I have been studying the Bible and your literature. I would like you to explain, I Cor. 15:50: "Flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God." I understand you teach the literal resurrection of the dead.

Truly yours,
J. H. HINTON

Editor's Reply

In the preceding verses Paul has disposed of the righteous dead—has raised them "in incorruption," "in glory," "in power," etc (vs. 42-44). Prior to death they had "flesh and blood" bodies, but they are raised from the dead in "spiritual" bodies. They are thus fitted by change of nature to inherit the kingdom of God.

The righteous dead disposed of there yet remains a "mystery" to be solved. Some saints are "alive" when Christ comes (I. Thess. 4:17), and they are in "natural" bodies, bearing "the image of the earthy." (I Cor. 15:44, 49). This nature he calls "flesh and blood" in the 50 verse. This form of words is a Hebraism for mortal man, as may be seen from Heb. 2:14: "Forasmuch then as the children are partakers of flesh and blood, he also himself likewise took part of the same." "Flesh and blood" in this text cannot imply carnality, as orthodox divines contend, for Jesus never partook of carnality, but he did take "part" in the mortality of the fallen race. People in this nature "cannot inherit the kingdom of God." The dead, being "raised incorruptible" (v. 52), can inherit it. But the living saints at the epoch of resurrection are "flesh and blood" beings, and as such, are barred from the kingdom. Here Paul anticipates the objection, "Then how can living saints who are only flesh and blood, inherit the kingdom?" "Behold," says he, "I will show you this mystery: we (the living) shall not all sleep (die), but we (the living who survive) shall all be changed (from flesh and blood to the divine nature, I. Pet. 1:4), in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last tromp for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we (the living) shall be changed."

A CHAT WITH CONTRIBUTORS

The Restitution list of contributors steadily grows. They are a strong army of workers, striking effectual blows for the King of Kings, in whose armor they are panoplied, and for whose honor and truth they fight. The power of the press is as great, if not greater, than the ministerial desk; for when you speak you only benefit those who hear you, but when you write, your message goes all over the land, and you benefit hundreds and hundreds of readers everywhere. Were this fact properly appreciated, we might not preach less, but without question we would write more.

The brunt of the work, however, falls on the editor. To do successful work contributors and the editor must understand each other, work harmoniously together and to each other's advantage. Hence this little "chat" with you.

I. When writing for publication, take time to write a legible hand. We get some articles so scribbled that we doubt if the writer himself could read his own production were it presented to him. The article may be good, but we cannot publish it, for printer's refuse to set compositions they cannot read.

II. Write with pen and ink. Many articles that are written with a pencil are so besmirched and erased by transit in the mail, that they cannot be deciphered. Good articles, but useless because they cannot be read.

III. Here comes a fine article, but it is written on both sides of the paper. The printer positively refuses to publish it. Too bad, but it is useless and we have to throw it away.

IV. Here is another—at first glance it looks unreadable, but after an hour's study you "make out" what he says. The writer evidently was nearly out of paper when he began to write, for he has written the words together, written in between the lines, and all over the margin. Presented to the printer he shakes his head and says that his business is to set type, not to solve conundrums with a microscope. Have to throw it away—a good article, too.

A word in conclusion on the subject-matter of compositions. The vital, saving truths of the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, should be so ingrained in our heart that we should not want to write upon anything else. "Foolish and unlearned questions avoid, knowing that they do gender strifes" (II. Tim. 2:23). Don't write upon some "foolish question" when people are dying in ignorance of the gospel message. Flood us with a superabundance of good MSS and pray for God to bless The Restitution, his servants, and his truth.

COMMUNICATIONS

Dear Bro. Huggins:

My article in the Restitution of Jan. 9 has caused me to receive some letters, some asking questions, some censuring me. But the cap sheaf of all is a letter which I here copy verbatim:

Dear Brother: In the January 9 number of The Restitution, I notice your article, "Three Miracles and the Two Adams." By the trend of your Beautiful Vague Expounding I gather that you imagine that the Term Adam which appears in Genesis 2:19 and several other verses viz. 20, 21, 23, etc. etc., is (or was) the Individual name of the first Human physical being on Earth—: would surprise also then that in verse 22 the word woman, also appearing in 23 and in 3:1, 2, 4, 6, etc called in verse 20 Eve you would construe to be the name of the first individual physical female Human Being that walked on the earth, and that putting the two together you (I suppose) (like 99 per cent. of our todays people seem to) would hold that Adam and Eve are the names of the Male and Female mentioned in Genesis 1:27. To contend that "Adam" and "Eve" were the names of the male and female physical human beings that walked on the face of the earth would be to overlook The Real Life and Goodness of The Holy Book and also to make out that God was a Piker, and the bulk of the Bible to be a literal story book. Also to contend (as you seem to in that article of Jan. 9,) that the creation of the first man was a special miracle, would also be quite a dreamy bit of fiction, and to agree would be equal to making more sport of our Creator also making out that Solomon was a bosh thrower. No, brother, the Bible don't teach me that those were greatly more special miracles than is today a series of scientific breeding to produce new and fancy strains of mules, chickens or cattle. It is written, thou shalt not tempt the Lord they God. So you would better have a care how you accuse him of superfluous miracles. Also it would pay you to investigate the Darwin theory, which ought to help any sane thinker to get nearer the plain truth and then probaly enable one to ascertain the way to Salvation. An offering just this much as a guide notice. You can work out the details if you try—if not I would be glad to further help you, tho I am only a farmer.

Comments

I think our writer in accusing me of making God a Piker meant Picker. I will take that term and see if we can find from the Word of God any instance where he did pick or choose. Read Gen. 4:3, 4: "And the Lord had respect unto Abel and to his offering Gen. 7:23: "And every living substance was destroyed. And Noah only remained alive and they that were with him in the ark." Gen 12: "And in thee shall all families of the earth be blessed." Gen. 13:15: "For all the land which thou seest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed for ever" (Gen. 15:18-17:6, 8, 19; 18:17, 18; 22:15, 18; 26:15; 35:11, 12).

Ex. 19:20: "And the Lord called Moses up to the top of Mount Sinai." God picked him as the one to receive the ten commandments. He picked Moses for a leader of the Israelites in their 40 years' journey in the wilderness; picked Aaron for high priest; caused Aaron's rod to blossom. Was that a miracle? Howbeit the Lord God of Israel chose me before all the house of my father to be king over Israel for ever. He hath chosen Solomon my son to sit upon the throne of the kingdom of the Lord over Israel." (I. Chron. 28:4-7.) "The Lord called Samuel, and Samuel grew and the Lord was with him. (I. Sam. 3:4, 19.) And what shall I say more? how the Lord came down in the pillar of the cloud and called Aaron and Miriam. (Num. 12:5).

God also chose the virgin to be the mother of his son. We have given but a very few texts where God has picked special ones for his service, and he performed more miracles than we ever heard of. Christ was also a picker. He picked 12 poor fishermen to work with him in his ministry, and promised them they should sit on 12 thrones judging the 12 tribes of Israel. He performed special miracles also; Cured two blind men; Money in fish's mouth; raised the widow's son; Lazarus; Draught of fishes; 4,000 fed, etc.

Is the Darwinian theory the way to salvation? The Bible says salvation is of the Lord (Jonah 2:9). I, even I am the Lord, and beside me there is no Saviour (Isa. 43:11). David sang, "My soul shall be joyful in the Lord; it shall rejoice in his salvation. The salvation of the righteous is of the Lord. God's salvation is nigh them that fear him. Turn us, O God of our salvation. The Lord hath made known his salvation. The Lord will beautify the meek with salvation."

Christ also has given us some commands whereby we might be saved: Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel. He that believes and is baptized shall be saved; He that endures unto the end shall be saved; He that believeth on the son hath everlasting life; He that hath the son hath life; and he that hath not the son of God hath not life; Whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord shall be saved. And Paul: The gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord; For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ.

We have given but a few texts on salvation, and I cannot find the name of Darwin in them. This is another religious invention, and dear writer, drop it and take the Bible as your counsellor and guide: for there is where you find the words of eternal life. Christ says, "I am the door." I fear you can never find the door if you are led by Darwin.

E. W. KNAPP

Dear Ones of Like Precious Faith:

I want to tell you of the good meetings we have had. Bro. A. W. Darby of Corvallis, Ore., came among us on January 23rd, and remained a week. He preached seven discourses at the school house, and on the last night of his stay with us, we had a Bible reading at our home. There were but few people came out to the meetings, although we did all we could to circulate the appointments, but we had a good visit with Bro. Darby and fireside talks that were instructive; our daughter Leilale being especially interested in them. On Tuesday, January 30th, we had the unspeakable pleasure of seeing her go into the watery grave and emerge to walk in a new life. We praise God that Bro. Darby was permitted to come this way and help to add this dear child to the household of faith.

On Sunday we had the pleasure of meting and entertaining Bro. and Sister P. L. Benson, of Central Point, Ore. We are isolated here and look forward to the weekly visits of The Restitution. Once in a while we see a familiar name that makes our hearts rejoice. We were so pleased to see dear Bro. Wagoner's name; write again brother. In our imagination we see you in the pulpit at the Hillsburg church, giving us one of those good discourses we once enjoyed so much.

It isn't likely we will hear soon again the truths we hold so dear, unless Bro. Darby can make us another visit. We hope he can, for he is a workman that need not be ashamed.

May we all so direct our lives that we may meet our loved ones, and all of like precious faith, in the kingdom. Your sister in hope

AZORAH M. SCROGGS.

I am sorry to learn of the accident that happened to Sister Huggins, but hope she will be all right again.

I have waited until now to report on the work I have been doing in this part of Ohio.

I spoke for the Church in Springfield last Sunday, and was then told that Brother and Sister Howell wanted to see me. They have both been ill for a long time, Sister Fish kindly accompanied me to the hospital where Brother Howell was. I found two of his sons there. He had been improving for a few days, and although extremely weak, he was able to take some food. Hope is entertained for his recovery.

From there I went to his home and found Sister Howell up and looking fairly well, with a good strong pulse, and able to help some with the housework.

I spoke last Sunday near Bro. Alden Overholser's in a school house, where a Union Sunday School is held, on "The Temptation of Christ; or Who and What the Devil is." The Sunday School lesson was on this subject. After speaking an hour, explaining many of the troublesome texts, from an orthodox standpoint, the first man who greeted me (a man who has been a strong opponent of the gospel in the neighborhood) thanked me for helping him out of lots of hard places! Since coming here from Troy I have been speaking in farm homes every evening; mostly, however, in the home of Bro. and Sister Peter Overholser. Have had good attendance regardless of the weather. I have rarely found a place where there is such a seeking after truth. To the brethren and sisters in this community, along with the preaching of Bro. and Sister Robison and Brother Huggins, is largely due the credit of this condition of interest.

Since coming into this region of the state, I have spoken at Brush Creek three Sunday to fair and attentive audiences, notwithstanding the severe weather. On my way there I had at first rather an extraordinary experience, which landed me in Troy among a number of people who had never heard of us before, but who are eager to understand the correct teachings of the Scriptures and who always give me a warm welcome when I can visit them, and are eager to ask questions concerning the Scriptures.

In the one hope.

A. WALLACE MASON

Troy, Ohio.

It is with a broken and contrite spirit I write (Isa. 57:15), for another one of our dear boys, a morning son, bid us good by at 6 o'clock Monday morning, February 5, 1912, and was laid to rest Tuesday at noon, 6th inst, in hope of a soon coming Saviour, his grandfather Moncrief officiating. He was 12 years, 11 months and 21 days old. (Luke 2:42.) In the language of our beloved sister we say:

We regret the cause for the necessity of the call, but what joy it doth give us to know (Rom. 8:28). 'Tis the hand of a father that smites (Heb. 12:3).

Our beloved Brother W. H. Wilson, not knowing of our sadness writes: Brother: In a few day I expect to start south and make Bear my first stopping place." Amen. He asked for directions but I was hindered one week. I Thess. 2:18). And have good reasons now to know that God can and does make the wrath of man to praise him. Amen. (See Exo. 18:11; Psa. 76:10; 139:14-20; I. Pet. 1:7.) Since receiving Bro. Wilson's letter our path has grown brighter. It reminds me of the hungry prophet Elijah (I Ki. 17:2-12-16; Luke 10:33; 17:15).

I feel so thankful for your noble and loving service. God bless you for your able and impartial work.

R. A. HUMPHERYS

REPORT OF THE SISTER'S SOCIETY

The Sister's society of Cleveland wishes to extend greetings to all of "like precious faith," and especially to other Sister's societies.

The Sisters of Cleveland, at their last meeting, decided to send a greeting to other societies and to make a report of their work, and hope the other societies of the Church of God will let us hear of their welfare through The Restitution.

As most all know, the aim of these meetings is to take care of the many little duties incumbent upon those of an organized church body, and to take up lessons from God's word that will be instructive and helpful, and better fit us for workmen in God's vineyard.

Our average attendance for the year has been thirteen; $83.23 has been collected in dues and donations, which has been used in taking care of the sick, and afflicted, and poor. Calls that were urgent could not have been cared for without this little amount which we collected by united effort. There is so little that we can do by ourselves, that I think every sister that has the opportunity of belonging to a Sister's society of the church, should endeavor to aid her fellowsisters by joining them in their work.

We are taking up the book of Exodus and the study of Moses in leading out the children of Israel. In connection with this I will write a few thoughts on Moses as a type of Christ. God did not forget the children of Israel, for he had promised Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, that through them all the families of the earth should be blessed. After the death of the king of Egypt (from whom Moses had fled for his life, on account of slaying the Egyptian taskmaster in defending a brother Hebrew); the children of Israel sighed by reason of their bondage, and their cry came up unto God by reason of the bondage. God heard their groanings, and remembered his covenant with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and God looked upon the children of Israel, and had respect unto them. In the same way God saw the condition of the world later, and he so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son, that whosoever believeth in him might not perish, but have everlasting life. In his infinite wisdom God saw that without a Saviour we would remain aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world; therefore he sent Jesus to deliver mankind from the bondage of sin and death, of which we were captive, even as he sent Moses to deliver the Israelites. Moses had been raised a prince in the house of Pharaoh; he had had every advantage and temporal comfort, and probably would have become king over Egypt, but he left all, put all ambition aside and turned to his brethren to help them. (Read Heb. 11:24-27.) After leaving Egypt, he went to tend sheep for Jethro, his father-in-law, and while there God appeared to him and told him he was to be the deliverer of his brethren. Moses trusted and obeyed God.

Now the son of man, after being baptized, was taken into the wilderness and tempted. Jesus knew he had power to become great and do many things, but he would not yield. He, too, put ambition and honor aside, and gave himself a sacrifice to fulfill God's will, and suffer the death that had already been prophesied. In all things Jesus perfectly obeyed God.

Moses was also a type of Jesus in receiving his power from God to perform miracles to convince the people that there was a living God, the God of the Hebrews, the same as Jesus performed his miracles to convince the Jews that he was God's son, and sent by him. Now we know that both Jesus and Moses were beloved of God, for they strove to please him, and we should take a lesson from them in trying to obey the truth.

Jesus our high priest and mediator, left us a wonderful example. He was flesh and blood; he was tempted in all points like as we are, yet without sin. Is it any wonder the heavenly Father was well pleased with him? We all know that when we have gone through a severe trial, or a great trouble, we appreciate another one's feelings who has had to endure the same; and we know best how to comfort and strengthen them. So it is with Jesus. He realizes our condition, and puts out his hands to us, and says "Come, all ye that are weary and heavy laden, and I will give you rest." All we have to do is to follow in his footsteps, and try to prove as true a type to our Brethren as Moses was a true type of Christ. Yes, Jesus is coming again to deliver us from the captivity of sin. "He will change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his own glorious body, according to the working whereby he is able even to subdue all things unto himself." "And as we have borne the image of the earthly, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly." When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall we also appear with him in glory. If by faith we are permitted to enter the kingdom, what a glorious meeting that will be! Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Moses, and all the worthy brethren that by faith have gained an inheritance incorruptible, undefiled, that fadeth not away, and Jesus the head—to meet all these! God grant that we may become types of Jesus before the world, that this inheritance may be ours.

HATTIE SANFORD,
Assistant Secretary

"YE SHALL LIVE ALSO"

Continued from Last Issue

James C. Thompson

Praise God, Jesus made no failure. If he had, we would still be without a Saviour. Jesus knew for what purpose he came into the world. He knew that he was the only begotten son of God, and that whosoever believed on him would not perish, but have everlasting life. Thank God, he did not give in to any of his temptations. He was tried in all points, like as we are, yet without sin. He had no time to consult his own will; he was always on the alert to do the will of the Father and in that way he overcame the flesh. He was obedient even unto death. But he rose again, and he now lives, and is coming again to give eternal life to those who obey him. "Because I live, ye shall live also." This has been called the Glorious Announcement; it is indeed a glorious announcement to all those who lovingly obey him. To obey him means to crucify the flesh with its desires, which will cause suffering, but we read in John 16:33. "Be of good cheer, I have overcome the world. In the world ye shall have tribulations." While these words were addressed directly to the early disciples, they have been recorded for our benefit; all the saints can take comfort in them. All will have tribulation to some extent. In II. Tim. 3:12 we read, "Yea, and all that live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution." Persecutions come to all in Christ Jesus: come at times when not expected, come sometimes from those whom we have supposed friendly. "It is a faithful saying. For if we be dead with him we shall also live with him: if we suffer we shall at-

to reign with him." But following we read, "If we deny him, he will also deny us." We must not deny him; if we do he will deny us, and we will not live, "because he lives." He will judge us by his words. The Bible is a book which either approves or condemns. There is much in the Bible which will be of good cheer to us if we lovingly obey him. There is much in the Scriptures to comfort us in all our walks of life, whether it be in time of rejoicing or times of mourning, in the hours of the busy day or in the quiet of the evening. There is much to comfort the babes in Christ as well as those whose hands have become feeble and whose eyes have become dim, and have grown old in his cause. Yes, the Bible is full of words of comfort and good cheer to those who are in Christ Jesus.

Jesus said, "I have overcome the world, and that is what we are expected to do: Overcome the desires of the flesh and the pride of life. Paul said that he died daily (I. Cor. 15, 31). What did he mean by dieing daily? He crucified the flesh daily, in other words, he did God's will in preference to his own. By doing this he had to sacrifice the desires of the flesh. "No good thing dwelleth in the flesh" (Acts 20: 24). With the man of God there is a perpetual warfare going on. We have a mind which can control our actions, and if the commandments of God dwell in our minds, or we keep in remembrance the things that we have heard, we can control or govern the body, and keep it in subjection. God is indeed merciful to all who love him. But we cannot go on from day to day giving way to the flesh and continue in his love. The desires of the flesh. If we permit them to govern us, will crush out all love for God. He is a Father only to them that love him. How careful we should be to abide in his love. The spirit in its message to the church at Ephesus declared that they had good works, but they had let slip something of vital importance—they had lost their "first love." So we must watch the heart, for out of it are the issues of life. There are words of comfort in the spirit's message to the church at Ephesus. He said, "To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life which is in the midst of the paradise of God." And to the overcomers in the church at Pergamos he said, "To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the hidden manna, and I will give him a white stone, and, in the stone a new name written, which no man knoweth saying he that receiveth it." And to the overcomers in the church at Thyatira it is written, "He that overcometh and keepeth my works unto the end, to him will I give power over the nations. And I will give him the morning star." And to the overcomers in the church at Sardis it is written, "He that overcometh, the same shall be clothed in white raiment, and I will not blot out his name out of the book of life, but I will confess his name before my Father and before his angels." These promises have reference to Jesus Christ, the Kingdom of God, and eternal life. We can see from the foregoing what is in store for the overcomer. It is our lot now to live a life of self-denial and perhaps persecution, but it will pay in the end. The cross comes before the crown. Brothers and sisters, if we are carrying the cross now the end will be glorious. There is a glorious future for the overcomer. We can see by the eye of faith a new country, an heavenly country, wherein dwelleth righteousness. There will be no sorrow: all will be joy, happiness, and peace. So let us abide in his love by keeping fresh in our minds the beloved Jesus, what he has done for us, what he has commanded us to do, and all will be well.

Salem, O.

AN OPEN LETTER

J. O. Welty

S. L. Abel, Holton, Kansas:

Dear Sir:—"Our Tax Shortage" and your kind letter at hand today. In it appears a pungent, seathing "round-up" of a Denver, Colorado real estate agent who had sold a building lot to an Advent Christian preacher (almost a helpless cripple), and after he and wife had tented on the lot, for nearly two years, and paid for it (but fifteen dollars, I believe), they found this "sawdust man" had neither "agency right" nor "spiderweb title" to it, nor had he money or a disposition to refund said payments; payments earned in dribs, by the scarred hands and sore feet of said "Jericho companions," whose wounds were mollified by each others tears, heartache, and hunger. He must now, in the decline of life, and at the beginning of this cold winter, move his tent onto another lot, and thus begin "all over." See this degenerate agent, godless, heartless, inhuman, home wrecker. If he has done this in the day light of Denver, perhaps he can now embezzle the pennies on his own dead mother's eyes, before her cheeks are cold, and barter away her heavenly mansions, (were it possible) before her burial. Friend Able, please let me sermonize a little, not as a preacher, but as an open-hearted "farm carpenter." We most sincerely believe that we are now living in the close of this "gospel dispensation." We also believe we have abundance evidence to prove it.

Jesus our elder brother said that in the last day the devil, (sawdust agents, etc.,) would be tremendously busy, because his time is very short (Rev. 12:12; Heb. 2: 14). By signs we can also know almost to a definite mathematical certainty, how near we are to the end of time (I. Thess. 5:1 to 6). Also please read chapters 24 and 25 of Matthew, and 21st of Luke. Now friend Abel, don't flinch. Investigate! Years ago you know Mrs. Ellen Lease, of Kansas, in her state lectures counselled us farmers to raise "more truck, corn, and hogs, and less social, financial, and political hades." Let us common people stop opening our mouths wide to unreservedly swallow all our preachers now preach—genuine elders, pardon me. Let us stop it I say. Stop it and read, absorb and digest the ethics of our good old family Bible. It will judge us all at the last day. We are required to know and live its ethics, that we may stand approved, at the last day. Then let us daily and hourly study it and give less time to picture defilement, current gossip, fiction, fanaticism and folly; burn or bar from our pockets and reading tables all microbe infested, consumptive tainted, gold brick allurements, whose acids corrode and denaturize pure hearts of steel. Label them "poison." Can we reform? the prophets of the good Old Book, say we can, but (foreknowing) affirm we will not; that with head, heart, hands and feet, we will have a good time with our earnings and gettings. We will wildly stampeed down the broad way for pomp, pageantry, ferment, popularity or personal pleasure, as in the days of Noah and Lot (Luke 17:24 to 30). See the late family "earthquakes!" One twelfth of all our marriages now end in divorce, often with innocent, helpless, heartbroken children sold, given away, or abandoned as worthless chattels. With some the divorce route is too slow, and to the horror of society, a bullet, knife, or poison, often sunders the sacred tie.

Paul, in his last day tokens, names twenty of its sins; his ninth one is, "lack of natural affection." Do we see it? His last three are headly, (self-willed); highminded; lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God" (II Tim 3:1 to 5). See the man depraved city districts, so overloaded with arson, rapine, and murder as to be too dangerous to enter or leave after nightfall. Note the murder and suicide lists annually in our civilized and Christianized United States, aggregating nearly the half of her standing army, and yet we boast to sister nations of earth, how rich, how good, how pious we are! At the international Hague Congress we invite them all to join us in beating our swords into plowshears, and our spears into pruninghooks (Isa. 2: 3 to 5), and with us arbitrate and shun war. The Carnegie's four million dollar "Hague Court Room Gift" and its six million endowment, most strongly confirms it, I suppose? Every nation goes there, shakes hands, smiles, compliments each other, take tea together, then return home and tax us to the limit for building dreadnoughts and their war accessories—just as our elder brother foretold, we would do, and that this (Hague) peace and safety cry was one of the strong signs of his very near coming. How near? Hear it! "As near as a woman's pangs of birth to that of her mother" (I. Thess. 5:2); "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as in heaven." This prayer may possibly be answered this year. Are we all as ready as his apostle John was to exclaim, "Amen: even so, come Lord Jesus? O our Prince of Peace—Great High Priest—Caption of our salvation—Morning Star—Resurrection and Life—Come! Come, Our President, Protector, Governor, King!

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON NOTES MARCH 5, 1911

The Paralytic Forgiven and Healed (Mark 2:1-12)

Golden Text: Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits; who forgives all thy iniquities, who healeth all thy diseases (Psalm 103:2-3).

The time of this lesson was probably May or June, A. D. 28, on the return of Jesus from the circuit through Galilee described in our last lesson. The place is at Capernaum in a private house. John the Baptist was at this time in prison in Castle Machaerus east of the Dead Sea. At the close of our last lesson Jesus was obliged to remain in the desert place on account of the multitudes of sick and infirm that besought him on every hand; as our text read "They came to him from every quarter."

Today we find him on his return from his preaching tour into Capernaum, "after some days," which apparently shows that the tour was not very long, as it is measured in days, and not weeks. "He was in the house," marginal reading, "at home." This brings up the truth that Jesus had no home of his own (Matt. 8:20, but he blessed by his presence the homes of some of his beloved disciples, as for instance the home of Peter at Capernaum, the home of Lazarus and Mary, in Bethany. Jesus had the faculty of making himself welcome in the homes of those he visited.

The better houses about Christ's time were built of well dressed stones; the poorer ones of rubble. The walls were 18 to 24 inches thick. Mud was usually used as mortar. The houses were usually one story with a flat roof without side stairs. During the summer heat, the family always slept there. The roofs were made of branches of trees, canes, palm leaves, etc., covered with a thick stratum of earth—Dr. Davis. "As soon as it was noised that he was in the house, straightway many were gathered together". Luke tells us that these crowds came from every village of Galilee, from Judea and even Jerusalem, and t... the interest was so great that Pharisees and doctors of the law were sitting by," and he preached the word unto them." This is a timely lesson for us that we should seize every opportunity to advance the gospel of salvation. "And they came unto him, bringing one sick of palsy." The paralytic had been sick a long time, and had evidently abandoned hope of ever being cured by human aid. We are not told how this man persuaded the four to help him to the place where Jesus was, but upon their arrival they found every means of entrance blocked, but their determination to succeed soon found a way, so that "when they could not come nigh unto him in the press, they uncovered the roof," by breaking a hole through it. This was a common method used among the plain peasants to store their grain, straw, and other articles, and it is still practiced in that country.

"When Jesus saw their faith," the faith of the sick man and of his helpers. Faith is a very necessary condition of salvation, and is at the present time becoming more clearly recognized as a condition of natural healing. Faith overcame in the paralytic's way. Faith led him to take up what seemed an impossible duty. Faith showed the condition of his heart and mind, and it eventually won for him a cure. "He said unto the sick of the palsy, Son be of good cheer, thy sins are forgiven thee." The use of the word "son" seems to imply that the paralytic was a young man, and declares Jesus love toward him. These sins were forgiven through the name of Jesus.

Our sins are likewise forgiven through the same name, but we must repent and be baptized in order to get into the name of Jesus, which is the only name under heaven by which man can obtain remission of sins. Forgiveness in this case carried with it restoration to health and the right to live among his fellow beings and, in fact, worked a transformation from his previous state of renewed condition. Forgiveness works the same result in us. We are transformed from the sinful condition to the righteous plane, and it then remains our duty to continue in well doing unto the end. "But there were certain scribes sitting there and reasoning in their hearts. Why doth this man thus speak blasphemies? Who can forgive sins but God alone?" Jesus' answer to them was overwhelming in that it emphasized their weakness in reasoning by ... prince of ... hands. Luke ... hated him." ... this the same as to kill? Jesus says so. By what one of the ten commandments were they condemned as murderers? (Acts 3:14). By none. By what command, then? Matt. 5:22. "But I say unto you that whosoever is angry at his brother without a cause." Would this condemn them? Certainly. Without the table of stone? Looks to me so?

6. Since the sixth commandment convinced these Jews of sin on Pentecost, does this not prove that the decalogue was not abolished at the cross?

Answer—By what one of the ten were they condemned as murderers? (Acts 3:13-15). The questioner says the sixth. Let us see; did they, with their own hands, kill Jesus? No. What then, and how did they do it? Jno. 18:31: "The Jews therefore said unto him, it is not lawful for us to put any man to death." How were they "murderers," as Peter calls them?" By what command? (John 15:25.) "But this cometh to pass that the word might be fulfilled, they hated me without a cause." Now (John 3:15). "Whosoever hateth his brother is a murderer." Where in the ten does it declare this? Not there, but in Matt. 5:22, we have it in the new covenant.

7. Since all men everywhere are commanded to repent, and Jews and Gentiles are under sin, are they not amenable to God's law ever since creation? (Acts 17:32; Rom. 1:20; 2:9; 3:9-19; Gen. 4:7; 2 ePt 2:5, and Ecclesiasticus).

Answer—All men are amenable to God's law. (John 15:10). "If ye keep my commandments ye shall abide in my love, even as I have kept my Father's commandments and abide in his love." What were the Father's command ments? The ten, says my questioner? Surely not. Let me ask you, dear friend, what are the commandments Jesus is speaking about? "If ye keep my commandments." Are these the ten? You know they are not. What are they then? Why, he tells us. (Matt. 7: 24: "Whosoever heareth these sayings of mine and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man that buildeth his house on a rock." The law was given by Moses, but grace and truth came by Jesus Christ." What is "the truth" that came by Jesus? (John 8:31, 32. Then said Jesus to those Jews that believed on him: "If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed, and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." When did any of the commandments make you free?

8. Can the same instrument (the gospel) both condemn and justify, and both slay and make alive, and both cause the disease (sin) and cure it?

Answer—To answer this question we call attention to II Cor. 2:12-16. Notice, reader, this Scripture." Furthermore, when I come to Troas to preach Christ's gospel and a door was opened unto me of the Lord. For we are unto God a sweet Savior of Christ. In them that are saved and in them that perish. To the one we are a savior of death unto death, and to the other the savior of life unto life." So I ask the brethren to judge as to the answer to this question.

9. If the church is under "a new higher law of Christ," can you show us what the new commands are, not found in substance in the old book, and where Christ ever claimed to be above His Father? (John 14:28).

Answer—Christ never claimed to be above his Father. His Father said in Deut. 18:18, as the apostle ePter points out in Acts 3:22, 23: "For Moses truly said unto the fathers, a prophet shall the Lord God raise up unto you, of your brethren, like unto me, him shall ye hear in all things whatsoever he shall say unto you." He never claimed that what he said was from God, His sayings surely were as Moses spake the old covenant as its mediator, so Jesus as the mediator of the new covenant spoke the sermon on the mount to them as well as to us. Shall we hear him? Not if we are still under the ten, as you would have us. In that case we must still take Moses for our mediator.

10. If this law of Christ was given before the cross, were there two lists of penalties for the offenses running parallel before the cross?

Answer—No. It was not in effect until the cross, and penalties do not count until in effect.

11. If the "law of Christ" is a written law; as the New Testament was written 26 to 57 years after the cross, what law covered this interregnum?

Answer—The law of Christ covers all time since it went into effect.

12. If no law, then was sin possible during that period?

13. Since Jesus died for the law he was born under, who died since the cross for the New Testament law? (Gal. 4:4,5; Heb. 9:15).

Answer—II Cor. 5:18, 19: "And all things are of God, who hath reconciled us to himself by Jesus Christ, and hath given to us the ministry of reconciliation, to-wit, God was in Christ reconciling the world unto himself, not imputing their trespasses unto them and hath committed unto us the word of reconciliation." So I understand that if this law you make so light of must have had a mercy seat somewhere, because sin was possible at any time. But God does not always impute sin. As it had to be imputed in the ten, there was no way to get out of its penalty. The new Testament or Covenant was established upon promise of life, and because he died for the old, Gal. 3:13: Christ had redeemed us from the curse of the law, being made a curse for us." So instead of anyone having to die for the new we have to kill ourselves daily by putting off the old man, and making a living sacrifice, as the Apostle Paul shows so plainly in II Cor. 4:11: "For we which live are always delivered unto death for Jesus sake, that the life also of Jesus might be made manifest in our mortal flesh."

14. Since no sacrifice or atonement has been made by Christ for any law but the old given Israel, does not a new law since the cross doom all under it to hopeless ruin if they break one precept? (See James 2:9-12; 1 Kings 8:9; I John 2:4,5).

Answer—The new law does not require the physical death of any victim. A sacrifice has to be made daily of ourselves. Ro. 12:1. "I beseech you, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice." Jas. 2: 12,13. "So speak and so do as they that shall be judged by the law of liberty." "For he shall have judgment without mercy that hath shown no mercy." Does the ten give us any such liberty? If so, where?

15. If the law of Christ has supplanted God's law, and the Christian is under this new law, does he not need a mediator, advocate and high priest between him and Christ?

Answer—Yes, he needs a mediator, and has one; also a priest and has one, but it is between us and God, we need the high priest. John 7:16. "Jesus answered and said, my doctrine is not mine but his that sent me." John 8:28: "Then said Jesus to them, When then ye have lifted up the son of man, then ye shall know that I am he and that I do nothing of myself but as the Father hath taught me I speak these things." So this new law is the law of God, only given by the hand of a different mediator than Moses: as the apostle Paul says in I. Tim. 2:5: "For there is one God and one mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus." From this I conclude that Jesus is the mediator of the new covenant.

16. If only the law of Christ is now in force, should we not preach repentance toward Christ to the Church instead of repentance toward God to the world as Paul preached? (Acts 20:21).

17. Since the abrogation of God's law abrogates the necessity of an intermediary between man and God, have such teachers any "advocate with the Father?" (1 John 2:1; Heb. 10:21; Tim. 2:5).

Answer. Sixteen is answered in fifteen, God gave the new law through Christ as the mediator, John 12:49: "For I have not spoken of myself but the Father which sent me (mediator) he gave me a command what I should say, and what I should speak." John 14: 24: "He that loveth me not, keepeth not my sayings, and the word that ye hear is not mine but the Father's that sent me." God has not abrogated his law. The law and prophets were until John. Gal. 3:19: "It was added because of transgressions, until the seed should come. But before faith came, we were kept under the law, shut up unto the faith which afterward should be revealed. Wherefore after faith is come we are no longer under a schoolmaster." Therefore the law has accomplished its purpose, and the new covenant comes along to reconcile us to God, for the law made nothing perfect, but the bringing in of a better hope did, by which we draw nigh unto God.

TWENTY-FOUR QUESTIONS ON THE LAW ANSWERED No. 1.

O. J. Allard

Some one has sent me a copy of a paper which contains twenty-four questions, and the writer concludes by saying no man can answer them according to the Bible without either establishing the whole ten commandments as the law of God for the church as well as the world, and unless he can do that, he establishes his own condemnation. Let me say I understand the ten are the law of God, but not all of the laws that God has, as the writer implies. I will take up each question separately and give my proof and let the reader judge where the truth lies.

1. If the ten commandment law was only for Israel, what law brought condemnation on the world from Adam to Moses?

Answer. "Until the law sin was in the world, but sin is not imputed where there is no law, nevertheless." What? "Death reigned" (Rom. 5:13,14). Here is the law that brought condemnation. Listen: (Gen. 2:16,17), "And the Lord commanded the man, saying Of every tree of the garden thou mayest freely eat, but of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it; for in the day thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." Was this God's law? Yes: So Rom. 5:14 says: "Nevertheless death reigned even over them that had [not] sinned after the...similitude of Adam's transgression." No other law mentioned.

2. If this law was abolished at the cross, to what law is the Jew amenable since the cross?

Answer. He is amenable to the law of the new covenant (Hub. 8:10): For this is the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel: I will put my laws into their minds." "Well," says one. "What law is here referred to as my law? We shall see.

3. If this code of law is no longer obligatory, what law now convicts gentiles of sin?

Answer. The same code that convicts the Jews of sin, convicts the gentiles (Heb. 12:18): "For ye are not come unto the Mount that might be touched;" verse 22. "But ye are come unto Mount Sion, to the general assembly and church of the first born, and to Jesus the mediator of the new covenant." The new covenant convicts of sin.

4. Since Paul establishes these two principles that "the strength of sin is in the law" and that "sin is not imputed where there is no law," why should "the gospel of the grace of God," or "repentance of sin," or "baptism for remission of sins," be preached to either Jews or Gentiles since the cross, if they have no law? (Rom. 4-15)?

Answer—They both have a law, Jno. 14:23: "Jesus answered and said unto him, If a man love me he will keep my words." John 2:3,4." "And hereby we do know that we know him (Jesus) if we keep his commandments." Here is the law both Jews and Gentiles have.

5. Was it because of Adam's sin, or because of their own sins that the Jews on Pentecost were commanded to repent and be baptized? (See Acts 2:23-39; 3:19).

Answer—Because of their own sins. They were baptized unto the remission of sin, same as the men were down at Ephesus. Luke 16:16. "The law and the prophets were until John." Acts 19:23. "He said unto them, have ye received the holy spirit since ye believed? And they said unto him, We have not so much as heard whether there be any holy spirit." Verse 3. and he said unto them, Unto what, then, were ye baptized, and they said, Unto John's baptism." Sins were set aside; they were not forgiven yet, as verses 4 and 5 show. Acts 3:19 show when the sins were to be blotted out.

There are too many people trying to make the Bible popular by using it as a club.

(To be Continued Next Week)

PASTOR WANTED

A church in Ohio desires to obtain a pastor who can enter upon his duties about the first of April. Any one who is sound in the faith, and is open to this call may address the Editor of The Restitution, 10623 Lee Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

We, whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones.

This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of their paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

Geo. Dowle	.50
Mrs. H. G. Pier	1.00
Mrs. H. C. Hammond	2.40

THE BIBLE: ITS PRINCIPLES AND TEXTS

As indicated by the title this book is divided into three sections. The first consists of a remarkable disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "principles" in formulated propositions, and the third expounds in a clear, impressive and homelitic manner particular "Texts." The knotty and perplexing texts of the Bible are united and solved satisfactorily to the most fastidious and critical. More than one hundred and fifteen subjects of intense interest to every Bible student are formally discussed. Both simple and scholarly—the child is fascinated and taught; the scholar is entertained and instructed. Bible lovers, here is a feast for you. Throw open the door of your home; let The Bible—its Principles and its Texts come in and bless you and your family. 309 pages, 5x7 1-2 inches, durably and handsomely bound in whole cloth, with title embossed on back in gold. One copy, $1.10, two copies or more $1.00 each. R. G. Huggins, 10623 Lee Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

TWO TRACTS By J. L. WINCE

"Salvation" and "Resurrection" two tracts by J. L. Wince, can not fail to arouse the interest of every believer. They deal with vital questions in a most convincing manner. The price is 10c each, 12 for $1.00. For sale by S. Roxanna Wince, Pierceton, Ind.

DID SAMUEL'S SOUL APPEAR?

For the want of a better proof that a personality outlives the body, we are frequently informed that the disembodied soul of the prophet Samuel appeared to King Saul after the death of Samuel's body, and conversed with him.

Pungent Statements.—The grinding process of time is at work everywhere, blotting out and destroying all the ways of man. The busy pompous fools of the day may laugh and jeer at the truth, and blaspheme the God of heaven and earth; but they will soon be as though they had not been; their voices will soon be heard no more; their very names will be forgotten and they shall be classed away as the vision of the night.

Save Money and Keep in Style by Reading McCall's Magazine and Using McCall Patterns

McCall's Magazine will help you save money. Subscribe at a moderate expense by keeping you posted on the best fashions in clothes and how to make them. Also valuable information on all home and personal matters. Only 50c a year, including a free pattern. Subscribe today or send for free sample copy.

McCall's Magazine will enable you to make in your own home, with your own hands, clothing for your self and children which will be perfect in style and fit. Price—patterns from 15 cents. Send for free Pattern Catalogue.

We Will Give You Free Presents for getting subscriptions among your friends. Send for free Premium Catalogue and Club Prize Offer.

THE McCALL COMPANY, 238 to 248 West 37th St., NEW YORK

"Signs of Character or How to Read Character at Sight"

and

"HealthThrough Natures Laws"

Two books by Dr. A. Wallace Mason. One is a study of character and how we may read it by the face and head. Brother Mason has made a very close study of this subject for years, and the information given in this book will prove interesting and instructive. Price 25c; 72 Pages.

The other is a work which tells how to gain and keep health as its title says, "through nature's laws." Every family should have a copy.

Address Bro. Mason, care Restitution.

40 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS DESIGNS COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents.

Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the

Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York

Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

WANTED!

Subscription Solicitors

We will pay an equal salary to men and women in all parts of the country, to act as agents for The Restitution. This salary will be based on your ability to take subscriptions, take care of renewals, and make collections, and will be paid weekly. You can devote all or part of your time, and can make a special offer to prospective subscribers, which we will tell you about if you are interested. We will have some announcements to make in the near future that will also help you.

If you want to work, sit down NOW and write for full information.

R. W. NUTT, Manager.

SUBSCRIBE FOR

Words of Life

the publication of the Conditional Immortality Mission of Great Britain, advocating Life and Advent truths.

Terms: 1 copy 37c per annum, 12 copies to one address 25c per copy per annum.

Sample copy on application to

WILLIAM G. ROTHE

1301 Park Pl. Brooklyn, N. Y.

SHOW IT WITH A

SHOWS POST CARDS PHOTOGRAPHS, PICTURES, CLIPPINGS OR ANYTHING NOT TRANSPARENT IN ORIGINAL BRILLIANT COLORS. FITTED FOR ELECTRICITY, GAS OR ACETYLENE.

YOU will get genuine pleasure from one hour or two spent with the "Mirroscope" these long winter evenings. Pictures, Photos, Post Cards, Etc. are shown in exact reproduction same as with a high priced Stereopticon, can be used in any home and operated with Electricity, Gas or Acetylene. Prices $2.50, $5.00, $7.50, $10.00, $15.00, $20.00, according to size. Sent anywhere in the U. S. Send for one today.

HOME ILLUMINATED PICTURE CO.

111 SCHOFIELD BUILDING CLEVELAND, OHIO

Less than Half a Cent a Day

The Restitution costs a Dollar and a Half a year, that's less than half A Cent a day or three cents a copy. You can't afford to be without it. If you are a subscriber get some one else to subscribe.

Help to Get Them on the List

Sample Copies of The Restitution

May be obtained for a stamp. Send for one.

Books and Tracts

By W. H. WILSON

A BIBLE STUDY OF HADES.....15c each, or 5 for 50c.
(As compared with our modern ideas).
A critical study of Hell, showing the difference in the word in the past and in the present time.

STUDENTS TEXT BOOK 50c
How to study the Bible and rightly understand God's Word. Cloth bound, 200 Pages

PINE WOODS BIBLE CLASS.....$1.25
Studies carried on between a class and its teacher. Cloth bound, 480 Pages.

CUNNINGLY DEVISED FABLES, 28 Pages.....10c

WHERE WILL YOU SPEND ETERNITY, 4 Pages, ... 25c per hundred

ARE YOU IN NEED OF MONEY, 4 Pages, 25c per hundred.

WILL IT PAY TO BECOME A CHRISTIAN?.....25c
By Jas. W. Wilson, a neat Cloth book of 96 Pages which every one should read.

Bro. Wilson's Latest Book

Is Ready for Distribution

THE DESTINY OF RUSSIA AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES
96 Pages. Bound in Cloth, 25c.

W. H. WILSON, 625 North Willow Ave.

AUSTIN STA., CHICAGO, ILL.

Census Blank

of

MEMBERSHIP CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA

Name .....

Address .....
Street Town State

By whom Immersed ..... Date .....

Fill out the above and send to "The Census Editor," The Restitution, 803 Parkwood Drive, Cleveland, O.

"A LETTER TO A FRIEND"

This tract needs no introduction further than to say that it is one of the most convincing Gospel sermons ever written. Originally written as a letter to a friend by Sister C. C. Woodruff it was published and has sold extensively in tract form. In its present edition it is a 32 page tract, the price is

10c each; 12 for $1.00

There is no better way of spreading the Gospel than handing out one of these tracts wherever you have the opportunity.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.

803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co.

WHOLESALE OPTICIANS

We make a specialty of High Grade Prescription Work, and carry a full line of all kinds of Optical goods. All orders filled same day as received.

"S. K. N." SERVICE

Means prompt returns, careful work, moderate prices. Goods shipped to all parts of the country.

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co. 248 SCHOFIELD BUILDING CLEVELAND, OHIO

The Restitution Publications

Send for all of the following books and tracts to

W. S. TOMLINSON, 10825 Orville Ave. N.E., Cleveland

A LETTER TO A FRIEND, 32 Pages 10c each, 12 for $1.00
FUTURE PROBATION, 159 Pages, 10c each, 12 for $1.00

The following tracts by M. Joblin:

THE KINGDOM OF GOD.
OLD MOTHER EARTH TO BE BORN AGAIN.
STRANGERS FROM THE COVENANT OF PROMISE.
VAIN WORSHIP.
NO IMMORTALITY OUT OF CHRIST.
GOD'S LOVE AND SOLICITUDE FOR MANKIND.
WHAT SHALL WE DO TO BE SAVED?
THE FOOLISHNESS OF PREACHING.
SALVATION, WHAT IS IT?

All the above are 16 page tracts, 100 for $1.00 any assortment.

THE PATERNITY OF JESUS, by M. Joblin, 128 Pages, each 10c. A work that proves Jesus was the son of God and not the natural son of Joseph.

THE SCRIPTURE SEARCHERS ASSISTANT, by M. Joblin, each 60c. A valuable aid to the study of the Scriptures, contains 400 references.

FOUR PAGE TRACTS:

Can You Believe? 10 for 10c, 50 for 25c.

State of Man in Death, 10 for 10c, 50 for 25c, 100 for 40c.

Life and Death, 10 for 10c, 50 for 25c, 100 for 40c.

Age to Come Not a Heresy, 10 for 10c, 50 for 25c, 100 for 40c.

TWO PAGE TRACTS

Bible Pearls—Suitable for wide distribution. 1. The Gospel. 2. Coming and Kingdom of Christ by 50,000 Baptists in 1860. 3. Immateriality. 4. Kingdom of God. 5. Nature of man and Thoughts for Thinkers. 6. Two Advents. 7. What is Religion? 8. Restitution Age. 9. Destiny of the Wicked. 10. Baptism. Ten copies for 5 cents, or assorted packages of 100 for 20 cents.

SPECIAL OFFER!

IN ORDER to increase the circulation of The Restitution, the following special offer is made:

One new subscriber for 1 year, choice of:

W. H. Wilson's "Student's Text Book," regular price.....50c
Or 5 Copies of "Cunningly Devised Fables," reg. price 50c
Or 5 Copies of "Bible Study of Hades," reg. price 50c

For Two New Subscribers

One Copy "Pine Woods Bible Class," 480 pages, reg. price, $1.25
Or "The Bible, Its Principles and Texts," 309 pages, reg. price
Or One Hundred of Bro. Joblin's Tracts, regular price $1.00

Here is a chance to get some of the books you all should own. By making special arrangements with the authors we are able to offer them to you without the payment of a cent on your part, just a few minutes effort. We cannot afford to continue this offer long, so take advantage of it at once, get some new subscribers today.

THE RESTITUTION, 803 Parkwood Drive

"Future Probation,

is that Awaiting any of the Unrighteous?"

Here is a work by Wm. Glenn Monsrieff that every one should read. It is one of the best things on the subject ever written and will appeal to every student of the word. It is a book of 150 pages, made to sell at 25c. We have a limited number left which we will sell at the special price of

10c each; 12 for $1.00

Send for some at once.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.

803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

Oregon Bible College
Oregon, Illinois

The Restitution
IS THE OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA.

The Restitution.

Founded in A. D. 1852

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The Inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Lk. 19:12-15), who will be King of Kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-53); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17), and belief in, the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Lk. 13:3), and obedience by baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1: 5-11); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ." (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31).

ROBT. C. HUGGINS, Editor.

—Terms of— Subscription
ONE YEAR, $1.50;
SIX MONTHS 75 CTS. IN ADVANCE

VOL. 60 CLEVELAND, OHIO. MARCH 12, 1912 No. 60

GOD'S PEOPLE ARE FREE

Sound the loud timbrell o'er Egypt's dark sea!
Jehovah has triumphed—his people are free.
Sing—for the pride of the tyrant is broken,
His chariot, his horsemen, all splendid and brave—
How vain was their boast, for the Lord hath but spoken,
And chariots and horsemen are sunk in the wave.
Sound the loud timbrel o'er Egypt's dark sea;
Jehovah has triumphed—his people are free.

Praise to the conqueror, praise to the Lord!
His word was our arrow, his breath was our sword.
Who shall return to tell Egypt the story
Of those she sent forth in the hour of her pride?
For the Lord hath looked out from his pillar of glory,
And all her brave thousands are dashed in the tide.
Sound the loud timbrel o'er Egypt's dark sea;
Jehovah has triumphed—his people are free.

—Thos. Moore, selected by Bro. Patterson.

TWENTY-FOUR QUESTIONS ON THE LAW ANSWERED No. 2

O. J. Allard

18. Since there is only one law given (James 4:12) has God ever had that one standard by which to judge mankind (Rom. 2:12-16; 3:19, 31).

Answer. God has only one standard by which he will judge mankind. John 12:48: "He that rejecteth me, and receiveth not my words, hath one that judgeth him: the word that I have spoken, the same shall judge him in the last day." What did he speak? The ten commands of Moses? He did. Matt. 5:43, 44, 45: "Ye have heard it hath been said, thou shalt love thy neighbor, and hate thine enemy, but I say unto you, love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, pray for them that despitefully use you and persecute you." What for? "That ye may be the children of your father which is in heaven." No, friend, whoever you are, there is but one standard for judgment, and here it is for us. No need for Moses to judge us, is there?

19. By what law did Paul have a knowledge of sin A. D. 60? (Rom. 7:7-12-14-16-22).

20. By what law did James "convince transgressors," A. D. 60? (See James 2:8-13).

Answer. I think there would be no question as to the law Paul here refers to (verse 22). Would it be doing violence to say here that he referred to the law written in our hearts? Let's see: II. Cor. 3:3, 6: "For as much as ye are manifestly declared to be the epistle of Christ, ministered by us, written not with ink, but with the spirit of the living God, not on tables of stone, but in tables of the heart." Might not this be the law after the inward man? John 6:63: "It is the spirit that quickeneth the flesh profiteth nothing: the words that I speak unto you, they are spirit and they are life." Would it be carrying it too far to say it refers to the sermon on the Mount? I do not think so. James convinced transgressors by the royal law—the law that governs the royal priesthood; the one that is the support of the whole structure; the substance that cast the shadow. Where in the ten was the law, "Love thy neighbor as thyself?" Where will we find it? In the "royal law" of course. Listen now: Matt. 5:43-44: "It hath been said of them of old time, Thou shalt love thy neighbor and hate thine enemy; but I say into you, love your enemies."

21. By what law did John define sin, and distinguish between the "children of God" and children of the devil," A. D. 90? By the law under the mercy-seat that condemned murder. (See I. John 2:11; 3:4-10).

Answer.—By the royal law, of course, as shown by verse 15. In your quotation from John 3: "Whosoever hateth his brother is a murderer." Where do you find that in the law under the mercy-seat in the old order of divine services? It is not there: it is in the substance that cast that shadow of which Jesus is the mercy seat, and the law of which he is the mediator and who gave it in his sermon on the mount, found in Matt. 5:21-22: "Ye have heard that it was said of them of old time, Thou shalt not kill; but I say unto you, That whosoever is angry with his brother without cause," etc.

22. Who will be translated at Jesus' coming? Those who "keep the commandments of God, and have the faith of Jesus" (Rev. 14:12-20; Isa. 56:1-9; 58:13-14).

Answer.—Yes, those who keep the commandments of God. John 14:23: "And the words that ye hear are not mine, but the Father's that sent me." Also John 14:15: "If ye love me keep my commandments." Also John 8:28: "But as my Father hath taught me, I speak these things." Yes, surely those that will be translated are the ones that keep Gods commandments given through his son as mediator, as he plainly shows in Deut. 18:18: "I will raise them up a prophet from among their brethren like unto thee, and I will put my words in his mouth, and he shall speak unto them all that I shall command him." [illegible] is those that keep the commandments of God that will be translated at his coming. So we agree here perfectly.

23. By what law will the world be judged? By the law on the table of stone, which alone were under the mercy seat, either in the temple on earth, or in the temple of God in heaven (II. Chron. 5:10; Rev. 11:15-19; Eccl. 12:13, 14).

Answer.—For the law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death. John 12:48: "He that rejecteth me, and receiveth not my words, hath one that judgeth him: the word that I have spoken, the same shall judge him in the last day." The law under Christ the substance that cast the shadow on the mercy seat, under which the first covenant on the tables of stone rested. Don't lose sight of the real mercy seat, Christ I. John 2:1: "If any man sin, we have an advocate, mercy seat with the Father"—a place where God meets us (Christ himself).

24. Since only sinners pardoned by grace, can be baptized into Christ, if only the church has a law, since none but the church can sin, who then can be inducted into Christ? There could be no one in Christ, no Saviour required, nor no sacrifice for sin possible, nor no repentance nor pardon required or possible.

Dear reader: I believe no man on earth can answer these twenty-four questions according to the Bible, without either establishing the whole ten commandments as the law of God for both the church and the world, or else establishing his own condemnation.

Answer.—Rom. 5:12: "Wherefore as by one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin, and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned." Therefore all sons of Adam can be baptized into Christ. Moreover, the law entered that the offence might abound; but where sin abounded, grace did much more abound. John 1:17: "The law was given by Moses but grace and truth came by Jesus Christ." Rom. 8:2: "For the law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death." Therefore I understand that the ten commandments were the old or first covenant, as is positively stated in Ex. 34:28: "And he wrote upon the tables of stone the words of the covenant." Josh. 7:11: "Israel hath sinned and they have transgressed my covenant, which I commanded them, for they have even taken of the accursed thing, and have also stolen and dissembled." What did they transgress? "My covenant"—stolen. This proves that the ten were the first covenant that had order of divine service, the covenant Moses was the mediator of. No way to get around that. Now listen: Heb. 12:18-24: "For ye are not come unto the mount that might be touched—but ye are come unto Mount Sion—to the general assembly and church of the first born, which are written in heaven, and to God the judge of all, and to the spirits of just men made perfect, and to Jesus the mediator of the new covenant." Acts 3:22: "For Moses truly said unto the fathers, A prophet shall the Lord God raise up unto you, of your brethren, like unto me, him shall ye hear in all things whatsoever he shall say unto you." John 6:63: "It is the spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing: the words that I speak unto you, they are spirit and they are life." Matt. 7:12: "Therefore all things whatsoever that men should do unto you do ye even so to them, for this is the law and the prophets." What law? The ten? By no means. But the law that he had been giving them in the previous words, of course: verse 24: "Whosoever heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man which build his house upon a rock. Oh, I see, we get on the rock we live by. We are on the rock, Christ Jesus. We are under the law that James speaks of, chapter 1:25: "But whoso looketh into the perfect law of liberty, and continueth therein, he being not a forgetful hearer but a doer of the work, this man shall be blessed in his deed." But what is the "liberty"? We see that in the Old one there was no liberty: The penalty was death, and they did not wait until a future day of judgment: It was executed as soon as the guilt was established. Under the new the penalty is to be inflicted in the last day, and the law is: "My words shall judge him in the last day." And it is up to us to use the "liberty" for weal or woe. Matt. 22:40: "On these two commandments hang all the law and prophets." Here is the support of the whole structure, the substance that cast the shadow. Heb. 10:1: "For the law having a shadow of good things to come, and not the very image of the things can never with those sacrifices which they offered year by year continually, make the comers thereunto perfect." Heb. 9:9: "Which was a figure for the time then present, in which were offered gifts and sacrifices that could not make him perfect as pertaining to the conscience." So the apostle Paul says in II. Cor. 3:3: "Forasmuch as ye are manifestly declared to be the epistle of Christ, ministered by us, written not with ink, but with the spirit of the living God, not on tables of stone, but in fleshly tables of the heart." Verse 6: "Who hath also made us ministers of the New Testament, not of the letter, but of the spirit." "The words that I speak unto you, they are spirit and they are life" (John 6:63). So, friend, whoever you are, I have not tried to establish that the ten are not God's law, but I think to any fair minded person I have shown that the ten were not all the law of God, as you imply in your whole twenty-four questions. I also realize that all that I have written will not change you or anyone else that takes the position you do, because in the reading of the Old Testament the veil is on your eyes. But I have given my thoughts as best I can. I am willing to let it rest without any further comment, and let the brethren judge as to where the truth lies. There is nothing gained by controversy, so I submit my answers to your questions as they stand, and ask God's blessing on us in truth. It is clear to me and I ask God to guide us into all truth, and gather us at last into his kingdom.

THE SYMBOLS OF REV. CH. 13.—No. 4

Geo. Francis

In a former article we treated of the leopard symbol of verse one, and noticed his cosmopolitan constitution; and that the mouth given to him was the papacy. This was proved by the correspondence between the acts of the Least after receiving the mouth, and that of the eleventh horn of Dan. 7, which came up among, and after the ten: and is by all Protestant expositors applied to the papacy. In verse eleven John says, "And I beheld another beast coming up out of the earth." Now with all reverence for the author of this revelation, and for the use of words which are the vehicles to convey ideas to our minds, I protest against the persistent attempts of expositors to apply this symbol to some phase of Rome. It is in God's revelation "another" symbol, as Medo-Persia was "another," separate and distinct from Babylon. Daniel's four beasts came up from the sea, and so did the leopard, or first symbol of this chapter. But this two horned symbol comes up out of the earth, the same symbolic earth that in chapter twelve, helped the woman and opened her mouth, and swallowed up the flood that the [illegible]

In the second chapter of Daniel we find a very interesting account of the king's dream, and although the king could not recall the dream, God by Daniel revealed it to him, the great prophetic, metallic, image. In the composition of this image there is gold, silver, brass, iron and clay. We have generally accepted expositions on the first four, but what about the clay? The clay is mixed with the iron in the feet and toes of the image, but they do not cleave one to the other, as iron is not mixed with miry clay.

Now the clay is formed into nations; we learn this by verse 45, which reads "For as much as thou sawest that the stone was cut out of the mountain without hands, and that it break in pieces the iron, the brass, the clay, the silver, and the gold, the great God hath made known to the king what shall come to pass hereafter." The clay did not cleave to the iron, but must have formed itself into nations: inasmuch as the stone breaks it into pieces, the same as it does the metals. In our thoughts on chapter 12 we gave texts to prove that the earth in symbolic prophecy is democracy, the common people in contrast with royalty. (see Deut. 32:1): "Give ear, O ye heavens, and I will speak; and hear, O earth, the words of my mouth;" and in Hosea 2:22-23: "And it shall come to pass in that day, I will hear saith the Lord I will hear the heavens, and they shall hear the earth; and the earth shall hear the corn, and the wine, and the oil, and they shall hear Jezreel." The fact that in our day there are so many republics, shows the correspondence between the prediction and the history of our times. The United States, and all the South American republics; and in Europe: France, Portugal; and now China seems to be in a fair way to become a republic: Surely the clay of the image is in evidence in our day. "Two horns like a lamb," very democratic; "speaks like a dragon;" very inconsistent. "Maketh fire to come down from heaven on the earth in the sight of men." The great wonders performed by electricity. Deceives the dwellers on the earth by those miracles which he had power to do, in the sight of the beast" (the leopard). No lying wonders—they are the wonders of science, performed in our days; when many run to and fro, and knowledge is most wonderfully increased. Makes an image of the first beast: that is, a likeness: simply by history repeating itself in the matter of the faith of its devotees; and in that image is contained a mark called "the mark of the beast," that is of the first, or Roman leopard beast.

By this prophecy and by the history of the fourth century, we find that the leopard beast had one of his heads wounded to death, but before his death he promulgated an edict, proscribing the faith of his subjects. Gibbon in his index to the decline and fall of the Roman empire, gives the decree as the "Orthodox Edicts of Theodocius." This "mark," like the seal of God in the forehead, is not a literal but a mental mark. Those having God's seal, worship God; those having the beast's mark, worship the beast. The Emperor Theodocius was the mouthpiece of the empire of which the "beast" is a symbol. He proscribed the faith of his subjects, saying what they should believe, and what they should not. Is not this a mental mark? This 13th chapter ends with a view of the beast of the earth enforcing the mark of the first, or leopard beast. In verse 8 it is written, "And all that dwell upon the earth shall worship him, whose names are not written in the book of life of the lamb slain from the foundation of the world." Here the world is paying obedience to the mandate of a world power in violation to the commands of God. In the next chapter the lamb is [illegible] and angel messages are going forth to the inhabitants of the earth. One says with a loud voice, "Fear God and give glory to him, for the hour of his judgment is come; and worship him that made heaven and earth, the sea and the fountains of water." Then at verses 9 and 10 of chapter 14 is one of the most solemn warnings to be found in God's book: "If any man worship the beast and his image, and receive his mark in his forehead, or in his hand, the same shall drink of the wine of the wrath of God, which is poured out without mixture into the cup of his indignation; and he shall be tormented with fire and brimstone in the presence of the holy angels, and in the presence of the lamb."

This warning is against receiving the mark in the forehead, or in the hand. Therefore, as said before, it is a mental mark; and the one addressed has the option to receive or to reject. Therefore the sign of the cross on the forehead of the child is out of the question. The angel says, "worship him that made heaven and earth, the sea and the fountains of water." I see no objection to the view that the mark is the doctrine of a triune Deity in opposition to the Bible doctrine of the unity of the deity. The image is not an image of the papacy, but to apostate Christianity of the fourth century when the equal Deity of the Father, of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost was affirmed, and made obligatory by the Emperor Theodocius, A. D. 380. All that would not subscribe to this doctrine were branded with the infamous name of "heretics." Michael Servetus suffered death at Geneva in the time of John Calvin, because he wrote a book against the trinity. The number 666 is the number of the beast, after he receives the blasphemous mouth (verse 5), which is the last and papal phase of the empire. In computing this number we should remember that it is the number of a man (verse 18), and of his name (verse 17). It is found in the pope's official title, Vicarious Filii Dei—The Vicar of the son of God. This title is applicable to every pope alike. The letter u was formerly the same as v, and must be so used. (Webster's dictionary on the letter v).

Albany, Wis.

CHRIST'S COMING AND THE MARRIAGE OF THE LAMB

Almus Adams

The article in The Restitution of February 13, by W. N. Pile, with reference to a secret phase of Christ coming, all should read and study it well. That there is a secret coming of Jesus is taught and made plain by Russell. If you do not find it taught in the Scripture, you can find it in the "Plan of the Ages." Paul in writing to the brethren at Thessalonica (I Epistle 5:2) says: "For yourselves know perfectly that the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night." Where did they get this perfect knowledge? Jesus had said no man knows the day nor the hour; also "watch, for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come. Therefore watch, for in such an hour as ye think not, the son of man cometh." This to them was perfect knowledge. All that the apostle intended to teach was that in as much as we did not know just when it would be, we must be ready, or be caught unprepared. That the world will be [illegible] and unprepared, is [illegible] in verse 3. The apostle says they are to say "peace and [illegible] at a time that if they were watching in the light, they would know better. But the church is not so caught, for they are watching. That the saints go to meet the Lord is plainly stated. Isaac met his bride in the open field, just as Jesus will meet the church. In Gen. 2:15 ye learn that after man had been created God put him in the garden of [illegible] and keep it. In verse 16 God's first commandment is given, and in verse 17 the second one appears. (Instead of ten commandments being in Eden there were but two). Eve was not created up to this time. In verse 18 God said, It is not good for the man to be alone; I will make (not have made) him an help meet." Verse 21 shows where the material came from to make the woman, and verse 22 shows that when she was created God "brought her to the man." Just so when the bride of Christ is completed, she will be presented to him.

When Jesus uttered his parables he based them on the customs of his time. Marriages were conducted in the open field, generally by the side of a river. The bride and groom then went to her former home and stayed for seven days. At the end of the days they went to their permanent home already prepared by the bridegroom. The watchman, knowing the time was approaching, made ready, and at the first sight of the approaching caravan would cry, "Behold the bridegroom cometh!" I firmly believe this refers to the meeting and wedding of Jesus and his bride, and that some years will elapse between the going to the bridegroom and the return. In this way the church escapes the troublous times of that period. This is all a condition of the Lord's coming—not two comings. Let us heed the warning, watch, and be ready.

Buffalo, Texas.

GOLD DUST

Ten Things for Which No One Has Ever Been Sorry

Doing good to all.
Being patient toward everybody.
Hearing before judging.
Thinking before speaking.
Holding an angry tongue.
Being kind to the distressed.
Speaking evil of none.
Asking pardon for all wrongs.
Stopping the ears to a tale bearer.
Disbelieving most of the ill reports.

ANNA DREW
Dixon, Ill.

The Restitution

Issued weekly by

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING COMPANY.

Entered as second-class matter under act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

TERMS.

One year $1.50; six months 75 cents, in advance.

ROBT. G. HUGGINS.....Editor
BUELL W. NUTT.....Manager

BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Burton H. Lang, Harry Pott,
Chas. A. Goss, Robt. G. Pate,
Buell W. Nutt, D. C. Robison,
W. S. Tomlinson.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

All remittances should be sent by bank draft, post office money order or express money order to The Restitution Publishing Co., 803 Parkwood drive, Cleveland, Ohio.

All communication intended for publication should be sent to the editor, Robt. G. Huggins, 10623 Lee avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

It is necessary to adhere strictly to the rule of not returning unused manuscripts. Writers will please keep copies, or risk the loss.

While the editor exercises a general supervision over the articles appearing in The Restitution, his endorsement does not extend to the interpretation of details nor the exegesis of particular texts in the writings of contributors.

Cleveland, Ohio March 12, 1912

EDITORIAL

Friendship is a golden coin that brightens with the using.

Thy purpose firm is equal to the deed. Who does the best his circumstance allows, does well, acts nobly! Angels could do no more.

They that turn many to righteousness shall shine as the stars forever. There is no earthly king whose glory can be compared with that of John the Baptist.

Righteousness is not inherited. The best of fathers and the most consecrated of mothers cannot answer for the children. Each must choose right or wrong for himself.

May this day find you have a simple, sincere and serene life; repelling promptly every thought of discontent, anxiety, discouragement, impurity and self-seeking; cultivating cheerfulness, magnanimity, charity, and the habits of deep meditation and holy silence; exercising economy in expenditure, carefulness in conversation, diligence in appointed service, fidelity to every trust, and childlike faith and trust in Jehovah.

Some time since, as many will remember, Bro. Knapp suggested that we should have printed in our paper the history and photographs of our ministerial brethren, both living and dead. The suggestion, while good, has not been acted upon with the promptness its merit demanded. He encloses the life history of Brother Hoyt, as written by Sister Hoyt in her 92nd year, with his photograph, and encloses $1.50 to pay for the electrotype. "I hope," he says, "that this will start the histories." So do we. Brethren of the ministry, this hint is for YOU.

CHRISTLESS CHRISTIANS

Worship with such, says an exchange, is always too long for them. If a brother preaches a sermon, said sermon is always too long—specially if he is a home preacher. The elders are without ability—those who talk lack "talent"—they fail to interest. But sometimes these Christians go out to hear a lecturer. His theme is not the divine beneficences of the gospel, but the sordid things of time. They pour forth for him unstinted praise. They hear an orthodox preacher with the same delight—he is "eloquent," "polished," "refined," "educated," a master on the platform—his speech was wonderful! It takes a week to get through praising him. They go to the opera and the theater, and report that there they find "talent," etc. etc. No lack of interest at the opera. Nothing to criticise there. It's all right. It costs money to go—it would not do to say you did not get the worth of your money and more! Of course the opera must be all right—it would not do to say otherwise. No matter how foolish and unprofitable the role may be, the actor is an "artist," or he is "brilliant," or he is "talented"—or something—at any rate he is just wonderful! But, O those dull meetings at "our church!" How tiresome! This class of Christians don't pray. They attend the breaking of bread with much irregularity. They have little confidence in themselves or others so far as the Lord's work is concerned. They don't love the Lord. They don't love the church and the church would be stronger and better without them. Christ does not dwell in them. They may be called Christless Christians.

WHO SHOULD DO THE WITHDRAWING?

An exchange says that some think withdrawal must be individually and not the act of the church, as such, and that if the church, as such, does it, she judges and "puts a stumbling-stone or an occasion of falling into the brother's way," to such an extent that "he has no right to the ordinances of the Lord's house—that is, the whole worship. To my mind this position appears unscriptural, illogical and inconsistent. This mistake seems to be the result of an improper division, and wrong application of the word of God in its application in public and private withdrawals. I believe that I will be able to show that God demands both, before I close this article. It will be necessary to cite all the main passages treating upon the subject, to ascertain, if possible, their main import and proper application in such cases.

Then to begin: "If your brother acts wrongly towards you, go and point out his fault to him when only you and he are there. If he listens to you, you have gained your brother. If he will not listen to you, go again, and take one or two to go with you, that every word spoken may be attested by two or three witnesses. If he refuses to hear them, appeal to the church and if he refuses to hear the church, regard him just as you regard a gentile or tax-gatherer. I solemnly assure you, that whatever you, as a church, bind on earth will in heaven be held as bound, and whatever you loose on earth will in heaven be held as loosed. I also solemnly assure you that if two of you agree on earth concerning anything whatever that they shall ask, the boon will be to them from my Father who is in heaven. For where there are two or three assembled in my name, there am I in the midst of them" (Matt. 18:15-20, Modern Speech New Testament). This excerpt is substantially the same as in the "Living Oracles." I have been thus lengthy to get all the facts before the mind that we may look after and see their proper application. I shall presume that no one will question the fact that in the above lesson Jesus gave an outline of the policy and principles of the policy that should permeate the new institution by which his people should be guided through this dispensation of grace in settling such matters in keeping with his will or law of absolute right in the premises.

The apostles were to give an inspired exemplification in teaching and practice of the above lesson as the occasion might arise. But let us analyze it, and get at the facts as revealed.

I. Where there arises a private offense against a brother, he must go to the offender alone and seek an adjustment of the wrong.

II. If the offender corrects the matter, this must be the end of the grievance, since up to this point it is purely a private matter between the two.

III. If he refuses, then the offended one must now go from him socially, as some demand.

IV. But he must go and get two or three brethren and make another effort at reconciliation.

V. If he still refuses, neither must they go from him socially.

VI. But they, as a competent number of witnesses, must, as a last and final resort, appeal the case to the church—the highest tribunal on earth for the adjustment of the issue involved.

VII. If he refuses to hear the church, what then? Must the whole church go from him by withdrawing their social fellowship, and still leave him in full spiritual fellowship with the right to meet and worship with them on the first day of the week? Such is true, unless (a) the social theory is wrong, or (b) social fellowship is greatly superior to spiritual fellowship! Here we get a whole view of the inconsistency of the social theory.

VIII. But what must the church do? Withdraw her spiritual and social relations from all such characters, regard such as pagans, or as those abandoned to sin. Paul commanded: "Remove the wicked man from among you" (1 Cor. 5:13, Modern Speech New Testament). Such was God's order under the law age (see Deut. 22:23). All such characters become sinners of the deepest dye. Why? (a) Because they have bidden defiance to the whole church of God, therefore, to Jesus Christ, the head and law-giver, and trampled the blood of the everlasting covenant under unholy feet. (b) Because idolaters are to be withdrawn from. (c) Because that is just what such stubborn, self-willed, hard-hearted, rebellious characters against the Lord's counsel become. Proof: "For rebellion is as the sin of witchcraft, and stubbornness is as iniquity and idolatry" (1 Sam. 15:23). (d) Because all such characters and their prayers are an abomination to God. Proof: "He that turneth away his ear from hearing the law, even his prayer shall be abomination" (Prov. 28:9). Is it possible that such vile characters are entitled to all the blessings and immunities of the house of God? Reason and revelation alike say No! No! eternally No! If they remain in such a condition of heart and life. If such conduct on the part of the church in obedience to Jesus Christ, constitutes "casting them out," or letting them "go," then clearly, they must go, or the whole church becomes equally involved in rebellion to her King. If a social withdrawal individually be the true divine philosophy in such cases, will some one kindly tell us why God treated Adam and Eve so unjustly in violation of his own law in having them "go" when he should have gone, and thus given us a practical demonstration of his law, according to the social theory? Indeed, he should have done so, and left them there to enjoy that lovely home and its fruits, wrapped in the dark mantle of their crime! But, alas! they must "go!" What a "stumbling-stone or an occasion to fall," he put in their way!

God says in teaching and example that the impure, rebellious soul must go or be cast out. Hence, the difference. How inconsistent before the world to refuse social fellowship to a brother, and still meet with and treat him as a brother, socially and spiritually in public worship! If such conduct would not be to offer a premium for such inconsistency and hypocrisy, then I do not know what elements of conduct would be necessary to constitute such. Do you, my reader? No, it is not the decision of the church that stands between the disorderly rebel and the blessing in God's house, but it is the "flaming sword" of the King's decree carried into effect by the church. Withdrawals are as essential to the purity, influence, progress and perpetuity of the church as additions are to her growth. The failure of the church to keep herself pure is one of her greatest causes of weakness and death in many places. God, and society alike, demand of her purity, hence both condemn her failure to be pure.

CORN SHEAVES

Gathered from Everywhere

China Born as a Republic, After the Most Remarkable of Long Careers.—At last China is proclaimed a republic. After three hundred years the Manchu dynasty has fallen. Never again, from present indications, shall monarchism rear its head in that ancient land. A republic has been born where least expected—in the heart of ultra-conservative Asia, in the land traditionally opposed to innovations. A new star has come upon the stage of world-history, appearing in the drama of democracy. There is promise of a long and successful run.

The new republic becomes the greatest of all republics, territorially, and in population. Its area is 4,271,170 square miles, as compared with 3,756,884 square miles, the area of the United States and its insular possessions. The baby republic is four times as populous as the giant republic of the west.

The history of China is awesome in its antiquity. It is by far the oldest empire existing on earth. It has survived those evolutionary and revolutionary changes which have affected and at last destroyed every other nation distinguished in ancient history—Assyria, Babylonia, Egypt, Greece and Rome. These had their periods of glory, followed by decline and fall, while the Chinese appear to have existed apart, as a distinct family, almost from the era of the dispersion at Babel. The present European nations are but a people of yesterday, compared with the antiquity of the Chinese. At a period as early as Thebes, in Egypt, China had reached a settled form of government and a high state of civilization, from which it has never receded. The origin of the Chinese, like that of other Asiatic nations, is lost in the depths of remote antiquity. The first dawn of authentic history of China commences with 2989 B. C.

A nation and a people with a definite, continuous, well-authenticated history covering five thousand years, justify the respect of the world. The leaven of far western civilization has worked in China for the first time. The present upheaval is the result. Will the influence of western ideas and methods preserve China and the Chinese intact, or will the perpetuity of five thousand years be broken by the innovations. China crumble to pieces territorially and its people lose their national identity? Look to Time for the answer.—Clipping sent by Bro. Sterling Groves. Most people are looking to "Time for the answer" to the question propounded, but the servants of Jehovah are looking to the "sure word of prophecy" and to God, God-taught we know; while the time-taught speculate and guess. —Editor.

COMMUNICATIONS

Dear Restitution:

As I am alone this afternoon and somewhat lonely, I just wonder if I can pass away some of the time talking to the dear ones of like precious faith. I think many times we could do lots of good in this way, although I am a poor hand to say anything that will edify, but sometimes I can preach quite a sermon to myself. I think when we go to church and hear a good sermon we should not "quench the spirit;" if we feel like saying "Amen," say it—not be afraid some one will look at us, or say something about us. I have been in church before now when I could hardly keep still. Did I quench the spirit? Will some one please answer this?

I think The Restitution is fine, and wait patiently for it from week to week. I always glance over it in a hurry first to see who has pieces in that I am acquainted with, and, of course, read them first. In reading the paper last week I saw where Sister Huggins had had the misfortune to break her arm; and to you, Sister Huggins, we are very sorry to read this, and hope you are much improved by this time.

We all have our troubles, trials and misfortunes, but when our dear Lord comes, all of them will be done away. Let me say to you all, dear brothers and sisters, let us strive as never before to live right and do our duty. Only a few more days, as it were, for us to live and to work for our Master; let us improve what time we have before it is too late.

Your sister, striving for the kingdom where all will be peace,

MRS. ALMUS ADAMS.

Omaha, Neb.

(Let believers everywhere profitably use their spare moments in "talking to the dear ones of like precious faith." The department called "Communications" is set apart for this laudable purpose. We wish it were more generally used.—Editor).

On the 22nd ultimo I left home going as far south as Central Point. At Eugene we gave one discourse on, "Why the Resurrection from the Dead?" At Central Point I spoke twice in the house of Bro. Benson. In Saw's Valley, near Gold Hill, I held seven services, at the close of which I baptized Lelah Scroggs. Many of The Restitution readers will recognize in this sister the grand daughter of the late Bro. I. S. Hatch. May our heavenly Father bless Sister Lelah as she journeys along the way of life. Jesus says, "I am the way;" and if she will keep close to the Captain of our salvation, all will be well.

In hope of life when Jesus comes,

A. W. DARBY.

Corvallis, Oregon.

CHRIST THE WAY OF LIFE

Nora Overholser

"Thy word is a lamp unto my feet and a light unto my path."

We understand what the condition of the human race naturally is, for in Gal. 3:22 we read "But the Scripture hath concluded all under sin, that the promise by faith of Jesus Christ might be given to them that believe. For all have sinned and come short of the glory of God."

We see our destiny, so we must seek for life through Jesus Christ; for the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ. How can some say we have eternal life, either in heaven or hell, when the Bible tells us it is th gift of God? Would it be a gift if we already possessed it, or an immortal soul, or something that can never die?

"He that believeth not God hath made him a liar; because he believeth not the record that God gave of his son. And this is the record that God hath given to us, eternal life, and this life is in his son; he that hath the son hath life; and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life" (1 John 5:10-12).

And we may know that the Son of God is come, and hath given us an understanding that we may know him that is true, and we are in him that is true, even in his Son Jesus Christ. "There is the true God and eternal life" (1 John 5:20). "And unto this people thou shalt say, Thus said the Lord: Behold I set before you the way of life and the way of death." (Jer. 21:8).

Now, if we, as some say, have an immortal or never-dying soul, what need would there have been of the Lord showing the two ways? None whatever, for we would all have life, and there would be no death. But Christ says, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that believeth on me hath everlasting life. I am the bread of life." Now if we do not believe on him as he tells us, would it not be everlasting death? It certainly would, as he told us before there are two ways—life and death.

"Thou wilt show me the path of life." "Strait is the gate and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it; for wide is the gate and broad is the way that leadeth to destruction, and many there be which go in thereat." (Matt. 7:13-14). Let us be careful to enter in at the strait gate and not look for large numbers or to follow the crowd, but strive to keep in the narrow way.

"Come, I will teach you the fear of the Lord, for whoso findeth me findeth life, and shall obtain favor of the Lodr. But he that sinneth against me wrongeth his own soul: all they that hate me love death." (Prov. 8:35-36).

"Marvel not, brethren, if the world hate you. We know that we have passed from death unto life." (1 John 3:14). "For as the Father hath life in himself, so hath he given to the Son to have life in himself. Verily, verily, I say unto you, he that heareth my word, and believeth on him that sent me, hath everlasting life," Jesus said. "I am the resurrection and the life." Again he said to one of the disciples, "I am the way, the truth, and the life; no man cometh unto the Father, but by me." (John 14:6).

It is very important that we should know the way of life. "We are buried with him by baptism into death, that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life." (Rom. 6:4).

The path of the just is as the shining light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day. "Blessed is the man that endureth temptation, for he shall receive the crown of life which the Lord hath promised to them that love him. Our life is hid with Christ in God.

So let us fight the good fight of faith, lay hold on eternal life, and by patient continuance in well doing, seek for glory, and honor and eternal life.

We, like Paul, can say, I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith; henceforce there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord the righteous judge shall give me at that day, and not to me only, but unto all them that love his appearing.

Thou are the way, to thee alone,
From sin and death we flee;
And he who would the Father seek
Must seek him, Lord, by thee.

Thou art the way, the truth, the life;
Grant us that way to know,
That truth to keep, that life to win,
Whose love eternal flow.

Springfield, O.

"SEEING FACE TO FACE"

1 Cor. 13:12

Chas. A. Goss

To meet one's friends after long absences—to see them "face to face"—is one of the purest and greatest pleasures of our lives. We have all doubtless had the pleasure of such meetings, or can at least imagine from what we know of others, what the meeting of old friends is like after long separation. The beaming eyes, the glowing words, the hearty handshake, tell the story of the emotions aroused by the sight of the friends of other days. Memory takes up the broken strands of former associations, and weaves anew the bond of friendship which time had almost destroyed. Old scenes and fond recollections spring up in the minds of the reunited friends, who have long been parted, and blossom like flowers at such reunions. Associations and incidents of the years past seem as fresh in their minds as though they were but yesterday, by the mystical influence of friendly intercourse.

The closer the companionship has been and the nearer the common interests and claims were, the greater pleasure in the meeting. How strong and passionate do those emotions become when the friends of old have been comrades in perils, or companions in trials, and sufferings not falling to the common lot of men.

Soldiers fight their battles again, 'tis said—fellow prisoners have formed associations after their release from prisons of war, travelers recount to each other the perils and scenes through which they journeyed together, and each finds interest in the other's story.

Thus we are reminded of Paul's word concerning Epaphroditus, calling him "my brother and companion in labor and fellow soldier" (Phil. 2:25).

The sympathy or feeling of fellowship comes from the fact that they have lived together, endured dangers and trials for the same cause—helped each other over the difficulties of the road—sometimes through a swamp where dangers were dark and hidden; sometimes in the forest, on mountains where courage and endurance were taxed to keep on. But they had grown to know each other well, and knowing each other for true friends because of what the past contained, they looked into each others faces and read again the tokens of that feeling which contained no alloy of selfishness—was pure as refined gold.

Something like this, I fancy, was in the friendship of Jonathan and David. That generous prince who made a covenant with David because he loved him as his own life—how like the friendship of the Prince of Peace for us outcasts from the court and favor of his Father! For David's sake Jonathan stripped himself of the robe that was upon him and gave it to David, and his garments, even his sword and his bow, and his girdle (1 Sam. 18:4).

There are numerous Scriptures telling of meetings face to face, but we must not suppose that these meetings were always those of friends. David met Goliath face to face and slew him. Yes, many times a desire to meet face to face is a token of friendliness, and again it may be just the contrary.

A case of the latter kind is recorded in Lev. 26:17. God's message was: "And I will set my face against you (Israel), and ye shall be slain by your enemies." God was facing them as an enemy. In Deut. 31:17 we have a record of his refusal to meet them face to face. He says: "I will hide my face from them, and they shall be devoured, and many evils and troubles shall befall them." This is an expression of disfavor almost as strong as the other.

For God to speak face to face with a man was on several occasions the highest mark of his favor—of honor and glory greater than to be led into the presence of any king on earth. Among those so honored were Abraham, Moses, Joshua, Daniel and others. Moses was very highly favored in this respect as we read in Ex. 33:11: "And the Lord spake unto Moses face to face, as a man speaketh unto his friend." In the following chapter we read that "when Aaron and all the children of Israel saw Moses, behold the skin of his face shone; and they were afraid to come nigh him." And then we read in the same chapter: "And there arose not a prophet since in Israel like unto Moses whom the Lord knew face to face" (Ex. 34:10). This shows honor and glory given to Moses—an honor that no other prophet ever equaled—he being the type of Christ above all others, being a law-giver, a prophet, deliverer and mediator for the people.

In the figurative language of the east—to hide the face from one was to shun and avoid him; to look with disfavor on them or their requests. Hence we read in Psalm 27:9: "Hide not thy face from me; put not thy servant away in anger: leave me not, neither forsake me, O God of my salvation." Again, in Psalm 31: 16: "Make thy face to shine upon thy servant; save me for thy mercies sake." We find a similar expression from David in Psalm 80: 3: "Turn us again, O God, and cause thy face to shine, and we shall be saved." And after this prayer in Psalm 17 for deliverance from his enemies, he expresses the full assurance of his hope in the closing words: "As for me, I will behold thy face in righteousness: I shall be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness."

These familiar words sound like an echo of those of the apostle John, when he says: "Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be: but we know that when he shal appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is." "And every man that hath this hope in him, purifieth himself even as he is pure" (I. John 3).

Did you ever compare this word of John's with that of Paul in our text, or stop to consider why "it doth not yet appear what we shall be."

It seems to me the words "For now we see through a glass darkly" give the point and meaning to John's words. Though now we do know in part—we know that when he shall appear, we shall know even as we are known, for we shall be like him. Human limitations will be passed and gone forever for the saints. We know that when he "who is our life, shall appear, then shall we appear with him in glory." Yea we shall see him face to face, and be like him.

Cleveland, Ohio.

THE TRUTH DEFENDED—No. 2

An Ex-Minister Pleads for the Truth

Mrs. Chas. Thomas

Again we were taught that man has by nature an immortal soul; that at death the soul does not die, but goes to heaven or hell to await the judgment day. Now stop and think. If that be the case, we have already received our reward; what then, will be the need of a judgment? What does the word teach—that man has by nature an immortal or never dying soul? Let us see first what the soul of man is. "Why," you say, "it is spirit, soul, or the part of man that leaves this body at death and goes to its reward." It is not so according to the Word, for cattle are spoken of as souls. In Gen. 2:7 we read: "And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul" (or person). All the souls that came with Jacob into Egypt, which came outof his loins, besides his son's wives, all the souls were three-score and six (Gen. 46:26-27). And the sons of Joseph which were born him in Egypt were two souls (or two sons), as the first part of verse proves (Lev. 22:11). Men, do not despise a thief if he steal to satisfy his soul when he is hungry (Prov. 6:30).

All the souls of the house of Jacob were threescore and ten (Lev. 17:12). Therefore I said unto the children of Israel, No soul (or person) of you shall eat blood, and every soul that eateth that which died of itself, or that which was torn with beasts (Lev. 17:15). Can spirits eat blood or anything else? Is this not plain that the soul is the personality, body, life and entire being of man? If a soul touch an unclean thing, whether it be a carcass of an unclean beast, or a carcass of unclean creeping things, and if it be hidden from him, he also shall be unclean and guilty (Lev. 5:2). Or if a soul swear, pronouncing with his lips to do evil or to do good whatsoever it be that a man (or soul) shall pronounce with an oath, and it be hid from him, when he knoweth of it, then he shall be guilty (Lev. 5:4). And levy a tribute unto the Lord of the men of war, which went out to battle one soul of five hundred, both of the persons, and of the beeves, and of the asses, and of the sheep (Numbers 31:28). Here cattle and animals are souls. We will not take the time to repeat all the hundreds of texts which prove that the soul is the part of man that eats, sleeps, lives, and dies, for when the breath goes the soul dies, and together they sleep until Christ comes to raise the dead and bring immortal life to those, who by faith and obedience, have won the prize offered to all mankind. To prove that the soul dies, is not immortal, as we were taught, but is mortal and must die: Ezek. 18:4: The soul that sinneth, it shall die. Isaiah 55:3: Incline your ears and come unto me, hear and your soul shall live. If souls do not die, God would not give a promise of life to those fulfilling divine conditions. Let him know that he who converteth the sinner from the error of his way, shall save a soul from death (James 5: 20). Condition must be complied with in order to save the soul from death. "Then," you say, "What about those who meet the condition? Are they immortal?" Notice, the texts quoted all point to the future: they do not say has, but "shall be," etc. As before stated, immortal life will be brought to those who obey; but first we all go back to the dust. Our soul and body—our entire being will die, and remain in an unconscious condition until Christ comes. Solomon says The living know that they shall die, but the dead know not anything; neither have they any more a reward, for the memory of them is forgotten; also their love, and their hatred, and their envy, are now perished; neither have they any more a portion forever in anything that is done under the sun (Eccl. ix: 56). Notice what part of them has "perished:" only the body? No: "their love, hatred, envy." The dead praise not the Lord, neither any that go down into silence (Psa. 115:17). Again in Psa. 46: 3-4: Put not your trust in princes, nor in the son of man, in whom there is no help; for his breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth, in that very day his thoughts perish. His thoughts would not perish if they were in some other place, would they? In death there is no remembrance of God (Psalm 6:5). If we already had immortality we would not have to put in on (1 Cor. 15:53). Paul is speaking of something to be done in the future, for he says, Behold, I shew you a mystery: We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trumpet; for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptable, and we shall be changed (1. Cor. 15:51). Until the trumpet shall sound we will remain mortal or corruptible.

GOD IS LOVE

Miss Viola Gazeley

"God is love, and he that dwelleth in love, dwelleth in God, and God in him." (I. John 4:16).

The one central doctrine which we must believe is, that God is love. His love has revealed itself by a supreme act of self-sacrifice. The belief that God is love is the dominant conception which must influence all our thoughts about him.

God first manifested his love in the garden of Eden. With love he made all things beautiful, and he created man and woman, that they might share the store of good things created.

God's love is constantly manifested throughout the Bible. He loved Israel, stood by them throughout their captivity, and led them through the Red Sea, under the leadership of a great and powerful leader, and delivered them from the hands of their enemies. If we abide in God's love, he will likewise abide in us, and deliver us from our enemies.

Of all love God manifested, the greatest was the giving of his only begotten son, that we, through him, might obtain eternal life. "Beloved, let us love one another: for love is of God; and everyone that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God. He that loveth not, knoweth not God" (I. John 4:7-8). "Beloved, if God so loved us, we ought also to love one another" (I. John 4:11). "If we love one another, God dwelleth in us, and his love is perfected in us" (I John 4:12).

John says, "For this is the message that ye heard from the beginning that ye should love one another" (I John 3:11). Let us ask ourselves if we are living with love in our hearts. We, as brothers and sisters in the faith of God, should live in love and unity, for "united we stand, and divided we fall." We are all sons of God by adoption, and are all members of the same household. Christ says that "a house divided against itself cannot stand." John tells us that we cannot love God and hate our brother, because if we loveth not our brother, whom we have seen, we cannot love God whom we have not seen. John says, "He that loveth not his brother abideth in death;" and "whosoevere hateth his brother is a murderer; and ye know that no murderer hath eternal life abiding in him" (I. John 3:15).

As Christians we should perform all work with the spirit of love abiding in our hearts, with loving motives. It is our personal duty and responsibility to uplift one another in our most holy faith. As brothers we should labor to promote the peace and prosperity of the church, build up her interests, and contribute for her support. We should reprove and reclaim the erring, strengthen the weak, confirm the wavering, comfort the sorrowful and the mourning, and promote a growth in grace, and an increase of holiness in all. All this must be done with the deepest humility and willingness.

Paul says that "the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Spirit which is given unto us" (Rom. 5:5). Let us preserve this love, and let it be the source of loving thoughts and deeds. Let us manifest our love of God by keeping his commandments. God would certainly rejoice to hear each one of us sing as David did, "I will love thee, O Lord, my strength" (Psalm 18:1). Paul says that we should let brotherly love continue, and be kindly affectioned one to another. I pray dear brothers and sisters, that we may all continue in brotherly love; love being the first great plan of God.

"Love is the grand, primeval cause of man,
All hate is foreign to the first great plan."

Cleveland, Ohio.

OBITUARY

W. L. Skeels

William Lafayette Skeels was born at Marysville, Ohio, June 28, 1844, and died February 12, 1912, at Salem, Oregon, at the age of 67 years, 7 months and 15 days.

At the age of nine years he was converted to Christianity and complied with the ordinance of baptism, throwing the strength of his whole life, outside of maintaining a livelihood, into the one desire and object of his life, viz: to win souls to Christ.

In 1865 he was married to Miss Maggie Phipps, raising a family of three children, two of whom are living. The death of his wife in 1895 left him a widower. Later he married Miss Nannie Titchenal, of Waterville, Washington, from which union was born three children, all of whom are living.

The deceased followed after the Master to the best of his ability, and proclaimed the gospel to thousands of dying men and women with a zeal and courage equal to his God-given powers. He immersed over five hundred converts and it was his one expressed desire of life to the last that he might be able to live to proclaim the gospel. His last wishes were that he might recover his health so as to preach to the people some more.

The above obituary was handed to me by his son, S. R. Skeels. Funeral services were conducted by the undersigned on Friday, Feb. 16, at the Church of God, at Scholls, Oregon. He was buried in Mountain Side cemetery close to his old home. He now sleeps in peace until "He that liveth and was dead and hath the keys of death and Hades," shall come and gather to himself his own, both living and dead. Blessed Hope! May it help the sorrowing ones.

W. A. PROSSER.

(A report of our dear brother's death has been received from his son, Bro. S. R. Skeels, revised by his sister, Sister Grace Lawrence, of Kansas. As above report from Bro. Prosser is comprehensive we presume its publication will be regarded as sufficient. Bereaved ones, please accept our sympathy and prayers in this sad hour of loss. The Lord bless you.—Editor.

Cornelia Plumb Leland

Cornelia Plumb was born in Oswego county, New York, on April 15, 1833. She was the youngest of a family of eight children. Her parents, Jared and Emiline Plumb, moved to Sandusky county, Ohio, when she was but a year old. Here she grew to womanhood and was educated for a teacher, and began teaching at the age of fifteen and continued in that profession for six years. Two years later she engaged in the milliner's business.

She was united in marriage to Dr. J. S. Leland, October 20, 1863, at Clyde, Ohio. They removed form there to Gilman, Illinois, in September, 1868, and then to Argos, Indiana, in July 1869, where she continued in the milliner's business until 1893.

She was the mother of two children, namely, Arletta and Cora M. Arletta died November 5, 1871. Her husband, Dr. J. S. Leland, died May 14, 1899.

She obeyed the gospel message by baptism and united with the Church of God December 16, 1877. Her exemplary walk in the pathway of rectitude and the exercise of the Christian virtues in her associations in the church have lastingly endeared her to the household of faith. She was ever honest and upright in her mercantile affairs, covering a period of active business life of nearly half a century. In the church she was a punctual and regular attendant at all its services. The Sunday school found in her a willing worker in the discharge of her duties as eacher, and superintendent at various times for years. She was actively aggressive in the business affairs of the church and was oftentimes grieved because its interests were not promoted with more zeal. It was but last Sunday she mingled with us in the house of worship. Her countenance was radiant with the ripening influence of years of sewet communion with her God, and silent meditation upon the mercy and goodness of her Savior, as she sat among us for the last time this side of the Kingdom, and feasted upon the bread of life as broken by Brother Marsh, and drank deeply at the great fountain of spiritula truth. With her heart thus satisfied she has fallen asleep. Oh! how quickly death steps into our midst and "the golden bowl is broken, and the silver cord is loosed." Sister Leland passed from among the living into a sweet repose in Jesus about noon, Tuesday, February 27, 1912, after a long life of activity and usefulness at the age of 78 years, 10 months and 12 days.

She leaves one daughter, Cora M. Drummond, of this place, and many other distant relatives to mourn because of her death. Many warm friends and neighbors will miss her association. The community has lost a good citizen, society a model member, and the church a zealous worker.

Funeral services were held from the Church of God at Argos, Indiana, Thursday, February 29, 1912, at 2:30 o'clock p. m., conducted by D. E. Vanvactor, assisted by Evangelist G. Eldred Marsh, of Oregon, Illinois, and Sister Leland was laid to rest in Maple Grove cemetery to await the resurrection morning at the coming of Christ.

D. E. VANVACTOR.
Argos, Ind.

THE INSPIRATION OF THE BIBLE.—No. 5

James M. Gray

There are certain declarations of Scripture itself. Does not Paul say in one or two places "I speak as a man," or "after the manner of man?" Assuredly, but is he not using the arguments common among men for sake of elucidating a point? And may he not as truly be led of the Spirit to do that, and to record it, as to do or say anything else? Of course, what he quotes from men is not of the same essential value as what he receives from God, but the record of the quotation is as truly inspired.

There are two or three other utterances of his of this character in 1 Cor. 7, where he is treating of marriage. At ver. 6 he says, "I speak this by permission, not of commandment," and what he means has no reference to the source of his message but the subject of it. In contradiction of the false teaching of some, he says Christians are permitted to marry, but not commanded to do so. At verse 10 he says, "Unto the married I command, yet not I, but the Lord," while at verse 12 there follows, "but to the rest speak I, not the Lord." Does he declare himself inspired in the first instance, and not in the second? By no means, but in the first he is alluding to what the Lord spake on the subject while here in the flesh, and in the second to what he, Paul is adding thereto on the authority of the Holy Spirit speaking through him. In other words, putting his own utterances on equality with those of our Lord, he simply confirms their inspiration.

At verse 40 he uses a puzzling expression, "I think also that I have the Spirit of God." As we are contending only for an inspired record, it would seem easy to say that here he records a doubt as to whether he was inspired, and hence everywhere else in the absence of such record of doubt the inspiration is to be assumed. But this would be begging the question, and we prefer the solution of others that the answer is found in the condition of the Corinthian church at that time. His enemies had sought to counteract his teachings, claiming that they had the spirit of God. Referring to the claim, he says with justifiable irony, "I think also that I have the spirit of God" (R. V.). "I think" in the mouth of one having apostolic authority, says Professor Watts, may be taken as carrying the strongest assertion of the judgment in question. The passage is something akin to another in the same epistle at the 14th chapter, verse 37, where he says: "If any man think himself to be a prophet, or spiritual, let him acknowledge that the things I write unto you are the commandments of the Lord."

Time forbids further amplification on the difficulties and objections nor is it necessary, since there is not one that has not been met satisfactorily to the man of God and the child of faith again and again.

But there is an obstacle to which we would call attention before concluding—not a difficulty or objection, but a real obstacle, especially to the young and insufficiently instructed. It is the illusion that this view of inspiration is held only by the unlearned. An illusion growing out of still another as to who constitute the learned.

There is a popular impression that in the sphere of theology and religion these latter are limited for the most part to the higher critics and their relatives, and the more rationalistic and iconoclastic the critic the more learned he is esteemed to be. But the falacy of this is seen in that the qualities which make for a philologist, an expert in human languages, or which give one a wide acquaintance with literature of any kind, in other words the qualities of the higher critic, depend more on memory than judgment, and do not give the slightest guarantee that their possessors can draw a sound conclusion from what they know.

As the author of "Faith and Inspiration" puts it, the work of such a scholar is often like that of a quarryman to an architect. Its entire achievement, though immensely valuable in its place, is just a mass of raw and formless material until a mind gifted in a different direction, and possessing the necessary taste and balance shall reduce or put it into shape for use. The perplexities of astronomers touching Halley's comet is in point. They knew facts that common folks did not know, but when they came to generalize upon them, the man on the street knew that he should have looked in the west for the phenomenon when they bade him look in the east.

Much is said for example about an acquaintance with Hebrew and Greek, and no sensible man will underrate them for the theologian or Bible scholar, but they are entirely unnecessary to an understanding of the doctrine of Holy Writ. The intelligent reader of the Bible in the English tongue, especially when illuminated by the Holy Spirit is abundantly able to decide upon these questions for himself. He cannot determine how wthe Holy Spirit operated on the minds of the sacred penmen because that is not revealed. He can determine whether the inspiration covers all the books, and whether it includes not only the substance but the form, not only the thoughts but the words.

We have spoken of scholars and of the learned, let us come to names. We suppose Dr. Sandy of Oxford is a scholar, and the Archbishop of Durham, and Dean Burgon, and Professor Orr of Glasgow, and Principal Forsyth of Hackney college, and Sir Robert Anderson and Dr. Kuyper of Holland, and President Patton of Princeton, and Howard Osgood of the Old Testament Revision Committee, and Matthew B. Riddle of the New, and G. Frederick Wright and Albert T. Clay, the archaeologists, and Presidents Moorehead and Mullins, and C. I. Scofield, and Luther T. Townsend for tweny-five years professor in the Theological school of Boston university and Arthur T. Pierson of the Missionary Review of the World, on a host of other living witnesses—Episcopalians, Presbyterians, Congregationalists, Methodists, Reformed Dutch.

We had thought John Calvin a scholar, and the distinguished Bengel, and Canon Faussett and Tregelles and Auberlen and Van Oosterzee and Charles Hodge and Henry B. Smith, and so many more, that it were foolishness to recall them. These men may not stand for every statement in these pages, they might not care to be quoted as holding technically the verbal theory of inspiration for reasons already named, but they will affirm the heart of the contention and testify to their belief in an inspiration of the Sacred Oracles which includes the words.

The "Outlook" had an editorial recently, entitled "Whom Shall We Believe?" in which the writer reaffirmed the platitudes that living is a vital much more than an intellectual process, and that truth of the deeper kind is distilled out of experience rather than logical processes. This is the reason he said why many things are hidden from the so-called wise, who follow formal methods of exact observation, and are revealed to babes and sucklings who know nothing of these methods, but are deep in the process of living. No spectator ever yet understood a great contemporary human movement into which he did not enter.

But we conclude with a kind of concrete testimony—that of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church of America, and at a date as recent as 1893. The writer is not a Presbyterian, and therefore with the better grace can ask his readers to consider the character and the intellect represented in such an assembly. Here are some of our greater merchants, our greater jurists, our greater educators, our greatest statesmen, as well as our greatest missionaries, evangelists and theologians. There may be seen assembled august a gathering of representatives of Christianity in other places and on other occasions, but few that can surpass it. For sobriety of thought, for depth as well as breadth of learning, for wealth of spiritual experience, for honesty of utterance, and virility of conviction, the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in America must command attention and respect throughout the world. And this is what it said on the subject we are now considering at its gathering in the City of Washington, the capital of the nation, at the date named:—

"The Bible as we now have it, in its various translations and revisions, when freed from all errors and mistakes of translators, copyists and printers (is) the very Word of God, and consequently wholly without error."

Give to a gracious message an host of tongues.—Shakespeare.

Every violation of truth is a stab at the health of human society.—Emerson.

"A NEW DEFINITION OF FAITH"

J. Warren White

As I was reading an article recently with the caption—"Letters to Unknown Friends," and written by one whose worldly wisdom would not be questioned, I was surprised that he should say, "I am not sure that a good definition of faith would not be, Trust in one's spiritual imagination." "It is founded on experience."

I am free to say that if that was my experience of what faith is, it would be hardly worth considering; in fact I should label such an experience, Uncertainties, with the word spiritual left out.

I think Mr. Abbott has selected a very poor word for an expression of faith. Taking the Bible use of the word imagination, imagine, imagined and imagines, in every instance but one the words are used in connection with evil. Here are a few samples:

In Gen. 6:5, "And God saw that the wickedness of man was great in the earth, and that every imagination of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually." In Gen. 8:21, "The imagination of man's heart is evil from his youth." The prophet Jeremiah (9-14) declares what the Lord saith, "Because they have forsaken my law which I set before them, and have not obeyed my voice, neither walked therein; but have walked after the imagination of their own heart, and after Baalim, which their fathers taught them." Also, in Jer. 13:10, the Lord speaks again through his prophet, "This evil people, which refuse to hear my words, which walk in the imagination of their heart, and walk after other gods to serve them, and to worship them, shall even be as this girdle which is good for nothing."

It might be interesting to consider this girdle for a moment, as the girdle is used as a symbol of truth. "Stand therefore, having your loins girt about with truth."

Jeremiah was told to take a girdle and put it on his loins, then take the girle and go to Euphrates, dig a hole and hide it. When he took it out he found the girdle was marred—good for nothing. It may well symbolize truth that has come from Babylon; it is pretty apt to be marred. There has been too much of the imaginations of the human heart mixed in the weaving of the girdle.

(Continued next week)

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

We, whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones.

This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of their paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

THE BIBLE: ITS PRINCIPLES AND TEXTS

As indicated by the title this book is divided into three sections. The first consists of a remarkable disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "principles" in formulated propositions, and the third expounds in a clear, impressive and homelitic manner particular "Texts." The knotty and perplexing texts of the Bible are united and solved satisfactorily to the most fastidious and critical. More than one hundred and fifteen subjects of intense interest to every Bible student are formally discussed. Both simple and scholarly—the child is fascinated and taught; the scholar is entertained and instructed. Bible lovers, here is a feast for you. Throw open the door of your home; let The Bible—its Principles and its Texts come in and bless you and your family. 309 pages, 5x7 1-2 inches, durably and handsomely bound in whole cloth, with title embossed on back in gold. One copy, $1.10, two copies or more $1.00 each. R. G. Huggins, 10623 Lee Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

TWO TRACTS By J. L. WINCE

"Salvation" and "Resurrection" two tracts by J. L. Wince, can not fail to arouse the interest of every believer. They deal with vital questions in a most convincing manner. The price is 10c each, 12 for $1.00. For sale by S. Roxanna Wince, Fercreton, Ind.

Pungent Statements.—The grinding process of time is at work everywhere, blotting out and destroying all the ways of man. The busy pompous fools of the day may laugh and jeer at the truth, and blaspheme the God of heaven and earth; but they will soon be as though they had not been: their voices will soon be heard no more; their very names will be forgotten and they shall be closed away as the vision of the night.

"When, oh, when, shall we learn that loyalty to Christ is tested far more by the strength of our sympathy with truth than by the intensity of our hatred of error. I will tell you what to hate. Hate hypocricy: hate can't: hate intolerance, oppression, injustice; hate Pharisaism; hate them as Christ hated them, with a deep, living, God-like hatred. But do not hate men in intellectual error. To hate a man for his error is as unwise as to hate one who, in casting up an account, has made an error against himself.

ANNA DREW

Dixon, Ill.

"The milk of human kindness is never more diluted than when gossips are at the pump.—Price.

Books and Tracts
By W. H. WILSON

A BIBLE STUDY OF HADES.....15c each, or 5 for 50c.
(As compared with our modern ideas).
A critical study of Hell, showing the difference in the word in the past and in the present time.

STUDENTS TEXT BOOK 50c
How to study the Bible and rightly understand God's Word. Cloth bound, 200 Pages

PINE WOODS BIBLE CLASS.....$1.25
Studies carried on between a class and its teacher. Cloth bound, 480 Pages.

CUNNINGLY DEVISED FABLES, 28 Pages.....10c

WHERE WILL YOU SPEND ETERNITY, 4 Pages, ... 25c per hundred

ARE YOU IN NEED OF MONEY, 4 Pages, 25c per hundred

WILL IT PAY TO BECOME A CHRISTIAN?.....25c
By Jas. W. Wilson. A neat Cloth book of 96 Pages which every one should read.

Bro. Wilson's Latest Book
Is Ready for Distribution
THE DESTINY OF RUSSIA AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES
96 Pages, Bound in Cloth, 25c.

W. H. WILSON, 625 North Willow Ave.
AUSTIN STA., CHICAGO, ILL.

The Restitution Publications
Send for all of the following books and tracts to
W. S. TOMLINSON, 10825 Orville Ave. N.E., Cleveland

A LETTER TO A FRIEND, 32 Pages 10c each, 12 for $1.00
FUTURE PROBATION, 150 Pages, 10c each, 12 for $1.00

The following tracts by M. Joblin:
THE KINGDOM OF GOD.
OLD MOTHER EARTH TO BE BORN AGAIN.
STRANGERS FROM THE COVENANT OF PROMISE.
VAIN WORSHIP.
NO IMMORTALITY OUT OF CHRIST.
GOD'S LOVE AND SOLICITUDE FOR MANKIND.
WHAT SHALL WE DO TO BE SAVED?
THE FOOLISHNESS OF PREACHING.
SALVATION, WHAT IS IT?
All the above are 16 page tracts, 100 for $1.00 any assortment.

THE PATERNITY OF JESUS, by M. Joblin, 132 Pages. each 10c. A work that proves Jesus was the son of God and not the natural son of Joseph.

THE SCRIPTURE SEARCHERS ASSISTANT, by M. Joblin, each 8c. A valuable aid to the study of the Scriptures, contains 400 references.

FOUR PAGE TRACTS:

Can You Believe? 10 for 10c, 50 for 25c.

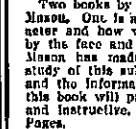
State of Man in Death, 10 for 10c, 50 for 25c, 100 for 40c.

Life and Death, 10 for 10c, 50 for 25c, 100 for 40c.

Age to Come Not a Heresy, 10 for 10c, 50 for 25c, 100 for 40c.

TWO PAGE TRACTS
Bible Pearls—Suitable for wide distribution. 1. The Gospel. 2. Coming and Kingdom of Christ by 20,000 Baptists in 1660. 3. Immateriality. 4. Kingdom of God. 5. Nature of man and Thoughts for Thinkers. 6. Two Advents. 7. What is Religion? 8. Restitution Age. 9. Destiny of the Wicked. 10. Baptism. Ten copies for 5 cents, or assorted packages of 100 for 20 cents.

Ladies! Save Money and Keep in Style by Reading McCall's Magazine and Using McCall Patterns



McCall's Magazine will help you dress and look at your best at a moderate cost by keeping you posted on the latest fashions in clothes and hats. 24 New Fashion Designs in each issue. Also valuable information on all home and personal matters. Only 50c a year, including a free pattern. Just send the name and address and 50c in stamps or coin and we will send you the next issue as a sample copy.

McCall Patterns are the most reliable and easiest to make in your own home, with accurate, handy-to-use perfect-fitting and fashion-right results. Only 10c and 15c. Can be obtained at most dealers. If not, send us 15c and we will send you the latest pattern. Send for free Pattern Catalogue.

We Will Give You Free Premiums for getting subscribers among your friends. Send for free Premium Catalogue and Cash Prize Offer.

THE McCALL COMPANY, 238 to 246 West 37th St., NEW YORK

"Signs of Character or How to Read Character at Sight"
and
"Health Through Natures Laws"

Two books by Dr. A. Wallace Mason. One is a study of character and how we may read it by the face and head. Brother Mason has made a very close study of this subject for years, and the information given in this book will prove interesting and instructive. Price 25c; 78 Pages.

The other is a work which tells how to gain and keep health as its title says, "through nature's laws." Every family should have a copy.

Address Bro. Mason, care Restitution.

Census Blank
MEMBERSHIP CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA

Name .....

Address .....
Street Town State

By whom Immersed ..... Date .....

Fill out the above and send to "The Census Editor," The Restitution, 803 Parkwood Drive, Cleveland, O.

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co.
WHOLESALE OPTICIANS

We make a specialty of High Grade Prescription Work, and carry a full line of all kinds of Optical goods. All orders filled same day as received.

"S. K. N." SERVICE

Means prompt returns, careful work, moderate prices. Goods shipped to all parts of the country.

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co. 332 SCHOFIELD BUILDING CLEVELAND, OHIO

SPECIAL OFFER!

IN ORDER to increase the circulation of The Restitution, the following special offer is made:

One new subscriber for 1 year, choice of:
W. H. Wilson's "Student's Text Book," regular price.....50c
Or 5 Copies of "Cunningly Devised Fables," reg. price 50c
Or 5 Copies of "Bible Study of Hades," reg. price 50c

For Two New Subscribers
One Copy "Pine Woods Bible Class," 480 pages, rg. price, $1.25
Or "The Bible, Its Principles and Texts," 309 pages, reg., $1.25
Or One Hundred of Bro. Joblin's Tracts, regular price $1.00

Here is a chance to get some of the books you all should own. By making special arrangements with the authors we are able to offer them to you without the payment of a cent on your part, just a few minutes effort. We cannot afford to continue this offer long, so take advantage of it at once, get some new subscribers today.

THE RESTITUTION, 803 Parkwood Drive

50 YEARS' EXPERIENCE
PATENTS
TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.
Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the

Scientific American.
A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.
MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

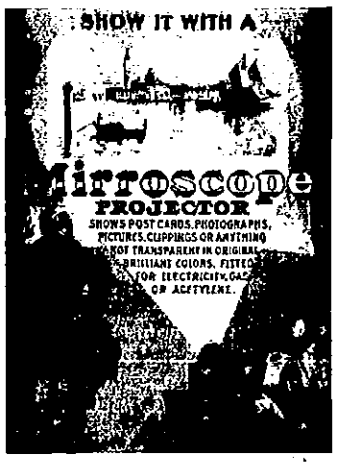
WANTED!
Subscription Solicitors

We will pay an actual salary to men and women in all parts of the country, to act as agents for The Restitution. This salary will be based on your ability to take subscriptions, take care of renewals, and make collections, and will be paid weekly. You can devote all or part of your time, and can make a special offer to prospective subscribers, which we will tell you about if you are interested. We will have some announcements to make in the near future that will also help you.

If you want to work, sit down NOW and write for full information.

B. W. NUTT, Manager.

SUBSCRIBE FOR
Words of Life
the publication of the Conditional Immortality Mission of Great Britain, advocating Life and Advent truths.
Terms: 1 copy 35c per annum, 12 copies to one address 25c per copy per annum.
Sample copy on application to
WILLIAM G. ROTHE
1301 Park Pl. Brooklyn, N. Y.



YOU will get genuine pleasure from an hour or two spent with the "Mirroscope" these long winter evenings. Pictures, Photos, Post Cards, Etc. are shown in exact reproduction same as with a high priced Stereopticon, can be used in any home and operated with Electricity, Gas or Acetylene. Prices $2.50, $5.00, $7.50, $10.00, $15.00, $20.00, according to size. Sent anywhere in the U. S. Send for one today.

HOME ILLUMINATED PICTURE CO.
311 SCHOFIELD BUILDING CLEVELAND, OHIO

Less than Half a Cent a Day

The Restitution costs a Dollar and a Half a year, that's less than half A Cent a day or three cents a copy. You can't afford to be without it. If you are a subscriber get some one else to subscribe.

Help to Get Them on the List

Sample Copies of The Restitution
May be obtained for a stamp. Send for one.

"A LETTER TO A FRIEND"

This tract needs no introduction further than to say that it is one of the most convincing Gospel sermons ever written. Originally written as a letter to a friend by Sister C. C. Woodruff it was published and has sold extensively in tract form. In its present edition it is a 32 page tract, the price is

10c each; 12 for $1.00

There is no better way of spreading the Gospel than handing out one of these tracts wherever you have the opportunity.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

"Future Probation,
is that Awaiting any of the Unrighteous?"

Here is a work by Wm. Glenn Moncrieff that every one should read. It is one of the best things on the subject ever written and will appeal to every student of the word. It is a book of 150 pages, made to sell at 25c. We have a limited number left which we will sell at the special price of

10c each; 12 for $1.00

Send for some at once.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

Oregon State College

The Restitution
IS THE OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA.

The Restitution.

Founded in A. D. 1852

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:16, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (3 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Lk. 19:12-15), who will be King of Kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-58); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17), and belief in, the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Lk. 13:3), and obedience by Baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ." (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31).

ROBT. G. HUGGINS, Editor.

—Terms of— Subscription
ONE YEAR, $1.50;
SIX MONTHS 75 CTS. IN ADVANCE

VOL. 60 | CLEVELAND, OHIO, MARCH 19, 1912 | No. 61

IN THANKFUL CONTENT

The world, they say, is getting old and weary as can be;
But write me down as saying it's good enough for me!
It's good enough with all its grief,
its pleasure and its pain;
And there's a ray of sunshine for every drop of rain.
They stumble in the lonesome dark, they cry for light to
see;
But write me down as saying it's light enough for me!
It's light enough to lead us on from where we faint and fall,
That the hilltop nearest heaven wears the brightest crown
of all!
They talk about the fading hopes that mock the years to be;
But write me down as saying there's hope enough for me!
Over the old world's wailing the sweeter music swells;
In the stormiest night I listen and hear the bells—the bells,
This world of God's is brighter than we ever dream or know;
Its burdens are growing lighter—and its love that makes them so!
And I am thankful I am living where love's blessedness I
see,
'Neath a heaven that's forgiving,
where the bells ring
"home" to me.

—Selected by Chas. A. Goss.

BIOGRAPHIC SKETCH OF BROTHER AND SISTER

Written by Sister Hoyt in Her Ninety-first Year

"Edwin Hoyt was born in Vermont in 1813," writes Sister Emma Jackman, of Grand Rapids, Mich., "and died March 23, 1901, aged 87 years."

Sister Jackman continues: "I will enclose a little writing of Sister Hoyt's, telling of some of their history, but she was too feeble to finish it. I also send a poem which was a great favorite of hers, and which she learned many years ago."

Though the following biographic sketch was written by Sister Hoyt in her 91st year, it is well written, and intensely interesting, the editor and reader only regretting that the MS is unfinished. It follows:

In June, 1837 we were married and went to Vermont. We lived with father Hoyt's family that summer.

A young lady who was there went out to ride with a young man one Sunday afternoon. They returned at night with the startling report that they had been in a nearby town, and heard a man by the name of Miller lecture on the prophecies, and that he said the world would come to an end in 1843. They also brought a book in which these lectures, or part of them, were published. We were so thoroughly imbued with the teaching of the conversion of the world and the millenium prior to the coming of Christ, that we gave little heed to it; did not even read the book that they brought

In 1841 my husband found a book in a family where we boarded, in Chautauqua county, N. Y., where we had just gone to reside said to have been published 150 years previous to that time, by Spaulding, a Congregational minister, setting forth in plain, strong terms the views we no wentertain of the pre-millenial coming of Christ to reign and subject the world to himself. He read it with profound interest; indeed, became so absorbed in it he almost forgot other obligations, gave himself carefully to the teaching confirming it with Scripture, not realizing that it had any affinity with Millerism, which was now rapidly spreading. He was then ministering to two struggling churches in Chautauqua, where Presbyterians lived amicably with Congregationalists in the same church (since entirely divided), and he preached this new doctrine to them and they liked it. One lawyer told him it was the best sermon he ever preached. But some wise ones began to suspect there was some heresy creeping in from its similarity to Mr. Miller's teachings, which in 1842-3 was receiving large accession, not only from the people, but also from many educated men and eloquent speakers, as well as bitter opposition from ministers, church members, and the world.

It soon became apparent that my husband, having become tainted with this heresy, could expect no farther fellowship with the churches where he had been, and we were all afloat with no church home and no means of living. I had now become as deeply interested as he was in the question, What is truth? And from that time we pursued our investigations jointly and came to about the same conclusions.

In the fall of '42 and winter of '43 we read on the subject, what we found and listened to lectures that came in our way, and became associated with a number of adherents of the faith called "Millerites"; good, intelligent, consecrated christians, from different churches and some very talented teachers, well acquainted with the scripture. My husband was passing through Buffalo when Mr. Miller, J. V. Himes, and other leading speakers were holding a long series of meetings in the largest theatre in the city, which was crowded day and night with excited listeners. He stopped to listen. They healed him with books, tracts, pamphlets, and papers by the best writers on the prophecies, which he brought home, and we read them carefully and discussed them with Bible in hand. We read also a book of the lectures by Dr. Driffield, many years pastor of the first Presbyterian church of Detroit, a leading minister in the state who gave his people for years, Wednesday evening lectures on the prophecies Some of them were published, making quite a large book. We gained much instruction and help from these, especially in regard to principles of interpretation of the sacred writings.

ELD. EDWIN HOYT

Many of the events of 1843-4 are so intertwined in my mind, it is not easy to seperate them, but by that time we had become firmly established in the teaching that our Lord would return to earth to bring the Milleneum; that the word and the signs indicated that his coming was near; but as to the exact time we could not say until the latter part of '44, when we allowed ourselves to be carried along with the great wave of enthusiasm that swept over the land, which was almost irresistable.

We attended several camp-meetings in '43; one in Niagara Co., N. Y., where I was baptised in Lake Ontario, by elder Galusha, my husband having previously submit to that ordinance in Rochester. That was one of the many things we had to learn. Well, 1843 passed with great disappointment to many, but the leading ones had not been idle, they had bee searching diligently and found that the true 1843 was realy 1844, and would extend through that year. They also had found that, as in the type, the High Priest came on from the most holy place after making the atonement on the tenth day of the seventh month, to bless the waiting people, so in the anti-type our———

Sister Hoyt fell asleep in Jesus October 8, 1909. Following is the poem which Sister Jackman says was a great favorite with her:

On the shady side of eighty,
So the thoughtless world might say;
But the path is shining brighter,
Leading unto perfect day.

'Tis the Earthward side grows shady,
And the Heavenward side grows bright,
As we near the unseen city,
Where God's glory is the light.

Though the steps grow weak and weary
Down the steps of quite fourscore,
Still the soul grows strong and buoyant,
In the light from yonder shore.

On the Heavenward side of eighty
True, the eyes are growing dim,
But the spirit vision clearer,
Sees the guiding hand of Him.

Who so tenderly hath led us
Through the wilderness of years;
Sees the pierced hand draw nearer,
Soon to wipe away our tears.

As I read the precious bible—
Read and love it more and more—
'Till I seem to grow acquainted
With the saintly souls of yore.

How I long for the last blest greeting
When the trump of God shall call;
In the air my Savior meeting
To welcome Him as Lord of all.

But can I, so sin polluted,
Ever hope such joy to gain?
Only by the cleansing virtue,
Of the Lamb for sinners slain.

Years of toil and pain and sorrow,
These are almost over now;
But the endless life that's coming
Writes no wrinkle on the brow.

Earth grows small and dim and distant,
Slipping from my weary feet;
New Jerusalem is coming;
Gleams the golden glory street.

Breezes sweet from life's pure river
Float through pearly gates ajar,
Trees of life—I almost see them,
Waiving o'er the wall afar.

Harps of gold—I almost hear them
Where the songs of victoy are
Youth immortall forms of beauty
Than the noonday sun more bright.

These have come through tribulations,
Washed their robes and made them white
In the flowing blood of Jesus.
Who is the city's light.

There is no sickness, there's no sighing,
There's no parting, there's no dying,
Weary age nor shades of night.

THE TRUTH DEPENDED—No. THREE

An Ex-Methodist Pleads for the Truth

Mrs. Chas. Thomas

When I first heard the truth, there were several texts that to my mind directly contradicted it. One of them was what Jesus said to the thief: "Verily I say unto thee, today shalt thou be [with me in paradise" (Luke 23:43).

We must remember that punctuation marks are not inspired by God, although the words are. By placing the comma where it belongs we read, "Verily I say unto thee today, Thou shalt be with me in paradise;" He doesn't say when. He gave the promise that day, but it was a future promise. We know that three days later he said to Mary, "Touch me not, for I am not yet ascended to my Father," How could the thief have been with him in paradise when he said himself he had not yet ascended to his Father? Again Jesus says, "No man hath ascended up to heaven, but he that came down from heaven, even the son of man which is in heaven" (John 3:13). "Now is Christ risen from the dead and become the first fruits of them that slept" (I. Cor. 15:20). This text proves several things: First, that none of the holy men of old have been raised from the dead, or have gone to heaven. They still sleep, and the promise to the thief must of necessity be a future one. If some go to heaven and some to hell at death, what is there for Christ to resurrect?

Another text that was hard to understand was, "And he (Elijah) stretched himself three times upon the child, and the soul of the child came into him again, and he revived." This sounds as if the soul had left and gone to some other place, but let us look again in verse 17. It says the child's sickness was so severe that there was "no breath left in him," and in verse 22 it states that the soul (breath) of the child "came unto him again, and he revived." The original word translated breath in verse 17 is nephesh, and this same word is translated soul in verse 22. Verse 17 says there was no nephesh (breath) left in him, and verse 22 says the nephesh (breath) of the child came unto him again and he revived. So I found that all things I brought up to contradict these facts, only made them stronger when understood as they really are. Instead of proving the error that we were taught, they establish the truth.

Now, if the soul of man is mortal heaven and hell are both different from what we supposed. Instead of heaven being a place where the saints are enjoying their reward, it is a place inhabited by God and his holy angels. What is more, we have no Scripture which says that after man is made immortal that he will then go to heaven. On the contrary, we are taught plainly that Christ will come to us, and that the place of his abode where he shall reign as king, will be on this earth, the land that was promised to Abraham from the beginning of the gospel.

THE LIE

"He (the devil) is a Liar and the Father of it" (John 8:44)

"Thou Shalt Not Surely Die" (Gen. 3:4)

By this lie Eve was "beguiled" (Gen. 3:13).

By this lie the church is "corrupted" (II. Cor. 11:3).

By this lie the whole world has been deceived (Rev. 12:9).

From this lie springs the "doctrines of devils" (I. Tim. 4:1).

And from this lie has sprung all the "fables" unto which Paul said the church would be turned (II. Tim. 4:4); such as immortal soulism; spiritualism; belief in ghosts; going to heaven at death; mansions in the skies; purgatory; eternal torments, etc.

This lie is the basis of every heathen religion, the mark of every false religious system, and the root of the great apostacy of Christendom.

To believe and teach this lie, as did the Pharisees, Jesus declares is to do the will of its author and to make him (the devil) our father (John 8:41-44).

In short, this lie is the devil's religion, with which he has deceived not only Eve, but the whole world, and because "they receive not the love of the truth, God has sent them a strong delusion that they should believe a lie, that they all might be damned who believe not the truth" (II. Thess. 2:8-11).

THE TRUTH

"Thy Word is Truth" (John 17:17)

"Thou Shalt Surely Die" (Gen. 2:17)

"Dust thou art and unto dust shalt thou return" (Gen. 3:19).

"The spirit (or breath) shall return to God who gave it" (Eccl. 12:7).

"His breath (or spirit) goeth forth—his thoughts perish" (Psa. 146:4).

"In death there is no remembrance of thee" (Psa. 6:5).

"The dead praise not the Lord" (Psa. 115:17).

"The dead know not anything" (Eccl. 9:5).

But

"God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son, that whosoever believeth in him, should not perish, but have everlasting life" (John 3:16).

"I am the resurrection and the life: he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live" (John 11:25).

"All that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth" (John 5:28, 29).

"I ascend unto my Father" (John 20:17).

"Where I go ye can not come" (John 13:33).

"No man hath ascended up to heaven, save the son of man" (John 3:13).

"And if I go, I will came again" (John 14:3).

"The Lord himself shall descend from heaven. The dead in Christ shall rise first, and so shall we ever be with the Lord" (I. Thess. 4:16-17).

C. A. NOKES.

Sac City, Ia.

THE SIGNS OF THE TIMES

A Wallace Mason

Dear Brother Huggins:

Some people believe that Daniel 8:23, 24 and 11:21-45 are yet future, and is a description of what is to happen at the time of the end. If that is the case there certainly must be a dual fulfillment of the prophecies, for all ancient historians record the fulfillment of these prophecies by Antiochus Epiphanes IV. who was styled Theos, or God, and who again and again sold the position of high priest among the Jews at Jerusalem, and laterly captured that city; set up the worship of heathen gods in the temple, desecrated the altar, and offered swine's flesh upon it to his gods. Jupiter Clympius he set up as the great god there; he plundered the temple, and caused a terrible massacre to take place in B. C. 170. He most certainly tried to exalt himself above the God of Gods, and came to his end, none helping him. If the brethren will read the history of these times in the works of Josephus, they will find ample confirmation of these statements. Or let them consult any encyclopedia in regard to the life of Antioch IV., or any good ancient history. Let them read the history of that period commencing the great invasion of Grecia by the fourth Persian kin, as described in the beginning of Daniel 11, and read on to the time of Antiochus Epiphanes, and they will be struck with how marvelously exact that chapter was fulfilled; so much so that our so-called higher critics contend that this chapter was not a prophecy at all, but was written after the events had occurred, and they give the supposed date of writing the book of Daniel as B. C. 150 or 160; but I have positive proof in my possession that the book must have been written from a human standpoint long before that.

In regard to the sad blundering by so many writers of the past who have tried to enumerate the ten kings: it simply arises from the fact that they have all tried to construe Hebrew literature (and that prophetic) to fit into English literature. Let us see some Hebrew modes of thought in regard to the use of some numbers. In the parable of the virgins (Matt. 25) the ten virgins represent all those who have come into Christ. Those who have continued faithful to the end are those who had the oil. Those who had failed to go on to perfection are those who did not have the oil. So also in Luke 19:12-26. The ten servants there spoken of represent the whole of those who have made a covenant with Christ. Ten in these cases and some others that might be mentioned, do not mean merely the number ten, but an indefinite number, or the whole referred to, whether it be ten or ten million.

This principle of Hebrew prophetic thought is known and used by many in regard to other numbers. For instance, seven is frequently used in the Scriptures, meaning perfection. The ten toes in the image of Daniel 2, simply means the whole of the kings that were to occupy that territory on which the image stood in its last divided days of iron and clay. The same is the case with the ten horns of Revelations. Let the wise understand.

Troy, Ohio.

GOLD DUST

Religion must draw, not drive, to win.

The brightest lightening comes from the blackest clouds, and the purest faith from the severest trials.

Peter admonishes the builders for eternity to add layer to layer on the walls of character—faith, virtue, knowledge temperance, patience, godliness, brotherly kindness, love.

"If we examined own our faults attentively we should have less time to detect and more inclination to pardon those of others."

If you mean to act nobly and seek to know best things which God hath put within the reach of men, you must fix your mind on that end and not what will happen to you because of it

Through the portals of the grave humanity passes into the night "when no man can work." Those who are truly wise will improve the hours of life's day.

Dixon, Ill. Anna Drew

SELECTIONS

For lo, he that formeth the mountains, and createth the wind, and declareth unto man what is his thought, that maketh the morning darkness, and treadeth upon the high places of the earth, the Lord, the God of hosts is his name.—Amos 4:13.

And he changeth the times and seasons; he removeth kings, and setteth up kings; he giveth wisdom unto the wise, and knowledge to them that know understanding.—Dan. 2:21.

But evil is wrought by want of thought, as well as want of heart—Wood.

Say not always what you know, but always know what you say.—Claudius.

To give heartfelt praise to noble actions is, in some measure, making them our own.—La Rochefoucauld.

E. A. B.

Our business in life is not to get ahead of other people, but to get ahead of ourselves.

He that speaks what is really in him will find men to listen.—Thomas Carlyle.

Our doubts are traitors, and make us lose the good we oft might win, by fearing to attempt.—Shakespeare.

There can be no real love when duty is neglected.

Character is what a man is—in the dark.—Bishop Berry.

The Restitution

Issued weekly by

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING COMPANY.

Entered as second-class matter under act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

TERMS.

One year $1.50; six months 75 cents, in advance.

ROBT. G. HUGGINS.....Editor
BUELL W. NUTT.....Manager

BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Burton H. Lang, Harry Pott,
Chas. A. Goss, Robt. G. Pate,
Buell W. Nutt, D. C. Robison,
W. B. Tomlinson,

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

All remittances should be sent by bank draft, post office money order or express money order to The Restitution Publishing Co., 803 Parkwood drive, Cleveland, Ohio.

All communication intended for publication should be sent to the editor, Robt. G. Huggins, 10623 Lee avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

It is necessary to adhere strictly to the rule of not returning unused manuscripts. Writers will please keep copies, or risk the loss.

While the editor exercises a general supervision over the articles appearing in The Restitution, his endorsement does not extend to the interpretation of details nor the exegesis of particular texts in the writings of contributors.

Cleveland, Ohio., March 19, 1912

EDITORIAL

We are glad to welcome two new contributors to The Restitution this week—brethren Nokes and Wince. We congratulate them on the brevity and excellence of their articles.

We have just issued another large edition of the four-page tract entitled, "The State of Man in Death." It is only one cent per copy. Notwithstanding its cheapness, it is one of our best doctrinal tracts; wherever it goes it preaches a strong sermon in defense of the truth. Scatter them by the thousands.

Bro. T. N. Frantz, of Canton, Kansas, writes:

On account of health I wish to locate west of the Rocky mountains in some place where they have or want a church and a jeweler. If any reader knows of such a location, kindly drop me a letter. I want to be where there are those in the faith.

We are pleased this week to be able to give the reader a likeness and life sketch of Bro. Hoyt. Bro. Knapp has sent $1.50 for electrotype expenses. The cut only cost $1.00, so we are holding 50 cents to the order of Bro. Knapp. We have no doubt but he will order it applied on the electrotype of some brother whose life he would like to read in The Restitution. Brethren of the ministry who would like to have their life printed in our columns, can send us their MS, photo, and $1.00 for the electrotype, and we will attend to the rest. Who is next?

Sister Clark McClellan writes from Boise, Idaho, where she has gone for a surgical operation, dating February 29: "Dear Brother Huggins: I received your card; thank you. Sister Knowels lives just four blocks from my hospital. She has been in to see me four or five times. She is a good sister. I have been very sick, but I am thankful to our good Father in heaven that I am recovering." We rejoice with our sister at her bright prospects of recovery; also because she has had the consoling presence of Sister Knowels during her illness.

THE WISDOM OF THE WISE MADE FOOLISH BY GOD

Recently, says a southern journal, the followers of Alexander Dowie predicted that Christ would come to the city of Zion, at Chicago, some time during this present year, 1912. Pastor Russell says he came 1874.

Mr. Russell teaches that Christ came in 1874; that the dead saints were raised in 1878; that the end of the present political state will be in 1914; that satan will be bound for a thousand years; that Christ and the glorified saints will spend the thousand years teaching the wicked to accept Christ; that all who accept Christ during this time among the wicked, who have been raised from the dead, will become perfect men and women—be restored to the estate of Adam before he sinned and will live forever; that those who do not accept Christ will be blotted out of existence. His whole theory is devised for the purpose of establishing the idea of restoring the wicked to perfection of human nature and granting them eternal life as men. And this is to be accomplished during the millenium. "But the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished" (Rev. 20:5). Who are the "rest of the dead?" Read verse 4. But hear Mr. Russell on this: "In this verse the words, 'But the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished' are spurious. They are not found in the oldest and most reliable Greek MSS., the Sinaitic Vatican Nos. 1209 and 1160, nor the Syriac MSS." (Plan of the Ages, volume 1, page 288). Now to show you how much Mr. Russell is to be trusted as a scholar, take an Oxford teacher's Bible and turn to the "helps" in the back of the book. On page 34 you find something about these manuscripts and versions.

"Vatican, known as B. (cent. IV.), in the Vatican Library. The first and second epistles to Timothy and the epistles to Titus and Philemon are wanting. Heb. 9:14 to the end, and Revelations have been supplied by a modern hand (cent. XV.)."

"A similar list (book of New Testament) may be made out from the Syriac version, which can hardly be later than the second century. In that version, II. Peter, II. and III. John, Jude and the Revelation are wanting."

Now note, that with Mr. Russell the fact that this verse is left out of those manuscripts is sufficient reason for dropping it out. But the same authorities leave out the whole book of Revelations, and hence leave the Millenium out altogether, and so he is dead by his own authorities. On that same page in the Bible we learn that Mr. Tischendorf found the Sinaitic manuscript. Mr. Tischendorf also edited a critical Greek text of the New Testament. I have before me a copy of the Greek New Testament, which shows all the changes made by Mr. Tischendorf and six other learned critics. Not one of these leave out the verse under consideration or mark it as doubtful. They change the first word, "but" and place "and" in its place. They also leave out the word "again" and read it, "lived not . till the thousand years were finished." What confidence can we place in a man who will deal thus with what the common people do not understand?

Again, the Revised Version was made by the most learned men in Europe and America, who had access to all the old Greek manuscripts and all the various versions, and they did not leave it out nor mark it doubtful although they followed the Greek critics above cited in leaving out the word "again."

COMMUNICATIONS

Bro. Huggins: I noticed in the last paper a few lines of poetry written by Sister Crozier. The mention of her name takes me back sixty years ago, when I was a small boy. She and husband came to Solina on a preaching tour, and made their home while there, at my father's house, Stephen Hogarth. Elder Crozier was a young energetic man then. They were both fine singers; my father and his four brothers were also. You may depend there was some good singing. As I was only about seven years old, you will not suppose that I remember much about the preaching. There was one piece that they sang that I had never heard before; it remained a favorite with us for a long time after. It was No. 274 in the old Millenium Harp.

I shall expect to see a report of their life work in the paper. They both devoted their time, talents and means in doing what good they could. Sister Crozier (Marie) edited a small paper for a short time, which was a gem, "The Child's Friend." If it could have been supported and continued, there might have been many more believers at the present time than there are. Lack of Sunday school work and good papers have been a great drawback to the cause. I shall be pleased to see a report of their work.

Dr. Mason gave you a description of the little church at Solina in his report of the death of my cousin, Mrs. Sarah Pascoe last year. It has been built longer than he was informed, as it was either 50 or 60 years ago this summer that he preached there. I was either seven or eight years old. We moved away when I was nine years old.

J. E. HOGARTH
Maude, Canada.

In the last Restitution (No. 58) in the article written by O. J. Allard, he makes the statement that from Adam to Moses there was no law. I wish you or some one would explain this to me through the columns of The Restitution. I do not ask it for controversy, but I do not understand it. Sin is transgression of the law, is it not? And there certainly was sin in the world from Adam's time on. I have some very dear friends who are Adventists, and when they bring this part of the Scripture up to me, I want to be able to understand it the way I should.

MRS. ORPHA SANFORD.
Aurora, Ill.

(As the question is more personal to Bro. Allard than any one else, we leave it for his solution.—Editor.)

Dear Restitution:

Just a line to say that I am receiving the paper each week as it is published and has time to come about 4000 miles. Verily we are living in fast times, as well as troublous times, for look where we will, we get information of some kind of trouble. Even in your great country of America, we notice you are getting your share, as well as the countries of Europe, and other parts of the habitable. There is a great cry of peace, peace, in this our day and generation, but when will it come? Surely not till we get the King of Peace reigning on the throne of his father David.

I was pleased to see our young Sister Viola Gazeley's article in The Restitution. If she keeps on she will prove to be quite a help to the paper. She was quite a little girl when I last saw her; as also a young sister Skeels, of Sholes Ferry, Oregon. I was to a conference held at Sholes Ferry, in the summer of 1889, as a delegate from Seattle, Wash. She too, was a small child at that time. What a change! I am pleased to learn that some of the young are taking hold of the gospel plow so as to continue the work that was carried on so many years by those dear ones that are now laid away to sleep in Jesus, until he shall come to awake them out of sleep.

L. C. CATTELL
Eastbourne, England.

CORN SHEAVES

Gathered from Everywhere

"Mouldy Christians."—"This is the Methodist Times' description of nominal methodist believers. No wonder, seeing they are given to the consumption of 'Rome's mouldy wine (Rev. xvii. 12).

Scepticism and Co., Limited.—"Scepticism, within certain limits," says the Christian Commonwealth, "has advantages to confer on the world. One has," it goes to say, "but to recall the names of Socrates, Galileo, Luther and others, to see this." The proposition assumes that the established religion of Rome, Canterbury, and Oxford is identical with the Bible which in truth it is not in scarcely the least degree. This alters the case altogether.

Concensus of Humanity.—"If there not, as has been asked," says the Christian Commonwealth again, "a modest probability that the concensus of humanity may be right, and that that which contradicts its common instincts may not be truth after all." This applies very well where the facts of common experience and observation are outraged, as in the case of the bottomless immortality of the soul; but as regards "the things of God," they are, as Paul says, known to no man (1 Cor. ii. 11). Hence, the voice of the people is not the voice of God, but the voice of the devil (Matt. xvi. 19).

Substitution.—"We might as well affirm," says Bonar, in the Protestant Standard, "that Moses did not teach creation in Genesis or Israel's deliverance in Exodus as that he did not profess to promulgate substitution in Leviticus." This may be fine rhetoric, but it is not pure truth. Sacrificial death is not a thing of substitution, but a matter of fellowship, hence the believer of the truth is said to suffer with Christ, to die with Christ, to be crucified with Christ; all of which is incompatible with substitutionary sacrifice. The officer under the law died representatively in the animal; and so with Christ, "if one died for all, then were all dead;" or as the N.V. has it, "they have all died."

The Popes.—"The Popes themselves," says Widdows in a lecture reported in the Protestant Standard, "forget their position and their assumed place as vicars of Christ, and instead of apostles they were more like apostates; instead of pilots, they were more like pirates."

The Resurrection of the Body.—"This doctrine," says Dr. Bayley, in the Morning Light, "has no foundation in Scripture." "The Scripture doctrine," says he, "was that man never died. This grand truth," says he, "is implanted in our nature. Talk to little children," he goes on to say, "about heaven and the angels, and they will listen for hours." Just so Mr. Bayley, children will listen with remarkable interest to anything in the shape of "fable" (2 Tim. iv. 4). Your "grand truth," however is unfortunately only the grand lie of the serpent (Gen. iii. 4.)

Revised Doxology.—Bro. L. C. Cattell, of England, has sent us the doxology revised as follows:

Praise God from whom all blessings flow,
To all his creatures here below,
Praise him above, ye heavenly one,
All praise the Father with his Son.

The name of God in more than fifty languages:—Eolian and Doric, Ilos; Arabic, Allah; Armorian, Teuti; Assyrian, Elish; Celtic and old Gaelic, Diu; Chinese, Prussa; Coromandel, Brama; Cretan, Thios; Chaldaic, Elah; Danish and Swedish, Gut; Japanese, Goezur; Latin, Deus; Low Latin, Dieu; Lapp, Jubinal; Low Breton, Doue; Magaian, Orst; Madagascar, Zannar; Old German, Diet; Olala, Deu; Dutch, Godt; Egyptian (old), Tent; Egyptian (modern), Tenu; English and old Saxon, Got; Flemish, Goed; French, Dieu; Finnish, Jumala; Greek, Theos; German and Swiss, Gott; Gothic, Guth; Hebrew, Ail; Hindoostanee, Rain; Italian, Dio; Irish, Dia; Icelandic, Godh; Provencial, Diou; Portuguese, Deos; Polish, Bog; Persian, Sire; Peruvian, Pachacamac; Pannonian, Istu; Polaca, Bung; Runic, As; Syriac and Turkish, Alah; Spanish, Dios; Teutonic, Goth; Tartar, Magatal; Welsh, Duw; Zemblian, Fetlze; Norwegian, Gud.

SUPREME IMPORTANCE OF SPIRITUAL THINGS

I. Kings 3:7

Sister Frances Russell

"He who would govern others must first be governed himself."

In this lesson we have a youthful king asking the giver of all good and perfect gifts for "an understanding heart." What nobleness and fineness of mould is brought to us in that he asked for something spiritual, rather than something material! It is a psychological truth that persons who depend upon the material things are not happy. There is a certain soul longing which must be satisfied in order to have real happiness.

"And now, O Lord my God, thou hast made thy servant king instead of David my father; and I am but a little child: I know not how to go out or come in," "Are we not children? Do we not need the care and protection of our heavenly Father? Are not our footsteps, our undertakings, surer when we think to ourselves, "I know not how to go out or come in," and ask the Lord for his help?

Jesus' ability and willingness to help us are both immeasurable, because his love is infinite. We are assured that Jesus will help the helpless, but we must trust and try. We can look upon ourselves as a little world. We are of the bottomless immortality of the soul; but as regards "the things of God," they are, as Paul says, known to no man (1 Cor. ii. 11). Hence, the voice of the people is not the voice of God, but the voice of the devil (Matt. xvi. 19).

Substitution.—"We might as well affirm," says Bonar, in the Protestant Standard, "that Moses did not teach creation in Genesis or Israel's deliverance in Exodus as that he did not profess to promulgate substitution in Leviticus." This may be fine rhetoric, but it is not pure truth. Sacrificial death is not a thing of substitution, but a matter of fellowship, hence the believer of the truth is said to suffer with Christ, to die with Christ, to be crucified with Christ; all of which is incompatible with substitutionary sacrifice. The officer under the law died representatively in the animal; and so with Christ, "if one died for all, then were all dead;" or as the N.V. has it, "they have all died."

The Popes.—"The Popes themselves," says Widdows in a lecture reported in the Protestant Standard, "forget their position and their assumed place as vicars of Christ, and instead of apostles they were more like apostates; instead of pilots, they were more like pirates."

The Christian life is not a doing without, but life more abundant. Those fishermen whom the gentle voice of the Master called from the sea, their boats, their nets, their business, gained the friendship of Jesus, and they became the founders of the church. Their hearts were kindled with a flame of love for Jesus and his work, and that light has been shining ever since. They were cheerful and obedient workers, keeping their tools in good repair. Stevenson has said that "every heart that has beat strong and cheerful, has left a hopeful impulse behind it in the world, and bettered the condition of mankind."

A man's success in life does not depend upon his stature, but upon his spirit. The best man, after all, is the biggest man. How can we talk of freedom when each one of us is more or less bound by the chains of some indulgence? We must be the master of our ship; we must manage the brakes, or some day these indulgences will menace our self control and develop into vices. The testimony that counts is the word of the lip plus the work of life. The living is the hammer that drives home the nail of speech. J. G. Holland has worded this in a poetic way:

"All other arguments are weak
and vain beside the logic of
a holy life;
The eloquence of speech is mean
compared with that of conduct."

We form habits of saying and doing. Now let us form habits of thinking the right way; for purity of thought develops greatness of mind and heart. Character determines our condition, so when we have a cheery faith and a sunny soul, we find that physically we are invigorated.

Let us keep above the petty disturbances of life, asking God for help in solving the problems of each day, and we will be up above the mists. Set high enough up and you will be above the fog; and while the men down in it are squabbling as to whether there is anything outside the mist, you, from your sunny station will see the far off coast, and happily catch some whiff of perfume from their shores, and see some glinting of glory upon the shining turrets of "the city that hath foundations."

OUR WAGES

A. B. Wince

"We have left all and followed thee, what shall we have therefor?" Peter seemed to regard the move that he and his fellows had made from a business standpoint of service and wages. The Saviour's answer certainly assures him that he will receive satisfactory wages when settlement is made. We are apt to take a superficial view of matters, and regard the sacrifice was to them, to thus leave everything behind that they had learned to value in this life, houses and lands, fathers and mothers, brothers and sisters, to follow one who was evidently poor, and without reputation, and whose chances for promotion to any lucrative position in this life were seemingly a bit of the question. Indeed, he shows no regard for what the world most prizes in a young man, viz., shrewdness to accumulate wealth and publicity. On the contrary, he regards such things as a hinderance to obtaining "the true riches" which will always endure.

It is true the Saviour promises an increase of those things that they were required to forsake, but lest their hearts should become surfeited with the prospects, he reminds them that there will be bitterness in the cup; that persecution will follow them even unto the death. Thus their minds are gradually weaned away from those things that perish with the using, and directed to those things which are from above. They, like the patriarchs, learn that the reward of the everlasting inheritance is not within the bounds of this life, but appertain to the [illegible] where there is no sin, sorrow, nor death. Hence, the good and evil of because of freedom is an instinct, people of all times have struggled for their freedom. Anytime it has been interfered with. We struggle with the adversary, for we feel that we cannot arise and walk when paralyzed by sin, but we can with Christ's strength. We must transcend all limits placed in our way. We must look upon Christ as an example of triumphing over difficulties and hindrances. A verse of Dennyson is good:

"I hold it truth with him who sings,
To one clear harp in divers tones,
That men may rise on stepping stones,
Of their dead selves to higher things."

The Christian life is not a doing without, but life more abundant. Those fishermen whom the gentle voice of the Master called from the sea, their boats, their nets, their business, gained the friendship of Jesus, and they became the founders of the church. Their hearts were kindled with a flame of love for Jesus and his work, and that light has been shining ever since. They were cheerful and obedient workers, keeping their tools in good repair. Stevenson has said that "every heart that has beat strong and cheerful, has left a hopeful impulse behind it in the world, and bettered the condition of mankind."

A man's success in life does not depend upon his stature, but upon his spirit. The best man, after all, is the biggest man. How can we talk of freedom when each one of us is more or less bound by the chains of some indulgence? We must be the master of our ship; we must manage the brakes, or some day these indulgences will menace our self control and develop into vices. The testimony that counts is the word of the lip plus the work of life. The living is the hammer that drives home the nail of speech. J. G. Holland has worded this in a poetic way:

"All other arguments are weak
and vain beside the logic of
a holy life;
The eloquence of speech is mean
compared with that of conduct."

We form habits of saying and doing. Now let us form habits of thinking the right way; for purity of thought develops greatness of mind and heart. Character determines our condition, so when we have a cheery faith and a sunny soul, we find that physically we are invigorated.

Let us keep above the petty disturbances of life, asking God for help in solving the problems of each day, and we will be up above the mists. Set high enough up and you will be above the fog; and while the men down in it are squabbling as to whether there is anything outside the mist, you, from your sunny station will see the far off coast, and happily catch some whiff of perfume from their shores, and see some glinting of glory upon the shining turrets of "the city that hath foundations."

OUR WAGES

A. B. Wince

"We have left all and followed thee, what shall we have therefor?" Peter seemed to regard the move that he and his fellows had made from a business standpoint of service and wages. The Saviour's answer certainly assures him that he will receive satisfactory wages when settlement is made. We are apt to take a superficial view of matters, and regard the sacrifice was to them, to thus leave everything behind that they had learned to value in this life, houses and lands, fathers and mothers, brothers and sisters, to follow one who was evidently poor, and without reputation, and whose chances for promotion to any lucrative position in this life were seemingly a bit of the question. Indeed, he shows no regard for what the world most prizes in a young man, viz., shrewdness to accumulate wealth and publicity. On the contrary, he regards such things as a hinderance to obtaining "the true riches" which will always endure.

It is true the Saviour promises an increase of those things that they were required to forsake, but lest their hearts should become surfeited with the prospects, he reminds them that there will be bitterness in the cup; that persecution will follow them even unto the death. Thus their minds are gradually weaned away from those things that perish with the using, and directed to those things which are from above. They, like the patriarchs, learn that the reward of the everlasting inheritance is not within the bounds of this life, but appertain to the [illegible] where there is no sin, sorrow, nor death. Hence, the good and evil of because of freedom is an instinct, people of all times have struggled for their freedom. Anytime it has been interfered with. We struggle with the adversary, for we feel that we cannot arise and walk when paralyzed by sin, but we can with Christ's strength. We must transcend all limits placed in our way. We must look upon Christ as an example of triumphing over difficulties and hindrances. A verse of Dennyson is good:

"I hold it truth with him who sings,
To one clear harp in divers tones,
That men may rise on stepping stones,
Of their dead selves to higher things."

The Christian life is not a doing without, but life more abundant. Those fishermen whom the gentle voice of the Master called from the sea, their boats, their nets, their business, gained the friendship of Jesus, and they became the founders of the church. Their hearts were kindled with a flame of love for Jesus and his work, and that light has been shining ever since. They were cheerful and obedient workers, keeping beloved son in that day. We surely share with him in our Father's bounty, and be partakers of his glory. Think for a moment that you are under the sentence of death. That the dear Saviour gave his life that he might redeem you from the grave, and bestow upon you a more abundant life than this you now possess, and make you free from all evil. He only asks you to believe in him, and become his obedient servant until death, and he will watch over your grave with tender solicitude, and waken you at the dawning of the glad morning of the resurrection. Could you but once feel that comfort that is enjoyed by one who has been made free from sin, whose trust is in the Lord, and whose steps are ordered in righteousness, and whose hope is anchored to that within the vail, you would not turn from the path of peace, nor seek the companionship of transgressors. Let me point you to the living word of God that is able to make you wise unto salvation, and to give you the eternal inheritance through our Lord Jesus Christ.

Columbia City, Ind.

THE DRAMA OF HUMAN LIFE

S. H. Thomas

One night upon my pillow, in sad meditation on the tragedy of human life, me thought an angel of light appeared and beckoned to me saying, "Son of man, come with me, and I will show thee a picture, and see if perchance thou canst interpret its meaning." And to, I was caught away in spirit to a high mountain, and the angel said, "Tell me, what seest thou?" I gazed a moment in awe and wonder, and trembling much, replied, "I see a dreadful valley, both deep and wide, and through this valley rushes mighty waters, leaping, bounding and foaming. On one side of the valley is darkness like a wall, silent and dense, and without beginning. Upon the other side I see beauties beyond the power of tongue to tell—a land of beauty, and of joy; a bright and shining city, set upon seven hills, before whose brightness the sun hid her face in shame, and the moon and stars refused to shine; a city so bright that the human eye cannot long behold its dazzling beauties and splendor. Midway of the city I see one like the son of God, surrounded by a host of bright beings. They stand and beckon. I see also, a great bridge. It spans the valley and its mad waters, from the wall of darkness to the highway which leads up to the city gate. I see millions of human beings crossing the bridge; multitudes so great that no man can number them. They come out from the darkness and leap on the bridge, laughing, shouting, jumping, skipping, and playing as if they were overjoyed to get out of the darkness into light. Some are chasing gay plumaged butterflies, which ever elude them; others run after beautiful hued bubbles, which burst as soon as grasped; others are after flitting shadows, which vanish when approached.

But look, I see a more terrible sight: Millions of these happy, careless beings are falling through the bridge into the mad waters which foam and leap upward, as if reaching for fresh victims. And I see the multitudes of despairing faces, sinking in the flood, I cover my eyes in horror."

Then again the angel spoke and said, "Son of man, be not afraid, look again and tell me why they fall from the bridge." I looked again and perceived that, whereas countless [illegible] bridge was [illegible] ingeniously hidden and concealed, which fell downward when trod upon; allowing the careless victim to fall through into the water beneath. I looked again and perceived that, whereas countless millions entered on the bridge from out the darkness, but exceedingly few reached the other side in safety, and went joyfully up to the beautiful city. I wondered at this, and asked my angel guide why these few were favored, and the others lost. He replied, "Son of man, look again, and perchance thou mayest read an answer to thy question." Accordingly I looked more closely, and behold, I perceived guide posts, and notices of instruction, and danger signals, and numerous and exceedingly plain and easily comprehended directions for safe traveling, posted along the bridge. And occasionally one here, and one there, of the multitude, would stop at each notice and carefully study it, and by its help cautiously pick his way among the pitfalls, and dangerous places. Some proceeded thus cautiously, until they reached the middle of the bridge in safety, and then becoming careless, neglected to study the guide boards, and were lost. Only a few were wise enough to follow the guides carefully and prayerfully, and so come over the bridge in safety, and were given a joyful welcome into the city.

While I stood contemplating this wonderful scene, the angel of light again spoke saying, "Son of man, declare to me, if thou canst, the meaning of the vision which thou seest." But I was speechless, and blind, and could not reply. Again he spoke and said, "Listen, and I will open thine eyes and thy understanding that thou mayest comprehend the vision; go then and tell it to thy people, perchance it may aid some to cross the bridge in safety. The valley which thou seest, with the mad and rushing waters, is the valley of death; the bridge which spans it, is the pathway of human life; the darkness on the one side, is the land of forgetfulness from which all mankind comes; the lovely land and the beautiful city on the other side, is the kingdom of God, and its capitol city, the new Jerusalem; the hidden traps and pitfalls so cunningly disguised along the bridge of the pathway of human life, are the evil lusts, desires and sins, which God has declared must end in death; the guide posts, direction notes and danger signals posted along the bridge, are the commands of the living God, as revealed in his Word; the multitudes who come out from the darkness of the land of forgetfulness and enter so playfully and carelessly, upon the bridge spanning the pathway of life, are the whole human race; the butterflies, bubbles, and shadows which they so fruitlessly pursue, the the pleasures and foolish things of their life, which perish with the using. As truly as the Lord liveth, and lovingly beckons from the gate of the beautiful city, none may ever reach him, except those who abandon their giddy pursuit of worldly pleasure, and carefully and prayerfully study the guide posts of instructions, directions, warnings, and danger signals, as revealed in the Word of the living God. "For wide is the gate, and broad is the way, that leadeth to destruction, and many there be that go in thereat. But straight is the gate, and narrow the way that leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it" (Matt. 7:13-14).

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON REVIEW

Golden Text.—"The people which Sat in Darkness saw Great Light; and to them which Sat in the Region and Shadow of Death, Light Is Sprung up" (Matt. 4:16).

Lesson 1—Birth of John the Baptist foretold (Luke 1:5-23).

Golden Text.—"Without faith it is impossible to please him."

Zacharias, a priest in the temple of God and his wife Elizabeth were watching and longing for the promised redeemer and king of Israel. They served God, walking in all the ordinances and commandments of the Lord blameless They longed to have a son whom they could dedicate to the Lord, but they were old. Only by the power of God could their desire be fulfilled. Who appeared to Zacharias? With what message? Why was he made dumb?

Lesson 2.—Birth of John the Baptist (Luke 1:57-80). Golden Text.—"Blessed be the Lord God of Israel; for he hath visited and redeemed his people"(Luke 1:68).

The angel of the Lord surely appeared to Zacharias, for in due time a son was born to him. The happy promise that he was to be great and filled with the power of God, made them rejoice exceedingly, and all their kindred with them. Did the parents observe the commandment concerning a newborn male of Israel? Had a name been provided for this child of promise? What happened when Zacharias obeyed God in every respect concerning the name of the child? Was it only for himself he praised God?

Lesson 3. The Birth of Jesus (Luke 2:1-20) .Golden Text.—"For unto you is born this day in the City of David a Saviour which is Christ the Lord." (Luke 2:11).

The Jews had been looking for the Messiah ever since he had been foretold by the prophets. Who did God finally accept as one worthy to be the mother of his Son? Where was Jesus born, and why born there? What message came to the shepherds? What heralded Jesus birth, that will resound again when Jesus takes his throne to reign?

Lesson 4.—The Presentation in the temple (Luke 2:22-35). Golden Text.—"For mine eyes have seen thy salvation, which thou has prepared before the face of all people" (Luke 2:30-31).

When Jesus was eight days old he was presented in the temple according to the Jewish law that the firstborn, when a son, must be consecrated to God. Who met them in the temple? By what means did he go there? Had his righteous life been rewarded by seeing God's son? What did he say?

Lesson 5.—The wise men led by the star. (Matt. 2).—Golden Text.—"Look unto me, and be ye saved, all the ends of the earth, for I am God, and there is no else" (Isa. 45:22). When the wise men saw the star in the east they came, bringing presents and seeking his abiding place. After Herod had directed the wise men, the star went before them till it came and stood over the place where the young child was. What did Herod instruct them to do? What terrible decree was made by Herod? How did God protect Jesus? How long did Jesus and his parents remain in Egypt? Where di dthey settle?

Lesson 6.—The boy Jesus in the temple (Luke 2:40-52). Golden Text.—What do we know of Jesus' boyhood? Must he not have been a seeker after knowledge to be filled with wisdom? Where did he go at twelve years of age? Where did the parents find him after missing him, and what was he doing? What did Jesus say to his mother? What did he do after returning to Nazareth with her? Can we grow in favor with God and man?

Lesson 7.—The ministry of John the Baptist (Mark 1:1-8) Golden Text.—"Repent ye, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand" (Matt. 3:2). Did John live as other men lived? How did he prepare a way for the Coming One whom he proclaimed? Was not the assurance of forgiveness a strong motive for repenting? Notice John used illustrations that were familiar to his former surroundings. What did John do when the people confessed their sins? What was John called?

Lesson 8.—The baptism and temptation of Jesus (Mark 1:9-13; Matt. 4:1-11). Golden Text.—"For in that he himself hath suffered, being tempted, he is able to succor them that are tempted" (Heb. 2:18).

While John was preaching to the people, Jesus appeared, seeking baptism of him also. Their baptism was for remission of sins, but his was to fulfill all righteousness." What happened after the baptism? Why was Jesus tempted? Was Jesus permitted to use the Holy Spirit for his own purposes? Were the three temptations natural temptations? Read I. John 2:16. Was it worth while for Jesus to know the Scriptures? We must be like David, too, and be able to say. "Thy word have I hid in my heart that I might not sin against thee."

Lesson 9.—The call of the first disciples (Mark. 1:14-28; Luke 5: 1-11). Golden Text.—"The harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few; pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he will send laborers into his harvest." (Matt. 9:37, 38).

After the baptism and temptation of Jesus, he began preaching in Galilee. What was his message? Jesus having the power of insight, chose men who were seekers after God and truth, those who had the qualifications of becoming patient teachers and followers of the gospel. What four men did Jesus call, what were they doing? How soon did they follow him? Who interrupted Jesus as he taught in the synagogue? Did this miracle excite the people to come and hear him?

Lesson 10.—Jesus the healer (Mark 1:29-45; Matt. 4:23-25).

Golden Text.—"Himself took our infirmities and bare our sicknesses." (Matt. 8-17).

"God had given Jesus his power that he might be able to show and convince the people that he was God's son, sent by him. Jesus was compassionate, and I believe it was a pleasure to him to be able to heal so many sufferers. What did Simon's wife's mother do after Jesus had healed her? Was she the only one he healed at that time? Had Jesus need of prayer? What did Jesus command the leper to do? Did his disobedience cause Jesus trouble?

Lesson 11.—The paralytic forgiven and healed (Mark 2:1-12).

Golden Text.—"Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits; who forgiveth all thine iniquities; who healeth all thy diseases" (Psa. 103:2-3).

Why was the home at Capernaum crowded? Did those who brought the man sick of the palsy have great faith, and how did they manifest it? What did Jesus say to the sick man? Did Jesus proclaim to the objector that he had power to forgive sins, and how? What did the man do?

publicans. Why did men fast? ing (March 2:13-22).

Golden Text.—"I came not to call the righteous, but sinners" (Mark 2:17).

Publicans were of a low class of men generally; they oppressed others for gain, but Mathew had better material in him than others, and Jesus needed him to deal with publicans Why did men fast? Had the time come for Jesus disciples to mourn and be sad and naturally fast? Must not our obedience to Christ be from the heart?

MRS. HATTIE SANFORD

"A NEW DEFINITION OF FAITH"

J. Warren White

(Continued from Last Week)

Hear Jeremiah again (23:16, 17): "Thus saith the Lord of hosts. . . . Hearken not unto the words of the prophets that prophesy unto you: they make you vain: they speak a vision of their own heart; and not out of the mouth of the Lord. They say still unto them that despise me, the Lord hath said, ye shall have peace; and they say unto every one that walketh after the imagination of his own heart, no evil shall come upon you."

Once only is this word used in a good sense. eSe I Chron. 29: 19: "O Lord God of Abraham, Isaac, and of Israel, our fathers, keep this forever in the imagination of the thoughts of the heart of thy people, and prepare their heart unto thee."

Luke 1:51 says, "He hath scattered the proud in the imagination of their hearts." Paul, writing to the Corinthians, speaks of casting down imagination, and every hight thing that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God. Peter, in Acts 4, quotes from the second Psalm: "Who by the mouth of thy servant David has said, Why did the heathen rage, and the people imagine vain things?"

Perhaps some one, having read Mr. Abbott's article, will say that the word spiritual makes by its qualification the imaginations all right. Does it? Paul, in Eph. 6: 12, says, "For we wrestle not against flesh and blood but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places;" or as the Revision gives it, "against the spiritual hosts of wickedness in the heavenly places."

"Spiritual imagination" to me is a very unfortunate definition for a Bible faith. I think if Harper's Weekly was writing this article they would say, Lyman, Paul is way ahead of you in defining faith —"Now faith is the substance (assurance) of things hoped for, the evidence (proof) of things not seen." Faith, to my mind, is believing what God says and acting accordingly.—Herald of Life.

SUNDAY SCHOOL RESOULTION

To be offered to all classes

B. Y. Fretwell

Resolved: That we, each one, will read every week so much of the Scriptures as we shall decide on each Sunday, until we have read the Bible through. For the coming week we will read Matthew and the following week Mark and the next week Luke, and so on, until both the new and old Scriptures are read. Each Sunday the question will be asked the classes, Have you read the lesson? Count and record the yeas and the teacher wil insist on the reading, etc. In this way the Bible will be read by all every year.

Let teachers of infant classes, select some short story that will interest little tots, such as Daniel, Joseph, Noah, and Jesus' saynig etc., with the chapters and verses on slip of paper, and pin same on the bosom of the child, for its mother to read several times to the child during the week, so as to interest and impress the lesson upon the young mind.

There seems to be an awful amount of popular church zeal displayed in these latter days; but is it not a zeal without knowledge? The Scripture alone impart spiritual knowledge. 'Tis no where else to be had. Strange it is, but comparatively few in or out of the churches have ever read the Bible through from lid to lid; good, honest folks, but without spiritual knowledge. 'Tis a shame on us. Calling ourselves Christians and blindly hoping for the rewards and not interested enough in God's Word to read it. Let us like the poor Prodigal Son, "come to ourselves" seach the Scriptures, and know Jesus who hath all power in heaven and earth. The Scriptures alone introduce him to us, and we must not only hear of him, but we must know him. We must put him on as a sin covering: that we may be kept from sin and temptation. We must be in him, and have him in us, the spiritual hope of glory. 'Tis in reading and a knowledge of the Scriptures only that hope is imparted to the sinner, and assurance of immortal life, is imparted to the believer. 'Tis here only we find the way, the truth, and the life, and the results; joy, peace, and happiness in our pilgrimage. The Scriptures alone are able to make us wise unto salvation. Let us as intelligent beings add to our natural intelligence spiritual knowledge, and maintain and increase our supremacy above the animal creation. The lion was made to roar upon the mountains, and the eagle to soar and cliff the sky; but man was made to live forever, and inherit God's coming paradise.

The earth, the ocean, and the sky all plainly tell;
There is a God who does all things well.

OBITUARY

Sarah La Lasho

Sarah L. Rice, wife of William J. Lasho, was born in Portage county, Ohio, July 27, 1836, and departed this life February 22, 1912, aged 75 years, 6 months and 25 days.

She was the oldest daughter of Sylvanus and Mary Rice ,early pioneers of this section of the country, the deceased coming to Noble county at the age of six years.

She was united in marriage to William Lasho, in White Pigeon, Michigan, March 6, 1860, and the couple located in Jefferson township, where they have resided for almost a century.

She obeyed the gospel message, was baptised and received into the church of God at Brady, near Mendon, Michigan. She believed in the second coming of Christ and the restitution of all things.

The deceased leaves to mourn a husband, three sons, Frank, Eugene and Wallace, one sister, Mrs. A. B. Conlogue; seven grandchildren, and a host of friend and neighbors.

Wallace Lasho

Mrs. E. K. Holt

Eliza Kate Morris, daughter of Henry and Ann, was born on the farm place of Golden Gate, Top of Heber, Lancashire, England, January 10, 1851, and died at the home of her son, Robert M. Holt, Hanna City, Ill., March 1, 1912, aged 71 years, 1 month and 26 days.

She was married to Thos. J. Holt, December 28, 1868, in Rosefield, Peoria county, Ill. To this union were born ten children, seven of whom with the husband remain to mourn the loss of a faithful wife and a kind and loving mother. The children are: Mrs. E. A. Andrews, Panola, Ill.; H. J. Holt, Gridley, Ill.; Mrs. J. S. Copper, McDonald, Kans.; Mrs. Jesse Collinge, Geneseo, Kas.; Mrs. F. G. Fuller, Williamsfield, Ill.; and H. L. and R. M. Holt, Hanna City, Ill.

She was baptized April, 1880, and joined the Church of God, remaining a faithful member until her death.

MRS. R. M. HOLT

A LETTER ON THE SABBATH QUESTION—No. 1

J. W. Calder

Dear Friend: I received your letter in due time, and was glad to hear that you were well as usual. I am glad I can sit up on the bed and write a little. Am glad to see that you are so deeply interested in my eternal welfare. I believe that you are perfectly honest in your religious convictions; I also believe that the majority of Sabbath keepers are honest, well meaning people, and have love for their fellowman, or they would not spend thousands of dollars and send out tons of literature to try and get people to believe what they believe is truth. I have read all of the tracts that you sent, but find nothing new in them; but as usual, there is hardly anything in them but their effort to get people to disrespect the first day of the week, and obey the fourth commandment, and observe it as they teach that it should be observed. I see in your churches back of the pulpit, the ten commandments written in bright letters, the law of God, which of themselves are never once called the law of God, or the law of the Lord in the book.

I would like for you to give me what you consider good authority (if you have any) for dividing the law into two parts, calling one part the "ceremonial law," and the other part the "moral law." You say that the moral law was given at creation, but see what Moses says in Deut. 5:3 in speaking of that part of the law: "The Lord made not this covenant with our fathers, but with us, even us, who are all of us here alive this day." Which shall we believe? I believe what Moses says. For one good reason why see II Tim. 16-17: "All Scripture is given by instruction of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness, that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly (not just partly) furnished unto all good works." This surely is so plain that God's word should not be twisted the least bit to try to make it harmonize with what a latter day prophet has said. Paul says in Rom. 14:5: "One man esteemeth one day above another, another esteemeth every day alike; let every man be fully persuaded in his own mind." But the seventh day people say (in substance), "Paul, we will do as you say, if we can't possibly help ourselves, but we will do our very utmost to get people to disregard the first day of the week, and to esteem the seventh day above all other days." See Matt. 22:37-39 where the lawyer asked the Saviour, "Which is the great commandment in the law?" Notice his answer, "Jesus said unto him, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart ,and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment. And the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." Neither of the above commands are found in what you people call the "perfect moral law." Your prophetess and teacher says in substance, "No, Jesus, you are mistaken, for I had a vision that I went to heaven, and among other things that I saw while there, were the ten commandments, and the fourth or Sabbath command shone out much brighter than any of the others, showing that the Sabbath is the greatest command in the law." It seems to me any awful thing for a person to make such claims, but much more awful to see so many honest, well meaning people misled, so that they cannot understand the plain statements of Scripture.

I was talking to an Adventist minister who seemed perfectly disgusted with me for quoting so much of Paul's writings, but I am not ashamed of what he says, for it is Scripture, and agrees with all other Scripture. He says in Acts 20:20, "I have kept back nothing that was profitable unto you. I have not shunned to declare unto you all the counsel of God." Now if it is "profitable" for us to keep the Sabbath, and the counsel of God that we should keep it, and show disrespect for the first day of the week, then Paul told a falsehood or made an awful mistake, for he never once in any of his writings even advised any one to show disrespect for the first day, or to observe the seventh day above other days. I choose to believe Paul instead of Mrs. White. Who will you believe? It is impossible to believe both.

THE STRAIT GATE AND NARROW WAY

Matt. 7:13, 14.

Owen Pottorf

Enter ye in at the strait gate: for wide is the gate, and broad is the way, that leadeth to destruction, and many there be which go in thereat; because strait is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it."

It is evident here that there was more than one belief or religion when our Savior uttered these words on the Mount. It is also a plain fact that one was effective unto salvation, or "life," and the other unto "destruction," or death. The latter representing the broad way, or that of the popular belief, is very pleasant to live by, but of no use when one comes to die, as it leads "to destruction, and many there be which go in thereat."

Now in order that we may not be deceived he give us a simple rule by which we can determine to which class of people we belong, viz.: "By their fruits ye shall know them." He then gives several comparisons so as to leave no doubt as to his meaning (vs. 15-20). How plain these comparisons make it! We certainly do not gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles; nor do we expect good fruit from corrupt or diseased trees. According to the laws of our state, when we find a diseased fruit tree, we are compelled to cut it down and burn it: why? Well, if it is left to grow or stand, it endangers the trees surrounding; and should they become diseased, then the trees near them will also, and it would soon spread over the whole orchard. They would all in time have to be destroyed, where if the one had been destroyed in the beginning, others would remain good. One can plainly see the object of destroying the diseased tree.

The diseased tree bring forth diseased fruit. So it is with man religiously; if he has error in his heart he gives to to his neighbor, and so on, just as the fruit tree. He is spoken of as being a false prophet, coming to you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly he is a ravening wolf. Christ calls such people hypocrites in Matt. 15:7, 8, 9. Here he gives us another sign by which we can know them, viz., they teach for doctrines the commandments of men. He says, "Let them alone; they be blind leaders of the blind; and if the blind lead the blind, both shall fall into the ditch." These all belong to the broad way which leadeth unto destruction.

"Strait is the gate, and narrow is the way that leadeth unto life and few there be that find it." This word "strait," you will notice is spelled s-t-r-a-i-t, and as here used means restrained or narrow, from the Greek word stenos. Now a gate, as we all know, is a place of entrance; therefore we have here a narrow or restrained gate through which to get into the narrow way which leadeth unto life, so it is written, "Few there be that find it." We may know this gate must be very narrow or restrained when so few are privileged to find it and naturally we ask, Why do so few find it? One reason, I think, is that the broad way is so much easier and more pleasing, giving people a chance to enjoy the pleasures of this world along with their religion. I believe Paul foresaw the conditions as they really are when he wrote his second letter to Timothy 4:3-4: "For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears; and they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables." How true this is today! The masses of the people are ready to jump, so to speak, at any new religion which comes on, or a popular immotional speaker, and follow him.

In Luke 13:23 Jesus is asked whether there are but few that will be saved: note his answer: "Strive to enter in at the strait gate, for many, I say unto you, will seek to enter in, and shall not be able." Note that he uses the word "strive," which means to work or contend for this entrance. There must, therefore, be a decided effort on our part, or we will not be able to enter.

The coming of Jesus added to God's glory by revealing that glory to the world.

Repentance calls for hatred of sin and heart turning away from it. So long as one clings to sin, God cannot free him from it.

Society may and should be the expression of our best religious instincts, the place where we put into practice religious teachings.

Do with a will the task that lies before;
So much is there for everyone to do.—John Clair Minot.

Let me forget, dear Lord, I pray,
The blotted page of yesterday;
Help me with patient hand to write
Upon today's unsullied white.
—Mabel Cornelia Matson.

To bear a name that has not been tarnished by evil doings is an incentive to the bearer, so as to live right. A young man may feel that a name in disrepute is a challenge to him to redeem it from its reputation.

Jesus was able to express completely the Father's love for us in his own unselfish life, and to teach us how to be most happy. His coming as a man, showing his love for men, led us to see that God was not ashamed of mankind.

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

We, whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones.

This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of their paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

Mrs. L. B. Chapman	$1.50
Jessie Kaufman	1.00
S. E. Bursell	2.00

THE BIBLE: ITS PRINCIPLES AND TEXTS

As indicated by the title this book is divided into three sections. The first consists of a remarkable disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "principles" in formulated propositions, and the third expounds in a clear, impressive and homelike manner particular "Texts." The knotty and perplexing texts of the Bible are united and solved satisfactorily to the most fastidious and critical. More than one hundred and fifteen subjects of intense interest to every Bible student are formally discussed. Both simple and scholarly—the child is fascinated and taught; the scholar is entertained and instructed. Bible lovers, here is a feast for you. Throw open the door of your home; let The Bible—Its Principles and Its Texts come in and bless you and your family. 309 pages, 5x7 1-2 inches, durably and handsomely bound in whole cloth, with title embossed on back in gold. One copy, $1.10, two copies or more $1.00 each. R. G. Huggins, 10623 Lee Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

TWO TRACTS By J. L. WINCE

"Salvation" and "Resurrection" two tracts by J. L. Wince, can not fail to arouse the interest of every believer. They deal with vital questions in a most convincing manner. The price is 10c each, 12 for $1.00. For sale by S. Roxanna Wince, Pierceton, Ind.

Pungent Statements.—The grinding process of time is at work everywhere, blotting out and destroying all the ways of man. The busy pompous fools of the day may laugh and jeer at the truth, and blaspheme the God of heaven and earth; but they will soon be as though they had not been; their voices will soon be heard no more; their very names will be forgotten and they shall be chased away as the vision of the night.

"When, oh, when, shall we learn that loyalty to Christ is tested far more by the strength of our sympathy with truth than by the intensity of our hatred of error. I will tell you what to hate. Hate hypocricy; hate can't; hate intolerance, oppression, injustice; hate Pharisaism; hate them as Christ hated them, with a deep, living, God-like hatred. But do not hate men in intellectual error. To hate a man for his error is as unwise as to hate one who, in casting up an account, has made an error against himself.

ANNA DREW

Dixon, Ill.

Ladies! Save Money and Keep in Style by Reading McCall's Magazine and Using McCall Patterns

McCall's Magazine will help you dress stylishly at a moderate expense by keeping you posted on the latest fashions in clothes and have 20 New Fashion Designs in each issue. Also valuable information on all home and personal matters. Only 50c a year, including a free pattern. Subscribe today or send for free sample copy.

McCall Patterns will enable you to make in your own home, with your own hands, clothing for yourself and children which will be perfect in style and fit. Price—none higher than 15 cents. Send for free Pattern Catalogue.

We Will Give You Fine Presents for getting subscriptions among your friends. Send for free Premium Catalogue and Cash Prize Offer.

THE McCALL COMPANY, 239 to 249 West 37th St., NEW YORK

"Signs of Character or How to Read Character at Sight"

and

"Health Through Natures Laws"

Two books by Dr. A. Wallace Mason. One is a study of character and how we may read it by the face and head. Brother Mason has made a very close study of this subject for years, and the information given in this book will prove interesting and instructive. Price 25c; 72 Pages.

The other is a work which tells how to gain and keep health as its title says, "through nature's laws." Every family should have a copy.

Address Bro. Mason, care Restitution.

50 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS DESIGNS COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the

Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York

Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

WANTED!

Subscription Solicitors

We will pay an actual salary to men and women in all parts of the country, to act as agents for The Restitution. This salary will be based on your ability to take subscriptions, take care of renewals, and make collections, and will be paid weekly. You can devote all or part of your time, and can make a special offer to prospective subscribers, which we will tell you about if you are interested. We will have some announcements to make in the near future that will also help you.

If you want to work, sit down NOW and write for full information.

B. W. NUTT, Manager.

SUBSCRIBE FOR

Words of Life

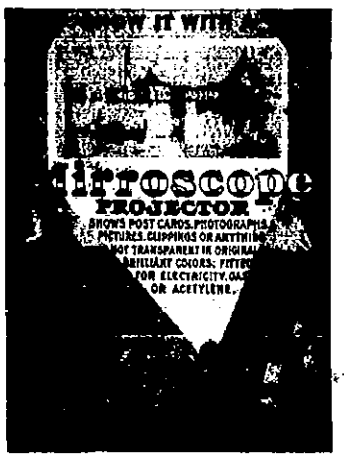
the publication of the Conditional Immortality Mission of Great Britain, advocating Life and Advent truths.

Terms: 1 copy 32c per annum. 12 copies to one address 25c per copy per annum.

Sample copy on application to

WILLIAM G. ROTHE

1301 Park Pl. Brooklyn, N. Y.



YOU will get genuine pleasure from an hour or two spent with the "Mirroscope" these long winter evenings. Pictures, Photos, Post Cards, Etc. are shown in exact reproduction same as with a high priced Stereopticon, can be used in any home and operated with Electricity, Gas or Acetylene. Prices $2.50, $3.00, $7.50, $10.00, $15.00, $20.00, according to size. Sent anywhere in the U. S. Send for one today.

HOME ILLUMINATED PICTURE CO.

311 SCHOFIELD BUILDING CLEVELAND, OHIO

Less than Half a Cent a Day

The Restitution costs a Dollar and a Half a year, that's less than half A Cent a day or three cents a copy. You can't afford to be without it. If you are a subscriber get some one else to subscribe.

Help to Get Them on the List

Sample Copies of The Restitution

May be obtained for a stamp. Send for one.

Books and Tracts

By W. H. WILSON

A BIBLE STUDY OF HADES.....15c each, or 5 for 50c.
(As compared with our modern ideas).
A critical study of Hell, showing the difference in the word in the past and in the present time.

STUDENTS TEXT BOOK 50c
How to study the Bible and rightly understand God's Word. Cloth bound, 200 Pages.

PINE WOODS BIBLE CLASS.....$1.25
Studies carried on between a class and its teacher. Cloth bound, 480 Pages.

CUNNINGLY DEVISED FABLES, 28 Pages.....10c

WHERE WILL YOU SPEND ETERNITY, 4 Pages, ... 25c per hundred

ARE YOU IN NEED OF MONEY, 4 Pages, 25c per hundred

WILL IT PAY TO BECOME A CHRISTIAN?.....25c
By Jas. W. Wilson. A neat Cloth book of 96 Pages which every one should read.

Bro. Wilson's Latest Book

Is Ready for Distribution

THE DESTINY OF RUSSIA AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES
96 Pages, Bound in Cloth, 25c.

W. H. WILSON, 625 North Willow Ave.
AUSTIN STA., CHICAGO, ILL.

Census Blank

MEMBERSHIP CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA

Name .....

Address .....
Street Town State

By whom Immersed ..... Date .....

Fill out the above and send to "The Census Editor," The Restitution, 803 Parkwood Drive, Cleveland, O.

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co.

WHOLESALE OPTICIANS

We make a specialty of High Grade Prescription Work, and carry a full line of all kinds of Optical goods. All orders filled same day as received.

"S. K. N." SERVICE

Means prompt returns, careful work, moderate prices. Goods shipped to all parts of the country.

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co. 323 SCHOFIELD BUILDING CLEVELAND, OHIO

"A LETTER TO A FRIEND"

This tract needs no introduction further than to say that it is one of the most convincing Gospel sermons ever written. Originally written as a letter to a friend by Sister C. C. Woodfuff it was published and has sold extensively in tract form. In its present edition it is a 32 page tract, the price is

10c each; 12 for $1.00

There is no better way of spreading the Gospel than handing out one of these tracts wherever you have the opportunity.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

The Restitution Publications

Send for all of the following books and tracts to

W. S. TOMLINSON, 10825 Orville Ave. N.E., Cleveland

A LETTER TO A FRIEND, 32 Pages 10c each, 12 for $1.00
FUTURE PROBATION, 150 Pages, 10c each, 12 for $1.00

The following tracts by M. Joblin:

THE KINGDOM OF GOD.
OLD MOTHER EARTH TO BE BORN AGAIN.
STRANGERS FROM THE COVENANT OF PROMISE.
VAIN WORSHIP.
NO IMMORTALITY OUT OF CHRIST.
GOD'S LOVE AND SOLICITUDE FOR MANKIND.
WHAT SHALL WE DO TO BE SAVED?
THE FOOLISHNESS OF PREACHING.
SALVATION, WHAT IS IT?

All the above are 16 page tracts, 100 for $1.00 any assortment.

THE PATERNITY OF JESUS, by M. Joblin, 128 Pages, each 10c. A work that proves Jesus was the son of God and not the natural son of Joseph.

THE SCRIPTURE SEARCHERS ASSISTANT, by M. Joblin, each 6c. A valuable aid to the study of the Scriptures, contains 400 references.

FOUR PAGE TRACTS:

Can You Believe? 10 for 10c, 50 for 25c.

State of Man in Death, 10 for 10c, 50 for 25c, 100 for 40c.

Life and Death, 10 for 10c, 50 for 25c, 100 for 40c.

Age to Come Not a Heresy, 10 for 10c, 50 for 25c, 100 for 40c.

TWO PAGE TRACTS

Bible Pearls—Suitable for wide distribution. 1. The Gospel. 2. Coming and Kingdom of Christ by 20,000 Baptists in 1660. 3. Immateriality. 4. Kingdom of God. 5. Nature of man and Thoughts for Thinkers. 6. Two Advents. 7. What is Religion? 8. Restitution Age. 9. Destiny of the Wicked. 10. Baptism. Ten copies for 5 cents, or assorted packages of 100 for 20 cents.

SPECIAL OFFER!

IN ORDER to increase the circulation of The Restitution, the following special offer is made:

One new subscriber for 1 year, choice of:

W. H. Wilson's "Student's Text Book," regular price..... 50c
Or 5 Copies of "Cunningly Devised Fables," reg. price 50c
Or 5 Copies of "Bible Study of Hades," reg. price 50c

For Two New Subscribers

One Copy "Pine Woods Bible Class," 480 pages, reg. price, $1.25
Or "The Bible, Its Principles and Texts," 309 pages, reg., $1.25
Or One Hundred of Bro. Joblin's Tracts, regular price $2.00

Here is a chance to get some of the books you all should own. By making special arrangements with the authors we are able to offer them to you without the payment of a cent on your part, just a few minutes effort. We cannot afford to continue this offer long, so take advantage of it at once, get some new subscribers today.

THE RESTITUTION, 803 Parkwood Drive

"Future Probation,"

is that Awaiting any of the Unrighteous?"

Here is a work by Wm. Glenn Moncrieff that every one should read. It is one of the best things on the subject ever written and will appeal to every student of the word. It is a book of 150 pages, made to sell at 25c. We have a limited number left which we will sell at the special price of

10c each; 12 for $1.00

Send for some at once.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

The Restitution

IS THE OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA.

The Restitution.

Founded in A. D. 1852

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Lk. 19:12-16), who will be King of Kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-53); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17), and belief in, the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Lk. 13:3), and obedience by Baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ." (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31).

ROPT. G. HUGGINS, Editor.

—Terms of— Subscription

ONE YEAR, $1.50; SIX MONTHS 75 CTS. IN ADVANCE

VOL. 60 CLEVELAND, OHIO, MARCH 26, 1912 No. 62

HOME SWEET HOME

E. W. Knapp

Our Father in heaven, look down from thy throne,
And teach us the way to thy kingdom to come;
We thank thee for giving this home to us free,
Our Eden restored, by our coming to thee.
Home, home, sweet, sweet home
God's glorious kingdom will soon be our home.

We gaze on the world, in its sad, sinful state,
And long for the change that our Savior will make;
We'll then cease from roaming with never a home;
Will dwell with our Savior forever at home.
Home, home, sweet, sweet home
Our Savior will give us a glorified home.

Our Savior is coming to give us a home,
The sin of this world will forever be gone;
We'll live with our Savior through all eternity.
Home, home, sweet, sweet home
God's kingdom is home. Oh, God's kingdom is home.
Monkland, Ore.

A LETTER ON THE SABBATH QUESTION—No. 2

G. W. Calder

I have had many harmonious talks with Sabbath keepers on everyday practical Christianity, and their teaching on the law has done me some good by causing me to study God's Word more than I would probably have done otherwise.

The Sabbath keepers say that Jesus personally preexisted before the world was created, and the reason that they are sure of this is that Mrs. White in one of her visions or dreams was in heaven and heard a conversation between God and Jesus concerning his coming to earth to die for the people. It seems strange if the Creator of all things could die. They claim that it was Jesus, called God, that wrote the ten commandments, and gave all of the law. If that is true, it is Jesus that we read of in Heb. 1-2, "Who at sundry times, and in divers manners, spake in times past unto the fathers by the prophets, hath in these last days spoken unto us by his son." The above Scripture proves without any question that Jesus had a son! See where the theory leads to; too unreasonable and unscriptural for anyone to believe.

One error, like the belief in the personal pre-existence of Christ, leads to many errors and difficulties. Just to think of the Creator of all things becoming mortal, dying on the cross and lying in the grave three days and nights; too absurd for anything. The Scripture says that Christ did die, the same as it says that we shall die. If it was only Christ's body that died and Christ proper remained alive, the same theory holds good for the rest of mankind. The theory of Christ's personal pre-existence makes out that the serpent told the truth in Gen. 3:4, "Ye shalt not surely die." I don't believe it, for God says he is a liar and that there is no truth in him.

For fear of making my letter too long, I have only traced the outline of this false theory in a very limited way, but hope that you can see where it leads to. You say, with the majority of the orthodox churches if a person lives up to what light he has he will be saved. You surely don't think what that theory leads to or you would not spend so much time and money in trying to get the heathen to keep the Sabbath. We read in Luke 12:48, "He that knew not and did commit things worthy of stripes, shall be beaten with few stripes." This don't sound to me like your assertion is true. Mrs. White teaches that at Christ's second coming the righteous dead shall be raised, and the living changed and taken to heaven to reign for one thousand years; I suppose over each other, for she says that every living thing shall be destroyed from the earth, except the devil; he is kept alive until the end of the thousand years that he may be here ready to deceive the wicked dead, that have their doom already fixed.

I am sorry that I have to believe that this false theory does away with all of God's plan of salvation and that so many honest, well meaning people believe it. I have heard Mrs. White preach a number of sermons, and each time that I heard her she put me in mind of Moses when he took the honor on himself for bringing water out of the rock for the children of Israel. You know the result was that he never got into the promised land. How will it be with the person that uses the same kind of language hundreds of times? Is it possible for such an one to ever get into the promised land? Especially when they preach another gospel than that which Christ and the apostles preached. See Gal. 1:8-9 for the prospect of those that preach another gospel. Why is it that you people say the Lord's prayer, praying for the kingdom to come? Do you say it is just a binding duty, or is it because you expect to get homesick, or tired of staying in heaven for the thousand years? It is surely one or the other. But see what David says in Psa. 115:16, "The heaven, even the heavens are the Lord's but the earth hath he given to the children of men." Solomon says in Prov. 10:30 "The righteous shall never be removed, but the wicked shall not inhabit the earth" See Dan. 7:27 for positive statements concerning the kingdom, where it will be, and who it is given to, that it is everlasting and that all dominions shall serve and obey him (Christ). Who are these that all dominions shall serve and obey him? Are they those that return from heaven at the end of the thousand years? Are they divided into dominions and forced to serve and obey the Lord Jesus? I see no other solution according to your teaching. See Isaiah 11:6-9, how ten o rtwelve kinds of animals are to become docile and harmonious with each other; such as the wolf and lamb, leopard and kid, calf and lion, cow and bear; all dwelling together in unity. Such unity has been unknown since sin entered the world. I think that you believe that the unity spoken of will at some time exist and as you believe that every living thing will be destroyed from the earth, which will it be, a resurrection of those animals or a new creation? There is no promise of either in God's word. This is one among the unexplainable difficulties arising from a false theory.

I know by experience that it is easier to believe truth than it is to believe error; that is, if we want Bible harmony. After reading such Scripture as Gal. 1:8-9, Acts 20:20, 27; and II Tim. 3:16-17, I can't see how you can possibly believe in Mrs. White's teaching, for just to think of her being raised up or brought on the scene of action over eighteen hundred years after the last writer of the New Testament has died, to make good the mistakes they made in not even advising any one to show disrespect for the first day of the week, or hinting that any one should observe the seventh day as the Sabbath. Worse yet, if possible, as showing by her teaching that even our Saviour made a mistake by telling the inquiring lawyer that love is the "greatest" command in the law. I hope that such claims are not as bad as they appear to me.

I can't see a good stoping place for this letter; it is getting too long. I hope that you will read it, and judge that I have written just to judge that I have written just for argument's sake; for I know that I love to be in harmony with any one on Bible subjects, especially those that are so near and dear to me. I close hoping and praying that God's will may soon be done on earth as it is in heaven. I am sorry that you don't want that grand and glorious time to come for at least a thousand years. My hope is in that coming kingdom.

CARRY THE GLAD TIDINGS

Why did our Lord take special pains to explain to the twelve that which he taught the multitudes in parables? He gives the answer: "That which is spoken in the ear proclaim ye upon the housetops." They were to evangelize. What was the commission? "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel"—evangelize.

What did Jesus say when he called Paul? "He is a chosen vessel to proclaim the gospel." Are not all called to the same work? Are not all who know and love and obey the gospel evangelists? Listen to the command, "Let him that heareth say come."

Now we cannot all go forth, leaving home and friends as do some of our beloved brethren, to proclaim the glorious gospel, but we can all of us teach the word. I will tell you how we can all of us have a share in this glorious work. My sister, when you go shopping, drop a little tract on the counter; when you step from the street car, leave a tract or paper on the seat. Brother, sow the good seed of the kingdom in each factory and work shop when you labor. What if we do find our tracts in the gutter sometimes, or our papers unopened: the command is imperative: "sow beside all waters." Paul sowed, Apollos watered, but God gave the increase. And rest assured that where there is a good and honest heart the seed will fall into it.

A certain prominent teacher said in one of his late periodicals, that we must be very careful a- choose the right time to speak of these things to our neighbors. But I remember a divinely inspired apostle said, "Be instant in season and out of season", to proclaim the good news of the gospel. That includes nearly every place and time. Dear brethren, let our hearts be so filled with these things that we can but speak them, for out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh. When I was quite young and read the account of Paul's conversion, I wondered why the Lord did not tell Paul himself what he should do—why he needed to send him to some one else—but as I grew older and studied the scriptures more closely I saw the reason: Because our Lord has committed the word of reconciliation unto us his saints. He says, Because I am no longer in the world I give unto them (my brethren) the work thou gavest me to do. See the case of Cornelius; even angels were not permitted to give the message. We always find the work of scattering the truth given to the saints. Then if our Lord has given this work into our hands, is it not imperative that we do it? If we labor with him we will share his rest also. And when this age is swallowed up in the glad age to come, is it not the same work? Does not the bride then say, Come? Are we not working then to evangelize and save the nation? Are we not indeed all commissioned evangelists?

(1 Cor. 3:9; I Cor. 15:58).

It may not be on the mountain height,
Nor over the land and sea;
It may not be at the battle's front,
My Lord will have need of me.
But there's surely somewhere a lowly place
In earth's harvest fields so wide,
Where I may labor through life's short day,
For Jesus the crucified.

Flora A. Wood

THE TRUTH DEFENDED

An Ex-Methodist pleads for the Truth

Mrs. Chas. Thomas

We will go back to the gospel that was first spoken by God, then down through the ages by his prophets, fulfilled in part, but not yet finished. We will start in the first book of the bible, where God makes a covenant or promise he is bound to fulfill. God makes a twofold covenant: part of it is fulfilled and part not. The first promise was made to Abram about 427 years after the flood: "Get thee out from thy country and from thy kindred, and from thy father's house, unto a land that I will show thee; and I will make of thee a great nation, and I will bless thee and make thy name great, and thou shalt be a blessing. And I will bless them that bless thee and curse him that curseth thee; and in thee shall all families of the earth be blessed" (Gen. 12: 1-3). He must leave his own people, give up all, to be set apart as the father of God's children. Here starts the record of the people of God, the Jews, that hold and have to this day the "blessing" and covenant of God with them. They had the land given to them, and they possessed it. They have the promise yet that they shall be brought back to the same land again. So while now they are under a cloud, yet God's covenant will be fulfilled. Let us follow them with only a glance here and there as they travel down the ages.

Abram did what God told him, moved into Canaan, and we will skip over the happenings down several years later. God again speaks to Abram: "The Lord said unto Abram, after that Lot was seperated from him, lift up now thine eyes and look from the place thou art, northward, and southward, eatsward and westward; for all the land which thou seeth, to thee will I give it and to thy seed forever. And I will make thy seed as the dust of the earth" (Gen. 13:14-16). Let us put aside our past teachings and look at this promise as if for the first time. God made the promise: he is bound to fulfill it. By reading carefully we will see how much, and what part of that promise was fulfilled. He is speaking of a land on this earth, the land of Canaan, the same land that today lay's in ruins. Twenty five years later God renews his covenant with Abram saying, "As for me, behold my covenant is with thee, and a father of many nations have I made thee. And I will make thee exceeding fruitful, and I will make nations of thee, and kings shall come out of thee. And I will establish my covenant between me and thee and thy seed after thee, in their generations, for an everlasting covenant, to be a God unto thee, and to thy seed after thee." (Gen. 17:4-7). Abraham became great and fruitful, just as God said he should, and he died looking for the fulfilling of the promise in full.

About 93 years later God speaks to Isaac and confirms the covenant made to his father Abraham: "And the Lord appeared unto him and said, go not down into Egypt; dwell in the land which I shall tell of thee; sojourn in this land, and I will be with thee. And will bless thee; for unto thee and thy seed I will give all these countries, and I will preform the oath which I sware unto Abraham to make thy seed to multiply as the stars of heaven, and I will give to thy seed all the countries and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed." (Gen. 26:3-4)

Later God speaks to Jacob in a vision of the ladder "I am the Lord God of Abraham thy father, and the God of Isaac: the land whereon thy liest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed, and thy seed shall be as the dust of the earth and thou shalt spread abroad to the west, and to the east and to the north and to the south, and in thee and thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed." (Gen. 13:18).

ON THE WAY SOUTH

Almus Adams

I arrived in Santa Rosa, New Mexico, the last day of January, went to the hotel for the balance of the night, the train having been late. In the morning Bro. Geo. Mehrens drove in and took me out to his place, about seven miles distant, where we began meetings on the evening of February 1st. The weather was very good, and all who were in coming distance, came. The interest was good from the first; a good many took notes to see if the things preached were so. We continued till we had delivered twenty discourses. Was interrupted two or three evenings by bad weather, but those who started in at first kept coming, and at the close we told them we had preached the gospel—all that was required of us—for Jesus said, "Go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." When a minister has done that, he has fulfilled the command—his duty has been performed. Now comes your turn; what will you do? "Repent and be baptized," Jesus says. I have fulfilled my part of that text; how many of you will fulfill your part of it? Two signified their willingness to obey, and a shout of the angels in heaven rang out, as we can infer, for joy that two more sinners had repented.

Sister Mehrens was determined that the people in Santa Rosa should at least hear some of the gospel, so she went down town and spent half a day in running from place to place trying to arrange for the M. E. church. At last she located the minister on top of a high hill back of the town, taking dinner with one of his brethren. When she came back she had three expressions on her face: One of victory, one of disappointment, and one of weariness. The first thing was to know what church I represented? Answer: Church of God. Query: "Never heard of it before." Of course he knew there were many manmade churches, and he was working for one, but he had never heard that God had a church! Right here was demonstrated the beauty of a Christian life. He knew Sister Mehrens, and upon her recommendation he said I could go into the house and preach if I would agree to develop a sever case of lockjaw just before entering. We were to begin Friday evening, and when we entered he knew me by the company I kept, shook hands, and hustled me off into his room adjoining the church, and proceeded to aggravate my case of tetanus.

"Now," he said, "we have five or six different denominations represented here tonight, and we never preach anything (and I thought he ought to have stopped right there), that would stir them up, so please let us alone, and don't disturb us before our time." I spoke three evenings along practical lines, and even this was so much more Scriptural than they were accustomed to, that they were very much interested. Some heard how I was handicapped and expressed a desire to hear me tell the message of God where it was not feared, so they secured the Baptist church that had not been used for some time. A number met and cleaned it up, and one lady sent her organ, and when the time came, we had a very nice place in which to preach the truth.

We were to begin Saturday evening, and about noon it began snowing and kept at it for twenty-four hours. A few came out, however, Saturday night in the storm. Sunday we could not brave the weather, but in the afternoon it stopped, and we cleared paths and got out a few. For several days the snow was so deep only a few close to the church could come. One family that was so much interested in having me preach, was called away on account of sickness. In all, everything seemed to work against us. A few kept coming, however, and an interest was being awakened. So the minister aforementioned, sent to a town thirty-five miles away for a preacher to come and hold a couple of meetings. He came, and they took him to the school house to give out his meeting. He got off a little funny act, and all the frivolous wanted to hear him perform. They went, and it was said he had them stamping their feet and clapping their hands. But our faithful few refused to be drawn by such bait, and came and listened to the gospel in its purity.

We then started a Bible reading after 4 o'clock, for the benefit of some high school scholars that were very much interested. Then an attempt was made to break that up by inducing them to stay away. This was only partly successful. Several manifested a deep interest in the study of the Scriptures. One young lady came out boldly and said: "You have the truth and there is no use denying it." She almost made up her mind to be baptised. Her mother looked over my Bible closely, liked its size and type, and wanted me send her four just like it, for her three girls and one boy. This looks like the seed had begun to germinate. I am sure if this work is followed up we will see good results.

We closed with a hearty request to come again. We met on the 6th near town, and in the beautiful Los-Lanos Creek buried Bro. Clay and Sister Barker, in the likeness of Christ's death, then gave them three Bible lessons, as a final instruction, and then bid them good bye after six weeks study together. May the Lord watch over them and keep them unto his heavenly kingdom. Bro. and Sister Mehrens did all in their power to make the meeting a success, and rendered valuable help.

Santa Rosa is situated on the Pecos River, which valley has some fine fruit farms. The fruit, although irrigated, is of fine flavor. The vegetables raised on the high dry ground are the sweetest I ever ate; they taste as if they had had a sprinkle of sugar in cooking. I am considerably behind schedule time, but will get to the other points as fast as possible. There have been days at a time that trains have been stuck in Kansas, and could not get down here. I am now at Newkirk, New Mexico, for a few days; interest good. Will make Buffalo, Texas, my next regular stop.

EVANGELIST'S REPORT FOR JANUARY

Sermons.
Kansas City, Kas., Jan. 7	1
Ft. Gibson, Okla., Jan. 14	1
Enid, Okla., Jan 14
Enid, Okla, Sermon and Bible Studies	7
Total	9
Baptized	3

I will give full report of my expenses and money received at the close of my southern trip.

Due $64.00

ALMUS ADAMS,
Evang.

"Intimacy is no excuse for discourtesy. The girl who says to an intimate friend, 'You look like a fright in that hat,' would never think of addressing such a remark to a comparattive stranger. It is a pity when love's ties are made an excuse for speeches which bruise and wound."—Selected.

The Restitution

Issued weekly by

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING COMPANY.

Entered as second-class matter under act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

TERMS.

One year $1.50; six months 75 cents, in advance.

ROBT. G. HUGGINS.....Editor
BUELL W. NUTT.....Manager

BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Burton H. Lang, Harry Pott,
Chas. A. Goss, Robt. G. Pate,
Buell W. Nutt, D. C. Robison,
W. S. Tomlinson.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

All remittances should be sent by bank draft, post office money order or express money order to The Restitution Publishing Co., 803 Parkwood drive, Cleveland, Ohio.

All communication intended for publication should be sent to the editor, Robt. G. Huggins, 10523 Lee avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

It is necessary to adhere strictly to the rule of not returning unused manuscripts. Writers will please keep copies, or risk the loss.

While the editor exercises a general supervision over the articles appearing in The Restitution, his endorsement does not extend to the interpretation of details nor the exegesis of particular texts in the writings of contributors.

Cleveland, Ohio., March 26, 1912

EDITORIAL

The evidences of Christianity and its power to uplift mankind are so convincing that those who are wisest seek it.

Righteous living brings one into close communion with God, enables him to better understand God's ways, and places him in an attitude to receive and understand his messages.

The outcome of choosing the right is nothing to be afraid of. The three Hebrew children who preferred death to disloyalty, proved that, for all time.

God's blessings are our responsibilities. Esther came to the kingdom that she might save her people. And every blessing you enjoy is to be used for others as well as for yourself.

The one who compromises with evil cannot win more than a fractional victory. Daniel refused to let the fear of death change his program by ever so little, and he won a victory full and complete.

In answer to many anxious inquiries about Sister Huggins, we are glad to say that the splints have been taken from her arm, the broken bones have smoothly healed, and that in time her arm will be good as ever.

Bro. Adams writes from Newkirk, N. M., dating March 11. He encloses $1.50 for a new subscriber, and says: "I have been delayed. Baptized two Wednesday. Will go to Buffalo, Texas, in a few days. Please say my address will be Magazine, Ark., until April 10th."

We join with the Church at Springfield, Ohio, in mourning the loss of Bro. Howell, whose obituary appears in this issue. He was the main speaker there, and the Church will feel his absence most keenly. When the Lord comes, however, he will rise up with John, "and prophesy again" (Rev. 10:11). "Even so, come, Lord Jesus" (Rev. 22:20).

Bro. R. H. Judd writes: "Just a line to say how pleased I am by the weekly visits of The Restitution, which has been sent to me by the goodness of Bro. Rothe, of Brooklyn, N. Y." Our brother, who was a contributor to the Messenger while it was issued, has been in Canada only since last May, and will now give us something from his pen occasionally. He encloses with his letter some writings in booklet form, which will be used in our columns as opportunity offers. We also have another new writer in Sister Flora Wood.

What a glad morning that will be when Jesus comes! Then the bride of Christ shall have made herself ready. (Rev. xix. 7). Then the saints shall awake from their sleep on the breast of mother earth, and with the living saints shall be caught up to meet the beloved Lord in the air and never part again. (1. Thess. iv. 13-18; Matt. xxiv. 30, 31). O beloved ones, with what rapture ought we to look forward to that glorious time! What joy should thrill our hearts! Let us cast off our wintry robes of sorrow and don the shining garments of life and praise and gladness.

The Restitution Publishing Co. will soon begin the publication of a series of tracts and booklets on the various but vital elements of the gospel. Bro. F. M. Howell has kindly written and donated to us a MS. of 33 pages on baptism and the seal of the New Covenant. Many thanks, dear brother; your unselfish work will long be remembered by The Restitution and its readers, and you will get a recompense from the Lord in the kingdom of God. If any reader knows of a good tract now out of print, or one that would be useful to scatter among unbelievers, no matter by whom published, he will confer a favor upon the truth and us by mailing the same immediately to the editor.

FAKISH NATURE OF POPULAR EVANGELISM

Upon the arrival of Gypsy Smith in Dallas, Texas, "to hold a great revival meeting" there for the churches a southern journal fell to musing and asked: Who is Gypsy Smith? The papers inform me that he was raised by the roaming gipsies; but that he forsook that roaming life and turned his attention to preaching. As a condition upon which he would visit Dallas for any other city all the "evangelical" churches, creeds, and orthodox religionists were required to pledge themselves to work with him and as he should direct. I understand that he is needed so bad in Dallas that all this is pledged to him, as well as a most excellent financial support. These things put me to musing about Dallas and its condition, as follows:

1. Is it possible, with all the preachers God has called and sent (?) into Dallas, that they have to get together in their extremity and call for Gypsy Smith to come in and do the work God called and sent (?) them to do?

2. Is it because Gipsy Smith knows the gospel better and has more power spiritually than all the orthodox preachers of Dallas put together?

3. If this is not so, why did they not form themselves together as one man, as they have now agreed to do with Gipsy Smith in the lead and storm the strongholds of satan in Dallas?

4. Since these preachers have virtually admitted themselves to be incompetent to do the work the people called them to do, and for which the Lord qualified and sent them, would it not be just and right for the people of these various churches to demand the resignation of every one of these preachers who thus candidly and unequivocally admitted their own inability to cope with the situation in Dallas—not only as individuals, but collectively? All of them together admit by their action, in calling Gipsy Smith, the impotency of their own methods and work to accomplish a greatly needed spiritual work in that city.

5. When Mr. Smith arrives on the ground, will he preach Baptist gospel? or will it be Presbyterian, Methodist, or what?

6. If he should preach the peculiar gospel of either denomination, would he not get up a terrible religious war in camp?

7. Or will Mr. Smith, for a change in their own program, preach to the people the old apostolic gospel found in the old and New Testaments?

8. If he does, will they all endorse it? and if they reply, "this is precisely what we preach," would it not be proper to inquire of them, Why then, did you not succeed in doing the work yourselves? If Mr. Smith is going to preach just what you preach, where was the necessity of calling him in?

9. If you can do more good united and working together, why don't you burn up your creeds and stay united after Mr. Smith shall leave you? Will not your action prove the old parable or proverb relative to the dog and the sow, mentioned by Peter? I should like very much if some one of those "called and sent" preachers would kindly and reasonably answer these nine points in The Restitution. I think it would make interesting reading matter. I hope they will.

I warn Mr. Smith, however, that if he does preach the old Jerusalem gospel, if he dares to give a full and complete scriptural answer to the question, "What must I do to be saved?" his meeting will not last ten days—with the crowd he starts with, and he will probably have to walk home.

CORN SHEAVES

Gathered from Everywhere

Help us build each other up,
Jude 20;
Help us ourselves to prove,
II. Cor. xiii. 5;
Increase our faith, confirm our hope,
Luke xvii. 5;
And perfect us in love.
I. John iv. 17-18-19;

Words cannot tell what sweet relief,
In prayer for every want we find.
II. Thess. v. 17;
What strength for warfare, balm for grief,
What peace of mind,
Rom. viii. 6.

Take courage, then, ask and believe,
Expecting mercy from the Lord:
The promise runs "Ask and receive."
Matt xxi. 22;
And Christ is faithful to his word.
II. Thess. iii. 3.

A Letter to a Friend—My Dear Priscilla:—Since our last conversation, in which you remarked that it had always been a comforting thought to you, to think that your friends who had died had all gone to heaven, and that you expected to go there too, I have wondered if the thought ever occurred to you that the majority of people accept their early religious training very much as the young robin does its food, and many good people continue that mode all through life. But now, Priscilla, I want you to get out of the young robin stage, and do a little thinking for yourself. Make use of your own reasoning faculties.

Did you ever hear our old soldiers tell of a spent cannon ball on a battlefield being so hot it could not be picked up for hours, caused thus from the friction with the atmosphere through which it passed? And do you remember of scientists telling us that this earth is over 90,000,000 miles from the sun, and a cannon shot from the earth would require three and a half years to reach the sun? And yet you seem to think that when you die you will be in heaven at least the next day. If so, you will have the speed of that cannon ball beaten "to a frazzle," as they say nowadays.

Did you ever thing Priscilla, of the tremendous velocity with which you will go shooting through the air? According to all known laws there would be some friction there, I think, and I fear, my girl, that your angelic robes would be whipped into ribbons, and they badly fringed. I am sure you would not want to appear before heaven's court in such attire. Why not wait, my dear, till the Lord gets ready to receive you? He says: "If I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself: that where I am there ye may be also" (John 14:3). Therefore the reception will take place when he comes, not when we die and go shooting through the air in a disembodied state.

Don't worry if you do have to sleep in death a little while. The star of resurrection hope will shine brightly over your grave, and "Some glad morn you shall awake 'mid the everlasting light." I want you to change that plan about your flight "beyond the bounds of time and space," and get ready to take your place in the grand reception of the saints of all ages, and the coronation of the King of the universe; when angels and archangels, prophets, priests, and kings shall mingle their voices in one grand and sublime crescendo of praise in this world's universal emancipation doxology. The hope of sharing in this joy is an inspiration which lifts the gloom, enkindles faith, and dries the falling tear.

If this thought is new to you, my dear, I will say to you like Paul of old, "Do I love you the less because I tell you the truth?" Yours in his service.

COMMUNICATIONS

Dear Brother Huggins:

I write to say The Restitution comes each week laden with good articles from the able pen of our various writers. It seems to me each paper is better than the last one. The last issue, February 27, contained a splendid article by Bro. O. J. Allard, entitled, "The New and the Old Covenant." This should be in tract form and scattered everywhere. Paul in writing to the Galatians says, "Knowing that a man is not justified by the works of the law, but by the faith of Jesus Christ, even we have believed in Jesus Christ that we might be justified by the faith of Christ, and not by the works of the law: for by the works of the law shall no flesh be justified, for as many as are of the works of the law are under curse: but that no man is justified by the law in the sight of God, it is evident, for just shall live by faith" (Gal. 2:16; 3:10, 11, 12). And again Paul says, "Stand fast therefore in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage. Christ is become of no effect unto you, whosoever of you are justified by the law, ye have fallen from grace" (Gal. 5:1, 4). Why does Paul tell us we are not justified by the works of the law, but by faith in Jesus Christ, if we are still under the old law? Christ hath redeemed us from the curse of the law, being made a curse for us, that the blessing of Abraham might come on the gentiles thru Jesus Christ; that we might receive the promise of the spirit through faith. And this I say, that the covenant that was confirmed before of God in Christ, the law, which was four hundred and thirty years after, cannot disannul, that it should make the promise of none effect. Is the law then against the promises of God? God forbid; for if there had been a law given which could have given life, verily righteousness should have been by the law. But before faith came we were kept under the law, shut up unto the faith which should afterwards be revealed. Wherefore the law was our school master to bring us unto Christ, that we might be justified by faith. But after that faith is come, we are no longer under a schoolmaster. For ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus (Gal. 3:13, 14, 17, 21, 23, 24, 25).

Faith comes by hearing the word of God, and when faith becomes strong enough in the things God has promised, it will stir the hearer to action and cause him to obey the command found in Acts 2:38, "Then Peter said unto them, Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins," for Jesus says, "He who believes and is immersed will be saved" (Mark 16:16). Again he says, "Truly indeed I say to thee, if any one be not born of water and spirit, he cannot enter the kingdom of God." After this the believer will strive to live a holy life, for it is essential to salvation. By turning to Heb. 12:14, we learn that without holiness no man shall see the Lord.

Yours in the One Hope.
MRS. ERNEST CRUNDWELL.

Dear Brother Huggins:

Sister Howard at our last Bible class showed me the kind card you wrote her. I thank you very much for The Restitution. When I read the last number, February 27, I said to myself, That is the best number of the paper I have ever read. When I went to the Bible class last Sunday, I heard a letter read from a sister long in the faith, and she said, "The last number of The Restitution, was so good."

We all appreciate your efforts to make the paper a light to all, and we feel that your labor is with the Lord and for his glory. We still keep up our little gatherings here. Brother Huggins, I do wish we could have something on the prophetic times. I am much interested in understanding the twenty-three hundred days of Daniel. I would like to know if the seventy weeks of the Jews are finished, and what is meant by the sanctuary. I have never read anything on this subject that seems as logical and harmonious as Bro. Robert Roberts sixteenth lecture in "Christendom Astray," but you see the time of the cleansing of the sanctuary is past, and it is not cleansed. It does not seem to me that anti-Christ can be some single man power yet to arise for a period of literal days. Our Lord says, "Let him that readeth understand." Will you kindly tell me if 2300 or 2400 days is the correct numbers? I am afraid I have taken up too much of your time already.

Your sister in the Lord,
FLORA A. WOOD.

(The 2,300 days are given in Leesar, as in the margin of our Bible, "evening-morning." An evening-morning is 24, not 23, so this simple fact settles the 2,400 days as the correct reading of the text. Independent of the Vatican MS. of the Septuagint and the Jewish MSS. of Bokharah, both of which read "2,400 days."

The author of Christendom Astray cannot be excelled in prophetic exposition. He made a mistake, however, as most prophetic students have, in wrongly dating the beginning of the 2,400 days. He begins them at 540 B. C., when Cyrus ascended the throne, which gives 1860 A. D. as their expiry. The 2,300 days date from the time in history when the Persian power became greater than the Median (Dan. 7:5; 8:3-4). The Persian became "higher" than the Median born in the times of Nerxes and Artaxerxes II., 484 B. C. The 2,400 days will, therefore, expire in about 1916 A. D., and then the sanctuary will be cleansed.—Editor).

WHEN JESUS WAS HERE

Lillie H. Willis

"I think when I read the sweet story of old,
How Jesus was here among men,
I should like to have been with him then."

Often we hear this song sung, and hear people say they wish they could have been with him when he was here. But some way I shrink at the thought of it. I might have been among those that rejected him; I might even have been among the number that crucified him. We must remember that the people who lived when Jesus was here did not have the knowledge concerning him that we have today. As we look back over the nineteen centuries and more that have passed since his teachings began to influence mankind in the light of the gospel age—we can look back and wish with this light to guide us, that we could see him as he was in the days of his humility, and hear him speak as never man spake," and feel a tinge of disappointment when we realize that we never can. But when we gaze into the future, and know that soon, very soon, he is coming again, not as a "sin offering" and "man of sorrow," but clothed with the authority, and crowned with many crowns, as king of kings he comes to rule the nations of earth; and we, if worthy, shall be like him, and see him as he is, and rule with him, we can rejoice with joy unspeakable. Those who saw him when he was here among men, saw him but a little while; but those who will be with him when he comes again, will be with him forevermore. Though the past is blessed, the future is glorious. May we be there.

Galva, Ill.

VALUE OF WISDOM

Sister Viola Guzeley

"When wisdom entereth into thine heart, and knowledge is pleasant unto thy soul, discretion shall preserve thee, understanding shall keep thee" (Proverbs 2:10-13).

James says, "But the wisdom that is from above is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, and easy to be entreated full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality, and without hypocrisy." (James 3:17). This is the wisdom for which we should yearn, as intelligent Christian beings; the wisdom of this world is foolishness with God. Let us delve deeper into the realms of knowledge while we may, since there is no wisdom in the grave whither we go.

The wise King Solomon says, "How much better it is to get wisdom than gold! and to get understanding rather to be chosen than silver," (Proverbs 16:16).

It is our duty to exercise the knowledge we have and add to it. God has given each one of us a mind to develope. If we neglect the development of our intellectual faculties and not put to use the talents given us by God, in time they will be lost.

Tennyson says:

"Let knowledge grow from more to more,
And more of reverence in us dwell."

The more we learn of God and his mighty works, the more reverence we can have for him. Do we ever consider the wonderful works of the Almighty? His works excel those of all others. Think for a moment of the creation of the world out of chaos; also the creation of the human body, which H. W. Beecher says, "God made, and it is by far the most exquisite and wonderful organization which has come from the divine hand." When we consider the firmament and all things therein, we cannot but feel appalled at the mighty works of the Most High.

After reading what Z. C. Uffenbach says of knowledge, we feel a finer sense of the word. He says, "Knowledge in general, expands the mind, exalts the faculties, refines the taste of pleasure, and opens innumerable sources of intellectual enjoyment. By means of it we become less dependent for satisfaction upon the sensitive appetite; the gross pleasures of sense are more easily despised, and we are made to feel the superiority of the spiritual to the material part of our nature. Instead of being continually solicited by the influence and irritation of sensible objects, the mind can retire within itself and expatiate in the cool and quiet walks of contemplation."

Let us, dear ones, enter more into the spirit of learning, and of searching the Scriptures, for "Happy is the man that findeth wisdom, and the man that getteth understanding. For the merchandise of it is better than the merchandise of silver, and the gold thereof than fine gold. She is more precious than rubies; and none of the things thou canst desire are to be compared unto her. Length of days is in her right hand; in her left hand are riches and honor. Her ways are ways of pleasantness, and all her paths are peace" (Proverbs 3:13-17).

GOLD DUST

He who plants thorns must never expect to gather roses.

Don't be such a Christian that you will be afraid to sepak in prayer meeting for fear some one will call you a hypocrite.

It was God that provided for us the redemption that is in Christ Jesus, and it is God that has drawn us unto himself, and that has promised us all needed grace to walk in the paths of righteousness.

If you have trials and temptations which you are able to overcome, and which are working out in your character patience, experience, brotherly kindness, sympathy and love, rejoice and offer the prayer of thanksgiving and acknowledgment of divine mercy and help.

Christ is the lighthouse of the ages, from which rays of light penetrated to the gloom of the earliest times on the one hand, and reached forward to the glories of the eternal world on the other.

ANNA DREW
Dixon, Ill.

SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES

APRIL 7, 1912

The Appearance of the Risen Lord

Golden Text: This Jesus God hath raised up, whereof we are all witnesses (Acts 2:32).

The time of the writing of this first letter to the Corinthians by Paul. A. D. 56 or 57. Paul was presumed to have written from Ephesus, being moved to write by learning about misconduct in the Corinthian church. The lesson today is chosen on account of its direct relation to Eastertide. The resurrection of Christ is the very foundation of our Christian faith. Easter is the annual commemoration of our Lord rising from the dead. The word is taken from Eastre, the Anglo-Saxon goddess of light or spring, in whose honor a festival was held in April.

The question naturally arises as to why this 15th chapter of first Corinthians was written, as there does not seem to be any connection between this and the preceding chapters. It is very evident that some members of the Corinthian church denied the resurrection of the dead. They did not, however, deny that Christ had risen from the dead, but did not believe that they themselves were to rise from the dead. This belief among the members must have caused considerable trouble.

Paul apparently could not end his letter to the church without treating on this vital theme, and after reviewing the historical evidences of Christ's resurrection (which was a fact admitted by all), proves that the resurrection of all believers is involved in that of their Lord. No other passage of the New Testament treats on doctrine of the resurrection with such force and detail, and it very probably is the first written account we have of the resurrection of the Christ. A notation found in the Cambridge Bible is as follows: "This chapter is one of the deepest and most mysterious in the Bible. It is a passage not only of argumentative force and inspiring hopefulness, but of chaste eloquence and simple literature beauty." It is very easy for those of us, who have been thoroughly drilled in matters pertaining to resurrection, to perceive why this 15th chapter of first Corinthians is a stumbling block to the popular churches, and is indeed one of the hardest for them to explain.

We are all familiar with the facts leading up to the death of Christ, and it is this fact that gives rise to the use of the word gospel. Gospel is an Anglo-Saxon word, meaning good story. Gospel is, therefore, good news. Paul's gospel is the good news that Christ died for our sins and rose again from the dead. The sacrificial death of a perfect one was man's only hope of salvation, and the death and resurrection of Christ is the confirmation of that hope. Thus we find Paul preaching the gospel, and it becomes our duty to proclaim the same good news, as men will never discover it for themselves.

The seed must be sown promiscuously, and that which falls on good ground will be productive. The gospel received, must be tested by experience, practical use, trial and temptation before it becomes part of our lives, in very much the same manner as the growing seed must be exposed to the inclemencies of the weather. This gospel was no original with Paul, but appears to have been received by him from the immediate followers who had received it from Christ himself, and it, therefore, could not be Paul's delusion or invention.

The second item in Paul's gospel was the certainty of Christ's resurrection, and, therefore, he could do no better than to point the written testimony. There were many living witnesses of the resurrection, whom he names with a rapidity which shows that the Corinthians knew about them already, and needed only to be reminded. He names six or seven separate appearances of the risen Lord, among them the greatest number having seen him at one time the 500 brethren spoken of in Matt. 28:7-10. To name them in the order given: "He was seen of Cephas (Peter), then of the twelve, then above 500 brethren at once; after that he was seen of James, then of all the apostles, and last of all," Paul says, "he was seen of me also as of one born out of due time." The appearance recorded in the bible which Paul referred to are Mary Magdalen, the two at Emmaus, and the seven disciples by the Sea of Galilee. Paul attributes his conversation to the resurrection and offers it as most convincing proof thereof.

We are all familiar with the facts leading up to his conversion, and will probably all agree it is one of the most wonderful miracles ever performed, as no doubt Paul possessed the most powerful and stable mind of them all, and on account of his being steeped in bitter persecution of the church, it is readily seen that a great power would necessarily have to be exerted on him to produce such a wonderful effect.

Our lesson today involves study of the cardinal point in our belief, that of the resurrection of Christ. We have embraced this belief and have manifested our faith in it, and it now becomes our solemn duty to perfect character which will work for us at resurrection from the dead to eternal life, if perchance we sleep at his coming, or the momentary change to immortality, if alive at his return.

STANLEY A. SANFORD

BAPTIZE OR RANTIZE

Rev. 19:13

N. D. Webber

In the querists' drawer of a religious journal the following request is made:

"In Rev. 19:13 (Auth. Version) we have the expression dipped in blood, but in the Am. Rev. Ver. we have sprinkled with blood. Sprinkled and dipped cannot come from the same Greek word. Please explain which of these translations is correct, and what the word is in Greek."

The answer follows:

"Both translations are correct. The king's translators used the Textus Receptus and that has bapto in the passage referred to, while the revisers made up a text of their own and that text contains rantize, sprinkle, and thereby hangs a tale. The old Syriac Version contains a word that means sprinkle in that verse and affusionists made a good deal of capital of it, claiming that the word would not have been used by the Syriac translators if bapto had not meant sprinkle. Dr. Gale of England met this plausable claim by suggesting that the translators of the Syriac Version had a Greek text that contained a word properly meaning sprinkle. Mr. Campbell in his debate with Mr. Rice reaffirmed this, but with greater emphasis, contending that the laws of language demand it.

When Tischendorf found the great Sinaitic manuscript it was discovered that it has rantizo in this passage and thus the mystery was solved.

(Note: The Cross Reference Bible has this to say of the Syriac Version: The Peshitto, i. e., 'simple' or faithful; a Syriac (rather East Aramaic) Version made for Christian readers from the Hebrew, though influenced frequently by Jewish exegesis, and in parts (e. g. in Psalms) by the Septuagint.

(Date not later than the second or third century).

The New Testament books were supposedly written in Greek. The Syriac then is not the original tongue of the manuscripts but an attempt to bring back the message to the people to whom it was first spoken. In all our studies it should not be forgotten that God prepared the Greek language to be the vehicle by which the revelation of his Son might be carried to the world. This wonderfully beautiful and exact tongue is the marvel of philologists."

Please note in the above that absolutely no comfort is afforded the advocates of sprinkling as a substitute for Christion baptism. It is the garments sprinkled and not the individual.—Herald.

OBITUARY

Mary A. Dickinson

Mary A. Dickinson died of old age at the home of her son, J. A. Dickinson, of Lincoln Neb., Wednesday, Feb. 14, after an illness of three weeks. The deceased was born in Miama county, Ohio, Dec. 26, 1829. She was united in marriage to Sam Dickinson in Howard county, Ind., March 16 1851. Mr and Mrs. Dickinson and family moved to Story county in 1864 and settled on a farm in the Dalton neighborhood. Her husband was laid to rest ten months and 10 days before she was called.

The deceased leaves three children, Mrs. A. Barrett of Leon, J. K. Dickinson, of Colo., & [illegible] Dickinson, of Lincoln, Neb.; 2 brothers, Joe Fish of Colo, and F. J. Fish of Whitney, Neb., a sister, Mrs. Lizzie Stout of Kansas City, Mo., besides a number of grandchildren. These and a large circle of friends and neighbors mourn their loss. She was a faithful member of the Church of God until the last.

The funeral was held at the home of her son, J. K. Dickinson, near Colo, Friday afternoon at one o'clock. The service was conducted by Eld. B. A. Wolcott, of Nevada.

Mrs. J. K. Hoy

Dear Restitution:

My beloved mother, Mrs. J. K. Hoy, is dead and I sincerely and truly thank you and the dear brother or sister who sent her the precious Restitution as long as she lived. Could she speak, her thanks would be unbounded. You will never know the consolation it was to her until the Resurrection morn. She was 91 years and 11 months old and was almost an invalid for years; but she never ceased to love the grand and precious truth as taught in the Bible; and died in full assurance of receiving a crown of life in the age to come. She was immersed into the name of Christ about the year 1861; and thanks to his all saving name! she held out faithfully until the end, but oh, it nearly broke our hearts to give her up. We miss her so.

Mother, We Miss You So

Yes, we miss her from our homes,
We miss her from her place;
A shadow o'er our lives is cast
We miss the sunshine of her face,
We miss the kind and willing hands,
Her form and earnest care;
Our home is dark without her,
And we miss her everywhere.
Day or night, wherever we go,
Dear mother, we miss you so!
But why should we weep?
For dear mother "is only asleep".
And we know that she will awake
again,
Free from sorrow, tears, and pain;
For the just will all be made anew,
Bright and shining as the dew.?
And in that promised land.
All peace and joy will be there;
We know full well those silver
hands
"Will palms of victory bear".
Where crystal streams through endless time
Flow over golden sands,
And where the old grow young
again,
We'll clasp our mother's hands.

—Her Children.

Dear brothers and sisters, pray for us in our sad bereavement that we may be worthy to meet her where sickness, sorrow and parting are no more. May God's richest blessing rest on each of you, and give you eternal life at his appearing and kingdom, is ever the prayer of your sister in the one hope. (Mrs.) M. E. Tuckness, (nee Hoy).

BENJAMIN HOWELL

Benjamin Howell died suddenly at the Springfield hospital, March 16th, after long suffering. He had diabetes, also carbuncle on the back of his neck. A few days before his death it was believed that he was improving, and we were all shocked when we got the message of his sudden death. He suffered very patiently, and was beloved by all those around him. As he had strength he talked of God's great salvation. He was born April 18th, 1848. He was baptized into Christ when about eighteen years of age. He has always been of great help to the brethen when present at their meetings, as he had the rare and happy facility of being able to speak most profitably on any chapter that might be read at the time. (If the sons and daughters of God would earnestly and diligently study the Scriptures, as he evidently had done, many more might be able to do that to the great advantage of all). He leaves a wife (not in very good health), four sons, and three daughters to mourn their great loss.

I was called by long distance telephone to speak at his funeral. I tried to do so as he himself would have done under like circumstances. He had a large gathering; many of the humble ones, but also some of the wealthy; many Protestants as well as Catholics; many of his brethren could hardly hold down their grief. We laid him away to rest till the Lord comes to waken all his sleeping ones, in a beautiful graveyard on the top of a hill.

God's message to fallen man,
He dearly loved to tell;
On the glory of the coming king
He also loved to dwell.

No glory for himself he sought,
His God he glorified,
God's glory soon will fill this earth,
Strong in that faith he died.

That glorious grand, that Beulah land,
O loved ones meet me there!
There tears and sorrow all will pass,
Then free from every care.

A. WALLACE MASON.
Troy, O.

BEREAN DEPARTMENT

Overcoming Temptation

Dear Bereans:

As we go through life we all meet with trials and troubles, and if we are not very careful, we will let the things of this life come between us and our hope of eternal life. There are so many cares and worries beset us we find it hard sometimes to give as much time to prayer and the study of God's Word as we should. If we would continue faithful to the end we must live close to God for he is our strength and shield (Psa. 28:7).

"My brethren, count it all joy when ye fall into divers temptations, knowing this, that the trying of your faith worketh patience. But let patience have her perfect work, that ye may be perfect and entire, wanting nothing" (James 1:2, 3, 4). "Blessed is the man that endureth temptation, for when he is tried, he shall receive the crown of life, which the Lord hath promised to them that love him" (James 1:12).

When we let the pleasures of this life take up our time and thoughts, we are not overcoming the desires of the flesh, but are falling before temptation. And when some bit of scandal is repeated in our hearing we should resist the temptation to repeat it even once.

If some one treats us unkindly we should not try to "get even," but forgive, as we hope our heavenly Father to forgive us.

"Therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord" (1. Cor. 15:58). "And this is the promise that he hath promised us, even eternal life" (1 John 2:25). "And now, little children, abide in him; that, when he shall appear, we may have confidence, and not be ashamed before him at his coming" (verse 28).

MRS. MAE MERCER.
Macomb, Ill.

The Gospel of the Kingdom and Name

What were some of the things concerning the kingdom of God that Paul preached about? We often hear the people of the popular churches say: If you will only believe in the Lord Jesus Christ, you will be saved.

But do they fully realize what it means to believe on him. Some of them cannot tell you what they believe, only that they believe on Jesus and belong to the church. To believe on Jesus means to believe what he taught about the kingdom of God, for a person cannot believe the things concerning the kingdom of God, without believing on Jesus also; the two are inseparable.

Paul said: Let not sin, therefore, reign in your mortal body, that ye should obey the lusts thereof." This shows us that we are mortal, and is a warning to us not to live sinfully, for "the wages of sin is death" (Rom. 6:23).

Let us turn to the words of Paul again, who tells us when we receive immortality: "For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality. So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, death is swallowed up in victory."

When is death swallowed up in victory? "In a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed."

What do we find in the Word of God for us to do to attain unto this change? Let us turn again to Paul in Romans sixth chapter: "Know ye not, that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ, were baptized into his death, that like as Christ was raised up from the dead, by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life. For if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection. Now if we be dead with Christ, we believe that we shall also live with him; knowing that Christ being raised from the dead, dieth no more; death hath no more dominion over him. For in that he died, he died unto sin once, but in that he liveth, he liveth unto God. But now being made free from sin, and become servants to God, ye have your fruit unto holiness, and the end everlasting life. For the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord."

In Rev. 20:6, we read: "Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection, on such the second death hath no power, but they shall be priests of God and of Christ and shall reign with him a thousand years." Where are we to reign? "And hath made us unto our God, kings and priests, and we shall reign on the earth." Again in Rev. 3:21, we read: "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me on my throne, even as I also overcame and am set down with my Father on his throne."

Dear brothers and sisters, we should follow Paul's teaching, for he through the love of God, continued faithfully preaching in places where he was persecuted.

First, we must believe on Jesus the Savior, the anointed one. We must believe what he taught concerning his second coming, the resurrection, our reward as a position in the kingdom, the gift of eternal life, life only through Christ, immortality in the future (not now), and to reign on the earth a thousand years with Christ.

Then the kingdom is to be ruled by our Father forever. Then the last enemy, death, is to be destroyed. Believing this, we are ready to be buried with Christ in baptism, and are ready to accept those things which Paul preached about. Phillip preached the same things in Samaria. See what the result was in Acts 8:12: "But when they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized both men and women."

Dear Bereans, after you have come to a full knowledge of the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ do not delay putting on the saving name of Jesus in baptism, for we are told that we do not know the day or the hour when Jesus shall come.

Your sister in Christ,

JESSIE M. WILSON.
Chicago, Ill.

"IF GOD BE FOR US, WHO CAN BE AGAINST US?"

Chas. A. Goss

These words are the summing up of Paul's exhortation in the 8th chapter of his epistle to the Roman brethren, and are intended to give them encouragement and confidence like his own—equal to his trials and temptations.

They had great need of these things in Paul's day, and so have all of like precious faith in all times, to fit them for the battle of life, and prepare them for victory over the world, the flesh and the manifold temptations which must be met and overcome. Yes, must be met and must be overcome. One of the apostle's chief aims was to show them both by precept and example, how they might be overcomers.

If we go back and review Paul's letter we find that he forcibly reminds them of the necessity of consistency in their religion; that they who sin, though they condemn sin in others, cannot excuse themselves. With a force and directness very characteristic of the apostle to the gentiles he says: "Thou art inexcusable, O man, whosoever thou art that judgest another, for wherein thou judgest another, thou condemnest thyself; for thou that judgest doest the same things." (2:1).

He tells them that God will render to every man according to his deeds"—not according to the profession he makes, for God is no respector of persons. It is works more than professions that count with God. A time is coming, a day is appointed, when he shall judge the secrets of men by Jesus Christ according to Paul's gospel. In that time the religious forms and professions of any man will not avail to secure salvation, even though these are correct and true. It must have produced a spiritual quickening and growth in grace or favor with God, to have any value. Thus we find Paul tells them of Rome that "he is not a Jew who is one outwardly," that is to say, the observer of the letter of the law, "but he is a Jew who is one inwardly, and circumcission is that of the heart, in the spirit and not in the letter, whose praise is not of men, but of God." This emphasizes the fact of our own weakness and liability to magnify the outward observances and formal professions above more important spiritual things—which are the inward experiences of heart and mind renewed by the spiritual influence of the Word.

The sum of this lesson of the apostle's is, that God will require of those who profess to love and serve him something that man has not got by nature. In other words, we cannot fulfill what God requires of us by ourselves, for in his own words: "All have sinned and come short of the glory of God" (3:23). What then? Does God abandon the whole race of man to certain and eternal death, or has he opened a door of hope that they who will may escape the wrath to come?

Yes, we have great and precious promises of his rich mercy and loving kindness which provide a way out of the dark valley, to a land of endless day. Help has been laid upon the "one mighty to save." And Paul here tells us that it is through "the righteousness of God which is by faith in Jesus Christ, unto all and upon all that believe, whether Jew or gentile—being justified by faith—freely by his grace."

This word "freely" means, not by inheritance, as the Jews understood, or by works, as both Jews and Gentiles have sometimes thought. A free gift is what Paul calls it in the 5th chapter; unearned, undeserved, but yet sure to all who accept the propitiation through faith in his blood shed for the remission of sins that are past through the forebearance of God; being therefore both just and the justifier of him who believeth in Jesus Christ. Paul has shown how this is accomplished and on what basis unearned and undeserved blessings and honors may be given to guilty man. He shows us that the promise to Abraham was not because of his works, but it was counted to him for righteousness—his faith is counted for righteousness. And then quotes the Psalmists words: "Blessed are they whose iniquities are forgiven, and whose sins are covered." Abraham staggered not at the promise of God through unbelief; but was strong in faith, giving glory to God. "And being fully persuaded that, what he had promised, he was able to perform. And therefore it was imputed to him for righteousness" (4:23). "Now it was not written for his sake alone, that it was imputed to him" (vs. 24), "but for us also, to whom it shall be imputed, if we believe on him that raised up Jesus our Lord from the dead." This shows how God loves all and provided for all: he worked out this grand plan in wisdom and love to the end that his glory should be over all the earth, and everything that hath breath shall praise him.

Now read from Rom. 4:25-5:2a, where we see that faith opens the door for peace with God: faith in his son giving access to God's favor, and causing them who stand in that blessed company to "rejoice in hope of the glory of God." Dear brothers and sisters: Are the cares and trials of the present evil days making you forget that our heavenly Father will soon cover this old earth with his wonderful glory, and send his son to bless all the world through the manifestation of his kingdom? Are the things eternal crowded out of minds and hearts which know them, or do we stand as Paul here says, "glorying in tribulations, knowing that tribulation worketh patience, and patience experience; and experience hope; a hope that maketh not ashamed: because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts?"

Paul wants us to be so separate from the sin and evil ways of this world that we are "dead to sin," but "alive unto God." Then when the life-giver comes we will be made truly alive—immortal, like the angles, having "divine nature," for they who continue to look for him have the promise not only of seeing him as he is, but of being made like him (I. John 3:2).

From the 7th of Romans, 18-24 vs. we see that the apostle had the common experience of all who are conscious of their own shortcomings. He was forced to acknowledge the righteousness of God's law which would condemn him because of the sin dwelling in him by reason of sinful desires inherited by the law of nature, the flesh. There was the same warfare, the same strife going on within him as there must be in everyone who will be an "overcomer." And when we come to the last verse of the 7th chapter we find the only deliverance was that for which Paul thanked God, namely, that which God gave through Jesus Christ. To those who walk, not after the flesh, but after the spirit, he gives assurance of deliverance from the hopeless condition in which he found himself and all others by nature, to a condition wherein there was "no condemnation." This is the condition referred to as having peace with God.

Paul labored to show how necessary it was to put on the new man or become a new creature. That is how to become a new man. He must live under a law which is not natural, but spiritual, not human, but divine as its origin.

If our faith is strong, our hope is correspondingly lively. If we have a firm hold on the promises of God we will also have that same hope which the apostle Paul had, namely, the hope of a resurrection "out from among the dead"—because the dead in Christ shall rise first (I Thess. 4:16), or change from mortal to immortality, if alive at his coming. And dear reader, did you ever think of that marvelous change which will probably overtake some who are now living, and wish to be there too? Marvelous, wonderful, glorious, blessed change! The world sometimes says "impossible" that the dead should live again on earth. But that grand cornerstone of truth is no more impossible with God than is the fact manifested in every Christian life, (improbable and unnatural as it certainly is), that living people should subject their natural ambitions, desires and propensities to the law of the spirit of God. This is one of the things which is impossible with man, but which is possible with God (Luke 18:27).

And this brings us right back again to our first thought in Paul's words in Roman 8:31: "If God be for us, who can be against us?" With these thoughts in mind, the weakest child of God has the assurance of being victorious over the world and the flesh and of inheriting the rest that remaineth for the people of God (Heb. 4:9).

And in view of the signs in the political heavens, shall we not lift up our heads and rejoice, "for now is our salvation nearer than when we believed" (Rom. 13:11). The apostle Paul's earnest exhortation to the brethren in Rome is just as applicable in our day, namely, "Put ye on the Lord Jesus Christ, and make no provision for the flesh, to fulfill the lusts thereof." That is, clothe ourselves in Christ-like virtues and characteristics, and not be continually planning and seeking the pleasures of natural desires.

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

We, whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones.

This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of their paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

Mrs. C. Leehy $3.00
Mrs. J. F. Richardson ..... .20

THE BIBLE: ITS PRINCIPLES AND TEXTS

As indicated by the title this book is divided into three sections. The first consists of a remarkable disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "principles" in formulated propositions, and the third expounds in a clear, impressive and homelitic manner particular "Texts." The knotty and perplexing texts of the Bible are united and solved satisfactorily to the most fastidious and critical. More than one hundred and fifteen subjects of intense interest to every Bible student are formally discussed. Both simple and scholarly—the child is fascinated and taught; the scholar is entertained and instructed. Bible lovers, here is a feast for you. Throw open the door of your home; let The Bible—its Principles and its Texts come in and bless you and your family. 309 pages, 5x7 1-2 inches, durably and handsomely bound in whole cloth, with title embossed on back in gold. One copy, $1.10, two copies or more $1.00 each. R. C. Huggins, 10623 Lee Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

TWO TRACTS By J. L. WINCE

"Salvation" and "Resurrection" two tracts by J. L. Wince, can not fail to arouse the interest of every believer. They deal with vital questions in a most convincing manner. The price is 10c each, 12 for $1.00. For sale by S. Roxanna Wince, Pierceton, Ind.

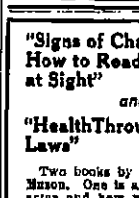
Pungent Statements.—The grinding process of time is at work everywhere, blotting out and destroying all the ways of man. The busy pompous fools of the day may laugh and jeer at the truth, and blaspheme the God of heaven and earth; but they will soon lie as though they had not been; their voices will soon be heard no more; their very names will be forgotten and they shall be chased away as the vision of the night.

"When, oh, when, shall we learn that loyalty to Christ is tested far more by the strength of our sympathy with truth than by the intensity of our hatred of error. I will tell you what to hate. Hate hypocricy; hate cant; hate intolerance, oppression, injustice; hate Pharisaism; hate them as Christ hated them, with a deep, living, God-like hatred. But do not hate men in intellectual error. To hate a man for his error is as unwise as to hate one who, in casting up an account, has made an error against himself.

ANNA DREW

Dixon, Ill.

Ladies! Save Money and Keep in Style by Reading McCall's Magazine and Using McCall Patterns



McCall's Magazine will help you dress stylishly at moderate expense. Its pages are filled with the latest fashions in clothes and hats. 50 New Fashion Designs in each issue. Also valuable information on all home and personal matters. Only 50c a year, including a free pattern. Subscribe today or send for free sample copy.

McCall Patterns will enable you to make in your own home, with your own hands, clothing for yourself and children which will be perfect in style and fit. Price—none higher than 15 cents. Send for free Pattern Catalogue.

We Will Give You Five Presents for getting subscribers among your friends. Send for free Premium Catalogue and Cash Prize Offer.

THE McCALL COMPANY, 238 to 248 West 37th St., NEW YORK

"Signs of Character or How to Read Character at Sight"

and

"HealthThrough Natures Laws"

Two books by Dr. A. Wallace Mason. One is a study of character and how we may read it by the face and head. Brother Mason has made a very close study of this subject for years, and the information given in this book will prove interesting and instructive. Price 25c; 78 Pages.

The other is a work which tells how to gain and keep health as its title says, "through nature's laws." Every family should have a copy.

Address Bro. Mason, care Restitution.

50 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents.

Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the

Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

WANTED!

Subscription Solicitors

We will pay an actual salary to men and women in all parts of the country, to act as agents for The Restitution. This salary will be based on your ability to take subscriptions, take care of renewals, and make collections, and will be paid weekly. You can devote all or part of your time, and can make a special offer to prospective subscribers, which we will tell you about if you are interested. We will have some announcements to make in the near future that will also help you.

If you want to work, sit down NOW and write for full information.

B. W. NUTT, Manager.

SUBSCRIBE FOR

Words of Life

the publication of the Conditional Immortality Mission of Great Britain, advocating Life and Advent truths.

Terms: 1 copy 37c per annum, 12 copies to one address 25c per copy per annum.

Sample copy on application to

WILLIAM G. ROTHE
1301 Park Pl. Brooklyn, N. Y.

YOU will get genuine pleasure from an hour or two spent with the "Mirroscope" these long winter evenings. Pictures, Photos, Post Cards, Etc. are shown in exact reproduction same as with a high priced Stereopticon, can be used in any home and operated with Electricity, Gas or Acetylene. Prices $2.50, $5.00, $7.50, $10.00, $15.00, $20.00, according to size. Sent anywhere in the U. S. Send for one today.

HOME ILLUMINATED PICTURE CO.

311 SCHOFIELD BUILDING CLEVELAND, OHIO

Less than Half a Cent a Day

The Restitution costs a Dollar and a Half a year, that's less than half A Cent a day or three cents a copy. You can't afford to be without it. If you are a subscriber get some one else to subscribe.

Help to Get Them on the List

Sample Copies of The Restitution

May be obtained for a stamp. Send for one.

Books and Tracts

By W. H. WILSON

A BIBLE STUDY OF HADES.....15c each, or 5 for 50c.
(As compared with our modern ideas).
A critical study of Hell, showing the difference in the word in the past and in the present time.

STUDENTS TEXT BOOK 50c
How to study the Bible and rightly understand God's Word. Cloth bound, 200 Pages

PINE WOODS BIBLE CLASS.....$1.25
Studies carried on between a class and its teacher. Cloth bound, 480 Pages.

CUNNINGLY DEVISED FABLES, 28 Pages.....10c

WHERE WILL YOU SPEND ETERNITY, 4 Pages, ... 25c per hundred

ARE YOU IN NEED OF MONEY, 4 Pages, 25c per hundred

WILL IT PAY TO BECOME A CHRISTIAN?.....25c
By Jas. W. Wilson. A neat Cloth book of 96 Pages which every one should read.

Bro. Wilson's Latest Book

Is Ready for Distribution
THE DESTINY OF RUSSIA AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES
96 Pages, Bound in Cloth, 25c.

W. H. WILSON, 625 North Willow Ave.
AUSTIN STA., CHICAGO, ILL.

Census Blank

MEMBERSHIP CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA

Name .....

Address .....
Street Town State

By whom Immersed ..... Date .....

Fill out the above and send to "The Census Editor," The Restitution, 803 Parkwood Drive, Cleveland, O.

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co.

WHOLESALE OPTICIANS

We make a specialty of High Grade Prescription Work, and carry a full line of all kinds of Optical goods. All orders filled same day as received.

"S. K. N." SERVICE

Means prompt returns, careful work, moderate prices. Goods shipped to all parts of the country.

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co. 238 SCHOFIELD BUILDING CLEVELAND, OHIO

"A LETTER TO A FRIEND"

This tract needs no introduction further than to say that it is one of the most convincing Gospel sermons ever written. Originally written as a letter to a friend by Sister C. C. Woodruff it was published and has sold extensively in tract form. In its present edition it is a 32 page tract, the price is

10c each; 12 for $1.00

There is no better way of spreading the Gospel than handing out one of these tracts wherever you have the opportunity.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

The Restitution Publications

Send for all of the following books and tracts to

W. S. TOMLINSON, 10825 Orville Ave. N.E., Cleveland

A LETTER TO A FRIEND, 32 Pages 10c each, 12 for $1.00
FUTURE PROBATION, 150 Pages, 20c each, 12 for $1.00

The following tracts by M. Joblin:

THE KINGDOM OF GOD.
OLD MOTHER EARTH TO BE BORN AGAIN.
STRANGERS FROM THE COVENANT OF PROMISE.
VAIN WORSHIP.
NO IMMORTALITY OUT OF CHRIST.
GOD'S LOVE AND SOLICITUDE FOR MANKIND.
WHAT SHALL WE DO TO BE SAVED?
THE FOOLISHNESS OF PREACHING.
SALVATION, WHAT IS IT?

All the above are 16 page tracts, 100 for $1.00 any assortment.

THE PATERNITY OF JESUS, by M. Joblin, 128 Pages, each 10c. A work that proves Jesus was the son of God and not the natural son of Joseph.

THE SCRIPTURE SEARCHERS ASSISTANT, by M. Joblin, each 5c. A valuable aid to the study of the Scriptures, contains 400 references.

FOUR PAGE TRACTS:

Can You Believe? 10 for 10c, 50 for 25c.

State of Man in Death, 10 for 10c, 50 for 25c, 100 for 40c.

Life and Death, 10 for 10c, 50 for 25c, 100 for 40c.

Age to Come Not a Heresy, 10 for 10c, 50 for 25c, 100 for 40c.

TWO PAGE TRACTS

Bible Pearls—Suitable for wide distribution. 1. The Gospel. 2. Coming and Kingdom of Christ by 20,000 Baptists in 1660. 3. Immateriality. 4. Kingdom of God. 5. Nature of man and Thoughts for Thinkers. 6. Two Advents. 7. What is Religion? 8. Restitution Age. 9. Destiny of the Wicked. 10. Baptism. Ten copies for 5 cents, or assorted packages of 100 for 20 cents.

SPECIAL OFFER!

IN ORDER to increase the circulation of The Restitution, the following special offer is made:

One new subscriber for 1 year, choice of:

W. H. Wilson's "Student's Text Book," regular price.....50c
Or 5 Copies of "Cunningly Devised Fables," reg. price 50c
Or 5 Copies of "Bible Study of Hades," reg. price 50c

For Two New Subscribers

One Copy "Pine Woods Bible Class," 480 pages, reg. price, $1.25
Or "The Bible, Its Principles and Texts," 309 pages, reg., $1.25
Or One Hundred of Bro. Joblin's Tracts, regular price $1.00

Here is a chance to get some of the books you all should own. By making special arrangements with the authors we are able to offer them to you without the payment of a cent on your part, just a few minutes effort. We cannot afford to continue this offer long, so take advantage of it at once, get some new subscribers today.

THE RESTITUTION, 803 Parkwood Drive

"Future Probation,

is that Awaiting any of the Unrighteous?"

Here is a work by Wm. Glenn Moncrieff that every one should read. It is one of the best things on the subject ever written and will appeal to every student of the word. It is a book of 130 pages, made to sell at 25c. We have a limited number left which we will sell at the special price of

10c each; 12 for $1.00

Send for some at once.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

Oregon State College

The Restitution
IS THE OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA.

The Restitution.

Founded in A. D. 1852

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Lk. 19:12-15), who will be King of Kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-53); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17), and belief in, the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Lk. 13:3), and obedience by Baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ." (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31).

ROBT. G. HUGGINS, Editor.

—Terms of— Subscription
ONE YEAR, $1.50;
SIX MONTHS 75 CTS. IN ADVANCE

VOL. 60 CLEVELAND, OHIO, ~~MARCH~~ April 2, 1912 No. 63

MY TESTIMONY

'Tis good to meet together.
And all our voices raise
In loving adoration,
And songs of grateful praise.
Our earnest supplication,
As incense rises high,
Invokes our Fathers blessing,
And brings him very nigh.

And as we meet together,
An unseen guest comes too,
Unseen, but yet invited;
Who asked him here, did you?
Ah! every heart cries quickly,
"I asked him here with me."
He said he'd come and bless us.
Were we but two or three.

'Tis good to meet together,
It wakes in every heart
A tender chord of sympathy,
That even when we part
Goes with us to our very homes,
And nerves us for the fight,
And sweetens all our hours of toil,
And makes our path more bright.

'Tis good to meet together,
To stir up our pure minds,
By speaking of God's goodness,
How when we once were blind,
He brought us out of darkness,
He cleansed us from all sin,
He opened up the narrow way,
And bade us walk therein.

We need each supplication
To help each other stand;
Forsake not your assembling,
Is our dear Lord's command.
The night is fast approaching;
We're in the evil day,
We need to come together more,
And for each other pray.

We hope to meet together
When we have run the race.
And in our Father's presence stand
And see him face to face.
We hope to meet together
When done with grief and tears
In that one day convention
That lasts a thousand years.
—Selected by Sister Frances Russell.

FRIENDLY WORDS ON IMPORTANT TRUTHS

R. H. Judd

Dear Friend:

When one looks around and sees the number of differences between professing Christians, I am not surprised at many enquirers after truth saying, as you say, "Better let these matters alone." Let me candidly ask you, Is this a fair way to judge God's Word? You admit the Bible to be God's Word. It has so many infallible proofs. You feel, also, that God's Word should not contradict itself. Have you then made a study for yourself of these important truths of God's Word? Nothing worth the having in this world is obtained without labor—generally in proportion to the value of the thing to be obtained. So as regards God's Word, we must give the whole of our undivided attention. Less time is given by many Christians, in the study of any one theme of the Bible, than they would give to the simplest earthly problem, and they base their belief and teaching on such shallow study. Hence comes the great variety of teaching given out to be Scriptural. Therefore, my friend, rather than let the various opinions with which you meet, deter you from the real study of God's Holy Word, give it the more searching examination. Men and women will differ, but, let me repeat, these differences generally come because a thorough and comprehensive study is not given. People are satisfied to rest on one or two odd passages, and on tradition. As one man said to me, "No one better than my parents lived. What is good enough for them is good enough for me." The man's fidelity to his parents is to be commended, but it seems passing strange, in this age of inquiry and enlightenment, when people will not allow the opinions of their forefathers to suffice in merely temporal matters, that as regards matters of eternity, they are quite ready to accept tradition, and also to allow others to think for them, without making personal inquiry whether these things be so.

Just one other remark, before passing on to the subject under inquiry. Many Christians say the future of the wicked is not their concern, but God's, and that God has not revealed these things. This is a very bold statement, and before being satisfied with it, I would earnestly urge, my friend, that you "search and see" if God has not revealed the fate of the wicked in very plain language, and also if He has not claimation on you, and whether he will not hold you accountable for your share of it. The gospel is two fold: It deals, not only with the future of the righteous, but also with the future of the wicked and God has made us, his people, accountable for a proper delivery of the same.

The gospel generally taught in our pulpits today is, everlasting life of happiness for the righteous and everlasting life of misery for the wicked. The first question is, Is this Scriptural doctrine? the second question, Is it reasonable doctrine? the third, Do Scripture and reason conflict? One answer will suffice to these three questions, and I believe all thinking Christians will agree with the answer. It is an emphatic No! The Scriptures do not teach an eternity of misery, as the subjoined passages will show. Such a punishment, the reason which God has given us tells us, would be out of all proportion to the offense committed. That God should use his power to keep men, women and children alive for no other purpose than an eternity of torment, is more than the human brain can bear, and, moreover, gives God a character directly opposite to what he represents himself to be. Were any judge in any civilized land to sentence a boy to ten years' penal servitude for stealing a bun, the common sense and reason of the people would cry shame, and rightly so. Yet such would be a small injustice compared with the above. The Bible is the most reasonable, common-sense book in existence, and nowhere does God ask us to believe what is against reason and common sense. The very enormity of such a punishment defeats its own end. No one believes it possible; therefore thousands (you have only to examine infidel writings) reject the Bible and the Christ of the Bible. I say deliberately, no one believes, for I never yet met anyone who believed God would send him there. There are a few passages supposed to teach it. Our first care is, however, to get all the facts of Scripture, and see which predominate. If two-thirds or seven-eighths teach the destruction of the wicked (as assuredly they do, as may be seen by examining the subjoined Scriptures), then it is plainly our duty to accept the major portion of Scripture, and the plain statement, as the true teaching, and then see if the few remaining passages, apparently contradictory, are really so. You must take these passages and examine them, both with the context, and in conjunction with other Scripture.

We will here, just as briefly as possible, try to examine some of these.

I. Matt. xxv:46. "These shall go away into eternal punishment: but the righteous into life eternal" (R. V.) No one questions the eternal nature of both statements here. If everlasting life is eternal, the punishment is eternal, undoubtedly. The question is, what is the punishment which is to be eternal? What is the nature of it? Punishment is a general term. We must therefore seek to find what God says the punishment is (Psa. xxxvii:10).

I believe the Bible teaches eternal punishment but that is very different indeed from eternal punishing. The second death, which is applied only to the wicked, is everlasting. The first death is not everlasting, because of the resurrection; the second death is everlasting; there will be no second resurrection; the wicked will have it set for ever all that the righteous gain. We have a Bible example given us in Sodom and Gomorrah (II. Pet. ii). Let the orthodox preacher get his illustrations (and there are plenty) from the Bible, and he will not go astray, but they never do draw on Bible illustrations when illustrating the doom of the ungodly. Why? Simply because they will not fit their ideas. God tells us most emphatically that the wicked shall perish, be destroyed, be utterly consumed, be burned up, be as chaff, be as the fat of lambs, be as wax, be punished with everlasting destruction, be like the beasts that perish, and they shall be as though they had not been. Yea, the wicked shall not be. These are Bible illustrations. How often are they used? Never. The wicked are, instead, likened to Salamanders, and to the pattern in a potter's vessel, always burnt in, but never burnt out, one writer even going so far as to say, "The joys of the righteous will be increased by the torments of the wicked in hell." Awful doctrine this!

II. Mark ix:48. This is generally taken to mean conscience. Why? It is a fair question. What conceivable right have we to call it such? Have we any? Is there any Scriptural ground for such? Yes, or no. There is none. Does Scripture give the meaning? Yes. Our Lord quotes from Isaiah these very words. Isaiah refers to the fires in the valley of Hinnom, and the worms. What the fire did not destroy the worms did; both fire and worms were continually there, destroying carcases, etc. Figuratively they did not die; there were always worms there, and the fire was not quenched; it was always fed. It does not say one word about conscience.

III. Rev. xiv:10; xx:10. Both these passages, as will be seen by the context, refer to a particular class of the wicked, but the term "forever" is limited by the words day and night shall be no more. day and night shall be no more. "Forever," in Scripture, is always limited to the act with which it is connected, for instance, the Aaronic priesthood, which lasted 1500 years, and Job, speaking of the Leviathan, says, "That thou shouldest take him as a servant for ever," i. e. the life-time of the Leviathan. For further example, turn to Isa. xxxiv:9, 10, where almost identical words are used regarding Idumea. "No traveler finds in the present condition of ancient Idumea the literal fulfillment of Isaiah's poetic prediction. Desolate indeed is the land; totally ruined are the cities; but they are not now sending up the smoke of their burning. Yet the postseer is no false prophet. The doom which he foretold has overtaken those cities. We behold in it a destruction which is not only total, but continuing, and so fitly symbolized by the ever ascending smoke of their burning." It is the effects that are everlasting. No doubt those enjoying eternal life will remember for ever the awful doom, without the necessity of the more awful doom of beings kept alive in an eternity of torment.

I am aware that "there will be weeping and gnashing of teeth." Surely, if fire is the agent used to cause the ultimate destruction of the wicked, it will cause weeping and wailing. But the Bible nowhere tells us that such a state of things will be everlasting. It is sometimes urged that if we teach the final destruction of the wicked, we take away all deterrent of evil. If the fact that a man has to meet his maker, to give an account, and receive stripes, many or few, and then lose for ever all he might have gained (and bear in mind he will realize then what he might have gained, the mere realization of which, even in this life, has utterly broken the spirit of many a man), if this will not deter him from evil, nothing will, not even [redacted] John v:28, 29; John viii:51, 52; John xi:25, 26; John xiii:36; I. John iii:15; Matt. xix:16, 17; Rev. xxii:14; Isa. lv:3; Ezek. xviii:23; Deut. xxx: 19, 20.

II. They shall die.—Ezek. xviii: 4, 20, 24, 26, 31, 32; Rom. vi:21-23; vii:5; James i:15; Rom. vi:16; viii:13; Rev. xxi:8; Rom. i:32; Rev. xx:13, 14; Rev. ii:11; xx:6; xxi:4; James v:19, 20; I. John v:16.

III. They shall perish—Job xx: 4-7; Ps. xcii:9; Rom. ii:12; Ps. xlix:20; lxxiii:27; Prov. xix:9; II. Thess. i:9, 10; I. Cor. viii:10, 11; Ps. xxxvii:20; II. Cor. ii:15, 16; John iii:14-17; Luke xiii:2-5; II. Pet. iii:9; Ps. ii:10-12; Acts xiii: 40, 41.

IV. They shall be cut off.—Ps. liv:4, 5; xxxvii:9, 22, 28, 34, 38; Ps. xcvi:23; Nahum i:15; Prov. ii:21, 22.

V. They shall be destroyed.—Job. xxi:29-30; xxxi:2, 3; Ps. cxlv: 20; Rom. xi:22; Ps. lv:23; Ps. v: 6; Prov. xvi:18; vii:13; Isa. i:28; Prov. xiii:20; Phil. iii:18, 19; Rom iii:15-17; II. Pet. iii:16; Prov. xxix:1; Matt. vii:13; x:28; Acts iii:23; II Pet. ii:12; Ps. cxiv:6; xcii:7; xxxvii:38; I. Tim. vi:9; Ps. 3, 17, 18; II. Thess. i:9, 10; Rev. xi:18; I. Thess. v:3; Prov. i:27.

VI. They shall be consumed.—Zeph. i:2-3; Ps. xxxvii:20; Isa. i: 28; lxvi:16-17; Ps. lix:13; Isa. xxix:18-20; Ps. civ:35; Heb. xii:28, 29.

VII. The agent of punishment is fire and brimstone.—Ps. i:3; xi: 6; xxi:8, 9; cxi:10; Matt. iii:10; xviii:8, 9; Rev. xxi:8; Heb. x:26, 27; Matt. xiii:30-42; Rev. xx:9, 14, 15; Matt xxv:41, 46; Jude 7; Luke xvii:29, 30.

VIII. They shall be burned up, root and branch.—Matt. xiii:30; John xv:6; Ps. xcvii:3; Isa. i:31; xxxiii:14; Heb. vi:7, 8; Mal. iv: 1-3.

IX. Their punishment shall take place not at death, but at the coming of Christ.—Job. xxi:29, 30; John xii:48; Matt. xxv:31, 32, 41; II. Pet. ii:4, 9, 17; Jude 14:15, 6; Matt. xiii:47-50; II. Thess. i:7-10; Rev. xxii:12.

X. They shall be as though they had not been.—Ps. lviii:7-11; Isa. xxix:20; Ps. xxxvii:10; Obad. 15, 16.

XI. Endless life is only obtained through Christ Jesus.—John xi: 25; John iii:15; x:28; xvii:2; Rom. vi:23.

Let none dare speak lightly of the punishment reserved for the enemies of the Lord. It will truly be "a fearful thing" for such to fall into the hands of the living God." Because we have found the eternal torment theory unscriptural, it does not therefore make the future punishment of the wicked a thing to be lightly spoken of. The destruction of the wicked, if spoken of in the language of Scripture, could never be anything but a solemn and awful thing to contemplate.

The orthodox teacher is very ready to disclaim the idea of eternal torment as being his. His humanity could not conceive anything so dreadful. So what does he do? Why, he throws the responsibility on God's shoulders, and says it is God's doing, not his. He does not care, so long as he is not charged with so awful a conception.

SOBER REFLECTIONS

J. F. Wagoner

I often see in print now such expression as "advanced truth," "liberal views," "broader views of God's plan." Now without a desire to be censorious I would suggest that we all advance with the truth. This is done by "letting the truth of God dwell in us," by being learners in the school of Christ. Some are so concerned about the salvation of nations that are dead and the unborn nations of the coming ages that they can hardly preach a present salvation to present dying men and women. They remind me of a character in the school books in Mr. Eastman's day, who was so interested in the welfare of the Hottentots that he interfered with his attention to any small affair, and to whom it was said that "between the great things that he could not do and the small thing he would not do, his life would pass and nothing be accomplished."

What has led to this false sympathy for millions that bear the same relation to God's plan that the surplus bloom of the fruit tree bears to the fully developed and perfect fruit that golden autumn pours into the lap of the husbandman? What would you think of the orchardist who wasted his sympathy upon the fallen bloom and premature fruit of his trees even to the neglect of healthy vigorous fruit? It may shock the tender sensibilities of some to institute such a comparison when such high values have been placed upon one of the human race. One human being has been put in the balance with millions of worlds and by this unjust valuation estimated as of more value than all these worlds. There are no such exalted views of man's worth found in the Bible. Here is God's estimate of human beings taken as nations: "Behold the nations are as the drop of a bucket and are counted as the small dust of the balance." As the small particles of the dust on the scales does not affect the true weight of the article weighed, so the loss of nations will not affect the true balance of God's plan. No wonder in view of this the Psalmist exclaims, "What is man that thou art mindful of him?"

Out of the great moral forest of humanity God will select the material to accomplish his purpose, and who shall dictate to him how to dispose of the surplus? This surplus of human beings is to God what the scaffolding is to the building; when not needed it is taken away. And who will object to the removal of the unsightly mass? Let us hear no false sympathy for the scaffolding, it served its purpose with the architect and now let it perish.

Do not have any fears that any really valuable material will be overlooked; this matter of the selecting is in the hands of God, and remember that material that to us would appear faultless, in the sight of God it may be full of blemishes. Never lose sight of the great truth that "the judge of all the earth will do right." The false hope of universal restoration or that God will finally bring all to salvation weakens the force of the gospel; it licenses men to say, "If I am not saved now I shall in some coming age and now I will enjoy the pleasures of sin in this life." That this is its tendency the writer has good reason to believe.

The destruction of whole nations will no more interfere with God's purpose to fill the earth with his glory than the rejection of a single individual now of the offer of life and salvation will affect God's purpose of selecting the ruling element for the coming kingdom. Both these grand purposes will be accomplished. In this age the gospel calls or selects individuals for rulers in the coming age; hence "in every nation he that feareth God and worketh righteousness is accepted of him," in the next age God deals with the race nationally. "But the nation and kingdom that will not serve shall utterly perish." The saved individuals of the past and the present ages will constitute the Lord's cabinet of rulers for the coming age, hence it cannot be said that this part of God's plan is a failure for it accomplishes the purpose for which it was intended. In the age to come there will be enough of the saved nations to fill the earth with the glory of God, therefore that will not prove a failure, for God says my word shall not return to me void but it shall accomplish that which I please, and shall prosper in the thing whereunto I sent it."

Thus the grand consummation is reached, the earth filled with [redacted] original purpose accomplished, and God vindicated by all creatures that then enjoy the blessings of that age. The present age demands all our energies, for as we near the end the danger increases, crime is multiplied, infidelity becomes more bold, the truth is more fiercely attacked than ever before; hence let us be diligent, more watchful and steadfast in the truth.

AND GREAT WAS THE FALL OF IT

Almus Adams

It is apparent to all Bible readers that there is nothing superfluous in God's word: The writers never said too much, neither left something unsaid that ought to have been recorded. But a great many things had just as well been left unsaid so far as the average reader is concerned. In the 7th chapter of Matthew, Jesus brings to view two religious systems: one founded on the rock of truth; the other on the sand of untruth. We are taught by this illustration that the true system is to stand, and the false is to fall. Then why was it necessary for Jesus to add: "And great was the fall of it?" Was it not enough to bring out the fact that the false system was finally to go down? No. If so, why did Jesus add the above to it? There is something taught in that added sentence, and what is it? It is the size of the two systems. This is one of the means of identification. Anything to make a "great" fall must have size to it. If the house of God was to fall or go out of business now, it would be felt all over the world. When that great city Babylon falls, the merchants of the earth are going to weep. So Jesus wanted us to know that this false system was going to be a large one, a big building, and when it goes down, great would be its fall. Every one lookout; it is now creaking and is about to fall. When it topples over, oh listen! do you hear the crash, the resounding echoes of the mighty fall? Hear, what is that? The wail of those caught in the fall. Are you in the clear? If not, "come out of her;" come out now; don't have to be fished out of the debris, bruised and torn and unrecognizable. Flee to the house built on the rock. "Thou art the Christ, the son of the living God;" upon this rock I will build my church."

My dear reader, it will do no good to wail after you are caught in the fall and are crushed. Flee now! Get on the solid rock of truth and smile at the winds and waves of untruth. Keep us ever in thy house, O Lord, where we are well secure. Newkirk, N. M.

GOLD DUST

Of all the things worth living for, the greatest is life—eternal life.

Make others to see Christ in you, moving, speaking and thinking. Your actions will speak of him, if he is in you.

True humility and willingness to be led, does not consist in bowing to men's opinions alone, but rather in doing what the Lord wants you to do.

Perfect devotedness requires, not only that we do the will of God, but that we do it with love. God would have us serve him with delight.

If our Savior's prayer for the unity of his people is ever to be realized, as surely it ultimately will be, the consummation so devoutly to be wished, will be attained not by cowardly or conscienceless compromise of truth, but by the surrender of the authority of all earthly standards, and the absolute submission of the minds of men to the infallible authority of the word of God.

Oregon State College

The Restitution

Issued weekly by

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING COMPANY.

Entered as second-class matter under act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

TERMS.

One year $1.50; six months 75 cents, in advance.

ROBT. G. HUGGINS.....Editor
BUELL W. NUTT.....Manager

BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Burton H. Lang, Harry Pott,
Chas. A. Goss, Robt. G. Pate,
Buell W. Nutt, D. C. Robison,
W. S. Tomlinson.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

All remittances should be sent by bank draft, post office money order or express money order to The Restitution Publishing Co., 803 Parkwood drive, Cleveland, Ohio.

All communication intended for publication should be sent to the editor, Robt. G. Huggins, 10633 Lee avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

It is necessary to adhere strictly to the rule of not returning unused manuscripts. Writers will please keep copies, or risk the loss.

While the editor exercises a general supervision over the articles appearing in The Restitution, his endorsement does not extend to the interpretation of details nor the exegesis of particular texts in the writings of contributors.

Cleveland, Ohio....April 2, 1912

EDITORIAL

Duties are ours, events are God's.

Many good purposes lie in the graveyard.

"Turn not to the right hand nor to the left" (Prov. 4:27). Keep straight ahead!

Contributors this week write in a very happy mood—all of them. Brother Heckman's article is worth a double reading.

Indifference and procrastination cheat us out of all time when they cheat us out of the present—"the day of salvation."

Each one is responsible not for how much he has, but for the use he makes of that which he possesses. All have equal chance to be faithful in the use of talents and opportunities, whether many or few.

"If you want to succeed in this world, you must make your own opportunities as you go on. The man who waits for some seventh wave to toss him on dry land will find that the seventh wave is a long time a-coming."

Faith relieves of worry, helps to restore harmony in the body, strengthens the mental image of renewed health, all of which are conducive to healing. In the spiritual realms, faith puts one in a condition to realize and accept God's forgiveness.

No temptations can come to young men today that did not come to Jesus, they have the same means of winning victory as he, they may know that Jesus sympathizes with them and offers the Divine aid in overcoming temptation.

We need to learn that what we call supernatural, as well as what we call natural, all operate under God's laws, and that death is as much a part of his benign plan as life. Not till then shall we know that there is nothing to be afraid of.

It will doubtless interest the brethren and sisters to know that the church in Salem, Ohio, is thoroughly aroused on conference matters, and that they are planning to outdo their previous good record in the way of entertaining comfortably all who come to the Ohio State Conference this year.

Bro. Chas A. Goss, of Cleveland, the chairman of the conference committee, made a visit to the brethren there Sunday, March 24, and was greatly pleased with the conditions, and particularly with the enthusiasm of all for the success of the conference. He is already advising the brethren and sisters to plan their summer holidays so as to be there, and we expect shortly to see the notice of the actual date, so that those interested can arrange their vacation trips accordingly.

A NEW TRACT

A new tract of six pages, just from the press, entitled "A Wrong Definition of Life and Death," the first of a series to be issued by The Restitution Publishing Co., is a most excellent exponent of the Scripture teachings on the subject with which it deals. Anticipating a large sale, the price has been put very low; 10 copies for 15 cents; 50 copies for 35 cents; 100 copies for 60 cents. See page 4 for particulars.

GESER, MAN

Jer. 31:22, a most difficult text to understand as it stands in our translation reads, "A woman shall encompass a man." A Jewish Rabbi of Brooklyn, N. Y., as quoted in an exchange, throws considerable light upon it. The last three words are very striking in Hebrew, for they say literally, "A female will bring about a man," emphasizing the word female, signifying that it is to be without the male. The Hebrew word for man here is "Geser," which means the mighty one. All of which we understand refers to the conception and birth of Christ, entirely new or different from the usual manner. This prophecy then substantiates the miraculous conception record in the New Testament in Matt. 1.

Have you noticed the new movement of Anti-Christ in his effort to tear down our structure of "faith?" How he is striving to cheapen our hope in the son of God, who is the end of the law of righteousness, by claiming scriptural proof for a fleshly conception, instead of miraculous? thus trying to establish Christ's equality with the pope!

PREACHERS SLAPPED IN THE FACE

From stenographic notes taken by Sister Gertrude Nutt, a sermon entitled "Jerusalem the Model Church," delivered by us at the Lord's table in Cleveland last summer, was printed in The Restitution September 6, 1911. As its subject matter was practical rather than doctrinal, we conceived the idea of sending it to some standard religious journal, with curiosity and interest to see what would be done with it. There is such a journal published in this city by Mr. F. M. Barton, called The Expositor, said on the title page to be "the preacher's magazine of homelitics, illustrations, methods of church work, sermons, current anecdotes," etc. We sent him our sermon. In a few days he returned it, sending us at the same time a letter in which he made a good confession, slapped the preachers in the face, and hissed at their seminaries. His letter is so amusing, instructive, and curious that we give it in full.

Cleveland, O., Mar. 1, 1912.

Dear Mr. Huggins:

The sermon you submit is unusual and mighty good, but it is a little too deep for our men. I wish that more of them were inclined to this style, but the seminary is at fault, and it's hard to teach a preacher new methods.

Yours truly,
F. M. BARTON.

EDITOR'S SERMON NOTES ON THE APOCALYPSE

Subject: The Book, The Lamb, The Saints, and The Denouement

Text: Revelations 5 chapter

I. The Sealed Book. I. "Sealed with seven seals"—inaccessible knowledge (ver. 1; Dan. 12:4, 8, 9; Isa. 29:10, 11; Rev. 10:4; Mark 13:32; Acts 1:6, 7). II. "Written within and on the outside"—full of information: the writing "within" referring to things ecclesiastical; the "outside" having to with things political (ver. 1; Ezek. 2:9, 10; Rev. 11:2; 21:27; 22:15; II. Cor. 7:5).

II. The Slain Lamb. I. Lamb, diminutive (vss. 6, 9, 12; Isa. 53:7; Matt. 12:20). II. Lion-like, with seven eyes and seven spirits—fulness of perception and aggressive power (Isa. 11:1-3).

III. The Singing Saints. I. Weeping saints take up their harps and bowls of incense and sing the new song (ver. 4:4-11; vss. 8, 9; Psa. 33:2; 147:7; Rev. 8:3, 4). II. Angels and the whole creation sing responsively, and the saints conclude the lyre with "Amen" (vss. 1-14; Rom. 8).

IV. The Denouement. I. With lion-like strength Christ redeems the saints, inaugurates their reign, and fills the earth with his praise, by opening the seven seals. Will the Futurist please wait until the seals are opened before he gets to this result? (vss. 8, 10; Eph. 1:7; Rom. 8:21; Rev. 6:9, 10; 9:20, 21; 13:3, 4; 17:1, 2; 16:15).

THE ELEVENTH LIE

According to a news clipping now going the rounds of the press Dr. Allen Hoben, profesur of sociology in the university of Chicago has, after months of study, been able to classify all lies, and offers us the following ten kinds, which he considers complete:

I. The fantasy or fairy lie.—This is the lie of the nursery, where children are told the weird stories that in my mind fit them to readily receive later the groundless claims of spiritualism.

II. The vain-glorious or boasting lie.—This consists of the sin of exaggeration.

III. The defensive lie.—The lie to escape the penalty of discovery.

IV. The heroic lie.—Told to screen and save another.

V. The white lie, it being the so-called little fib, and sometimes consists of hiding the truth while seeming to tell it.

VI. The society lie.—Misrepresenting one's social qualifications for the purpose of getting a standing in a higher class of society.

VII. The business lie.—This assumes a thousand forms in trade to obtain a price beyond the real value of a commodity.

VII. The professional lie.—The lie of the court room and the sick chamber.

IX. The art lie.—Palming off on rich purchasers and collectors, as antique something of recent make.

X. The adulterative lie.—The lie that offers us beef fat for butter, parched split-peas for coffee, cotton seed for olive oil, and so on, and on. This lie is alarmingly common, and very injurious.

Here the professor stops with as he considers, a complete list. We admit that it is a remarkable and as far as it goes, a very consistent classification of the many forms of prevailing falsehood, but it seems to us that the professor has overlooked one of the most common, one of the most serious, one of the most far-reaching, and, strange to say, one of the most popular lies with which this world was ever cursed, namely,

XI. The devil's lie.—This eleventh lie made its advent into the world in the days of our first parents; was evidently believed, and has been handed down from generation to generation till it is accepted today by more people than ever before. It reads like this: "Ye shall not surely die" (Gen. 3:4). The word "surely" being the key word to this lie, was identified to suggest, that while no one would deny that we would not surely, not really, not actually die. Though we might seem to die, what seemed to be so would only be transition. What we call death should be considered a delusion. "Thou shalt not surely die." I think it would be well for the professor, should he discover this eleventh lie and add it to his otherwise excellent clasification, and I think also that it would be well for us to beware of this delusion of the devil, this insidious eleventh lie.

A TORN TESTAMENT

A young man, says an exchange, preparing for the ministry in England, saw one day on the street the posters announcing a lecture on the Bible to be given in the public hall that evening. He went, and to his surprise, found that the lecture was a bitter attack upon the Holy Scriptures. The lecturer declared that there was nothing original in the Bible except what was worthless, and that all its moral teachings were contained in other and earlier books.

The lecturer added, "If there is any gentleman here who desires to deny that the best things in the Bible are better stated in other ancient books, let him stand up and say so."

Instantly the young student arose, and in order to be seen by everybody, stood upon a bench. He was very tall, over six feet, and at that time quite thin in his figure. "He looked sixteen feet high," said one, who saw him standing there, with a long arm stretched out toward the lecturer, and holding a small book in his hand.

"Well," said the orator, "what has the young man to say?"

"This is what I have to say," answered the young man, in a loud, clear voice, that sounded throughout the building. "This book which I hold in my hand is the New Testament, about one-fourth of the Bible. I declare in the presence of this man and of this audience, that in this volume is found more light on the path of human life and a higher standard of moral teaching than in any other ancient book in all the world."

Then, with a sudden motion, he tore the book in two pieces and flung half of it on the floor, and said:

"I have thrown aside half of this book, and if this half that remains, which contains the four gospels, there is more of value concerning the character of man and how to live a right life than any other ancient writers have left on record, no matter where you may look for them."

Again he seized the fragment, and tore out three leaves, which he waved aloft in one hand, while the rest of the book dropped to the floor, and then he spoke again:

"These six pages contain the sermon on the Mount, one single discourse by Jesus Christ. In that sermon you will find a higher standard of character, a nobler ideal for man, than any other single writing, ancient or modern, the whole world contains. I dare you, sir, to read the opening words of that discourse before this audience. Let those who hear judge for themselves."

The infidel orator had no answer for this appeal. After waiting a moment, the young man sat down. The lecturer made a feeble attempt to proceed, but it was in vain. His power over his audience was broken.

CORN SHEAVES

Gathered from Everywhere

Bible souls.—The English version of the Scriptures is first remarkable for the entire absence of the current phrases so peculiar to modern religious literature, viz, "immortal soul," "neverdying soul," "deathless spirit," "disembodied soul." It is next remarkable for its exteusive use of the word soul; but at the same time in such a way as gives the lie to the universal theory of its native immortality, and necessary immateriality. It gives us a soul that corespands to all the known attributes of an animal nature, as will be readily seen from the following illustrations of the various anti-immortality senses in which it is employed; only a few are selected out of hundreds:

Atoned-for souls (Lev. xvii: 11).
Abomintaion-loving souls (Isa. lxvi:3).
Appetite-lacking souls (Job. xxxiii:20).
Ass souls (Num. xxxi:28).
Abominable-souls (Lev. xx:v).
Appetitish souls (Isa. xxix:8).
Afflicted souls (Lev. xvii:15).
Blood souls (Jer. 2:34).
Blood-eating souls (Lev. xvii: 12).
Beheaded souls (Rev. xx:4).
Beeve souls (Num. xxxi:28).
Breathing souls (Josh. 11:11).
Bread-eating souls (Hos. ix:4
Bread-loathing souls (Num. xxi; 5).
Bound souls (Num. xxx.4).
Bought souls (Lev. xxii:11).
Bitter souls (Job. iii:11).
Circumcised souls (Gen. 17:14).
Clothes-wearing souls (Lev. xvii:15).
Carnal souls (Lev. xviii:29).
Creature souls (Job. xii:10).
Corruptible souls (Ps. xlix:9).
Cut-off souls (Num. ix:13).
Converted souls (Ps. xix:7).
Crucified souls (Isa. liii:10).
Chastising souls (P. v. xix:13)
Condemned souls (Ps. cxix:31).
Carcase-defiled souls (Lev. v:1)
Devoured souls (Ezek. 22:25).
Destruction-redeemed souls (Ps ciii:2-4).
Death-stricken souls (Ps. lxxxiii:50).
Dead-beast eating souls (Lev. xvii:15).
Dust-cleaving souls (Lev. cxix: 25).
Destructible souls (Jos. x:39).
Death-doomed souls (Ezek. xviii:4).
Dying souls (Job. xxxiii:22).
Drink-loving souls (Deut. 14: 26).
Diligent souls (Prov. xiii:4).
Delighted souls (Isa. lv:5).
Death-saved souls (Jas. v:20).
Diseased souls (Ps. ciii:2-3).
Empty souls (Isa. xxxii:6).
Eating souls (Prov. xiii:25).
Food-seeking souls (Lam. i:11)
Fainting souls (Jonah ii:7).
Feasting souls (Luke 12:19).
Flood-bound souls (Jonah ii: 5).
Fruit-lusting souls (Rom. xviii: 14).
Flesh-eating souls (Lev. vii: 18).
Finger souls (Lev. v:2).
Flesh-lusting souls (Deut. xii: 15).
Fasting souls (Ps. lxix:10).
Flesh and blood souls (Lev.17: 15, 16).
Famished souls (Prov. x:3).
Flesh-longing souls (Deut. xii: 20).
Fruit-eating souls (Mic. vii:1).
Fruitful souls (Job. xxxi. 12).
Grieved souls (1 Sam. xxx:6).
God-made souls (Jer xxxviii: 16).
Grave delivered souls (Ps. xxx: 3).
High-handed souls (margin) (Num. 15:30).
Hunted souls (Ezek. xiii: 18).
Hungry souls (Ps. cvii:5).
Household souls (Gen xlvi:27)
Hoping souls (Heb. vii:19).
Hating souls (2 Sam v:8).
Idle souls (Prov. xix:15).
Ignorant souls (Lev. iv:2).
Imprisoned souls (Ps. cxlii:7).
Impoverished souls (Jer. xx:13)

COMMUNICATIONS

Dear Bro. Huggins:

I send a few lines to The Restitution. I want to thank all the sisters that sent me birthday remembrances, and say to those to whom I owe letters, I have been away since early in January, and it is hard to get much time to write, but I think of you often, and hope to answer every one. I was glad to read Sister Adams' letter and think we ought to have one letter every week. I hear that Brother Wilson has gone south, and we will anxiously look for "notes by the way." We have his book, "Destiny of Russia," and like it very much. This has been a very lonesome winter to us at Blair: Our number is small when we are all here, but we have not been together for a long time. The deep snow and bad roads keep those in the country at home. Bro. Mehrens fell on the ice and was quite seriously hurt, but is better. Sister Newell has been sick for the past six weeks, is better now, but not well. Bro. Newell is busy in the capacity of house keeper and cook. The last word I had from my mother was that she was having trouble with her eyes. We all have our troubles, but we anxiously look for the coming of our Saviour. There'll be no more sorrow when Jesus comes. May he soon come, is my earnest prayer.

CARRIE FREE

Dear Brothers and Sisters: I returned fro ma trip to that peaceful little city, Salem, Ohio, last Saturday, after enjoying the hospitality of Brother and Sister Robison for a day, and finding them in about their usual health.

Though depleted by the removal of Sister McCave, to Portage county, and Brother and Sister Morton, to Michigan; and also by the return of Brother and Sister Thompson, to the country, after spending the whole winter with them, I found this little body full of the spirit of work; a good example to the other churches of what faith and devotion to the work can do.

I was sorry to learn of the serious illness of "Aunty Baker" as she is lovingly called. She is in a very weak condition, and her physician advises that there is small chance of her ever being entirely well again on account of her advanced age.

I went down there on conference business, and I must say that I found the "little flock" there wide awake to responsibility of their undertaking to provide for holding our yearly conference there in August. Such a spirit always is crowned with success, which they richly deserve.

CHAS. A. GOSS
Cleveland, O.

Dear Brothers and Sisters of like faith:

I write you through The Restitution to tell you of the good meetings that have just closed here. Bro. Almus Adams, of Omaha, Neb., has been with us five weeks, and as we were so anxious to hear the truth preached once more, it was grand to grasp the hand again of one of like precious faith.

One does not realize what it is to be where there are no brethren to meet with, and where you cannot hear God's Word preached as it is, until you have it to do so. We had not heard any preaching for four years, have had no one to encourage us, or even speak of the glorious coming of our Savior. The weather was very bad while Brother Adams was here, and it seemed that every thing worked against us, but we certainly had some good sermons just the same. I cannot speak of Brother Adams too highly; if we only had more that could explain the truth and preach it as he does. May God bless him in his work, for he certainly is a workman that need not be ashamed.

Two weeks' of our meetings were held at Santa Rosa; near town we had a good meeting, although the Methodist preacher did all he could to stop it. He even sent to Tucumcari for a minister to come from there to keep the people from attending our meetings. He did not want the people disturbed; he was afraid to put his religion to a test, but there are a few there that are interested, and who want the truth.

The rest of our meetings were held at our schoolhouse here in the country. There were a few evenings the weather was bad, and we held Bible readings at our home, and attendants took a great interest in it. There are only a few of us, but we are going to continue having Bible readings.

At the close of our meeting there were two accepted of God's truths, and on Wednesday the 13th, we took them to the Pecos river, baptized them in the name of our Lord Jesus for the remission of sins, and raised them to walk in newness of life. May God bless them in the trials of life. We hope we may be able to have Brother Adams with us again in the near future, as we feel that the work is not finished here.

We take The Restitution, and enjoy reading reading it so much. There are many good pieces in it this week. We enjoyed reading the letter from Sister Adams. I hope that many more will write encouraging words to us through The Restitution, for we feel the time to speak encouraging words is short. Let us do what we can. Oh the good we all may do, while the days are going by.

Your sister waiting for the kingdom.

ETTA MEHRENS

NEBRASKA BEREANS, ATTENTION

To th Nebraska Bereans:

Recently I received a letter from Sister Anna L. Adams, of the Illinois Bereans, saying they would be glad to hear from us through contributions to their Berean column, and asking if we could furnish two each month. I have promised one for myself by the 8th of April, and to see what I could do toward getting a second one. If any one can get an article ready by the 8, I know it will be appreciated. Besides it will make us grow to be a little more active. Idleness will make us weak, both individually and as a society.

I wish all those in favor of promising two articles monthly would write me, or the president of the society. I am willing to receive the articles, and see that two are sent in each month in the order in which they come.

If anyone can possibly write an article for this month, please send it to Anna L. Adams, 603 Peoria avenue, Dixon, Ill., by the 8 of April.

Your sister in Christ.
ALTA KING.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON NOTES, APRIL 14, 1912

The Use of the Sabbath (Mark 2:23; 3:6).

Golden Text:—"The Sabbath was made for, man and not for the Sabbath." (Mark 2:27).

The setting of today's lesson is in a cornfield in Palestine. They were walking through the cornfields on the Sabbath. The fields in Palestine were often unfenced and traversed by public paths. The "corn" very probably was barley or wheat, probably the latter in this case, as the former ripens earlier, this being in the early summer of A. D. 28. This occurrence was in the midst of the early Galilean ministry, and about the middle of the second year of Christ's public life.

The disciples were hungry and apparently helped themselves to the grain, rubbing off the chaff and eating kernels, as both law and custom gave them a perfect right to do. The strange feature of this incident is that Christ allowed it, but did not join them in the act, though he doubtless was as hungry as they. It is altogether probable that he did not wish to offend popular prejudice, and very often held his own rights in abeyance while boldly insisting on the rights of others.

We find the Pharisees objecting saying, "Behold, why do they on the Sabbath day that which is not lawful?" Our previous experience with the Pharisees has been that they were sneaking along after Christ, watching him suspiciously. They evidently thought that the precedent of David (when he and his company had eaten the shew-bread) had been more than re-enacted. Christ's answer follows very swiftly, and has a two-fold meaning: one directed at the precedent seeking minds of the Pharisees, and the other adopted to the more open minds of his disciples.

The first part of his answer was reminding the Pharisees how David, when fleeing from Saul, had persuaded Himmeleck the priest to feed him and his hungry followers with the twelve symbolic loaves of bread, which were kept on the golden table in the holy place. This was done on the Sabbath, the day when the loaves were changed. No one but the priests were allowed to eat that sacred food. This comparison was made to illustrate that the Scripture recognizes human need.

The second part of his answer was "The Sabbath was made for man, and not man for the Sabbath." therefore, "The son of man is Lord also of the Sabbath." The Sabbath was primarily a resting day from which men were to rest from their labors and to serve God. However, tradition had been woven so closely about it that necessary labor was often neglected.

Now we come to the second part of our lesson. In the first part Christ merely defended the liberty of his disciples. We come now to his positive example. He performed one of his seven recorded Sabbath miracles. Luke says that it was on another Sabbath, and that the Lord was teaching in a synagogue, and there was a man in the audience (tradition says he was a stone mason) whose hand was withered. We find that the same critical Pharisees were still watching his every move. Luke declared "He knew their thoughts." The Pharisees had raised the question, is it lawful to heal on the Sabbath? Jesus commanded the man to stand forth, and in doing so asks the question, "Is it lawful to do good on the Sabbath day, to save life or to kill?" This was indeed a very severe test for the Pharisees, and we find that they held their peace. The fifth verse tells us that Christ looked around about on them with anger, and it is one of the very few instances in which we find him manifesting anger. No doubt the conditions leading up to this test were most extenuating and were so inconsistent that he was obliged to take advantage of them.

It was a common custom in those days to help a sheep out of a pit, even on the Sabbath, and a silent comparison is here drawn, showing that the life of a man is much more valuable than that of a sheep. The man complied with the command to stretch forth his hand and was healed.

We find that the Pharisees went forth and straightway took counsel with the Herodians against him, of how they might destroy him. In this verse we have an example too often met with in human nature. Men after designing to overthrow religious facts, finding themselves defeated, immediately plan some form of revenge. In this case we find the Pharisees who had the advantage of collective thought, exerting their entire trickery on one man who proved to be entirely too much for them.

This lesson teaches us that the weak things of the gospel confound strong and mighty men.

S. A. SANFORD.

Cleveland, O.

THE LAW QUESTION

No. 1

Text: "Think not that I am come to destroy the law, or the prophets: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill. For verily I say unto you, till heaven and earth pass, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law, till all be fulfilled" (Matt. 5:17, 18).

This text is used by present day Sabbath keepers to prove that the law referred to is still binding. But does it prove it? We think not.

(1) Because it teaches that when "all" the law is fulfilled, "jots and tittles" may pass from it. The law demanded, when a male child was born that his parents offer a pair of turtle doves or two young pigeons (Luke 2:24). Those who are baptized in our day do not keep, nor do they believe it is necessary for them to keep, the above clause of the law of the Lord. Surely this command is large enough to make a title. If yes, then we must conclude that a title at least has passed from Jehovah's law. But it could not pass from it till all is fulfilled: Therefore all the law has been fulfilled, if our Sabbath keepers are correct.

(2). The law demanded that every male child should be circumcised when eight days old. Paul says, "If ye be circumcised, Christ shall profit you nothing" (Gal. 5:2), showing that circumcision is not now binding: and James and other apostles (Acts 15) wrote gentile Christians that it was not necessary for them to be circumcised, nor keep the Mosaic law. But none of the law could pass away, not even a small point, represented by the word tittle, till all is fulfilled; therefore all had been fulfilled in James' day.

(3) In II. Cor. 7:14 we learn that that which was written and engraved in stones was to be and is done away. The ten commandments were so written, therefore the ten commandments were done away. But no part of the law could pass away till all was fulfilled. Therefore all was fulfilled before Paul wrote his second letter to the Corinthian church. Some contend that this refers to where the law was written upon a pile of stones at another time, but I am unable to see how they can when we compass Paul's statement with that of Moses concerning the shining of Moses' face, and the glory which the children of Israel beheld in the law. But even if it did refer to other writing it would only prove more, as it was the whole law that was written on the pile of stones, and therefore it would prove the whole law was done away.

One may aske here if all of the ten commandments were done away, why is it we have nine of them in the New Testament? We might as well ask, If our English laws were done away when we threw off the British yoke, why do we still have many of them? Because our nation found many of them indispensable to good morals and they made them laws of the United States. Just so will nine of the ten commandments; they are indispensable to Christianity, and hence are made part of the law of Christ (I. Cor. 9:21).

(4) "I (God) will raise them up a prophet from among their brethren, like unto thee (Moses), and will put my words in his mouth, and he shall speak unto them all that I shall command him" (Deut. 18:18). Here is the mission of Jesus in a nutshell. (a) He must be a prophet like unto Moses; but Moses was a law giver. Jesus to be like him also must give a law. (b) Moses got the law he gave from God; so our text says of Jesus, "I (God) will put my words in his mouth." (c) "He shall speak unto them all that I shall command him." Now if we find in the New Testament that we are commanded to keep nine, and only nine of the ten commandments, we know it is because Jesus has not commanded us to keep the other, and therefore we know it is no part of the law which he gave. If Jesus did not give a law, who did give the law of Christ, which Paul declares he is under? And if he did give a law, did not his law supercede that of Moses? Two laws cannot be binding at one and the same time concerning the same question: the new always supersedes the old.

Then we are under a new covenant and covenant means agreement. God now agrees to give us eternal life in an eternal kingdom on condition of us obeying the commands of Jesus. It is only the soul who will not hear Jesus that shall be destroyed from among the people. And I understand that the writings of all the apostles as recorded are a part of the teachings of Jesus: they are "the many (other) things" which the comforter was to give. Then we must conclude that the law of Christ is the only law binding upon us at present, and we can do as Paul said he did: take up Jewish customs when among Jews, and gentile customs when among gentiles, "not being without law to God, but under law to Christ." And he assures us that he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life."

J. J. HECKMAN

THE TRUTH DEFENDED

No. 5

An Ex-Methodist Pleads for the Truth

Mrs. Chas. Thomas

The children of Israel sinned again and again. God slew lots of them and after forty years of trial they are on the borderland of the Canaan, the land God had swore to give them. They were to possess it for ever, and the whole earth was to be blessed through them. But Moses before his death saw trouble ahead and plead with them, and warned them about the dangerous thing that would come to pass if they sinned.

He warns them saying, "Take heed unto yourselves, lest ye forget the covenant of the Lord your God, which he made with you, and make you a graven image, or the likeness of anything which the Lord thy God hath forbidden thee. For the Lord thy God is a consuming fire, even a jealous God. When thou shalt beget children, and children's children, and ye shall have remained long in the land, and shall corrupt yourselves, and make a graven image, or the likeness of anything, and shall do evil in the sight of the Lord thy God, to provoke him to anger. I call heaven and earth to witness against you this day, that ye shall soon utterly perish from off the land where unto ye go over Jordan to possess it. Ye shall not prolong your days upon it, but shall utterly be destroyed. And the Lord shall scatter you among the nations, and ye shall be left few in number among the heathen, whither the Lord shall lead you" (Deut. 4:23-27). How true are these words of Moses! Are not the Jews today scattered among the nations of the whole earth? Without a home? Without a nation? The land that was promised to them has lain bare for centuries; even grass has not grown there. Has God forgotten his promise? Has he broken his covenant? Moses seems look ahead, for he says, "When thou art in tribulation, and all these things are come upon thee, even in the latter days, if thou wilt turn to the Lord thy God, and shall be obedient unto his voice. For the Lord thy God is a merciful God; he will not forsake thee, neither destroy thee, nor forget the covenant of thy father's which he swore unto them" (Deut. 4:30). When are they to be brought back? In the latter days."

Now let us go back to the children of Israel again. Moses died and Joshua takes the lead, and God tells him to take the children of Israel and go over to Jordan and enter the promised land; promises to be with him, and gives the nations unto his hands. At last they get to the promised land, and Joshua divided it among them as he had been commanded, and the Lord gave unto Israel all the land which he swore unto their fathers, and they possessed it and dwelt therein. The Lord gave them rest around about, according to all that he swore unto their fathers. The Lord delivered all their enemies into their hands; there failed not aught of any good thing which the Lord had spoken unto the house of Israel; all came to pass (Joshua 21:43-45).

His covenant which was but partly fulfilled for they were to possess it forever. Again and again they sinned. Because this people had transgressed my covenant, which I commanded their fathers, and have not hearkened unto my voice, I also will not henceforth drive out any from before them of the nations which Joshua left when he died, that through them I may prove Israel whether they will keep the way of the Lord, to walk therein, as their fathers did keep it, or not.

CONFESSION BEFORE FORGIVENESS

Amongst the oddments of literature, sacred and secular, one is mildly surprised at times by a phrase or clause, which may happen out of line in the beaten track of common reading; such as the following: "There must be confession before forgiveness." This too, over more than one prominent name in religious circles.

New Testament readers will readily recall an incident in the mission of Jesus The Great Physician, when a helpless invalid was brought to him, so that he might speak the word and the sick one thereby would be healed. Present day doctors, after diagnosis of a patient's condition, write prescriptions whereby the pharmacist can compound the medicine for the case. Jesus did not do this; his formula was simplicity itself, "Son thy sins are forgiven thee." The balm healing and charm of sins forgiven were effective, ere the sentinels of hearing conveyed the grateful news from the Savior's gracious lips. And further can it be admitted by inference this highly privileged patient confessed his sins in sorrow or joy at that supreme moment? If then, the inverted phrase above quoted be allowed to stand, the passion of Jesus the Christ in the premises, is a misnomer, because it makes forgiveness only possible, and confession apply in the ointment of forgiveness.

The illustrious Paul gave no inkling when he preached to men and the brethren as well, at Antioch, that confession held the balance of power as to forgiveness. We have been taught forgiveness stimulates confession; eliminate forgiveness and there remains a feeble basis to confess (Acts 13. 38), "Be it known unto you therefore, men and brethren, that through this man is preached unto you the forgiveness of sins."

As an initiative forgiveness was absolutely and freely proclaimed when the Lord Jesus died for the sins of the whole world, almost twenty centuries before any of the human family now living breathed the breath of life. This magnanimous proclamation has never been rescinded. Closely following came the world-wide generous invitation to all:

"Ho! ye that thirst approach the spring
Where living waters flow:
Free to the sacred fountain all
Without a price may go."

What then? Come and be a partner of the second part, in the contract. For contract it is, and the parties are God, the Mediator, and mankind (I. Cor. 3:11). For other foundation can no man lay than that which is laid, which is Jesus Christ."

How very regretable to note so many among us who in devotional department are a symphony in the church, the Sunday School, the [illegible] with apparent Christian attitude they carry around in reserve the tiniest scintilation of a gasping grudge, for a fancied wrong in their hearts, forgiveness is a blank in their vocabulary, no such thing as "forbearing one another, and forgiving each other, if any man have a complaint against any: even as the Lord forgave you, so also do ye." What shall the Lord and King say when he comes and finds such antagonism to his teaching, in the ranks of professors?

"The only thing we can do with an injury is to forgive it. What if we were able to strike back? What if we were able to take the life of the one who has offended us? Would that wipe out the wrong? Would it make us the happier? Would it solve anything? No, there would only be one wrong more done in the world to go on in ever widening circles of hatred and misery. When we forgive, the wrong ends with us."

The Savior Jesus enjoined his followers "to be perfect, as the Father in the heavens." And in the epistle to the Ephesians the apostle reminds them to live the perfect life. "Be ye kind one to another, tenderhearted, forgiving each other, even as God also in Christ forgave you." No rags of circumstance" permitted to retard attaining the ultimate good—eternal life—which can only be won by vigilance and the obedience of faith.

"Forgiveness free from evil alone,
And love to all men 'neath the sun."

IAN KATISON

Knox, Ind.

ARE THERE ANY SIGNS THAT THE COMING OF CHRIST IS NEAR?

There must be such signs, otherwise the words of Christ would have no meaning when he spoke to his disciples thus: "When ye see these things come to pass, then know that the kindgom of God is nigh at hand.—Luke 21: 31.

There are such signs revealed in various parts of the Scriptures. They consist of and are recognizable in certain phrases or features of the state of things among men and nations just prior to the appearing of Christ and preparatory for that event. They are:

I. A general state of preparedness for war amongst the nations of the earth.

Proof: "Proclaim ye this among the gentiles; prepare war; wake up the mighty men, beat your ploughshares into swords and your pruninghooks into spears—the day of the Lord is near.—Joln 3:9-10-14. 'Gather them together to the war of the great day of God Almighty. Behold I come as a thief.'—Rev. 16:14-15.

II. A great increase of knowledge of all sorts, accompanied with much traveling.

Proof. 'Seal the book, even to the time of the end. Many shall run to and fro and knowledge shall be increased.'—Dan. 12:4.

III. Decline and overthrow of the Turkish empire as a preparation for Israel's return to their land.

Proof: "That great river Euphrates (symbolical of the power owning that river at the time of the end, viz., Turkey) and the waters thereof was dried up that the way of the kings of the east might be prepared.—Rev. 16, 12. "At the time of the end . . . the king of the north shall come against him like a whirlwind with chariots and with horsemen and with many ships, and he shall enter into the countries and shall overflow and pass over. He shall enter also into the glorious land (now in the occupation of Turkey).—Dan. 11:40-41.

IV. Recovery of Palestine from the neglect and desolation of generations, and partial re-settlement of the Jews in the midst of the land.

Proof: "In the latter years, thou (the northern invader) shalt come into the land that is brought back from the sword and is gathered out of many people, against the mountains of Israel which have been always waste, but it is brought forth out of the nations and they shall dwell safely all of them. . . . the land of unwalled villages . . . the desolate places now inhabited . . . the people gathered out of the nations which have gotten cattle and goods and dwell in the midst of the land.—Ezek. 38:11-12.

V. Disappearance of the Pope's coercive power over Christendom, and the consumption of his dominion.

Proof: 'And he (the priest-monarch of the Romish system symbolized by the little horn with eyes on the fourth of Roman beast [as by Daniel in vision] shall speak great words against the most high, and shall wear out the saints of the most high and think to change times and laws, and they shall be given unto his hand for time, time-and-a-half (literally, 1260 days, standing for years), but the judgment shall sit and they shall take away his dominion to consume and destroy it unto the end.—Dan. 7, 25-26. "There was given to him a mouth speaking great things and blasphemies, and power was given unto him to make war forty and two months—42x30—1260 days or years.—Rev. 13:5.

VI. The preponderance and imperial aggrandisement of Russia in the capacity of protector of certain nationalities in Europe and Asia.

Proof: "Gog, Prince of Rosh—Russia, wrongly translated chief in the English version—Meshech—Muscovy, and Tubal—Tobolsky—I will bring thee forth with all thine army * * Persia, Ethiopia and Libya with them, * * Gomer and all his bands, and the house of Togarmah of the north quarters and all his bands, and many people with thee. Be thou prepared * * Be thou a guard unto them * * It shall be in the latter days.—Ezek. 38:3-7-16. See also Dan. 11:40-45.

There are certain other signs, but space here does not allow of their notice. There is only room to ask and briefly answer the question which naturally arises in reference to this exhibition of the signs.

Is this the Time?

Is this the time in the world's history when these signs are to be looked for? The answer is, Yes, for these reasons: They belong to 'the time of the end'—Dan. 11:40. The time of the end has been appointed—Dan. 8:19. The end in this case is the end of certain days—Dan. 12:13. The days represent years—Ezek. 4:6, shown also by the fulfillment of the seventy weeks' prophecy in Daniel 9: 24-27. The years represented in this case are expired, viz: the 1260 years of Papal ascendancy, dating from A. D. 606; and the 2300 years of Israelitish downtreading, dating from the uprise of the Persian power—see the vision of the ram and the goat—Dan. 8. Therefore we are in 'the time of the end,' and are justified in looking for the appointed signs of the Lord's return, and they are fully developed before the eyes of such as are able to discern.

AT THE LORD'S TABLE

James C. Thompson

Dearly Beloved in the Lord:

We have again met to commemorate our Lord's death. He has risen to die no more, and has ascended into the heavens, and now sits on the right hand of God our Father,

He is likened unto a man traveling into a far country, who called his servants and delivered unto them his goods. And after a long time he returns and reckons with them. We are a few of those servants who are to be reckoned with. Therefore it behooves us to consider whether we are making use of the talent or talents that have been delivered to us. Jesus said, "Behold, I come quickly; and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be" (Rev. 22:12). "All that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life, and they that have done evil unto the resurrection of damnation (John 5:29, 30).

In the parable (Matt. 25) that we have just read; those that increased their talents heard the Lord's approving words. "Well done, thou good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of your Lord." But the unprofitable servant was cast into outer darkness.

We can readily see by these references that there is work for each one to do, if we desire an entrance into the kingdom of God. We shall surely lose the gift of eternal life if we just drift along and make no effort to increase our talents or talents. There is no profit in being idle in the Church of God or household of faith: All must be laborers in his vineyard if they wish to hear his approving "Well done."

We should not procrastinate in the Lord's work, and say to ourselves, By and by I will do so and so, let us do what we can today tomorrow may not be ours. "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might, for there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom in the grave, whither thou goest" (Eccl. 9:10).

As life is very uncertain, and as the longest is merely a span, or as the apostle James says, "As a vapor, which appeareth for a little while, and then vanisheth away," and as at death all work ceases, we should do what we can for the Lord each day.

In the parable of the rich man who had much goods, and decided to take it easy, and eat, drink, and be merry, the Lord said, "This night shall thy life be required of thee." This, while it teaches to beware of covetousness, also teaches the shortness of life, and the foolishness of living for pleasure. This man was rich in this world's goods, but was not rich toward God.

In the world we hear that we should lay up for a rainy day, and that our dollar is our best friend, but we do not find any such statements in the book of God. God is our best friend if we do his will. The money that we receive should be judiciously spent, not extravagantly on raiment, food, or pleasure, but giving the Lord what is due him. If we do this he will bless us, otherwise he will not. Present your bodies a holy living sacrifice, which is your reasonable service It is a fight, brothers and sisters, to overcome the desires of the flesh. However, it is only reasonable that we should do so considering the great reward that is before us. Jesus is coming soon to reckon with his servants. Let each one determine that he or she will be at his right hand and hear his approving "Well done."

Salem, O.

WHAT A STRONG MAN DOETH

It is of much more than passing interest that in the Koran, the Bible and the Mohammedan religions, John the Baptist should take rank among the very first of great religious teachers; and that the reason assigned is this, that John the Baptist recognized as associated inseparably with his life these three facts: (1) That there is attached to his life a definite distinct purpose or end; (2) That he lived absolutely and alone for the attainment of that end; (3. That whatsoever the cost—even his life—he must reach his end.

I have chosen John the Baptist because we are all of us helped most by the example of a great big strong man—not by that which he preaches to us from the pulpit, but by what he is and what he does for us in our everyday life. Not by hundred, but by thousands the people thronged from everywhere to hear his preaching. Not one class, but all classes were attracted, and interesting to note, he understood and he met the spiritual necessities of every class. He exposed wrong wherever he found it, and mercilessly he arraigned every wrong-doer regardless of his rang and influence. Herein you have the pith and substance of the man and of his ministry. The Roman governor of the province was attracted by the personality and the preaching of this man. Even the libertine that he was, began to fear John, and so he sent him far away to a castle dungeon, off on the banks of the Jordan and in the grim solitariness of the Dead Sea. To gratify the whim of Salome and in the thought of setting his own conscience at rest he ordered John to be beheaded. The tragedy ended and the body of John buried by his disciples, it is common for us to assume that the life of that man of rare valiance had also come to a close.

But John the Baptist's life did not then come to an end; with 2000 years gone by the life has not yet come to an end. A man's life is not measured by length of days. The length of a man's life is measured alone by the quality and quantity of the service he rendered while here and in the flesh. Every man creates and sets into activity a distinctly new influence That influence enters others lives

—Henry Ward

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

We, whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones.

This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of their paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

N. E. Nelson	$1.50
E. M. Buscue	.50

THE BIBLE: ITS PRINCIPLES AND TEXTS

As indicated by the title this book is divided into three sections. The first consists of a remarkable disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "principles" in formulated propositions, and the third expounds in a clear, impressive and homelitic manner particular "Texts." The knotty and perplexing texts of the Bible are united and solved satisfactorily to the most fastidious and critical. More than one hundred and fifteen subjects of intense interest to every Bible student are formally discussed. Both simple and scholarly—the child is fascinated and taught; the scholar is entertained and instructed. Bible lovers, here is a feast for you. Throw open the door of your home; let The Bible—its Principles and its Texts come in and bless you and your family. 309 pages, 5x7 1-2 inches, durably and handsomely bound in whole cloth, with title embossed on back in gold. One copy, $1.10, two copies or more $1.00 each. R. G. Huggins, 10623 Lee Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

TWO TRACTS By J. L. WINCE

"Salvation" and "Resurrection" two tracts by J. L. Wince, can not fail to arouse the interest of every believer. They deal with vital questions in a most convincing manner. The price is 10c each, 12 for $1.00. For sale by S. Roxanna Wince, Pierceton, Ind.

Pungent Statements.—The grinding process of time is at work everywhere, blotting out and destroying all the ways of man. The busy pompous fools of the day may laugh and jeer at the truth, and blaspheme the God of heaven and earth; but they will soon be as though they had not been: their voices will soon be heard no more; their very names will be forgotten and they shall be chased away as the vision of the night.

"When, oh, when, shall we learn that loyalty to Christ is tested far more by the strength of our sympathy with truth than by the intensity of our hatred of error. I will tell you what to hate Hate hypocricy; hate cant; hate intolerance, oppression, injustice; hate Pharisaism; hate them as Christ hated them, with a deep, living, God-like hatred. But do not hate men in intellectual error. To hate a man for his error is as unwise as to hate one who, in casting up an account, has made an error against himself.

ANNA DREW

Dixon, Ill.

Books and Tracts

By W. H. WILSON

A BIBLE STUDY OF HADES.....15c each, or 5 for 50c.
(As compared with our modern ideas).
A critical study of Hell, showing the difference in the word in the past and in the present time.

STUDENTS TEXT BOOK 50c
How to study the Bible and rightly understand God's Word. Cloth bound, 200 Pages.

PINE WOODS BIBLE CLASS.....$1.25
Studies carried on between a class and its teacher. Cloth bound, 480 Pages.

CUNNINGLY DEVISED FABLES, 28 Pages.....10c

WHERE WILL YOU SPEND ETERNITY, 4 Pages, ... 25c per hundred

ARE YOU IN NEED OF MONEY, 4 Pages, 25c per hundred

WILL IT PAY TO BECOME A CHRISTIAN?.....25c
By Jas. W. Wilson. A neat Cloth book of 96 Pages which every one should read.

Bro. Wilson's Latest Book

Is Ready for Distribution
THE DESTINY OF RUSSIA AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES
96 Pages. Bound in Cloth, 25c.

W. H. WILSON, 625 North Willow Ave.
AUSTIN STA., CHICAGO, ILL.

The Restitution Publications

Send for all of the following books and tracts to

W. S. TOMLINSON, 10825 Orville Ave. N.E., Cleveland

A LETTER TO A FRIEND, 32 Pages 10c each, 12 for $1.00
FUTURE PROBATION, 150 Pages, 10c each, 12 for $1.00

The following tracts by M. Joblin:
THE KINGDOM OF GOD.
OLD MOTHER EARTH TO BE BORN AGAIN.
STRANGERS FROM THE COVENANT OF PROMISE.
VAIN WORSHIP.
NO IMMORTALITY OUT OF CHRIST.
GOD'S LOVE AND SOLICITUDE FOR MANKIND.
WHAT SHALL WE DO TO BE SAVED?
THE FOOLISHNESS OF PREACHING.
SALVATION, WHAT IS IT?

All the above are 16 page tracts, 10c for $1.00 any assortment.

THE PATERNITY OF JESUS, by M. Joblin, 128 Pages, each 30c. A work that proves Jesus was the son of God and not the natural son of Joseph.

THE SCRIPTURE SEARCHERS ASSISTANT, by M. Joblin, each 6c. A valuable aid to the study of the Scriptures, contains 400 references.

A WRONG DEFINITION OF LIFE AND DEATH, a six page tract, a most excellent booklet, 10 copies 15 cents; 50 copies 35 cents; 100 copies 60 cents.

FOUR PAGE TRACTS:

Can You Believe? 10 for 10c, 50 for 25c.

State of Man in Death, 10 for 10c, 50 for 25c, 100 for 40c.

Life and Death, 10 for 10c, 50 for 25c, 100 for 40c.

Age to Come Not a Heresy, 10 for 10c, 50 for 25c, 100 for 40c.

TWO PAGE TRACTS

Bible Pearls—Suitable for wide distribution. 1. The Gospel. 2. Coming and Kingdom of Christ by 20,000 Baptists in 1660. 3. Immateriality. 4. Kingdom of God. 5. Nature of man and Thoughts for Thinkers. 6. Two Advents. 7. What is Religion? 8. Restitution Age. 9. Destiny of the Wicked. 10. Baptism. Ten copies for 5 cents, or assorted packages of 100 for 20 cents.

Ladies! Save Money and Keep in Style by Reading McCall's Magazine and Using McCall Patterns

McCall's Magazine will help you dress stylishly at a moderate expense by keeping you posted on the latest fashions in clothes and hats. 60 New Fashion Designs in each issue. Also valuable information on all home and personal matters. Only 50c a year, including a free pattern. Subscribe today or send for 10c sample copy.

McCall Patterns will enable you to make in your own home, with your own hands, clothes for yourself and children which cannot be told from the most expensive in style and fit. Price—none higher than 15 cents. Send for free Pattern Catalogue.

We Will Give You Free Presents for getting subscriptions among your friends. Send for free Premium Catalogue and Club Price Offer.

THE McCALL COMPANY, 236 to 246 West 37th St., NEW YORK

"Signs of Character or How to Read Character at Sight"

and

"Health Through Natures Laws"

Two books by Dr. A. Wallace Mason. One is a study of character and how we may read it by the face and head. Brother Mason has made a very close study of this subject for years, and the information given in this book will prove interesting and instructive. Price 25c; 72 Pages.

The other is a work which tells how to gain and keep health as its title says, "through nature's laws." Every family should have a copy.

Address Bro. Mason, care Restitution.

Census Blank

MEMBERSHIP CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA

Name .....

Address .....
Street Town State

By whom Immersed ..... Date .....

Fill out the above and send to "The Census Editor," The Restitution, 803 Parkwood Drive, Cleveland, O.

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co.

WHOLESALE OPTICIANS

We make a specialty of High Grade Prescription Work, and carry a full line of all kinds of Optical goods. All orders filled same day as received.

"S. K. N." SERVICE

Means prompt returns, careful work, moderate prices. Goods shipped to all parts of the country.

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co. 322 SCHOFIELD BUILDING CLEVELAND, OHIO

SPECIAL OFFER!

IN ORDER to increase the circulation of The Restitution, the following special offer is made:

One new subscriber for 1 year, choice of:

W. H. Wilson's "Student's Text Book," regular price.....50c
Or 5 Copies of "Cunningly Devised Fables," reg. price 50c
Or 5 Copies of "Bible Study of Hades," reg. price 50c

For Two New Subscribers

One Copy "Pine Woods Bible Class," 480 pages, reg. price, $1.25
Or "The Bible, Its Principles and Texts," 309 pages, reg., $1.10
Or One Hundred of Bro. Joblin's Tracts, regular price $1.00

Here is a chance to get some of the books you all should own. By making special arrangements with the authors we are able to offer them to you without the payment of a cent on your part, just a few minutes effort. We cannot afford to continue this offer long, so take advantage of it at once, get some new subscribers today.

THE RESTITUTION, 803 Parkwood Drive

50 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents.

Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the

Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

WANTED!

Subscription Solicitors

We will pay an actual salary to men and women in all parts of the country, to act as agents for The Restitution. This salary will be based on your ability to take subscriptions, take care of renewals, and make collections, and will be paid weekly. You can devote all or part of your time, and can make a special offer to prospective subscribers, which we will tell you about if you are interested. We will have some announcements to make in the near future that will also help you.

If you want to work, sit down NOW and write for full information.

B. W. NUTT, Manager.

SUBSCRIBE FOR

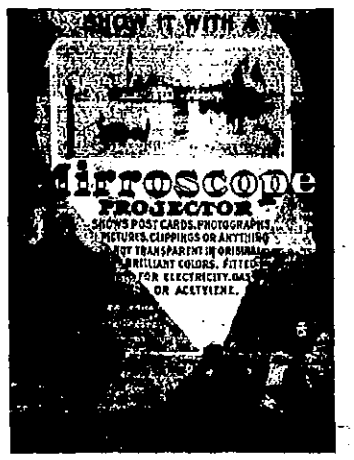
Words of Life

the publication of the Conditional Immortality Mission of Great Britain, advocating Life and Advent truths.

Terms: 1 copy 37c per annum, 12 copies to one address 25c per copy per annum.

Sample copy on application to

WILLIAM G. ROTHE
1301 Park Pl. Brooklyn, N. Y.



YOU will get genuine pleasure from an hour or two spent with the "Miroscope" these long winter evenings. Pictures, Photos, Post Cards, Etc. are shown in exact reproduction same as with a high priced Stereopticon, can be used in any home and operated with Electricity, Gas or Acetylene. Prices $2.50, $5.00, $7.50, $10.00, $15.00, $20.00, according to size. Sent anywhere in the U. S. Send for one today.

HOME ILLUMINATED PICTURE CO.

311 SCHOFIELD BUILDING CLEVELAND, OHIO

Less than Half a Cent a Day

The Restitution costs a Dollar and a Half a year, that's less than half A Cent a day or three cents a copy. You can't afford to be without it. If you are a subscriber get some one else to subscribe.

Help to Get Them on the List

Sample Copies of The Restitution

May be obtained for a stamp. Send for one.

"A LETTER TO A FRIEND"

This tract needs no introduction further than to say that it is one of the most convincing Gospel sermons ever written. Originally written as a letter to a friend by Sister C. C. Woodruff it was published and has sold extensively in tract form. In its present edition it is a 32 page tract, the price is

10c each; 12 for $1.00

There is no better way of spreading the Gospel than handing out one of these tracts wherever you have the opportunity.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

"Future Probation,

Is that Awaiting any of the Unrighteous?"

Here is a work by Wm. Glenn Moncrieff that every one should read. It is one of the best things on the subject ever written and will appeal to every student of the word. It is a book of 150 pages, made to sell at 25c. We have a limited number left which we will sell at the special price of

10c each; 12 for $1.00

Send for some at once.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

Oregon State College
Oregon State Library

The Restitution
IS THE OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA.

The Restitution.

Founded in A. D. 1852

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:16, 17) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:9, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Lk. 19:12-15), who will be King of Kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-53); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17), and belief in, the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Lk. 13:3), and obedience by Baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by A life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation 2 Pet. 1; 3:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ." (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31).

ROBT. G. HUGGINS, Editor.

—Terms of— Subscription
ONE YEAR, $1.50;
SIX MONTHS 75 CTS. IN ADVANCE

VOL. 60 CLEVELAND, OHIO, APRIL 9, 1912 No. 64

DECLARES AMERICA IS MENACED BY A FLOOD OF BUDDHIST IMMIGRANTS

San Francisco Minister Says World Parliament of Religions Opened the Door to a Dangerous Element; Baptists Fear Deficit During Year; Political Club Raises Question: "Is Religious Faith Declining?"

Almus Adams.

In a late issue of The Restitution I had an article under the caption, "Are We Being Christianized or Heathenized?" In the Elpaso Herald of March 25, is found a confirmation of what I said then besides this, there is what we, as a people, have been trying to get the people to see for years; that is, a falling away, and a decided unrest among the people, both as to religion and politics. It seems to me we ought to see that what we have contended for all along is coming true. And how necessary for us to stand by it now that it has come, and be careful not to drift into the same conditions. These people have always said it made no difference what was believed, and we see what it has finally resulted in, if we open the door to all kinds of beliefs, in a few years we will be with the rest, and the faith for which we have fought will be surrendered. "Be faithful," is the injunction. Let us heed it. The article fro the El Paso Herald follows:

At the annual conference of secretary of the American Bible society, just held, it was reported that during the year 619,055 copies of the Scriptures, in 70 languages, were distributed in this country by the society's nine secretaries and 395 workers. From its foundation the society has distributed over 90,000,000 copies. One of its secretaries, Rev. A. Wesley Mell, of San Francisco, talking for publication during the conference, gave some striking information concerning the Pacific coast's aim for the European immigrant, and the coast's experience with Buddhists. He showed elaborate pictures illustrative of the latter work. Said he:

"New York is to become the back door, and San Francisco the front one of this immigrant business. The Panama canal open, immigrants from Europe will avoid the long and expensive railroad haul by taking ship to the coast direct. There will be a new and larger Ellis Island, but it is to be in Golden Gate harbor, not on the Atlantic seaboard. Already 40 development stations have been opened in Europe, designed to instruct immigrants, and turn the tide of travel from New York through the Panama canal ,and into San Francisco bay. The two lands of the olive and the fig and the palm, southern Europe and California, are to work in harmony, and to leave New York and the eastern railroads out of it.

"The World Parliament of Religions back in 1893, in connection with the World's fair ,that year, is responsible for the most dangerous men in this country today. These are the Hindu priests, who seek here to propogate the heathen faith of India. Unwittingly, of course, the parliament that sat during the Chicago fair played its part, but the shrewd Hindus were quick to see the opportunity and with a subtle, sagacious and effective flank movement, they have come to America, while Americans have sent Christian missionaries and millions to India. The immigrant door is wide open to these educated Hindus, while it is practically shut to many others who are less harmful.

"These Hindu priests have no concern for the Hindu laborers. The laborers belong in another state or caste. The operations of the priests is rather in the drawing-rooms of the American women, giving breathing exercises. This veneered Hinduism has headquarters for its work in southern California at San Diego. There are 60,000 Hindus on the Pacific coast, and 12 centers of Buddhist and Hindu propoganda there. These are at Seattle, Portland, San Francisco, Sacramento, Stockton, Bakersfield, Vacaville and other principal cities. At San Jose there are two Buddhist temples, and one at Oakland. At Los Angeles there is an institutional Buddhist work, somewhat on the lines of the Y. M. C. A."

The Bible society reports that last year, through its coast agency it distributed 60,000 copies of the Scriptures in 55 languages, some of these Bibles, in four languages, among the 4000 Hindu laborers of the coast.

Baptist Board Deficits Feared this year.

Baptist societies have agreed that contributions intended for them and to be included in this year's accounts, may be mailed up to April 2, the last day of the current month falling on Sunday. The secretary of the general apportionment committee, in sending out this notice to Baptist churches of the country, tells them that receipts during these final days of the year must be far larger than in former years, else heavy deficits, greater than last year, will result.

It is stated that the American Baptist Foreign Mission society, with headquarters in Boston, must receive $187,000 more than during March of last year, and the home mission society, with offices in New York, 71,000 more, if deficits larger than last year are to be avoided. The secretary states that if deficits occur they are to be taken by the societies that Baptist churches desire or are willing to consent to retreats and retrenchments in work. While expectations from laymen's movements are declared to be justified, it is admitted that larger apportionments have been made. The trouble seems to be, the Baptists say, that expectations are not realized as rapidly as some had hoped.

The Baptist Foreign society, at the quarterly meeting of its managers, just held in Chicago, elected the "Rev." Dr. Jas. H. Franklin, of Colorado Springs, to be foreign secretary to succeed the "Rev." Dr. Thomas S. Barbour, who retires on account of his health and has been elected honorary secretary. The new secretary, who is expected to enter upon his work in Boston in May, is a Virginian ,and educated at the Southern college at Richmond, but has spent practically all of his ministry in the north. He is under 40 years of age. The Foreign society has now constituted three departments in its work, one to cultivate the home field, the source of men and money supply; one to conduct the work in foreign lands, and done to care for money matters.

High Church People Disturbed Over Pulpits.

Lent, and particularly Holy week service cards in Episcopal churches have given the high church people in that body grave concern. The trouble is the announcement on these cards of Presbyterian ministers in Episcopal pulpits. A few years ago a canon becoming famous because giving certain rights of interchange of pulpits on special occasions, created a great stir among the same high element. The stir subsided as suddenly as it came up, and nothing whatever was done to change the law. This Lent the broad church rectors have thrown over any semblance of special occasion, and have openly invited Presbyterian ministers to occupy their pulpits.

The most conspicuous instance one said to have the approval of the "Rt. Rev." the Bishop of Pennsylvania, the "Rt. Rev." Dr. Phillip Rhinlander, is the proposed series of sermons in St. Stephen's Episcopal church, Philadelphia, during Holy Week, by the "Rev." Dr. Charles Wood, pastor of the Presbyterian church of the Covenant, Washington. Holy Week cannot be considered a special occasion. it is stated by those who know, and since it is such week it is giving the Highs even greater concern. Discussion of the incident is going on, and published protests are appearing. Along with it is the preaching in one New York Episcopal pulpit, almost through the entire Lenten season, of professors of Union Theological seminary, nearly all taking part and all of them Presbyterian, although the seminary is itself not in regular standing in that church. It is admitted that this Lent sees the greatest innovations in this line since there was an Episcopal church in America.

Says Unrest Among the Ministers is Growing.

A curious condition prevails among Christian ministers of America, as just reported by one Episcopal bishop, who is among the best known of American Christian leaders, but who must here be nameless. There are applying to him, he says, scores of ministers from other religious bodies asking him to receive them into his church. He is unable to do so, owing to lack of rectorates for them, but he states that they are so insistent that, were there a dearth of young men entering the seminaries for a year or two, he believes he could himself, fill the demand.

Ministers who apply to him are resident in almost every state, and they are in practically every religious body. Asked if any Roman Catholics apply, he replied that not a week passes that some do not, and that they are quite as numerous in proportion as are those applying from other bodies. He does not assume, he says, that his church is over popular, but rather that there is tremendous unrest among the ministers, and that others besides himself, in positions where they might place new men, are besieged as he says he is with applicants for admission into their respective churches. He says those applying are by no means young men, nor are they men who have failed in present pastorates. He intimates that were he tog ive names, which he refused to do, many people would be surprised at the desire of some men to quit prominent pulpits which they now hold.

Is Religious Faith Declining? Asks Club.

The Republican club of the city of New York, of which Otto T. Bannard, a member of Yale corporation and once candidate for mayor of New York, is president, has just done the unusual act of having religious leaders of half a dozen bodies, before one of its meetings to discuss the question of religious faith, whether it is advancing or declining, and in either event what is the effect upon the republic, and upon the people. It seems to take sides in one case, for it asked the speakers whom it invited to say, if they could, what is the remedy if it be found that faith is declining.

Singularly, so the club members thought, representatives of the Catholic church, which reports progress in America as it does nowhere else, ventured opinions that religious faith is declining, while Protestant leaders, whose bodies have been said to be not supported as formerly, were, without exception hopeful. One gave significant data exactly contradicting statements made by Catholics concerning conditions in colleges, and another inquired why the question were not reversed and so read, not "Is religious faith declining," but "Is religious faith advancing?"

Cardinal Gibbons, of Baltimore, writing because too ill to attend in person, assumed faith to be declining, and gave as a reason the lack of religious instruction in the public schools.

The moderator of the Congregational national council, the Rev. Dr. Nehemiah Boynton, the bishop of New York, the Rt. Rev Dr. David H. Greer, the Men and Religion campaign leader, Fred B. Smith, and others spoke to the same effect. A Jewish rabbi deplored the falling away of Jews and moderator Boynton criticised college graduates who, after receiving the best training the state can give them, turn individualists, go in for lighter things, and refuse to help labor, politics or Christianity to solve any of the pressing problems. All were agreed, however, that faith is advancing, and none in more positive terms than Bishop Greer, who pointed out the leadership of Jesus Christ and his acceptance as such by all bodies to the sinking of all differences.

RESURRECTION: OUR LORD'S REPLY TO THE SADDUCEES.

"If a man die, shall he live again?" (Job xiv:14).

"Now that the dead are raised, even Mosea shewed at the bush, when he called the Lord the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob. For he is not the God of the dead, but of the living. For all live unto him" (Luke xx:37, 38).

For some time past this subject has been much on my mind. Upon no other subject are we so shut up to the Bible for information regarding it.

Resurrection is the keynote of Christianity; take this away and Christianity falls to the ground, for on this essential point it differs from every other religion extant. I have no sympathy with those who seek to compare the religion of Jesus Christ with that of Mohammend, Confucius, or Buddha. It is beyond comparison. The religion of Jesus Christ is a living religion, a religion of life in every sense of the term. The need of the world is life, both actual and spiritual.

As a preliminary to our subject it will be necessary to enquire somewhat concerning that which makes resurrection needful, viz., Death. What is death? Our orthodox pulpits rarely, if ever, preach resurrection, because they profess to believe "there is no death; what seems so is transition." What saith the Scripture? Surely the words of our text most emphatically teach us that death is a cessation of animate being. If a man die, will he live again?

He has lived, will he live again?

Quite recently, I had sent me a tract by Rev. Jas. Spilling on the subject of resurrection, and the writer says: "Death is the voice of Almighty God calling to us in this lower world from the serene heights of heaven, 'Come up hither.' Death is a kind of gateway from one world bright and beautiful to another world still more bright and beautiful. Thus regarded, death is not the foe but the friend of man, not a curse but a blessing." Are these definitions in accord with God's Word? To my mind, to say that "death is the voice of God," is not only denying Scripture, but is rank blasphemy; nor is such language too strong with which to condemn it. If death is God's call to come up hither, then I say, and I say it reverently, God's ways are at least open to very grave questions.

Death comes in a variety of ways; often through the most appalling accidents, and the most terrible crimes. Such a theory as we have just quoted makes God directly responsible for these occurrences. No, we cannot, and we dare not think God's methods are such. God does not call his saints to himself by such terrible means. "By one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin, so death passed upon all men." "The wages of sin is death."

We thus see that God's Word places sin and death upon an equal footing. It is surely, then, worse than presumption to speak of it in the terms of the writer we have quoted. He goes further, and says: "Natural or bodily death is not God's curse upon man, but his blessing." It would seem he must have forgotten Gen. iii:17-19: "And unto Adam he said, because thou hast hearkened unto the voice of thy wife, and hast eaten of the tree, of which I commanded thee, saying, thou shalt eat of it, cursed is the ground for they sake. . . . In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground, for out of it wast thou taken, for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return," and other kindred passages. A theory, the logical outcome of which is to deny the Word of God so flatly, for that very reason must certainly prove itself untrue.

Space will not permit us to investigate further this portion of our subject. Enough has already been said to prove to us conclusively that death is a solemn reality, that it is the result of sin, that it is no friend, but a most dreaded foe, and even those who speak to the contrary, show by their actions that their belief is not well founded.

All have sinned, "none can by any means redeem his brother." Hence the need for a redeemer and resurrection.

As before stated, our only source of information on this subject is Revelation; but thank God it is not meagre. True, in the Old Testament it is not so prominent as in the New, but that there are many passages which clearly and unmistakably teach it cannot be denied. For instance, Psa. xlix: 15: "But God will redeem my soul from the power of the grave (sheol); for he shall receive me." Dan. xii:2: "And many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake. . . ." Hosea xiii:14: "I will ransom them from the power of the grave, I will redeem them from death. . . ." etc., etc.

There are one or two instances of resurrection recorded in the Old Testament, but these are admittedly only of a temporal character. Christ alone brought life and immortality to light though the gospel. He alone is the resurrection and the life. He alone can give eternal life; a life by which we "cannot die any more."

The writer of the tract already referred to maintains that resurrection takes place at once, immediately at death, basing his teaching on Luke xx:37, 38. He first introduces an argument against the resurrection of the body, much of which is of considerable force, and quoting as proof, "thou sowest not that body which shall be;" though some of his arguments drawn from nature to my mind lack precision. For instance, he states we have a fresh body every seven years, and he then asks the question: "In which of these bodies are we raised?" We do not have a fresh body every seven years, but in the course of seven years every particle of old tissue has been replaced by new; and the new takes on the impressions of the old. This fact accounts for the wonderful memory and the retaining of life-long scars, etc., etc. Memory is often used by orthodoxy in proof of separate personality. They conveniently forget how much is forgotten.

He next endeavors to prove from 1 Cor. xv:44, "There is a natural body, and there is a spiritual body," that we now have a spiritual body as well as a natural body; the latter is buried in the article of death, the former at once raised. It will be noticed that the whole of his arguments are based on the fact of the present tense being used in the verses quoted. Did these verses stand alone, much might be said in favor of his theory. After a little examination, however, we shall see how false the teaching is, and how absolutely contrary to the word of God. By insisting on the present tense used in Luke xx: 37, 38, he maintains, with apparent reason, that the dead are raised now. On turning up the passage, however, it will be observed that instead of beginning at the commencement of Christ's reply to the Sadducees he jumps right into the middle. By such unfair treatment the painest language may be distorted. Indeed, were we by a similar process to read Gal. ii:21, "I do not frustrate the grace of God, for if righteousness is come by the law, then Christ is dead in vain," we prove that Christ is even now dead. Christ's answer to the Sadducees is conclusive—not in proving the dead to be alive, but that there is to be a resurrection of the dead—not in this age, but in that which is to come. Notice his words: "The children of this age marry and are given in marriage, but they which are accounted worthy to obtain that age and the resurrection of the dead neither marry or are given in marriage. . . ." The continued use of the present tense throughout the passage will now be understood. It makes a future event more readily grasped. The passage clearly puts the resurrection as taking place in "that" age.

The Swedenborgian theory in no way accounts for the many passages where such terms as "them that sleep," "them that are asleep," "the dead in Christ," so frequently occur. According to them, death often in the most hideous form, ushers them into the presence of God. As for me, "I shall be satisfied when I awake in his likeness," when "the Lord himself" shall descend from heaven with a shout, and the dead in Christ shall rise first. Oh, what a contrast! "Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection: upon such the second death hath no power." In what way does the theory we have been discussing recognize a first resurrection?

Many other points of our subject might be considered, such as: "How are the dead raised, and with what body do they come?" Various theories have been put forward in the hope of solving this interesting problem—the Germ theory, the Identity theory, the re - incarnation theory, and the theory alluded to in our remarks, which we might call the spiritual body theory.

I do not wish to discuss the probability or improbability of any of these. No doubt we all have our own personal thoughts regarding them. God has not told us how he will raise the dead, but we have his promise that he will do so. Men and women around us are dead in trespasses and sins. Let us who have the light of God's Word see to it that they get it.

"If thou shalt confess with thy mouth Jesus as Lord (Variorum Bible), and believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved. For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness, and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation" (Rom. x:9, 10), "Your fathers did eat manna in the wilderness and are dead, but he that eateth of this bread (Christ) shall live for ever" (John vi:58). "And this is the Father's will which hath sent me, that of all which he hath given me, I should lose nothing, but should raise it up again at the last day" (John vi: 39). "In the world (age) to come life everlasting" (Luke xviii:30).

R. H. JUDD.

We must use no words that we are not prepared to back up with deeds.—Theodore Roosevelt

---

"Nothing of worth or weight can be achieved with half a mind, with a faint heart or lame endeavor."

There are too many people trying to make the Bible popular by using it as a club.

The Restitution

Issued weekly by

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING COMPANY.

Entered as second-class matter under act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

TERMS.

One year $1.50; six months 75 cents, in advance.

ROBT. G. HUGGINS.....Editor
BUELL W. NUTT.....Manager

BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Burton H. Lang, Harry Pott,
Chas. A. Goss, Robt. G. Pate,
Buell W. Nutt, D. C. Robison,
W. S. Tomlinson.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

All remittances should be sent by bank draft, post office money order or express money order to The Restitution Publishing Co., 803 Parkwood drive, Cleveland, Ohio.

All communication intended for publication should be sent to the editor, Robt. G. Huggins, 10823 Lee avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

It is necessary to adhere strictly to the rule of not returning unused manuscripts. Writers will please keep copies, or risk the loss.

While the editor exercises a general supervision over the articles appearing in The Restitution, his endorsement does not extend to the interpretation of details nor the exegesis of particular texts in the writings of contributors.

Cleveland, Ohio....April 9, 1914

EDITORIAL

The editor writes his editorials this week at Troy, Ohio. Wife is acting editor in our absence. We mention this so that if the paper is not "just the same," you will know how to account for it.

Billy Sunday has closed his meeting at Wheeling, W. Va. He has, acording to newspaper reports, made more "converts" and raised more money than at any former time. "Three cheers for Billy Sunday," do I hear you say? Sorry, but we cannot cheer with you. The different seed of nature yield "after his kind" (Gen. 1:11); naturally you would expect the word of God, the incorruptible seed (1. Pet. 1:23), to produce likewise. But contrary to nature and the word of Jehovah, the gospel as preached by Sunday makes Methodists, Baptists, Presbyterians, etc., all at the same time! Such mongrelology and "sosmology" is wonderful. Put this down for the eighth wonder of the world.

Sister M. Sutterfield writes: Will you put these questions in The Restitution: What church first practiced taking the dead into the church for funerals. How long has this been the cusom? Did the church practice this in apostolic days? I find nothing in the Bible about it, and have not read ancient history. I have often thought it might be wrong, as the people of God had to be so careful about such things in olden times.

COMMUNICATIONS.

To The Restitution:

Please find enclosed $1.50 for The Restitution, as our time is expired.

To have to do without The Restitution now after one year, would be like giving up a dear friend; we would miss its weekly visits so much: We would be so lonesome without it. We don't have much means of helping the good cause of spreading the true gospel, so we are sending our old numbers to friends that we know are reading them, and we are praying that the time will come when we may hear of them putting on Christ in Baptism, and taking a firm stand on the truth.

We wonder how many others are thoroughly reading their papers, and then passing them on. A two cent stamp will carry quite a number of Restitutions to a friend. We can't all preach from the pulpit, but we can send the grand sermons on to some one else by mailing them a Restitution. Your brother and sister in Christ Jesus,

MR. and MRS J. P. STEDMAN.

"ONLY SLEEP."

"Do you think the little girl was really dead?" asked the teacher of a class of neglected-looking boys, gathered in from the lanes, who had been painfully toiling to read through the story of Jairus' daughter.

"Please, 'm I think she was," answered a ragged little fellow at the end of the form.

"Why then, do you think; did the Lord Jesus say she was sleeping?"

"Please, 'm, it was only sleep to him, he could wake her so easy."

"Only sleep to him." How sweet the thought, that terrible as death is to us, with its icy chill, its gloomy pallor, its dust and ashes, and corruption, it is "only sleep to him" who has the keys of hades and of death, and can wake the slumberer with his slightest word!

Let us then bury our dead in hope. Gloomy as death seems to us, "it is only a sleep to him," and the hour is coming when all that are in their graves shall hear the voice of the Son of God, and shall be caught up to meet the Lord in the air, and so be forever with the Lord.

CORN SHEAVES

Gathered from Everywhere.

Bible Souls.

Knowing souls (Prov. xix:2).
Lipped souls (Lev. v:4).
Love-knit souls (1 Sam. xviii:1).
Lying souls (Gen. vi:2).
Lean souls (Ps. cvi:15).
Living souls (Gen. ii:7).
Life-entreating souls (Ps. cxix:175).
Liberal souls (Prov. xi:25).
Loving souls (Gen. xxxiv:8).
Longing souls (2 Sam. xiii. 39).
Leaven-eating souls (Ex. xii:15).
Marrying souls (Gen. xxxiv:8).
Manual working souls (Lev. xxiii:30).
Material souls (Ps. viii:2).
Mental souls (Deut. xi:18).
Mortal souls (Ps. xxxiii:19).
Mourning souls (Job. xiv:22).
Melted souls (Ps. cvii:26).
Meat-eating souls (Ps. cvii:18).
Mouth-fed souls (Ps. ciii:5).
Naturally born souls (Gen. xlvi:22).
Non-immortal souls (Ps. xxii:29).
Natural-bodied souls (1 Cor. xv:44, 45).
One-hearted souls (Acts iv:32).
Oppressed souls (Ps. liv:3).
Physical souls (Gen. xlvi:26).
Persecuted souls (Ps. cxliii:3).
Purified souls (1 Pet. i:22).
Property souls (Ezek. xviii:4).
Preserved souls (1 Thess. v:23).
Roast-flesh loving souls (1 Sam ii:15, 16).
Resurrected souls (Ps. xvi:10; xlix:15).
Replenished souls (Ps. xxvii:7).
Returning souls (1 Kings viii:48).
Refreshing souls (Prov. xxv:13).
Ransomed souls (Ex. xxx:12).
Rejoicing souls (Ps. lxxxvi:4).
Redeemed souls (Ps. xxxiv:22).
Serving souls (Deut. xi:13).
Subject souls (Rom. xiii:1).
Sheep souls (Num. xxxi:28).
Self-blessing souls (Ps. xlix:18).
Sacrificial souls (Rev. vi:9).
Slain souls (Ezek. xiii:10).
Seventy souls (Gen. xlvi:27).
Swearing souls (Lev. v:4).
Sundered souls (Heb. iv:12).
Self-destroying souls (Prov. vi:32).
Stealing souls (Prov. vi:30).
Strangled souls (Job. vii:15).
Sluggish souls (Job. xiii:4).
Spoiled souls (Prov. xxii:23).
Sword-killed souls (Josh x:5).
Sword-wounded souls (Jer. iv:10).
Satiated souls (Jer. xxxi:14).
Shrivelled souls (Num. xi:6).
Sinning souls (Lev. v:1).
Strengthened souls (Ps. cxxxviii:3).
Slaughtered souls (Josh x:28).
Thirsty souls (Prov. xxv:25).
Trespassing souls (Lev. v:4).
Travailing souls (Isa. liii:11).
Utterly cut-off souls (Num. xv:31).
Unstable souls (2 Pet. ii:14).
Unclean souls (Lev. v:2).
Unsatisfied souls (Ezek. vii:19).
Vanity-abhoring souls (Ps. xxiv:4).
Vexed souls (2 Kings iv:27).
War-invaded souls (1 Pet. ii:11).
Water-saved souls (1 Pet. iii:20).
Weeping souls (Jer. xiii:17).
Weaned souls (Ps. cxxxi:2).
Weary souls (Jer. xxxi:25).
Wounded souls (Job xxxiv:12)
Woe-begone souls (Isa. iii:9).
Water souls (Rev. xvi:3).
Youth-renewed souls (Ps. ciii:5).

The Hare.—It is remarkable that the Arabs of the present day, though in most points adhering to the Mosaic distinctions of clean and unclean, yet class the hare among animals lawful to be eaten, on the express ground that it does chew the cud.

Jerusalem and Its Sieges.—Probably no capital city of equal consequence and antiquity was ever taken so many times as Jerusalem. We have no record of the date of its foundation; yet its frequent history is one of continual contests and continual restorations; and it is no doubt owing to these changes that the ground of the modern city is in many places thirty feet above the level of the old, and that the valleys which formerly intersected its divisions are now filled to their summits with soil and debris. The following are the principal sieges and conquests which the metropolis of Palestine has undergone, not including, however, various brief capitulations during the Maccabean and later Syrian disturbances:

Sieges of Jerusalem.

Joshua	B.C. 1425
David	B.C. 1408
Shisak	B.C. 974
Joash	B.C. 839
Assyrians	B.C. 771
Pharaoh-Necho	B.C. 610
Nebuchadnezzar	B.C. 587
Ptolemy Soter	B.C. 320
Antiochus Epiphanes	B.C. 170
Pompey	B.C. 63
Crassus	B.C. 54
Herod	B.C. 37
Titus Vespasian	A.D. 70
Adrian	A.D. 135
Chosroes	A.D. 614
Heraclius	A.D. 628
Omar (Saracens)	A.D. 637
Seljouk Turks (Tutush	A.D. 1078
Godfrey of Bouillon	A.D. 1099
Salah-ed-din	A.D. 1187
Turks	A.D. 1217
Crusaders	A.D. 1229
Turks	A.D. 1244
Selim	A.D. 1517
Bonaparte	A.D. 1799
Mahommet Ali	A.D. 1832
Turks	A.D. 1840

The Jews Hope of a Messiah.—"The Jews, throughout their history, differed from every other nation in their expectation of a Messiah. While heathen kingdoms decayed and fell without hope of deliverance, in Israel political decline was attended by an increasing expectation of a high and God-sent deliverer.

The Ostrich and Science.—The natural science of the Book of Job has been criticised, because in the reply of the Lord to Job we are told of the ostrich that she "leaveth her eggs in the earth, and warmeth them in dust, and forgetteth that the foot may crush them, or that the wild beast may break them:" "she is hardened against her young ones, as though they were not hers,"—whereas it has long been familiarly known that, though the eggs of the ostrich are, at least in the hotter regions, left buried in the sand during the day, where the heat of the sun retained in the sand is sufficient to continue the process of incubation, yet that at night the ostrich does incubate, and will, on occasions, vigorously defend its young. But it has only recently been ascertained that the ostrich has this peculiarity in common with the other struthious or wingless birds of South America and Australia, as the rhea, emeu, and cassowary, that it is only the male parent which performs domestic duties; that the female, so soon as she has deposited her eggs, does neglect and utterly ignore her offspring. Here then, we find the language of the oldest book in the world in strict accordance with a fact of natural history which remained till yesterday unknown.

THE OLD AND THE NEW COVENANT.

D. C. Robison.

It is as evident as the English language can make it that these two covenants were made with the same people. These covenants were made with God's chosen people, Israel. The first covenant was made with this people at Sinai. In Heb. 9:1, the apostle says, "Then verily the first covenant had also ordinances of divine service, and a worldly sanctuary." This "divine service" related to the ceremonies under this covenant.

A covenant is a contract entered into between two parties. Jehovah was the party of the first part, and Israel, under Moses, the party of the second part. This covenant contained three distinct codes, viz.: The moral code, the ceremonial; and the hygienic codes. In the discussion of this subject we should keep separate these facts, viz.: That the covenant and the codes are distinct. The codes were a necessary part of the covenant as the conditions are a part of a law contract. The decalogue contained a perfect moral guide. Its purpose was to produce a pure people morally, and a people who would worship the only true God.

The morals under this code were very different from that of the nations. The ceremonies under the covenant were to lead them to Christ. The moral code was an act of the mind and conscience and the physical acts of sacrifice. Every sacrifice required an acknowledgement of sin and required a physical act to accomplish it. These acts at all times strengthened the morals of the individual who offered the sacrifice. Cleanliness being akin to godliness, it was necessary that a hygienic code be established. This could only be accomplished by the offering of a suitable sacrifice. In this there was a mental and physical act.

By the observance of these codes under the covenant the people were rendered morally, spiritually, and hygienically pure: such only can serve Jehovah acceptably.

Had Israel kept their codes, and the covenant, they would have been to Jehovah, "a peculiar treasure, a holy nation." The history of this people teaches us that they ceased to become a moral, a serving, or a clean people. The cause of this was that they mixed in the religious services of the nations around them—they were no longer a distinct people as Jehovah purposed. It is written concerning them, "It never came into my mind that you would do these things," viz.: to serve other Gods.

We have them far attempted to show that neither one nor all of these codes is the old covenant They do not constitute a covenant We have said, that a covenant is an agreement between two parties. The covenant that Jehovah made with Israel was that they should possess a land, "In the same day the Lord made a covenant with Abram, saying, unto thy seed have I given this land, from the river of Egypt to the great river Euphrates," they were to possess this land after they had dwelt in Egypt, in the fourth generation they shall come again (Gen. 1). When this people were brought to Sinai, Jehovah declared the conditions of this covenant which were, "Now therefore, if ye will obey my voice indeed, and keep my covenant, then ye shall be a peculiar treasure unto me above all people; for all the earth is mine. And ye shall be unto me a kingdom of priests and an holy nation. These are the words which thou shalt speak unto the children of Israel." In Jehovah's voice were the things spoken, viz.: To observe the laws of my covenant, and to remember that he had given them the land to possess it. Had they remembered his covenant they could have possessed the land under Moses. They were not faithful, therefore, they were turned back and dwelt in the wilderness until the disobedient had been justly punished.

It is evident that there is a difference between the covenant and its conditions from Exodus 34:27, 28: "And the Lord said unto Moses, write thou these words, for after the tenor of these words I have made a covenant with thee, and with Israel. And he was there with the Lord forty days and forty nights; he did neither eat nor drink water. And he wrote upon the tables the words of the covenant, the ten commandments." The above plainly teaches that the words written on the tables were the words of the covenant and not the covenant. The words of the covenant are further stated to be the ten commandments. After the tenor of these words I have made a covenant with thee and with Israel. Webster defines "tenor" thus: It differs from purport which is only the substance or general import of the instrument. Our object in writing that is to show that Jehovah has never conditioned the salvation of any person or people on morals alone. It is an untruth and dangerous. The nominal churches of today are founded upon this foundation, all that they repuire is that one be morally good. Now if the moral code is the old covenant and the sermon on the mount, the new covenant we are left out of the inheritance of the land or earth which is plainly taught by Jesus in this sermon, we therefore affirm that the old covenant was the framework of the building and the codes were enacted to complete their covenant. Their moral code was rewritten in the New Testament with one exception, that of the observance of the Sabbath, in fact a moral code has existed since the beginning. At sinai they were written on tables that Israel might not forget, Paul says, "If that covenant had been faultless then should no place have been sought for the second". For finding fault with them, he saith, "Behold the days come, saith the Lord, when I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel and with the house of Judah. For this is the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel after those days saith the Lord, I will put my laws into their minds and write them in their hearts, and I will be to them a God and they shall be to me a people. A peculiar people, a holy nation", just what they might have been under the old covenant. This is the covenant spoken of (Ezek. 20:33, 45, and Jos. 31:31, 33). This covenant relates to the land as well as universal peace conditions. Ezek. states that Jehovah will gather Israel from among the people and from among the countries wherein ye are scattered. Jehovah says, "I will cause you to pass under the rod and I will bring you into the bond of the new covenant". In this act al the rebels will be purged out and only the obedient accepted. The soil will be thoroughly prepared before the laws are writen in their hearts. For proof please note what Jehovah says, "And they shall no more every man his neighbor and every man his brother, saying Know the Lord, for they shall know me from the least of them unto the greatest of them, saith the Lord, for I will forgive their iniquity and I will remember their sin no more". The Lord Jesus, the Christ is the leader under this covenant. They are purified first, then the laws written in their hearts, their sin and inquity have been forgiven they have acknowledged Jesus as their king in connection with this please read (Isa. 2:1, 6, Micah. 4:1, 8), under these conditions they will be planted in their covenanted land. "I will plant them upon their land and they shall no more be pulled up out of their land which I have given them, saith the Lord." (Amos 9:15). This is the covenant that was established upon better promises. "In that he saith, a new covenant he hath made the first old. Now that which decayeth and waxeth old is ready to vanish away." (Heb. 8:13). When Israel failed to keep the covenant it became useless. Their kingdom was overturned and they were dispersed among the nations, they are no longer a nation—when they are brought into the bond of the (new) covenant it will be under better conditions.

Jesus is the minister of this new covenant. His death ratified it as it did every condition of the covenant made with Abraham. The covenant made with Abraham gives promises to several parties. It was to the seed. Now Abraham had "an unit" seed which is Christ. And "seeds as of many." The numerous seed is made up of Abraham's fleshly seed under the old covenant and his fleshly seed under the new covenant. Also his numerous spiritual seed which now are from the nations. The death of Christ ratified every condition herein spoken of. If ye are Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed and him according to the promise.

Salem, Ohio.

RELIGIOUS CHANGES

In Belief and Practice Between the Resurrection of Christ and the Death of Constantine in 337

XIII.—The Father of Present-day Orthodoxy.

In the beginning of the third century we have Origen, "The Great." He was great in labors, great in learning, a great teacher, and a great sufferer for his faith, and one of the great founders of what is called orthodoxy. He was one of the perverters of the plain teachings of the Scriptures, by introducing heathen philosopy and interpreting the Scriptures on an allegoric method to make them harmonize with his heathen ideas. He was also a great means of destroying the simple, early faith of the gospel, by his writings, and by attacking those who held it with his great ability, and converting them to his heathen philosophy.

A school of so-called Christian philosophy was commenced about the end of the second century. Out of this school our modern orthodoxy was largely evolved.

During this evolutionary period many queer theories were propounded. It took a long time to properly fix up the Gnostic, or heathen philosophy, and to get it to at all harmonize apparently with the plain teachings of the Scriptures. The Scriptures and all the early fathers had clearly taught that Christ was coming back to this earth personally, to establish a glorious kingdom, and that his saints were to be raised to reign with him when he came. At that time he was to judge the quick and the dead; they taught that rewards and punishments were not to be given until he came. But this by no process of twisting could be fitted into the Gnostic idea, that all souls lived after what they called death, and went to their places of reward or punishment when they left the body; so they were consistent, this extent, at least, they boldly discarded the idea that Christ would ever personally reign on the earth, and used every effort to prevent others believing this doctrine, in defence of which Christ and his apostles had laid down their lives.

The founder of this new school of so-called Christian philosophy, in Alexandria, very much eulogized by modern theologians, was Paentaenus. He commenced his school about the year 180. He was succeeded by Clement, and he in turn by Origen, about the year 202.

Origen has been lauded by many orthodox theologians, and called one of the greatest of fathers of orthodoxy. Dr. Crombie, Professor of Biblical criticism, in St. Mary's college, St. Andrews, in his "Life of Origen," says: "To him belongs the rare honor of convincing heretics of their errors, and of leading them back to the church; a result which must have been due as much to the gentleness and earnestness of his Christian character, as to the prodigious learning, marvellous acuteness, and logical power which entitle him to be regarded as the greatest of the fathers. It is singular, indeed, that a charge of heresy should have been brought, not only afte this death, but even during his life, against one who rendered such eminent services to the cause of orthodox Christianity." Dr. Barrow designates Origen as "the father of the interpreters," and Dr. F. H. Scrivener, considered by the orthodox world as "one of the ablest of living Biblical scholars and critics," says: "Origen is the most celebrated Biblical critic of antiquity. His is the highest name among the critics and expositors of the early church."

That the reader may have an idea of the faith of Origen, that "celebrated Biblical critic," who helped to mould orthodoxy into shape from heathenism and the Bible, yet not to tire the reader with too many quotations from his works, I give a summary of his belief from the writings of a most eminent orthodox scholar. James C. Rogertson, M. A., Canon of Canterbury and professor of Ecclesiastical History in King's college, London, in his "History of the Christian Church," says that Origen taught that "the number of souls originally created was final; there have been no additions to it, but the same continually reappeared in an endless variety of forms. All were at first perfect, and were endowed with freedom of will. By abuse of this they contracted a guilt, which required purgation, hence the worlds were created, that the beings who had sinned might be awakened to a sense of their estrangement from God, and a craving after blessedness, that they might be purified through conflict for restoration to their first estate. The disobedient souls were treated according to the measure of their offences. Those which had least sinned became angels, living in the planets, and occupied in works of ministry for men. The worst of all became devils; while for such as were confined in bodies of flesh, the whole complication of their being and circumstances was arranged in proportion as they had sinned, more or less grievously. Some, however, were plunged deeper than the degree of their guilt deserved, in order that they might help in the instruction and deliverance of their fellows; and thus Origen supposes that the death of a righteous man may have a redeeming effect for others.

"He divided mankind into carnal, physical, and spiritual, but instead of supposing, like the Gnostics, that each man was immovably fixed in a particular class, he maintained that all were originally alike, that the difference between them arose from the exercise of their free will, and that none were unchangeably good or bad.

"He allowed Adam to be a historical person, the first of the sinful spirits, who was embodied in the flesh, but like Philo, he regarded the history of the fall as an allegory.

"One soul only there was which had not sinned. This, by a continual contemplation of the Divine Logos, had adhered to him or been absorbed by him, and thus had made the way for that union of Godhead with a material body, which, but for such a medium, would have been impossible.

"He considered the death on the cross as representing something which is spiritually repeated in the higher world, and which has its effect towards the deliverance of the angels.

"All punishment, he holds, is merely corrective and remedial, being ordained in order that all creatures may be restored to their original perfection.

"At the resurrection all mankind will have to pass through fire; the purged spirits will enter into Paradise, a place of consummation; the wicked will remain in the fire, which, however, is not described as material, but as a mental and spiritual misery. But the condition of these spirits is not without hope, although thousands of years may elapse before their sufferings shall have wrought its due effect on them. On the other hand, those who have been admitted into Paradise may abuse their free will, as in the beginning, and consequently be doomed to a renewal of their sojourn in the flesh. Every reasonable creature, even Satan himself, may be turned from evil to good, so as not to be excluded from salvation. At the final consummation the soul will dwell in a glorified organ, the germ being in the present body."

Mosheim says: "Long before this period an opinion had prevailed that Christ was to come and reign a thousand years among men. But in this century its credit began to decline, principally through the influence and authority of Origen, who opposed it with the greatest warmth, because it was incompatible with some of his favorite sentiments." Origen's "favorite sentiments" are certainly another gospel from which Paul preached, when he says (Gal. i. 8): "But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed."

Cheetham, in his "History of the Christian Church," says: "Tertullian was extremely emphatic in his belief of the speedy coming of the Lord. At the end of the second century, these opinions, when they were propogated at Rome by Cerinthus, were strongly opposed by Caius, the Presbyter. In Alexandria they met still more rigorous opposition, and under the great influence of Origen, they came to be regarded at any rate fanatical, if not heretical."

From 242 to 249 there was a lull in the persecution of the Christians, when Philip was on the throne, which gave occasion for Origen to first introduce our modern orthodox doctrine that the Christians were going to convert the world ,and by their efforts bring about a universal so-called spiritual reign of Christ upon the earth.

Origen wrote letters to both Philip, the Emperor, and his wife, Severa, and he began to rejoice that God had given the Christians the free exercise of their religion, and anticipated the conversion of the empire. Robertson, in his "History," says: "This was a new idea, remarkably opposed to the tone of the earlier Christian writers, who had always regarded the Roman power as incurably hostile, as an oppression from which there could be no hope of deliverance, except through the coming of the end." But Origen's false hope was soon dashed on this occasion, by the great persecution under Decius in the years 249 to 251. That hope was of course revived again in full strength in the next century, when Constantine came to the throne.

These semi-heathen teachers take no account of Christ's own teaching in this matter, that he is not coming again to a converted world, but when he comes the world will still be lying in wickedness. "But as the days of Noe were, so shall the coming of the son of man be" (Matt. xxiv:37); also read to the end of the chapter. This shows conclusively that the world will not be converted when he comes again. Nevertheless, Origen, the father of orthodoxy, and his orthodox sons, in all ages, teach that they are going to convert the world. And again Christ says: "Nevertheless, when the son of man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?" (Luke xviii:8). He will find many foolish faith, no doubt, but the faith taught by hi mand his apostles he will evidently find very little of. Christ also says: "Because strait in the gate, and narrow is the way, that leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it" (Matt. vii:14). But Origen and his orthodox followers have helped to close up this narrow way, and open up the broad way that leadeth to destruction.

Origen, about the middle of the century, was destroying the faith once delivered to the saints, at which, along with Eusebius, many theologians rejoice. Eusebius says: "But about this time, also, other men sprung up in Arabia, as the propagators of false opinions. These asserted that the human soul, as long as the present state of the world existed, perished at death, and died with the body, but that it would be raised again with the body at the time of the resurrection. And as a considerable council was held on account of this. Origen again being requested likewise, discussed the point in question with so much force that those who had before been led astray changed their opinions."

Now and again we find evidence, during the third century, that the allegorical interpreters of the Scriptures had not succeeded as yet in destroying entirely the faith as taught by Christ. There is no doubt there would have been very much more of this kind of evidence, if time and the allegorical believers had not destroyed it. Dionysius, bishop of Alexandria, tells of one, Nepos, a bishop of Egypt, who composed a book, entitled "Refutation of the Allegorists," to which Dionysius sharply replied, in two books on the Promises. In this book he says: "But as they produce a certain composition by Nepos, on which they insist very strongly, as if it demonstrated incontestably that there will be a reign of Christ upon the earth, I have to say that in many respects I accept the opinion of Nepos, and love him at once for his faith, and his laboriousness, and his patient study in the Scriptures, as also for his great efforts in psalmody, by which even now many of the brethren are delighted. I hold the man, too, in deep respect still more, inasmuch as he has gone to his rest before us."

A. WALLACE MASON.

Troy, Ohio.

GOLD DUST.

Let the truth be shot forth with all the force it can carry, but always with meekness and humility.

In our ministrations of others we are not to forget that money is not the only thing which people are sorely in need—some need love and sympathy who do not need money.

Blessed are they who have the gift of making friends, for it is one of God's best gifts. It involves many things, but above all, the power of going out of one's self, and appreciating whatever is noble and loving in another.

A man of nobility of character does not recollect injustice, for accurate recollection, especially of injuries, is not characteristic of the magnanimous man, but he rather overlooks them. He is not fond of talking of people, for he will neither speak of himself nor anybody else, for he does not care that he himself should be praised nor that others should be blamed.

WHO HATH IMMORTALITY

The Bible declares that God only has inherent immortality.—"Now unto the King eternal, immortal, invisible, the only wise God, be honor and glory for ever and ever" (1 Tim. i:17). "The blessed and only Potentate, the King of kings, and Lord of lords, who only hath immortality, dwelling in the light which no man can approach unto" (1 Tim. vi.: 15, 16).

Notwithstanding the multitude of the great and learned who have unconsciously contradicted this teaching of Holy Writ, by declaring the inherent immortality of men and demons,—thus unwittingly supporting the Satanic lie, "Ye shall not surely die"—there has never wholly lacked the voice of soberness and truth. Thus:—

"For God made man at first, and willed that he should remain in immortality; but men, having neglected and disregarded the contemplation of God, fell under the threatened condemnation of death . . . so that having come into being out of non-existence they also suffer corruption back again into non-existence, in course of time . . . that is, that they should be destroyed and remain in death and corruption."—Athanasius.

"The immortality of the soul is neither argued nor affirmed in the Old Testament.—Professor Per-

"The doctrine of the immortality of the soul, and the name, are alike unknown to the entire Bible."—Dr. Olshausen.

"In fact no such doctrine is revealed to us."—Archbishop Whately.

"From beginning to end of the Apostolical Fathers, there is not one word said of the immortality of the soul."—Canon H. Constable, M. A.

"The words soul and spirit occur in the Hebrew and Greek Scriptures sixteen hundred times, yet the words 'immortal soul' or 'immortal spirit' occur in the Scriptures in Hebrew, Greek, or English—not once."—H. L. Hastings.

Will man then never possess it? Yes, all who seek for it in God's appointed way, who "by patient continuance in well doing, seek for glory and honor and immortality—eternal life." (Rom. ii:7). To such and to such only has Christ the source of life and immortality said, "And I give unto them eternal life; and they shall never perish" (John x:28). Whilst of those who neglect or refuse the gift of grace, it is written:—"He that hath not the son of God hath not life" (1 John v:12).

Reader, seek this precious boon. Seek now, seek earnestly, ere it be too late. For your encouragement, he who only can give it has said—"Him that cometh unto me, I will in no wise cast out."

SYMPOSIUM ON MATT. 13:43

"He that hath ears to hear let him hear."

In reading the Scriptures we find this expression to be a common one with Jesus. In each instance it seems to be the climax to his thought. He wishes to impress the listeners with the importance of their obeying or taking heed to what he had said.

We all have ears, but are they hearing ears? We have eyes, but are they seeing ones? To know God's plan of salvation and obey it is to have hearing ears and seeing eyes.

God has promised to give to us blessings that are so great that Paul in 1 Cor. 2:9 says, "Eye hath not seen nor ear heard; neither have entered into the heart of man the things that God hath prepared for them that love him." It is also written, "He is able to do abundantly more than we are able to ask or think." Now he has told us that there will be no sorrow, sadness, sickness or death in his kingdom. We can not comprehend this and even more is promised. Yet God has promised us a home in that kingdom if we do his commandments; and his commandments are not grievous. But suppose we neglect doing God's will; can we then expect God to keep his part?

It seems to me this could be read, "He who knows to do right, let him do right," without changing the thought. A person may know his duty, but if he neglects to do it, he fails. For we are taught, "Faith without works is dead."

One may ask Who has hearing ears? All who truly wish to know God's plan and purpose. For all who really want to know the way of life will find it. This is shown in the case of Cornelius. He was a sinner, yet so devout and earnest that God made a way that he might know the truth.

Not that it would be done in a miraculous manner, but one who is interested will do, like the noble Bereans of old, "search the Scriptures" to find out if what they hear be so. John 5:39 says, "Search the Scriptures, for in them ye think ye have eternal life, and they are they that testify of me."

May we search the Scripture more diligently, asking God to give us hearing ears, seeing eyes, and understanding hearts, that we may be acceptable in his sight and enter into his kingdom is my prayer.

ETHEL LEHMAN.

Here we find Christ has been teaching the things concerning the kingdom in parables. He has been very particular in giving the details, but the disciples did not fully understand the parable of the tares of the field, and after he withdraws from the multitudes, the disciples come to him and say, "Declare unto us the parable of the tares of the field." After carefully telling them in full detail, he closes his explanation by saying, "Then shall the righteous shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father."

What more beautiful illustration could he give them; for as the sun sends out his bright rays over all the earth, bringing forth life, ripening the golden grain, and making the world rejoice, because of its brightness, so shall the righteous go forth, each with a special work to do, when Christ comes to set up his kingdom.

Then after telling them of this kingdom he says, "Who hath ears to hear let him hear." It was for everyone then, not for the Jews only, for Christ had been sent to the Jews, but the Jews would not receive him, so he now says for all to hear. And today he commands all that "hath ears," to hear. How many turn a deaf ear or cast it aside! Oh, may we ever be with an open ear ready to receive the word of truth, that we may grow in grace and knowledge of the Lord, that when he comes we may be one of the worthy ones to receive an abundant entrance into that glorious kingdom.

Your sister in Christ,

EDNA BREWER.

Who hath ears to hear let him hear. It would seem at a casual reading of this text as if it was a waste of words when the Savior spoke this sentence. As if a person with good ears would not hear another person who was preaching in his immediate vicinity. But on giving the words a little careful consideration (knowing that Jesus never said anything without design) we find that there is a great deal of meaning contained in them. This is a suggestive sentence, because it is one of the kind that suggests a reference to the verses that precede and follow it.

We find that it is a knowledge of the secrets of the kingdom of heaven that is the subject of part of the discourse, begining with the ninth verse, and that Jesus is teaching the assembly, but most particularly the apostles, a great principle of truth and providence of God toward men. "Whosoever hath to him shall be given." They all had ears and had the sense of hearing but the sense of hearing is of no benefit in learning the truth without the exercise of thought. In the 15 th verse, "For this people's heart is waxed gross, and their ears are dull of hearing, and their eyes they have closed, lest at any time they should see with their eyes and hear with their ears, and should understand with their heart and should be converted." The trouble is that they don't want to know the truth. The possession of a desire to know the truth is evidence of merit and according to the principle the reward is knowledge, more knowledge.

In those days knowledge came by preaching. It was as if Jesus had said to them: "Come, you who have an ear for the way if life. This is the place for more knowledge." Whosoever hath the desire to him shall be added under standing and the desire shall increase. But if he has a little knowledge of the truth and does not have the desire for more it will slip away as sure as, in the laws of nature, disuse begets death Everyone who is in darkness and has a desire to know the way of life, a real life size desire, will in some way or other learn the truth. God is looking for willing and anxious listeners who have a real sincere intention of getting at the root of the matter, who will clutch at every word of truth as a drowning man grabs at a straw. We know of some who have learned the truth through a very small occurrence, such as finding a pamphlet or overhearing a conversation, etc.

Its in our relationship with the people of the world that the lesson for us comes in. Every day we come into contact with numbers of people. We don't know whether they are just waiting for the truth or whether they are of the class of whom the Savior said: "Cast not your pearls before swine" and it is up to us to be the ones to cast pearls of truth both by word and example. Faith cometh by hearing the Word of God and the way of life is revealed from faith to faith.

We who have heard must not forget this principle of the multiplication of blessings but improve our time and opportunities. We are favored with a great many privileges; we can meet together often to learn to rightly divide the word of truth.

So may we ever be ready to give a reason for the hope that is within us as becomes a peculiar people zealous of good works.

F. T. BLYTH.

DEACON LEE'S EXPERIENCE.

Deacon Lee, who was a kindly silent, faithful, gracious man, was one day waited upon by a restless, ambitious, worldly church member, who was laboring to create uneasiness in the church and especially to drive away the minister.

The deacon came in to meet his visitor, who, after the usual greetings, began to lament the low state of religion, and inquired as to the reason why there had been no results for the last two or three years. "Now, what do you think is the cause of things being dull here?".

The deacon was not ready to give his opinion, and after a little thought rankly answered, "I don't know."

"Do you think the church is alive to the work before them?"

"No, I don't." A twinkle seen in the eye of the troubler in Zion, and, taking courage, he asked:

"Do you think Mr. B—— a very extraordinary man?"—"No, I don't."

"Then don't you think we had better dismiss this man and hire another?" The old deacon started as if shot with an arrow: "No, I don't."

"You talk so little, sir," replied the questioner not a little abashed, "that no one can find out what you do mean."

"I talked enough once," replied the old man, arising to his feet, "for six praying Christians. Thirty years ago I got my heart humbled, and my tongue bridled, and ever since that I've walked softly before God. I then made vows, solemn as eternity, and don't tempt me to break them."

The troubler was startled at the earnestness of the hitherto silent, immovable man, and asked:

"What happened to you thirty years ago?"

"Well, sir, I will tell you. I was drawn into a scheme just like this of yours, to uproot one of God's servants from the field in which He had planted him. In my blindness I fancied it a little to remove one of the 'stars,' which Jesus holds in his right hand, if thereby my ear could be tickled by more flowing words, and the pews filled with those who turned away from the simplicity of the gospel.

"I and the men that led me—for I admit that I was a dupe and a fool—flattered ourselves that we were doing God a service when we drove that holy man from the pulpit and his work, and said we considered his work done in B——, where I then lived. We groaned because there were no results while we were gossiping about, and criticising and crushing him instead of upholding his hands by our efforts and our prayers, the very instrument at whose hands we harshly demanded the blessings.

"Well, sir he could drag on the chariot of salvation with half a dozen of us taunting him for his weakness, while we hung as a dead weight to the wheels; he had not the Spirit, as we thought, and could not convert men; so we hunted him like a deer, till, worn and bleeding, he flew into covert to die.

"Scarcely had he gone, when God came in among us by his spirit to show that he had blessed the labors of this dear rejected servant. Our own hearts were broken, and our wayward children converted; and I resolved, at a convenient season, to visit my former pastor and confess my sin, and thank him for his faithfulness to my wayward sons, which like long buried seed had now sprung up. But God denied me that relief, that it might teach me a lesson that every child of his ought to learn—that he who toucheth one of his little ones toucheth the apple of his eye.

"I heard my pastor was ill, and taking my oldest son with me, set out on a twenty-five mile ride to see him. It was evening when I arrived, and his wife, with the spirit which any woman ought to exhibit toward one who had so wronged her husband, denied me admittance to his chamber. She said (and her words were like arrows to my soul), 'He may be dying, and the sight of your face might add to his anguish.' Had it come to this, I said to myself, that the man whose labors had through Christ, brought me unto his fold, who had consoled my spirit in a terrible bereavement, and who had until designing men had alienated us, been to me a brother—that this man could not die in peace with my face before him? 'God pity me!' I cried; 'What have I done?' I confessed my sin to the meek woman, and implored her, for Christ's sake to let me kneel before his (dying) servant and receive his forgiveness.

"What did I care then whether the pews by the door were rented or not? I would gladly have taken his whole family to my home forever, as my flesh and blood; but no such happiness was in store for me.

"As I entered the room of the blessed warrior, whose armor was falling from his limbs, he opened his eyes and said: 'Brother Lee? Brother Lee!' I bent over him and sobbed out, 'my pastor!' Then raising his white hand he said, in a deep, impressive voice, 'Touch not mine anointed, and do my prophets no harm.'

"I spoke tenderly to him, and told him I had come to confess my sin and bring some of his fruit to him (calling my son to tell him how he had fought Christ). But he was unconscious of all around him: the sight of my face had brought the last pang of earth to his troubled spirit: I kissed his brow and told him how dear he had been to me. I craved his pardon for my unfaithfulness and promised him to care for his widow and fatherless little ones: but his only reply, murmured as if in a troubled dream, was 'Touch not mine anointed, and do my prophets no harm.'

"I stayed with him all night and at daybreak I closed his eyes. I offered his widow a house to live in the remainder of her days; but like a heroine, she said: 'I freely forgive you: but my children, who entered deeply into their father's anguish, shall never see me so regardless of his memory as to take anything from those who caused it. He has left us all with his covenant God, and he will care for us.'

"Well, sir, those dying words sounded in my ears from that coffin and from that grave. When I slept Christ stood before me dream vision saying: 'Touch not mine anointed, and do my prophets no harm.' These words followed me till I fully realized the esteem in which Christ holds those men who had given up all for his sake, even if they are not perfect.

"And since that day sir, I have talked less than before, and have supported my pastor, even if he is not an extraordinary man. My tongue shall cleave to the roof of my mouth and my right hand forget its cunning, before I dare to put asunder what God hath joined together. When a minister's work is done in a place, I believe God will show it to him. I will not join you, sir, in the scheme that brought you here; and, moreover, if I hear another word of this from your lips, I shall ask the brethren to deal with you as with one who causes divisions.

"I would give all I own to recall what I did thirty years ago. Stop where you are, and pray God perchance the thought of your heart may be forgiven you."

This decided reply put an end to the new-comer's efforts to get a minister who could make more of a stir. There is often great power in the little word, No; but sometimes it requires not a little courage to speak it so resolutely as did the silent deacon.

God has entrusted man with the raw material. He creates the world, and gives it to a man to finish. Man originates nothing, but continues and develops all things. Speech is furnished him; and he invents writing. The ocean, fresh from God's hands, puts continents asunder; man makes it only the broadest of highways. The earth is delivered to him rough, and often sterile. He smooths and renders it productive. He grafts the wild stock And in the plan of salvation, the sufferings of believers finish and perfect the passion of our Lord.

The Man Who Wins.

The man who wins is the man who works—
The man who toils while the next man shirks;
The man who trods in his deep distress
With his head held high in the deadly press—
Yes, he is the man who wins

The man who wins is the man who knows
The value of pain and its worth of woe;
Who a lesson learns from the man who falls,
And a moral finds in his mournfull walls.

The man who wins is the man who stays
In the unsought paths and the rocky ways,
And, perhaps, who lingers, now and then—
Ah, he is the man who wins!

—Baltimore News.

Theological Novelties.

"There is a craving in the churches for dainties plucked from the tree of the knowledge of good and evil. Especially does a dash of the evil draw and fill up the empty pews. Spiritual dyspepsia is the curse of the church, and variety takes the place of sanctity, and there is not gastric juice enough to dissolve appropriate solid food."

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

We, whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones.

This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of their paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

Mrs. E. L. Ellison 50
F. Sherland 50

THE BIBLE: ITS PRINCIPLES AND TEXTS

As indicated by the title this book is divided into three sections. The first consists of a remarkable disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "principles" in formulated propositions, and the third expounds in a clear, impressive and homelitic manner particular "Texts." The knotty and perplexing texts of the Bible are united and solved satisfactorily to the most fastidious and critical. More than one humored and fifteen subjects of intense interest to every Bible student are formally discussed. Both simple and scholarly—the child is fascinated and taught; the scholar is entertained and instructed. Bible lovers, here is a feast for you. Throw open the door of your home; let The Bible—its Principles and its Texts come in and bless you and your family. 309 pages, 5x7 1-2 inches, durably and handsomely bound in whole cloth, with title embossed on back in gold. One copy, $1.10, two copies or more $1.00 each. R. G. Huggins, 10623 Lee Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

TWO TRACTS By J. L. WINCE

"Salvation" and "Resurrection" two tracts by J. L. Wince, can not fail to arouse the interest of every believer. They deal with vital questions in a most convincing manner. The price is 10c each, 12 for $1.00. For sale by S. Roxanna Wince, Pierceton, Ind.

Pungent Statements.—The grinding process of time is at work everywhere, blotting out and destroying all the ways of man. The busy pompous fools of the day may laugh and jeer at the truth, and blaspheme the God of heaven and earth; but they will soon be as though they had not been; their voices will soon be heard no more: their very names will be forgotten and they shall be chased away as the vision of the night.

"When, oh, when, shall we learn that loyalty to Christ is tested far more by the strength of our sympathy with truth than by the intensity of our hatred of error. I will tell you what to hate. Hate hypocricy; hate cant; hate intolerance, oppression, injustice; hate Pharisaism; hate them as Christ hated them, with a deep living, God-like hatred. But do not hate men in intellectual error. To hate a man for his error is as unwise as to hate one who, in casting up an account, has made an error against himself.

ANNA DREW

Dixon, Ill.

Ladies! Save Money and Keep in Style by Reading McCall's Magazine and Using McCall Patterns

McCall's Magazine will help you dress stylishly at a moderate expense by keeping you posted on the latest fashions in clothes and hats. 50 New Fashion Designs in each issue. Also valuable information on all home and personal matters. Only 50c a year, including a free pattern. Pattern catalogue free. Single copy 10c. Send for free sample copy.

McCall Patterns will enable you to make in your own home, with your own hands, exquisite imitations of imported models in style and fit. Price—none higher than 15 cents. Send for free Pattern Catalogue.

We Will Give You Free Presents for getting subscriptions among your friends. Send for free Premium Catalogue and Cash Prize offer.

THE McCALL COMPANY, 236 to 246 West 37th St., NEW YORK

"Signs of Character or How to Read Character at Sight"

and

"HealthThrough Natures Laws"

Two books by Dr. A. Wallace Mason. One is a study of character and how we may read it by the face and head. Brother Mason has made a very close study of this subject for years, and the information given in this book will prove interesting and instructive. Price 25c; 78 Pages.

The other is a work which tells how to gain and keep health as its title says, "through nature's laws." Every family should have a copy.

Address Bro. Mason, care Restitution.

60 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents.

Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the

Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York

Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

WANTED!

Subscription Solicitors

We will pay an actual salary to men and women in all parts of the country, to act as agents for The Restitution. This salary will be based on your ability to take subscriptions, take care of renewals, and make collections, and will be paid weekly. You can devote all or part of your time, and can make a specialty of our proposition and subscribers, which we will tell you about if you are interested. We will have some announcements to make in the near future that will also help you.

If you want to work, sit down NOW and write for full information.

E. W. NUTT, Manager.

SUBSCRIBE FOR

Words of Life

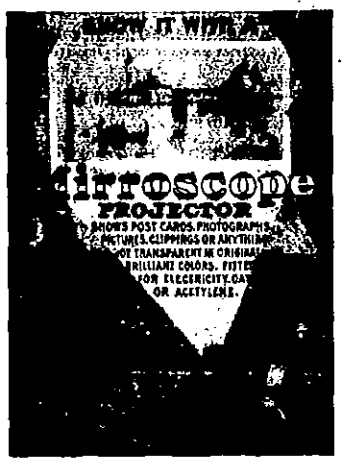
the publication of the Conditional Immortality Mission of Great Britain, advocating Life and Advent truths.

Terms: 1 copy 37c per annum, 12 copies to one address 25c per copy per annum.

Sample copy on application to

WILLIAM G. ROTHE

1301 Park Pl. Brooklyn, N. Y.



YOU will get genuine pleasure from an hour or two spent with the "Mirroscope" these long winter evenings. Pictures, Photos, Post Cards, Etc. are shown in exact reproduction same as with a high priced Stereopticon, can be used in any home and operated with Electricity, Gas or Acetylene. Prices $2.50, $3.00, $7.50, $10.00, $15.00, $20.00, according to size. Sent anywhere in the U. S. Send for one today.

HOME ILLUMINATED PICTURE CO.

311 SCHOFIELD BUILDING CLEVELAND, OHIO

Books and Tracts

By W. H. WILSON

A BIBLE STUDY OF HADES.....15c each, or 5 for 50c.
(As compared with our modern ideas).
A critical study of Hell, showing the difference in the word in the past and in the present time.

STUDENTS TEXT BOOK 50c
How to study the Bible and rightly understand God's Word. Cloth bound, 200 Pages.

PINE WOODS BIBLE CLASS.....$1.25
Studies carried on between a class and its teacher. Cloth bound, 480 Pages.

CUNNINGLY DEVISED FABLES, 28 Pages.....10c

WHERE WILL YOU SPEND ETERNITY, 4 Pages, ... 25c per hundred

ARE YOU IN NEED OF MONEY, 4 Pages, 25c per hundred

WILL IT PAY TO BECOME A CHRISTIAN?.....25c
By Jas. W. Wilson. A neat Cloth book of 96 Pages which every one should read.

Bro. Wilson's Latest Book
Is Ready for Distribution
THE DESTINY OF RUSSIA AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES
96 Pages, Bound in Cloth, 25c.

W. H. WILSON, 625 North Willow Ave.
AUSTIN STA., CHICAGO, ILL.

The Restitution Publications

Send for all of the following books and tracts to

W. S. TOMLINSON, 10825 Orville Ave, N.E., Cleveland

A LETTER TO A FRIEND, 32 Pages 10c each, 12 for $1.00
FUTURE PROBATION, 150 Pages, 10c each, 12 for $1.00

The following tracts by M. Joblin:
THE KINGDOM OF GOD.
OLD MOTHER EARTH TO BE BORN AGAIN.
STRANGERS FROM THE COVENANT OF PROMISE.
VAIN WORSHIP.
NO IMMORTALITY OUT OF CHRIST.
GOD'S LOVE AND SOLICITUDE FOR MANKIND.
WHAT SHALL WE DO TO BE SAVED?
THE FOOLISHNESS OF PREACHING.
SALVATION, WHAT IS IT?

All the above are 16 page tracts, 100 for $1.00 any assortment.

THE PATERNITY OF JESUS, by M. Joblin, 122 Pages, each 10c. A work that proves Jesus was the son of God and not the natural son of Joseph.

THE SCRIPTURE SEARCHERS ASSISTANT, by M. Joblin, each 5c. A valuable aid to the study of the Scriptures, contains 400 references.

A WRONG DEFINITION OF LIFE AND DEATH, a six page tract, a most excellent booklet, 10 copies 15 cents; 50 copies 35 cents; 100 copies 60 cents.

FOUR PAGE TRACTS:

Can You Believe? 10 for 10c, 50 for 25c.

State of Man in Death, 10 for 10c, 50 for 25c, 100 for 40c.

Life and Death, 10 for 10c, 50 for 25c, 100 for 40c.

Age to Come Not a Heresy, 10 for 10c, 50 for 25c, 100 for 40c.

TWO PAGE TRACTS

Bible Pearls—Suitable for wide distribution. 2. The Gospel. 3. Coming and Kingdom of Christ by 20,000 Baptists in 1660. 4. Immateriality. 5. Kingdom of God. 6. Nature of man and Thoughts for Thinkers. 6. Two Advents; 7. What is Religion? 8. Restitution Age. 9. Destiny of the Wicked. 10. Baptism. Ten copies for 5 cents, or assorted packages of 100 for 20 cents.

Census Blank

MEMBERSHIP CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA

Name .....

Address .....
Street Town State

By whom Immersed ..... Date .....

Fill out the above and send to "The Census Editor," The Restitution, 803 Parkwood Drive, Cleveland, O.

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co.

WHOLESALE OPTICIANS

We make a specialty of High Grade Prescription Work, and carry a full line of all kinds of Optical goods. All orders filled same day as received.

"S. K. N." SERVICE

Means prompt returns, careful work, moderate prices. Goods shipped to all parts of the country.

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co. 311 SCHOFIELD BUILDING CLEVELAND, OHIO

SPECIAL OFFER!

IN ORDER to increase the circulation of The Restitution, the following special offer is made:

One new subscriber for 1 year, choice of:

W. H. Wilson's "Student's Text Book," regular price.....50c
Or 5 Copies of "Cunningly Devised Fables," reg. price 50c
Or 5 Copies of "Bible Study of Hades," reg. price 50c

For Two New Subscribers

One Copy "Pine Woods Bible Class," 480 pages, reg. price, $1.25
Or "The Bible, Its Principles and Texts," 309 pages, reg., $1.25
Or One Hundred of Bro. Joblin's Tracts, regular price $1.00

Here is a chance to get some of the books you all should own. By making special arrangements with the authors we are able to offer them to you without the payment of a cent on your part, just a few minutes effort. We cannot afford to continue this offer long, so take advantage of it at once, get some new subscribers today.

THE RESTITUTION, 803 Parkwood Drive

Less than Half a Cent a Day

The Restitution costs a Dollar and a Half a year, that's less than half A Cent a day or three cents a copy. You can't afford to be without it. If you are a subscriber get some one else to subscribe.

Help to Get Them on the List

Sample Copies of The Restitution

May be obtained for a stamp. Send for one.

"A LETTER TO A FRIEND"

This tract needs no introduction further than to say that it is one of the most convincing Gospel sermons ever written. Originally written as a letter to a friend by Sister C. C. Woodruff it was published and has sold extensively in tract form. In its present edition it is a 32 page tract, the price is

10c each; 12 for $1.00

There is no better way of spreading the Gospel than handing out one of these tracts wherever you have the opportunity.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

"Future Probation,

is that Awaiting any of the Unrighteous?"

Here is a work by Wm. Glenn Monerieff that every one should read. It is one of the best things on the subject ever written and will appeal to every student of the word. It is a book of 150 pages, made to sell at 25c. We have a limited number left which we will sell at the special price of

10c each; 12 for $1.00

Send for some at once.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

The Restitution
IS THE OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA.

The Restitution.

Founded in A. D. 1852

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Lk. 19:12-16), who will be King of Kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-53); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17), and belief in, the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Lk. 13:3), and obedience by Baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ." (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31).

ROBT. G. HUGGINS, Editor.

—Terms of— Subscription
ONE YEAR, $1.50;
SIX MONTHS 75 CTS. IN ADVANCE

VOL. 60 CLEVELAND, OHIO, MAY 28, 1912 No. 69

THE DIVINE PRESENCE.

I gaze aloof at the tissued roof,
Where time and space are the warp and woof,
Which the king of kings, like a curtain flings,
O'er the dreadfulness of eternal things.

But if I could see, as indeed they be,
The glories that encircle me,
I should lightly hold this tissued fold
With its marvelous curtain of blue and gold.

For soon the whole like a parched scroll,
Shall before my amazed eyes uproll,
And, without a screen, at one burst seen
The presence in which I have always been.
—Selected by the Editor.

THE OLD STORY.

Lillie H. Willis.

There's a story that's sweet,
There's a story that's old,
A story that over and over we've told.
Though repeated oft, it ever is new,
For this wonderful story is true.

There were shepherds of old
Who were guarding their sheep
And their lambs of the fold,
When God's angels came
And sang them this song
Which has gladdened the hearts of men:

"Fear not!" was their cry,
"For I bring you glad tidings;
Peace on earth, good will unto men;
This day is born a Savior,
You'll find him in Bethlehem."
The shepherds came and found him,
In a manger he was laid,
The seed of the woman promised long,
As the heavenly messengers said,
To the listening shepherd throng.

There were wise men who came from afar,
Guided by Bethlehem's star,
And their gifts they did bring
To Jesus their king,
And worshiped him there.

"Seek ye out of the book
Of the Lord and read,"
And tell it again and again;
Till the angels song
Shall tune the hearts,
And burst from the lips of men.

ON THE WAY NORTH.

When I arrived in Magazine, Ark., I found a letter waiting for me from Sister Pendarvis, saying, "Come back to Enid." When I was there first a lawyer and his wife attended our Bible readings, and she told Sister Pendarvis she had made up her mind to be baptized; and another lady Sister Pendorvis had interested in the truth. I said in my first report that Sister Pendarvis was going to be a worker, and it now began to look like my prediction was being fulfilled.

At 8:15 in the morning I boarded the train at Magazine, and at 10:8 that evening I arrived in Enid. Bro. and Sister Pendarvis were there to meet me and welcome me back much sooner than I expected when I left them in January. We arranged for a Bible study the next day, and also in the evening. Bro. Williams, of Ashton, Kas., was in town and met with us, and was a valuable aid in our studies. I was pleased to meet Bro. Williams. He is sound in the faith. He thinks, works and faith are inseparable, and so they are. After we had studied for two or three days, we discovered that one lady had been reading Russell's sermons in the paper, and was considerably tinctured with the false teachings of this popular pastor. It soon developed that we had to discuss Russell instead of the Bible, so far as she was concerned. It also developed that she thought she could be baptized and then go anywhere to worship. I gave her to understand I was not spending my time persuading God to accept of people no difference what faith they had, and regardless of whether they worshiped God or idols, so I refused to baptize her. The other lady was led into that idea somewhat, so I decided they were not just ready yet, but hope they may yet see that God never gave but one gospel, and but one baptism that is connected with that gospel. Our visit was profitable to those in the faith, and will help them in the search for truth. Bro. and Sister Pendarvis are truly good worthy members of the household of faith. Our work done for the present there, we continued on our way north, arriving in Kansas City at 5:30 in the evening, and went direct to Sister Calkins' home, where we enjoyed an old-fashioned visit. Sister Calkins is one of the truly faithful ones. Her blind sister and niece from Wisconsin had just arrived. She is a baptized believer but has been isolated a long time, and never has had the privilege of hearing the gospel preached, so we arranged to hold a couple of meetings for her benefit at here sister's home, where we have made our home when in the community for 24 years. A few came out and we discoursed to them on the signs of the times from Matt. 16:1-3; also Matt. 24:3. How cheering it was to the afflicted sister to learn that the signs all proved that the time was just at hand when the blind would see, and all ills incident to this life would be done away!

As we had agreed to be at Randolph, Mo., for Sunday we could hold but two meetings here. Sunday morning we took the train for Randolph, only nine miles from Kansas City. Upon arriving we discovered that the Methodist people had voluntarily let Bro. Carpenter have their church. We spoke in the morning and afternoon. A couple of young Baptists from Liberty who are attending the William Jewel college where Richeson was educated, had the house for evening service. Sister Flora and Helen Eberle, Sister Whitton, son Edwin and daughter Lilly, came down from Kansas City and attended the two meetings during the day. Here we continued over the next Sunday, the attendance getting better and the interest splendid. On account of the busy season we decided to close and give them a meeting in the fall. One of the trustees at the close gave us a pressing invitation to come back and said I would be welcome. I preached the truth to them kindly, but as soundly as I ever preached it in all my career, and yet unlike people under similar conditions, nearly everywhere else, they drank it in and want more. These people are certainly in a class by themselves. We greatly appreciated their kindness, and above all, their thirst for the truth. One or two evenings the house was nearly full. Bro. and Sister Carpenter and daughter, Sister Morgan, are held in high esteem by these people, and that accounts for our getting in, and largely for the respectful hearing. If rustling around and inviting people out will get a crowd, Sister Carpenter and daughter will get them out. The prospects at this place seem bright, and we hope for visible results at another meeting.

Monday morning I went up to Kansas City and spent the day with the brethren there. In the evening all gathered at Sister Whitton's with a goodly number of outsiders who filled the house and gave attention while I told them of the stress Paul put on the subject of the coming of the Lord in Thess. first and second letters. Here we have four young sisters, all of one family: Flora, Helen, Edna, and Louise Eberle, who are model young ladies and an ornament to the church. It is a pleasure to meet such young people, for they are hard to find. The late Bro. Whitton left two splendid young people, a boy and young lady who do not yet belong, but are worthy, and we hope to have them with us some time. Sister Calkins has a splendid son who believes the truth and who ought to be with us, and we hope he may soon. If these would take a stand they would make a valuable addition and equip the church there with young working material hard to equal.

At the close of our meeting Monday night we took the 10:4 train for Omaha, arriving Tuesday morning at 8:30, one and one-half hours late. We left home January 11; got back May 13, being gone four months and three days; held 95 meetings, and added five to the body of Christ; spoke to several hundred people, and have a large number interested; spent $94.08 for expenses; collected, including what was sent to Sister Free $210.25; making one hundred and sixteen above expenses to apply as pay for my work. For the benefit of those who contributed to this work I will give a special report. In all we believe the trip has been profitable in many ways, and we hope to see the results in the kingdom. We hope all who became a part of this work by contributing and by encouragement, will see how much can be done by a little co-operative work. May the Lord bless all and the work done, and keep us at work each in his place, is the prayer of your brother and co-worker.

THE COVENANTS AGAIN.

Dear Brother ————:

In answer to your questions in the March number of Present Truth, I will answer Number 2 first.

No. 2.

Since James says there is but one lawgiver, is the lawgiver God or Jesus?

Answer—God is the lawgiver.

No. 1.

Since God wrote the law of the old covenant, etc., why make the sermon on the mount the new covenant or law?

Answer—This is the very thing that I am wondering at—that you could not have seen before as well as I. As I view it now, it seems simple enough for a child to understand. Ex. 34:28: And he wrote upon the tables of stone the words of the covenant—the ten commandments. Josh 7:11: Israel hath sinned, and they have also transgressed my covenant that I commanded them, for they have even taken of the accursed thing and have stolen. Here is a plain positive statement that the ten commandments are the covenant, and Joshua 7:11 proves it beyond the shadow of a doubt. Understanding the ten commandments are the covenant itself, and not the law that governs the covenant, it becomes easy to understand the writer of the Hebrews 9:1: Then verily the first covenant had also ordinances of divine service. Now brother, just think a little right here, and get straight on this question. Why did the first covenant (whatever it may be) need an order of divine services? Now you will see this will clinch my argument so that there can be no way to get around it. The ten commandments are the covenant itself; the "order of divine service" was for what purpose? To set aside the sins of Israel, was it not? What would have been the result if there had been no "order" of service instituted after God gave the ten commandment law? One does not have to look far for an answer. All Israel would have died on account of their own sin, and as there was no way provided yet to forgive sin it was necessary for a "service" of some kind to be instituted to set aside or atone for sin until the time should come that it might be forgiven and remembered no more. Hence the order of divine service of the first covenant, the tabernacle services. Heb. 10:3-4: But in these sacrifices there is a remembrance of sin every year, for it was not possible that the blood of bulls and goats should take away sin. Do you see any way to get around the truth? The ten commandments are the first covenant.

Nos. 3 and 4.

Can you speak of the law at Sinai as Moses' law and then make Moses the mediator of his own law? If Jesus is the lawgiver of the new covenant, how can he also be the mediator of his own law?

Answer—I spoke of Moses' and Jesus' law in the sense of their being mediators, not that they were authors of the law. God is the lawgiver in both cases. You only asked this question to either bring out the truth more clearly, or else you did not understand my position; presumably the latter.

Now listen: Deut. 18:18: I will raise them up a prophet from among their brethren, like unto thee, and I will put my words in his mouth, and he shall speak unto them all that I shall command him. Who will do this? Verse 17: And the Lord said unto me, says Moses. Will you turn to Acts 3:22, listen, Peter says: For Moses truly said unto the fathers, A prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you, of your brethren like unto me, him shall ye hear in all things whatsoever he shall say unto you. Who is the lawgiver? God is the lawgiver. Moses the mediator of the first, Jesus the mediator of the new covenant, the prophet raised up like unto Moses. Now Matt. 5:17: Here Jesus tells them he did not come to destroy the law, but to fulfill, and he surely fulfilled it. In verse 20 he says their righteousness must exceed that of the Scribes and the Pharisees; then he begins verse 21: Ye have heard it hath been said by them of old time, Thou shalt not kill. Who is here referred to by "them of old time?" But I say unto you. Verse 27: Ye have heard that it hath been said by them of old time, Thou shalt not commit adultery. But I say unto you, Why multiply words? Any one can see the distinction Jesus makes. Further, Jno. 3.34, "For he whom God hath sent speaketh the words of God. Jno. 8:21: Then said Jesus to those Jews that believed on him if ye continue in my word, then ye are my disciple indeed. John 14:23, 24: Jesus answered and said unto him, If a man love me he will keep my words; he that loveth me not keepeth not my sayings; and the words that ye hear are not mine. Whose are they? Listen: But the Father's which sent me. Who is the lawgiver? God, of course.

Nos. 6 and 7.

Since Jesus' blood and sacrifice covered only the transgressions that were under the first covenant, how does his atonement cover the sermon on the mount?

Answer—A correct answer to this may help us out on the sonship as well as the law question. As I view it the new covenant never requires the physical death of any kind as a sacrifice, that is what the old covenant required. The new requires a living sacrifice; that is, a life of sacrifice of self for our fellow man, and when we get all the selfishness out of ourselves by doing to others as we would like to be done by, we will then have made a sacrifice as the new covenant requires. Jesus fulfilled the requirements of the old, to redeem them alit were under the law. Now we hear that prophet that God raised up. Matt. 7:12: Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to ye even so do to them. For this is the law and the prophets. What law, brother? Not the old surely. Jno. 14:21: He that hath my commandments and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me. Who is your mediator, Moses or Christ? I have tried my best to show you that there are two covenants and tow mediators: Moses of the first that had the order of divine services; Jesus of the new, that has the order of divine services in the true tabernacle, which God pitched and not man. Do you see any fault in my position? If so, point it out; let's have the truth, even if we have to pull the vail off our face and give up some of our pet theories. Nothing but the truth will avail us in the day of judgment. Then let us love one another with a pure heart fervently, and admonish one another and talk over our differences in love, and make our test as Jesus disciples on his words in Jno. 13:35. By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one for another. And this is not affection; it is service for one another. Well, says one, you make salvation dependent upon a moral life. Not necessarily, and yet it is.

A stranger as well as a Hebrew could not have any part in the services or receive any blessings of God without being circumcised; the law. So Paul says in the Gal. letter: For I testify again to every man that is circumcised that he is a debtor to do the whole law. Likewise we must be circumcised with the circumcision of Christ, and then we are under the new covenant and a debtor to keep the law that Christ is the mediator of. So after we get into Christ we are saved by our clean life in keeping his law.

O. J. ALLARD.

CHURCH FEDERATION.

Rufus A. Curtis.

Many professed religionists, judging them by their statements, seem to think that the religious denominations of Protestantism, are so near alike in faith, that any seeming differences are of such minor importance, that they will not change the result in the end, so far as salvation is concerned, by their forming a gigantic confederacy: "For are we not," they say, "Worshiping the same God, and all striving to get to heaven?" Without stopping to controvert the error of this statement, let us consider the prevalence of this notion, of unity among all religious denominations. So far is this thought carried that the religious journals of the day are devoting much of their space, and ministers of popular pulpits are giving considerable prominence to the discussion of the federation of all religious denominations into one body. Such a union of warring factions; such a confederacy of opposing forces, reminds the intelligent Bible student of the language of Isaiah, recorded in the 8th chapter, 9th to the 13th verses, inclusive: "Associate yourselves, O ye people, and ye shall be broken in pieces; and give ear all ye of far countries; gird yourselves, and ye shall be broken in pieces. Take counsel together, and it shall come to naught, speak the word and it shall not stand, for God is with us. For the Lord spoke thus to me with a strong hand, and instructed me that I should not walk in the way of this people, saying, Say ye not a confederacy, to all them to whom this people shall say, A confederacy; neither fear ye their fear, nor be afraid. Sanctify the Lord of hosts himself; and let him be your fear, and let him be your dread." See also II. Cor. 6:14-18: There is a divine "rule" given in the Bible, and Christians should "walk according to this rule" (Gal. 6:16), and not measure "themselves by themselves," and compare themselves among themselves, for such are not wise (II. Cor. 10:12). "Thus saith the Lord stand ye in the way and see, and ask for the old paths, where is the good way to walk therein, and ye shall find rest for your souls. But they said we will not walk therein (Jer. 6:16). "Can two walk together except they be agreed?" How can a person, who determines in his heart to ask for the old paths of God's appointing; to seek "the good way" of his approval, and is willing to walk therein;" form a union or have fellowship with those who will not walk therein? How can a person who has been properly instructed in the gospel of the kingdom, (Matt. 4:23; 9:35) and has yielded the obedience of faith" it requires (Rom. 16:26), and is determined to stand fast in the faith (I. Cor. 16:13) and earnestly contend for it (Jude 3,) and continue in it (Col. 1:23), have fellowship with those who will not endure sound doctrine, but turn away their ears from the truth, and accept fables instead? (II. Tim. 4:3, 4). "Happy is he that hath the God of Jacob for his help, whose hope is in the Lord his God (Psa. 146:5).

"Happiest they of human race,
To whom the Lord hath given grace,
To read, to heed, to hope, to pray,
To lift the latch and force the way
But better had they ne'er been born,
Who read to doubt, or read to scorn."

THE ASSUMED SUPREMACY OF PETER.

1. Jesus discountenanced Peter's supremacy (Luke 22:24-26; Matt. 20:25-27).

2. The other apostles "sent" Peter to Samaria (Acts 8:14).

3. Peter alludes to himself as a fellow-elder (presbyter) and says: "Feed the flock of God" you "elders," and do it "not by constraint . . . not for filthy lucre . . . Neither as being Lords (or popes) over God's heritage" (2 Peter 5:1-3).

4. Peter was called into account in Jerusalem by the Jerusalem church regarding his action in the Cornelius case (Acts 11:1-5).

5. At Antioch Paul withstood Peter to the face because Peter "was to be blamed" (Gal 2:11).

6. Paul will not admit that he is "a whit behind the very chiefest aopstles" (2 Cor. 11:5).

7. John—not Peter—was the one whom "Jesus loved" especially (John 19:26; 20:2; 21:7, 20).

8. St. Cyprian says that "the rest of the apostles were that which Peter was; endowed with equal participation both of honor and of power" (De Unitat. Eccles. p. 180).

9. James is called by the Presbyter Hesychius, "the prince of priests, the leader of the apostles, the crown among the heads, the brightest among the stars" (Ap. Phot. Cod. 275). He alludes to Andrew as "the Peter before Peter."

10. Peter and John had equivalent honor says St. Cyril.

11. Christ gave the keys (not 'key') to all the apostles (Matt. 18:17-18; John 20:21-23).

12. The Revelator makes no distinction between them at all (Rev. 21:14).

Here are twelve facts, not one of which cannot be easily proved as absolutely true. Any one of the twelve spells badly the Roman and popish argument for popery and Peter's supremacy.
—J. J. Schaumbeurg in Messiah's Advocate.

The beauty of the world and of good books, the joys of friendship and the blessings of God are for all who will take them. And in these lies wealth beyond the dreams of avarice.

Give a lift when you can. Say a word of appreciation to the one who has done well, and another of encouragement to the one who should have done better. Put your shoulder to the wheel stuck in the mud, even if it belongs to another's wagon. Do a little boosting now and then on the loads under which your neighbor's back is bending. It would hardly pay to be in the world at all if you couldn't have the satisfaction of giving a lift when it is needed.

The Restitution

Issued weekly by

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING COMPANY,

Entered as second-class matter under act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

TERMS.

One year $1.50; six months 75 cents, in advance.

ROBT. G. HUGGINS.....Editor
BUELL W. NUTT.....Manager

BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Burton R. Lowe, Harry Pott,
Chas. A. Gobin, Robt. G. Pate,
Buell W. Nutt, D. G. Robison,
W. B. Tomlinson.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

All remittances should be sent by bank draft, post office money order or express money order to The Restitution Publishing Co., 803 Parkwood drive, Cleveland, Ohio.

All communication intended for publication should be sent to the editor, Robt. G. Huggins, 10023 Lee avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

It is necessary to adhere strictly to the rule of the journals unused manuscripts. Writers will please keep copies, or risk the loss.

While the editor exercises a general supervision over the articles appearing in The Restitution, his endorsement does not extend to the interpretation of details nor the exegesis of particular texts in the writings of contributors.

Cleveland, Ohio....May 28, 1912

EDITORIAL

Bro. O. J. Allard writes from Reading, Minn., and says: "Am here holding meetings in the country. One ready for baptism, and two have expressed themselves as convicted. Send The Restitution to A. R. Howard and I will send you the money soon as I get to town." Such reports are gratifying; send them in regularly, Bro. Allard.

Bro. D. C. Robison reports that he began a meeting in Tremont City, Ohio, May 20. "We were with the Springfield church last Sunday," he writes, "and in the afternoon we spoke at District No. 1. There is a good interest here."

Bro. Jamfrag, the author of The Devils' What, Where and Why? has kindly donated his books to The Restitution Publishing Co. It is a neatly bound booklet of 24 pages, and is placed on sale for 5 cents per copy. See 4th page where it is listed with other literature. At so low price it should sell rapidly.

THE HISTORICAL AND FUTURIST SYSTEMS OF PROPHETIC INTERPRETATION: THEIR ORIGIN.

The origin of things cannot be ignored. Nativity exerts a mighty influence upon character in men and in nations, and its power is just as potent in doctrinal theology. It is very humiliating to an immortal soulist to show him from authenticated history that "the father of history," Herodotus, says that "the Egyptians were the first of mankind who have defended the immortality of the soul" (Bedloe's Herodotus, b. 4, pp. 263-4). As blood will tell, as origin will recommend or condemn, glorify or shame, reasonable and normal men are nonplussed when they discover that the immortal soul was invented by heathens, that the dogma is fathered by the Egyptians. Historical research has informed many intelligent men that immortal soulism originated in heathen darkness, and they have flung it back to the holy cats of Egypt and to the crocodiles of the Nile, from whom it came, and have humbly and gladly accepted the scriptural and God-disclosed doctrine of conditional immortality.

There are two widely different systems of prophetic interpretations about the prophecies of Daniel and John, and it may be well to say a few words about the origin of both theories. One is called the Historical Interpretation; the other the Futurist. The former teaches that the ten horns and the little horn of Daniel, the man of sin of Paul, and the Babylon of the Apocalypse, are historic; the latter says they are all future. One would think that remarkable prophecies like these, the most elaborate and important in the Bible, would not admit of divergent views among intelligent people as to whether they are fulfilled. Were they fulfilled, it might be said, their fulfillment would be so striking that all controversy would be ended—everybody would see and admit the fulfilment. A nice statement this, but experience destroys the hypothesis upon which it is built. When our Lord was here he strikingly fulfilled many prophecies. "This day is this scripture fulfilled in your ears" (Luke 4:21), he declared to people who were blind to the fulfillment. They read the Old Testament with a vail upon their heart (II. Cor. 3): they "knew not the voices of the prophets, which they read every Sabbath day;" and the result, "They have fulfilled them in condemning him" (Acts. 13:27). Think of it: they read the prophets, and did not understand them; they fulfilled their prophecies, and did not know it! They witnessed fulfilled prophecy, and fulfilled it themselves with their own hands (Acts 2:23), and then did not perceive it! After more than 1500 years they do not perceive it yet! And richly as the secular and political histories of the world testify to the exact fulfillment of prophecies, of individual and national scope, drawn out over the centuries, so conspicuous and striking in their nature that one would think that the blind must see, yet the tide of infidelity and skepticism is still high in the face of it all, and threatens to inundate the masses!! The ten horns and the little horn, the man of sin, the mystic Babylon, all these prophecies might be fulfilled in all the nicety and plentitude of their details, and yet men ignorant of the world's history which parallels the predictions would stoutly deny that they have occurred. Facts, historic or scriptural, will never stop the palaver of those who have no eyes to see (Matt. 13:11, 13, 16). They have "no light in them" (Isa 8:20), and cannot see themselves (Rev. 3:17), let alone the fulfillment of prophecy, a study which engages the divine minds of the angelic hosts (I. Pet. 1:12).

But back to the origin of the Historical and Futurist theories of prophetic interpretation. The Adventists and Russellites did not originate the Historical system; the theory was in the world a long time before either of them. The Historical view of the prophecies of Daniel and John originated in the eleventh century among the Waldenses, Wickliffites, and Hussites, and was embraced by the Reformers of the sixteenth century. They applied the prophecies to the papacy. This interpretation nerved them in England, France, Germany, Switzerland, Denmark and Sweden, and animated the martyrs of Italy and Spain. The Historical view gave birth to the Reformation, and caused Protestants to come out from Rome. I am not ashamed of its origin.

When the Reformers began to identify the little horn of Daniel with Rome; when they began to trace likenesses between Paul's man of sin and Rome; when they began to clinch their arguments by appealing to John's mystic Babylon, things got pretty hot for the papacy. Something must be done. What? Leave that to Rome! Toward the close of the sixteenth century the Futurist theory was invented by the Jesuite Ribera, to get Rome out of the corner. He made a desperate effort to relieve the papacy from the awful stigma cast upon it by the Protestant, Historical interpretation of the prophecies of Daniel and John; and to do this he referred them all to the distant future! Rome, in a predicament, of course welcomed with open arms Ribera's Futurist views, for they vindicated the Old strumpet in all her adultery and deviltry. His invention remains to this day the Catholic interpretation of these prophecies. The child of Rome, Futurism, born in the family of the papacy, remains there still, snugly folded under the robes of her priests, the most beloved of all children. That some Protestants are desirous of disentangling this child from its priestly attire and parading him before the people of God, is a distressing feature of latter day blindness. I am ashamed of the child, and have no idea of adopting him.

COMMUNICATIONS.

Dear Ones of the Household of Faith:

How good and comforting it is to hear from you through our dear paper, and to know that you are still standing fast in the truth, and are doing your utmost to hold up the light to a lost and vain world. I was happy to see the name of Sister Angie Stevens. She and her sister, her parents, and husband were all zealous workers in our little Gospel Grove church here in Kosciusko County, Ind., and she and husband seemed almost like own children to Mr. Wince and myself.

And Bro. Alfred Wince—how many happy days we have spent with him talking of the blessed hope, and joining with him in singing the songs of Zion! It cheers us to read words from his pen. That pen ought not to be idle, nor Bro Wagoner's nor Bro. Wilson's.

And you, dear young writers, you are doing good work for the Master. I was especially pleased with your article, Sister Flora Wood—"New Wine and Old Bottles." I have not read a better one on the subject.

The box for literature in the depot is an excellent suggestion. I wish we would all profit by it. Did you read that sermon of Bro. Joblin's? Read it over again, and again. Get numbers of the paper and scatter them. It is grand!

But I cannot tell all the good things I have found, nor command all, for I have not the time. I can only pray God to bless and guide the pens of our dear writers.

S. ROXANA WINCE.

Dear Brother Huggins:

I am an isolated believer, and see often in The Restitution suggestions about wall pockets in depots, etc., for free religious tracts and Restitutions. I think it a good plan, but if The Restitution or some one would arrange to have wall pockets all alike to sell, made of heavy pasteboard, so they would not cost to send in the mail, we could order from there and all would be more apt to put tracts to put up, as you can't hardly give away tracts or papers any more, but they might read if waiting in a station. I will give a dollar towards starting it if you can find some one to tend to it.

Yours for the truth,
MRS. B. COLEMAN.

(Sister Coleman's suggestion would be excellent and feasable if some invalid sister would volunteer to make the pockets. If one will undertake this task we shall be glad to publish her price, and all the particulars.—Editor).

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

I no doubt am a stranger to most of you, but not to God. I was immersed about the year 1868 by Bro. J. E. Hach, near Burket's Corner in Swamp Creek. I see in "Communications" a letter written by Mrs. Zora Hach Scroggs. How well I remember her as a little girl when she and her dear father stopped at my father's, near Circleville, Ind. What happy times we had! One night we had talks and prayers, and several preachers were there, and some of those good people prayed so loud and sang so loud one of our good neighbors came over after night. What a glorious meeting we had, telling the good news of the glorious kingdom of our dear Savior, Jesus Christ! What a good time kindred folks will have when the Lord see fit to come and receive his children unto the world that is pure and undefiled! The Bible says we shall know as we are known.

I have a good many friends in and around Scircleville. I went back 13 year ago and had the privilege of hearing Bro. Wagoner at the church in the morning; the next Sunday Bro. Hatch at Scircleville school house. I am thankful I am able to write. I was thrown from my buggy by the horse running off and smashed my back, broke two ribs and knocked two of my vertebraes out of place. I am so crippled I can hardly walk, but I am thankful that God has cured me as well as He has. I was so badly hurt I cannot see how I ever lived.

Dear loved ones, write letters in The Restitution; they are a balm and comfort to all, and especially to the old and afflicted. Some dear one sent The Restitution to me. How thankful I am, but I will reimburse soon. May our dear Lord come in his own good time, is my prayer, when sorrow and sickness will be no more. If any of the dear sisters or brothers see my letter that know me, write letters of cheer in The Restitution.

Your Sister in Christ.
ELIZABETH J. ORR.

OVERCOMING.

Many know by sad experience what it is to be overcome. "A fortress is no stronger than its weakest point." Who that has been tempted and tried has not learned that he has a weak place where the enemy has entered and oft times taken him captive at his will? Impatience, pride, stubbornness, or carnal self in some form has again and again been victorious, and bowed us in weakness and in shame. The works of the flesh have been manifest. We have formed good resolutions or made promises, only to find them, in the presence of unlooked-for or long-continued trial, as powerless as a barrier of straw before a torrent of rushing water, or an obstruction of wax before advancing fire. Heartsick and weary, it is well if at last we learn in whom true strength lies, and listen to the voice that says: "Come unto me, all ye that labor, and I will give you rest."

Weary, weak, tempted one, you may have been again and again defeated, yet for you there is hope. Jacob when dying prophesied of one of his sons, "A troop shall overcome him, but he shall overcome at the last!" Of the royal one of Jacob's seed it was foretold: "I have laid help upon one that is mighty." He is "mighty to save," and through him who said, "I have overcome the world," you, though often conquered, yet may be an overcomer at last.

The word of God tells us what we have to overcome; how we may overtome; who will overcome; the results of overcoming, and also, for our encouragement gives examples of overcomers who being dead, yet speak.

I. What have we to overcome? The world and the wicked one. "Who is he that overcometh the world?" "Whatsoever is born of God overcometh the world." 1 John v. 4, 5. Three times in these two verses John tells us of overcoming the world. Christ said in his parting words to his disciples, "I have overcome the world" (Jn. xvi:33), bidding them therefore to "be of good cheer."

Again John says, "I write unto you, young man, because ye have overcome the wicked one." 1 John ii:13. We are bidden to resist the devil (James iv:1), and to "be sober, be vigilant; because your adversary, the devil, as a roaring lion, walketh about seeking whom he may devour." I Pet. v:9.

II. How may we overcome? "Whatsoever is born of God overcometh the world: and this is the victory that overcometh the world even our faith. Who is he that overcometh the world but he that believeth that Jesus is the son of God?" 1 Jno. v:4, 5. "Ye are of God, little children, and have overcome them; because greater is he that is in you than he that is in the world." 1 John iv:4.

"The lion of Judah shall break every chain,
And give us the victory again and again."

By faith we live, stand, and walk, and through faith in the lamb of God we overcome.

We are to overcome the wicked one through the word of God abiding in us—by the blood of the lamb and word of our testimony. "I have written unto you, young men, because ye are strong, and the word of God abideth in you, and ye have overcome the wicked one." 1 Jno. ii:14. When Christ was tempted by the devil, he used the "sword of the spirit, which is the word of God," saying: "It is written." Afterward the devil "leaveth him, and angels came and ministered unto him." John says "They overcame him by the blood of the Lamb and by the word of their testimony." Rev. xii:11. Paul says, "Above all, taking the shield of faith, wherewith ye shall be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked." Eph. vi:16. The promise stands: "The God of peace shall bruise satan under your feet shortly." Rom. xvi:20. Christ passed through death, "that he might destroy him that had power of death, that is, the devil." Heb. ii:14. Through our Lord Jesus Christ we are "more than conquerors," and it is our privilege even now, through faith, to claim the victory and praise the giver: "Thanks be to God, who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ." 1 Cor. xv:57.

III. Who will overcome? Not all! At last will be found foolish virgins as well as wise. Those who believe will be crowned victors. "Who is he that overcometh the world, but he that believeth that Jesus is the son of God? Whatsoever is born of God overcometh the world." 1 John v:4, 5.

Do you earnestly desire to be an overcomer? Then consider and obey the instructions which Paul gives from the Captain of our salvation: "Be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might. Put on the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil. For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places. Wherefore take unto you the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to withstand in the evil day, and having done all to stand. Stand, therefore, having your loins girt about with truth, and having on the breast-plate of righteousness, and your feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace; above all, taking the shield of faith, wherewith ye shall be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked. And take the helmet of salvation, and the sword of the spirit, which is the word of God. Praying always, with all prayer and supplication in the spirit, and watching thereunto with all perseverance and supplication for all saints." Eph. vi:10-18. Those who put on the heavenly armor, who through faith in, and obedience to, our Lord receive his holy spirit, will be overcomers, thus proving the truth of the word, "Greater is he that is in you than he that is in the world." 2 John iv:4.

IV. What is the result of overcoming? Final and everlasting victory. God has given precious promises to those who overcome. "To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life, which is in the midst of the paradise of God." "He that overcometh shall not be hurt of the second death." "To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the hidden manna, and will give him a white stone, and in the stone a new name written, which no man knoweth saving he that receiveth it." "He that overcometh and keepeth my works unto the end, to him will I give power over the nations. And I will give him the morning star." Rev. ii:7, 11, 17, 26, 28. "He that overcometh, the same shall be clothed in white raiment; and I will not blot out his name out of the book of life, but I will confess his name before my Father, and before his angels." "Him that overcometh will I make a pillar in the temple of my God, and he shall go no more out: and I will write upon him the name of the city of my God, which is New Jerusalem, which cometh down out of heaven from my God; and I will write upon him my new name." "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne." Rev. iii:5, 12, 21.

The word of God also for our encouragement gives examples of overcomers. Reading the seventh chapter of Romans carefully, we shall find that Paul describes a bitter bondage, defeat, self-condemnation and captivity. In mental suffering he exclaims. "Oh, wretched man that I am! Who shall deliver me?" He finds a deliverer in Jesus Christ our Lord, and give thanks to God. In the eighth chapter he tells us there is no condemnation now, and speaks of freedom, of joint heirship with Christ, of glory to be revealed, and of being more than conquerors through him that loved us. Paul lost himself, and found Christ to be all. After the deliverance Paul says: "The life I now live I live by the faith of the son of God." David was brought into bondage. He knew the humiliation of defeat, "the sacrifice of a broken and contrite heart," and hid God's word in his heart, that he might not sin. He meditated in the Word, and his psalms have been through ages fitting expressions of the experiences of the children of the Lord. "Had David spent no darksome hours,
His sweetest songs had ne'er been ours."

In the eleventh chapter of Hebrews is recorded a long list of those who were conquerors. Paul after giving a brief history of many, says, the time would fail to tell all who overcame through faith. "We are compassed about" with a great "cloud of witnesses," and bidden to "lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and to run with patience the race set before us, looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith."

While cheered by the instructions and examples given us in the word of God, let us not forget nor neglect prayer.

"Restraining prayer we cease to fight;
Prayer makes the Christians armor bright."

We must have personal interviews with out Savior. God will be inquired of for this thing. Praying in faith, yielding ourselves to the mighty conqueror, we may "shout the victory as we go," for "the battle is not ours, but God's." The word which is rendered overcome in the precious promise that we have considered, is rendered "gotten the victory" in Rev. xv:2. John saw "them that had gotten the victory . . . having the harps of God. And they sing the song of Moses, the servant of God, and the song of the Lamb." At the close of the Revelation, John tells us of the new heaven and earth, the holy city, New Jerusalem, with its beauties, where God will dwell with the redeemed of earth; where there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain. There the loved friends who now "sleep in Jesus" shall live again like Christ, and the promise from our Lord is: "Behold, I make all things new; he that overcometh shall inherit all these things" (margin). Rev. xxi:5, 7.

Beloved in the Lord, be of good cheer. God has given to the captain of our salvation full and complete victory over all that oppose. "The Lamb shall overcome them, for he is Lord of lords, and King of kings." Rev. xvii:14. We who put our trust in him may overcome through faith now, and finally sit with him on his throne, even as he overcame, and is set down with his Father on his throne. Rev. iii:21.

H. L. H.

MARRIED.

Mr. Clarence C. Taylor and Chloe I. Butler were united in marriage at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Butler, near Rutland, Indiana, at high noon, Sunday, May 19, 1912, D. E. Vanvactor officiating. Mr. Taylor comes from New Carlisle, Indiana, and has been educated for the profession of law. Miss Butler is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Butler, and one of the successful teachers of Marshall county. She has been engaged in the New Carlisle schools the last year, where she made the acquaintance of Mr. Taylor.

She was reared in Plymouth, Indiana where she graduated from the city schools. She is a member of the Church of God at that place and an excellent and exemplary young woman.

The home was tastefully arranged for the occasion. The most important feature of the decorations was a large bridal arch of forest branches and wild flowers. At the appointed time, M. D. Butler, brother of the bride, rendered an excellent cornet solo, which was followed by the wedding march by Mrs. Williamson, while the groom was conducted to the altar by Mr. L. A. Brummitt, as groomsman, followed by the bride upon her father's arm preceded by Miss Gertrude Price bearing the bridal flowers. The nuptial vows were then taken according to the ring ceremony. After congratulations the company partook of a nicely prepared three-come dinner.

Many valuable and beautiful presents were received by Mr. and Mrs. Taylor in token of the esteem o their many friends.

Besides the immediate families of Miss Butler's parents and grand parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Mosher, there were present Mr. and Mrs. James Curry, Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Brummitt, Mr. L. A. Brummitt, Mrs. C. L. Taylor, mother of the groom; Mr. P. R. Hooton, and Mr. Jay Nickerson, all of New Carlisle, Indiana; Mrs. E. H. Williams, of South Bend; Mrs. Margaret Phillips, of Plymouth; Mr. and Mrs. S. G. Williamson, Mr. Edgar Shaw, and Miss Sadie E. Korps, of Culver; Miss Gertrude Price, of Chicago, Illinois; Miss Anna Graverson, of Lowell, Indiana; and Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Vanvactor and son Glen, of Argos, Indiana.

The newly married couple expect to make their home in Oklahoma, where Mr. Taylor will engage in his profession.

May the blessings of peace and prosperity attend them in a long, useful career of wedded life.

GOLD DUST.

The Bible does not teach us that the bodily life is essentially evil; every vice is some perfectly proper desire or appetite run to excess.

Learn to say "No," and it will be of more use to you than to be able to read Latin.

Don't stumble over your halting brother; don't get in the way for him to stumble over you.

Faithfulness in little things is the best preparation for larger service and wider opportunities. (Luke 16:10).

Why is it we are not all kinder than we are? How much the world needs it! How easily it is done! How infallibly it is remembered! How superabundantly it pays itself back! For there is no debtor in the world so honorable, so superbly honorable as love.

The best people find least fault with their brethren, and are most ready to find excuses for the failures of others.

ANNA DREW.

Character alone is wealth. No one is rich who would not be rich if his material possessions were swept away.

BEREAN DEPARTMENT.

The Resurrection of Christ.

Dear Bereans:

This is my first attempt at writing for our paper, and you will have to pardon me if it appears to be crude. I am taking for my subject "The Resurrection of Christ."

That Christ was crucified and buried and rose again the third day, is a true fact, for it had been foretold long before his coming (Psa. 16:10),

"For thou wilt not leave my soul in hell; neither wilt thou suffer thine holy one to see corruption." Now if we turn to the parable (John 2:19) of the temple we see Christ had foretold his death and resurrection to his disciples, but they understood him not, for it says in (John 20:9), "For as yet they knew not the scripture that he must rise from the dead." But in I. Corinthians (15), some had denied the resurrection of Christ, at which Paul says in the 13-15 verses, "But if there be no resurrection of the dead, then is Christ not risen. And if Christ be not risen, then is our preaching vain, and your faith is also vain. Yea, and we are found false witnesses of God because we have testified of God that he raised up Christ whom he raised not up, if so be that the dead rise not."

After his resurrection he gathered his disciples together and commanded them, saying, "Go ye therefore and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit, teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world. Amen."

PAUL HATCH.

Chicago, Ill.

WHAT CHRIST'S RESURRECTION MEANS.

What does Christ's resurrection mean to the poor and the oppressed, the sick and afflicted?

In the epistle of James 2. 5th and 6th verses we read: "Hearken, my beloved brethren, hath not God chosen the poor of this world, rich in faith, and heirs of the kingdom which he hath promised to them that love him? But ye have despised the poor. Do not rich men oppress you, and draw you before the judgment seats?"

In Matthew 11th chapter we read Christ commanded his disciples to go and show John those things which ye do hear and see: How that the blind receive their sight; the lame walk; lepers are cleansed; the deaf hear; the dead are raised up, and the poor have the gospel preached to them. Also Matt. 5:3 in Christ's sermon on the mount: "Blessed are the poor in spirit, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven."

"Jesus went about all Galilee teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom, and healing all manner of sickness, and all manner of disease among the people" (Matt. 4:23). Our lesson is what does Christ's resurrection mean to the classes spoken of? Life and immortality were brought to light through the gospel (1. Tim. 1:10).

We have the assurance that Christ was raised from the dead and became the firstfruits of them that sleep, for as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive. But every man in his own order: Christ the firstfruits; afterward they that are Christ's at his coming, which means they that are in Christ. We get the explanation of how to get into Christ in Romans 6:3-5: "Know ye not that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ, were baptized into his death? Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death; that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life. For if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection." In Mark 16:15-16 after his resurrection Christ said unto his disciples: "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved."

So by faith in the gospel or good news concerning the kingdom of God and the faith and obedience in Christ, he is able to give eternal life through the resurrection from the dead to all worthy ones.

Your sister in Christ,

MRS. J. E. HATCH.

Chicago, Ill.

How Does The Lord Direct Us?

I was told one day while conversing with a friend that the Lord directed every act of his life by direct influence from on high. It is a very comforting thought in some respects, as it relieves you of all responsibility, and if your feet slip, you are not to blame. This was my thought. But will the scripture bear me out in such a thought? Where does our individual responsibility come in. Let us see.

He says we shall be judged according to our works. If he has willed us to do those works, be thus evil or good, we shall surely be commended, because we have been doing his will. We know there is no evil in the mind of God; if then we do evil, whom shall we blame? I thought of David, "a man after God's own heart," and yet he went astray. Did God put into his heart the evil thought? I trow not. In the 51 Psalm he pleads eloquently for forgiveness, recognizing that the evil thought was his own, and that he had sinned against the Most High. I thought also of Solomon, that great king, and the wisdom with which he was endowed; his power and riches, anointed by the Almighty God, to rule a great nation; after in direct communication with God, and yet he fell and sinned against God. Did God influence him to sin? If you say no, then we must look for some other meaning to the declaration in Psalm 32:8 which says: "I will instruct thee and teach thee in the way thou shalt go: I will counsel thee with mine eye upon thee." This is good news, but we must be willing to learn; he does not say he will compel us to learn. That we might learn he has given us chart and compass through the prophets, to whom he declared his will, giving us a choice as to whether we do his will or follow the evil promptings of our own heart. Our Savior made this known to us, when he said: "Enter ye in at the straight gate, for wide is the gate and broad is the way that leadeth to destruction, and many there be that go in thereat. Straight is the gate and narrow is the way which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it." Would he not be a partial God if he directly influenced by his spirit the few and allowed the many to go to destruction? We think so.

Then those who wish to start for the heavenly city have something to learn. The father has given the chart to be studied, with minute directions, to be followed by the student who would avoid the pitfalls strewn along the broad way. The captain of a ship is not given the command of a ship until he has learned the chart of the sea, and can read the atmosphere pressure on the barometer, so that he can prepare for stormy weather; he must also know his compass if he would guide his ship into a safe harbor, and must also be able to take observations from the sun to know where he is on the great expanse of water. If he has not thoroughly learned to do all these things, he is apt to make shipwreck of the lives and property entrusted to his care. There must be no trusting to chance. The ship owner who trusts to chance in the selection of a captain, is apt to come to grief. In like manner have we a complete chart, which, if well studied, will guide us over the sea of life to a safe anchor in a peaceful harbor? Shall we not go there for directions, so that we may be sure we are on the right path; take observations, so that we may know how far we have advanced and are steering straight for the harbor we have set out to win.

We must not trust to the theory that because we have expressed a desire to be an inhabitant of the heavenly city that we are going to be guided there by an unseen influence from above. True, it says the angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that fear him. How have they learned to fear him? By the study of his mighty works. "The steps of a good man are established (not ordered) by the Lord." How are they established? By keeping his commandments. The parents of John were both righteous before God, because they walked "in all the commandments and ordinances of the Lord blameless." Did they learn those commands anywhere outside of God's word, in order to walk righteously? The Psalmist says: "Order my steps in thy word, and let not my iniquity have dominion over me. Iniquity could not have dominion over him if his steps were ordered by the word. If a man who is trying to follow the Savior is tempted to steal, and immediately remembers the command: "Thou shalt not steal," and refrains, is it the power of God as revealed in his word that restrains him? Christ resisted evil in the same way, by remembering the command in the written word. In the old days, before this chart was completed, he gave his commands through the prophets, who spake as they were moved by the Holy Spirit, and through them to the people. Jeremiah, the prophet, spoke to all the people of Judah and all the inhabitants of Jerusalem, saying: "Since the day that your fathers came forth out of the land of Egypt unto this day. I have even sent unto you all my servants the prophets, rising early and sending them, but ye have not hearkened, nor inclined your ear to hear." This shows the earnest desire of the latter to save his people. He gave them instruction, but they did not choose to follow that instruction, but chose the way of evil. This shows that man is a freewill agent, doing his own will or the will of the Father, as it pleases him. If the children of Israel had only listened to the word, as revealed by the Holy Spirit, how different would have ben their fate! God could have turned them about and made them do this or that, as it pleased him, but that is not his way. He who would follow the Lord must have a willing heart, ready lovingly to obey the father's will, or he can have no place in the kingdom. The word says: "Be ye not as a horse or a mule, which have no understanding, whose mouth must be held in with a bit and bridle." This would be the case if every act was dictated to us: We should have no will of our own, no need for intelligence, no use for reasoning power. There would be no force in the invitation: "Come unto me," or in the declaration: "Whosoever will may come." Of what use would we be in the service of the Lord, if our service was not a freewill offering? Ps. 106: "Blessed are they that keep judgment and he who doeth righteousness at all times." We cannot do righteousness unless we keep the commandments; we cannot know right from wrong only as we learn it from God's word.

Our Lord meant those who are to be associate rulers with him, to have a character born of continual effort to follow lovingly instructions laid down in the word. He says: "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me on my throne, even as I also overcame and am set down with my Father on his throne. "What a glorious promise this! The Psalmist says: "Thy word have I hid in my heart that I might not sin." We see the weapon by which the Psalmist expected to overcome sin. Solomon, the wise man, says: "The integrity of the upright shall guide them, the perniciousness of the treacherous shall destroy them. "Here again is a choice: the one following the chart; the other their own sweet will "my words, they are spirit and they are life." Then we must know them in order to have life. Can we learn them in any other way but by studying them, hiding them in our hearts, so as to be ready in the hour of temptation to resist evil? Phillip thought so when he joined himself to the eunuch and guided him to an understanding of the Word. Christ thought so when he said: If they hear not Moses and the prophets neither will they be persuaded though one rose from the dead, showing that they did not know the word. Christ was full of the knowledge found in the Word, for he foiled the tempter by it, and was constantly quoting from it. That he had this knowledge early is proved by his dispute with the doctors at the age of twelve.

Clearly then, if we sail over the sea of life and land in the haven of rest, we must follow the instructions given in this chart, if we have any faith in the one who gave it. John says: "And hereby we know him if we keep his commandments." Again he says: "If ye love me keep my commandments."

These words have no uncertain sound. Where do we find those commandments if not in his Word? Again John says: "This is love, that we keep his commandments." A command is given by master to servant, either orally or in writing, and the presumption is that the one giving it has the right to do so, from the fact that the one receiving it has accepted service under the one giving it. We have accepted service under one mighty to save, and the proof of our love for that Master mariner is the faithfulness with which we obey the commands given. A lawyer, thinking to confuse the Master, asked this question: "Master, which is the great commandment of the law?" See how quickly he answered him: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart and with all thy soul, and with thy mind. This is the first and great commandment; and the second is like unto it: Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets." We shall have no trouble in steering aright if these commands are hidden in our hearts and become the motive power of our lives. All the way to the throne depends on the keeping of these two. Here is another from the same lips: "Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them." Do we not need to love the Lord our God with all our hearts to keep this command? For love of self is always with us. "Be good to yourself" is a favorite motto of the adversary. "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven." So we must so work that men cannot mistake the captain from whom we take our orders. If we faithfully try to keep these commands he says he will keep an eye upon us, so that if we need help we can ask. He says: "Call upon me in the day of trouble, and I will deliver thee, and thou shalt glorify me." "Cast thy burden upon the Lord, and he shall sustain thee, he shall never suffer the righteous to be moved." Before we do this we must be walking according to his will, walking uprightly because we love him, and are endeavoring to keep his commands as he has revealed them to us, and then in the day of trouble, we may call upon him and he will sustain us. We shall have no need to do this if every act of our lives was directed by the direct influence of the spirit in any other way than through his word.

Trust in the Lord with all thy heart and lean not unto thine own understanding." In all thy ways acknowledge him and he shall direct thy paths." Why will he direct our paths? Because he has said: Do not kill, do not steal, do not covet; and if temptation comes to do any of these things that we know are evil, and call upon him he will help us to overcome. If we sail straight according to this chart, what do we get when the voyage is done? Let us see: "Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is. "Eye hath not seen nor ear heard, neither hath it entered into the heart of man the things which God hath prepared for them that love him." Let us imagine all the beautiful things that we desire; yet our highest flights of imagination cannot begin to picture the glory reserved for the Lord's dear ones. "Verily verily, I say unto you, He that heareth my Word and believeth in him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation, but hath passed from death unto life." "Fear not, little flock, for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." I cannot give all the promises given to those who are following the Lord's commands, but surely here are enough to stimulate all our energies. Glory, life eternal, a kingdom whose policy is righteousness, and therefore joy and peace unending. Into this all are invited, not compelled, to come. "The spirit and the bride say, Come and let him that heareth say, Come. And whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely." There is no restriction. "He which testifieth these things saith, surely I come quickly." Even so, Lord Jesus, come quickly.

MRS RUTH W. WHITEHEAD

Chicago, Ill.

OHIO CONFERENCE DUES.

In order that the incidental expenses of holding the State Conference might be provided for in advance, and that such expense might be shared by all the brethren, a resolution was adopted at the last conference, which was held at Brush Creek last August, recommending that an annual assessment of one dollar ($1.00) be collected of every male member, and fifty cents of every female member affiliating with the conference, i.e., all members of the several churches participating in our State Conference, and all isolated ones not affiliated with any of these organized ecclesia, but who have shared, or wish to share in the conference work.

The following persons were named as sub-committees to act in the various churches as collectors of this fund as well as the usual evangelist fund, from which it is entirely distinct and separate: Ella Knowles, Salem; Alden Overholzer, Springfield; Ethel Lehman, Brush Creek, H. Juergensen, Barberton; and isolated ones; S. J. Elton, Delta; W. A. Heacock, Canton; C. A. Goss and Frances Russell, of Cleveland.

The object of this arrangement is to avoid the necessity of cutting down our evangelistic fund to pay part of conference expenses, as has been every year. It will also be the means of permitting many who have not previously shared in this good work to do so to a small extent, and at the same time doing away with the obvious injustice that the few who attend the Conferences be practically obliged to bear all their own traveling expenses and their own entertainment as well. We hope to have funds sufficient to entertain all who come without charge for either food or lodging, if all respond to this call as they should.

We know many have already responded by paying their dues to the appointed collector. Now it is time to take up the matter vigorously in each church and follow it up until all funds are in the hands of our Conference treasurer, W. C. Heacock, 230 Arlington Ave. Canton, O.

CHAS. A. GOSS.
Chairman Conference Com.

MICHIGAN CONFERENCE NOTICE.

To the Brethren Scattered Throughout Michigan and Everywhere, Greeting:

The Annual Conference and Bible School of Michigan will be held at Lemon Park, Indian Lake, three miles northeast of Vicksburg, Kalamazoo county. The conference will begin Thursday evening, June 30, and continue over Sunday, July 2. The following full week to July 9 will be devoted to Bible Study. Bro. Joseph Williams, of Forest, Ind., has been secured as one of the teachers and preachers. All who have had the privilege of studying with Bro. Williams will appreciate another opportunity, as he always has food for our spiritual growth. Other competent teachers and preachers will be present.

This is a rare opportunity for any wishing to take a vacation as it offers both a beautiful place for an outing, and a spiritual feast. There are plenty of cottages and a large pavilion in which to hold the meetings, which are offered us at a very low rate. It will be necessary for all to bring sheets, pillow slips, and towels.

We aim, with these advantages at hand to make this the strongest and largest conference held in Michigan for years, and to be able to do more extensive work in spreading the gospel of the kingdom of God, that many more may come into the fold while it is yet day for we know that only too soon the night, will come when no man can work. Will your work be done? Let us awake and arise to do this work at hand, realizing that at the most we can only do a little "till Jesus comes."

Lemon Park, on Indian Lake, three miles northeast of Vicksburg, in Kalamazoo, County, is on the main line of the Grand Trunk railway, nearly midway between Vicksburg and Pavilion. Persons coming from north of Kalamazoo take G. R. and I. R. R. to Vicksburg, changing to Grand Trunk (same station) for Lemon Park. Parties from south of Vicksburg do the same. Those from the eastern part of the state (Adrian, for instance), go direct to Battle Creek, then take the Grand Trunk Railway to Lemon Park on Indian Lake. It would be best for all contemplating attending the meetings, to go to your respective home station agents and look up the best route.

Avery cordial invitation is extended to all interested in the "word of God." Come to study, bring pencil and notebook. Let us scatter the seed and work till Jesus comes. Yours for the Master.

ROSE MILLER, Sec.

INDIANA CONFERENCE NOTICE.

To the brethren of the Church of God:

I give you greeting and in the language of the Master say: "Wist you not that we must be about our Father's business?"

Through the will of the Father we are permitted still to stand in our wonted place, and to perform a part in the great plan of God for mankind. Let us therefore as a church, show our thanksgiving by putting aside the cares of this life for a brief season to offer our thankfulness and praise to him who gives us all things, and has promised us abundantly more if only we will serve him to the end.

Those coming to Plymouth, please write Bro. F. M. McCrory so that arrangements can be made for conveyances to the church. Those coming to Argos, notify Sister Jane Taber, or Brother F. P. Boggs, both of Argos, and you will be cared for.

FLORA HARRIS,
Secretary.
F. M. McCrory, President.

INDIANA BIBLE SCHOOL.

The Indiana Bible School will convene this year at Plymouth, June 10, and continue one week. We not only invite, but urge the young people and old also, to come to the conference prepared to stay for a week's study of Bible truth.

Brothers Robison and Williams have been selected as teachers. No tuition fee will be charged, and lodging and meals are free to all. Those coming should notify Mrs. F. M. McCrory, or Dessie McDonald, so that lodging places may be secured. A fund to meet expenses has been started, and contributions will be received according to the will of friends of the cause.

In his name,
ASA O. ROOSE,
MRS. F. M. McCRORY,
DESSIE McDONALD,
Committee.

ANTIOCH CONFERENCE MEETING

Friday, June 7.

10:30 a. m.—Address by President, F. M. McCrory.
11:00 a. m.—A talk, Prime Needs of the Church, Mrs. D. C. Robison.
12:00 m.—Dinner on grounds.
2:00 p. m.—Business Meeting.
3:00 p. m.—Sermon, J. F. Wagoner.
7:00 p. m.—Song and social service, Mrs. Ella Demont.
7:45 p. m.—Sermon, D. E. VanVactor.

Saturday, June 8.

9:30 a. m.—Social meeting, R. C. Railsback.
10:30 a. m.—Sermon, D. C. Robison.
12:00 m.—Dinner on grounds.
2:00 p. m.—Sermon, Mrs. D. C. Robison.
3:00 p. m.—Business meeting.
7:00 p. m.—Berean meeting, Mrs. Emma Railsback.
7:45 p. m.—Sermon, Joseph Williams.

Sunday, June 9.

9:30 a. m.—Social meeting, Wm. M. Huffer.
10:30 a. m.—Sermon, D. C. Robison.
12:00 m.—Basket dinner.
2:00 p. m.—Sermon, Mrs. D. C. Robison.
3:00 p. m.—Communion, J. E. Wagoner.
6:45 p. m.—Social meeting, Lawrence M. Howell.
7:30 p. m.—Sermon, Joseph Williams.

FRANK P. BOGGS,
MRS. JANE TABER,
SYLVESTER LOGAN
Committee.

CONFERENCE NOTICE.

The Iowa State Conference will be held at Waterloo, August 24 to September 1 inclusive. Program will appear later.

EVA L. STEARN,
Secretary.

NOTICE TO ILLINOIS BEREANS

Our new Berean booklets are now in the hands of the printer. an extra dollar, who can conveniently do so, please send in as soon as possible, to the treasurer? Also the societies that have not yet paid in their quarterly dues for the past two quarters, please do so at once, that we may have enough to meet the expense on the books.

W. T. HARDESTY, Treas.
Box 281, Oregon, Ill.

Too many are owned by the things they should own. More people are possessed by their wealth than possess it. One of the tragedies of life is the mastery of the soul by material things, making it a slave where it should rule absolutely.

Right Belief Fundamental.

Right belief is fundamental to right living. The claim that a man's moral character is not injured by a mistaken belief, if only he is sincere in it, is as absurd as to assume that his practical success in life would not be interfered with, if he held the wrong views on fundamental questions. Faith and character have an organic connection.

What we keep we must lose. Possessions held selfishly are ours only a few years at most. But what we give, we have. Every sacrifice made for others enriches us for all eternity.

THE BIBLE; ITS PRINCIPLES AND TEXTS

As indicated by the title this booklet is divided into three sections. The first consists of a remarkable exposition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "principles" into formulated propositions, and the third expounds in a clear, impressive and homelitic manner particular "Texts." The knotty and perplexing texts of the Bible are mitted and solved satisfactorily to the most fastidious and critical. More than one hundred and fifteen subjects of intense interest to every Bible student are forcibly discussed. Both simple and scholarly—the child is fascinated and taught; the scholar is entertained and instructed. Bible lovers, here is a feast for you. Throw open the door of your home; let The Bible—Its Principles and Its Texts come in and bless you and your family. 309 pages, 5x7 1-2 inches, durably and handsomely bound in whole cloth, with title embossed on back in gold. One copy $1.10, two copies or more $1.00 each. R. G. Huggins, 10623 Lee Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

PROOFREADER

Years of experience in proofreading; now completing a technical course in the art. MSS prepared for the printer and proofs read. Book work a specialty. Limited amount of work by mail accepted at popular prices.

ROBT. G. HUGGINS,
10623 Lee Avenue,
Cleveland, Ohio

The truth gives a man the hope of seeing with his own eyes the work of God, at last triumphant in the earth whether he live or die; and of himself sharing the blessedness for ages covenanted for all the earth through Abraham and his seed.

Forgetful hearers allow themselves to be diverted by the ephemeral things of life from the important business of making themselves familiar with God's word by reading. They are without excuse.

Real faith is a treasure, a companion of delight, a spring of living water, a fountain of purity.

The man who possesses faith unfeigned will do what others will not do; but a man of sham faith will not sacrifice anything for the sake of it.

Ladies! Save Money and Keep in Style by Reading McCall's Magazine and Using McCall Patterns

McCall's Magazine will help you dress stylishly at a moderate expense by keeping you posted on the latest fashions in clothes and hats. 50 New Fashion Designs in each issue. Also valuable information on all home and personal matters. Only 50c. a year, including a free pattern. Subscribe today or send for free sample copy.

McCall Patterns will enable you to make in your own home, with your own hands, clothing for yourself and children which will be perfect in style and fit. Price—none higher than 15 cents. Send for free Pattern Catalogue.

We Will Give You Free Presents for getting subscriptions among your friends. Send for free Premium Catalogue and Cash Prize Offer.

THE McCALL COMPANY, 238 to 248 West 37th St., NEW YORK

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

We, whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones.

This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of their paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

C. A. Ackerson ..... .50
H. Brocklebank ..... $.394

Read This Special Subscription Offer

By a special arrangement just made with THE FARM JOURNAL, a sixty-four page magazine, we are able to make for a limited time a very generous combination subscription offer. The Farm Journal is one of the best farm and home magazines published in the country, a large, interesting journal which is known the country over. The Farm Journal also publishes the booklets of "The Money Making Secrets" series, including "Poultry Secrets," "Horse Secrets," "Corn Secrets," "The Million Egg Farm," "The Butter Book" and "Duck Dollars." The subscription price of the "Farm Journal" is $1.00 for five years, or $1.00 for 4 years and any one of the booklets of "The Money Making Series."

Now for the Special Offer

Regular Price of Restitution 1 year - - - $1.50
Regular Price of Farm Journal 5 years - - 1.00
(Or Farm Journal four years and one booklet)
2.50

We Will Send Both the Above to You for the Special Price of

$1.50

Remember the Restitution for 1 year, The Farm Journal for 5 years all for the price of $1.50

SEND IN YOUR SUBSCRIPTION TODAY

Books and Tracts
By W. H. WILSON

A BIBLE STUDY OF HADES.....15c each, or 5 for 50c.
(As compared with our modern ideas).
A critical study of Hell, showing the difference in the word in the past and in the present time.

STUDENTS TEXT BOOK 50c
How to study the Bible and rightly understand God's Word. Cloth bound, 200 Pages.

PINE WOODS BIBLE CLASS.....$1.25
Studies carried on between a class and its teacher. Cloth bound, 480 Pages.

CUNNINGLY DEVISED FABLES, 28 Pages.....10c

WHERE WILL YOU SPEND ETERNITY, 4 Pages,
.... 25c per hundred

ARE YOU IN NEED OF MONEY, 4 Pages, 25c per hundred

WILL IT PAY TO BECOME A CHRISTIAN?.....25c
By Jas. W. Wilson. A neat Cloth book of 96 Pages which every one should read.

Bro. Wilson's Latest Book

Is Ready for Distribution
THE DESTINY OF RUSSIA AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES
96 Pages, Bound in Cloth, 25c.

W. H. WILSON, 625 North Willow Ave.
AUSTIN STA., CHICAGO, ILL.

The Restitution Publications

Send for all of the following books and tracts to

W. S. TOMLINSON, 10825 Orville Ave. N.E., Cleveland

A LETTER TO A FRIEND, 32 Pages 10c each, 12 for $1.00
FUTURE PROBATION, 150 Pages, 10c each, 12 for $1.00

The following tracts by M. Joblin:

THE KINGDOM OF GOD.
OLD MOTHER EARTH TO BE BORN AGAIN.
STRANGERS FROM THE COVENANT OF PROMISE.
VAIN WORSHIP.
NO IMMORTALITY OUT OF CHRIST.
GOD'S LOVE AND SOLICITUDE FOR MANKIND.
WHAT SHALL WE DO TO BE SAVED?
THE FOOLISHNESS OF PREACHING.
SALVATION, WHAT IS IT?

All the above are 16 page tracts, 100 for $1.00 any assortment.

THE PATERNITY OF JESUS, by M. Joblin, 122 Pages, each 10c. A work that proves Jesus was the son of God and not the natural son of Joseph.

THE SCRIPTURE SEARCHERS ASSISTANT, by M. Joblin, each 6c. A valuable aid to the study of the Scriptures, contains 400 references.

A WRONG DEFINITION OF LIFE AND DEATH, a six page tract, a most excellent booklet, 10 copies 25 cents; 100 copies 35 cents; 200 copies 60 cents.

THE DEVIL: WHAT, WHERE AND WHY—A 24 page tract, 5 cets a copy.

"SIONS OF CHARACTER OR HOW TO READ CHARACTER AT SIGHT" and "HEALTH THROUGH NATURE'S LAWS"

Two books by Dr. A. Wallace Mason. One is a study of character and how we may read it by the face and head. Brother Mason has made a very close study of this subject for years, and the information given in this book will prove interesting and instructive. Price 25c. 73 pages.

The other is a work which tells how to gain and keep health as its title says, "through nature's laws" Every family should have a copy. Price 10c.

SALVATION: WHAT IS IT? A Sermon in German, translated by Henri Jergnen. Price, 10 copies, 25 cents; 50 copies, 35 cents; 100 copies, 60 cents

FOUR PAGE TRACTS:

Can You Believe? 10 for 20c, 50 for 25c.

State of Man in Death, 10 for 10c, 50 for 25c, 100 for 40c.

Life and Death, 10 for 10c, 50 for 25c, 100 for 40c.

Age to Come Not a Heresy, 10 for 10c, 50 for 25c, 100 for 40c.

TWO PAGE TRACTS

Bible Pearls—Suitable for wide distribution. 1. The Gospel. 2. Coming and Kingdom of Christ by 20,000 Baptists in 1660. 3. Immateriality. 4. Kingdom of God. 5. Nature of man and Thoughts for Thinkers. 6. Two Advents. 7. What is Religion? 8. Restitution Age. 9. Destiny of the Wicked. 10. Baptism. Ten copies for 5 cents, or assorted packages of 100 for 20 cents.

WANTED!
Subscription Solicitors

We will pay an actual salary to men and women in all parts of the country, to act as agents for The Restitution. This salary will be based on your ability to take subscriptions, take care of renewals, and make collections, and will be paid weekly. You can devote all or part of your time, and can make a special offer to prospective subscribers, which we will tell you about if you are interested. We will have some announcements to make in the near future that will also help you.

If you want to work, sit down NOW and write for full information.

B. W. NUTT, Manager.

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co.
WHOLESALE OPTICIANS

We make a specialty of High Grade Prescription Work, and carry a full line of all kinds of Optical goods. All orders filled same day as received.

"S. K. N." SERVICE

Means prompt returns, careful work, moderate prices. Goods shipped to all parts of the country.

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co. 821 SCHOFIELD BUILDING CLEVELAND, OHIO

SPECIAL OFFER!

IN ORDER to increase the circulation of The Restitution, the following special offer is made:

One new subscriber for 1 year, choice of:

W. H. Wilson's "Student's Text Book," regular price.....50c
Or 5 Copies of "Cunningly Devised Fables," reg. price 50c
Or 5 Copies of "Bible Study of Hades," reg. price 50c

For Two New Subscribers

One Copy "Pine Woods Bible Class," 480 pages, reg. price, $1.25
Or "The Bible, Its Principles and Texts," 309 pages, reg., $1.25
Or One Hundred of Bro. Joblin's Tracts, regular price $1.00

Here is a chance to get some of the books you all should own. By making special arrangements with the authors we are able to offer them to you without the payment of a cent on your part, just a few minutes effort. We cannot afford to continue this offer long, so take advantage of it at once, get some new subscribers today.

THE RESTITUTION, 803 Parkwood Drive

"There is a great difference between the man who is sure of what he knows an dthe one who thinks he knows it all. The one has the beginning of knowledge. The other will never truly know anything"

"Courage is the power of going forward in spit of difficulties to reach a chosen and worthy object."

"No truth is absolutely new; what is true is eternal; but old truth is new to the man who has just now found it out."

"You may depend upon it that he is a good man whose intimate friends are all good."

60 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the

Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

"A LETTER TO A FRIEND"

This tract needs no introduction further than to say that it is one of the most convincing Gospel sermons ever written. Originally written as a letter to a friend by Sister C. C. Woodruff it was published and has sold extensively in tract form. In its present edition it is a 32 page tract, the price is

10c each; 12 for $1.00

There is no better way of spreading the Gospel than handing out one of these tracts wherever you have the opportunity.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

"Future Probation,
is that Awaiting any of the Unrighteous?"

Here is a work by Wm. Glenn Moncrieff that every one should read. It is one of the best things on the subject ever written and will appeal to every student of the word. It is a book of 150 pages, made to sell at 25c. We have a limited number left which we will sell at the special price of

10c each; 12 for $1.00

Send for some at once.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

The Restitution
IS THE OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA.

The Restitution.

Founded in A. D. 1852

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The Inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Lk. 18:18-16), who will be King of Kings (Rev. 19:16); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:51-53); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:16, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17), and belief in, the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Lk. 13:3), and obedience by Baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ." (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31).

ROBT. G. HUGGINS, Editor.

—Terms of— Subscription
ONE YEAR, $1.50
SIX MONTHS 75 CTS. IN ADVANCE

VOL. 60 - 4 CLEVELAND, OHIO, JUNE 18, 1912 No. 72

HOW READEST THOU?

It is one thing to read the Bible through,
Another thing to read and learn to do.
Some read it with design to learn to read,
But to the subject pay but little heed.
Some read it as their duty once a week,
But no instruction from the Bible seek:
While others read it with but little care,
With no regard to how they read or where.
Some read it as a history, to know
How people lived three thousand years ago.
Some read it to bring themselves into repute,
By showing others how they can dispute.
While others read because their neighbors do,
To see how long will take to read it through,
Some read it for the wonders that are there,
How David killed the lion and a bear,
While others read it with uncommon care,
Hoping to find some contradiction there!
Some read as though it did not speak to them,
But to the people at Jerusalem.
One reads it as a book of mysteries
And won't believe the very thing he sees.
One reads with father's specs upon his head,
And sees the thing just as his father said,
Some read to prove a pre-adopted creed,
Hence understand but little that they read,
For every passage in the book they bend,
To make it suit that all important end!
Some people read as I have often thought,
To teach the book instead of being taught.
And some there are who read it out of spite—
I fear there are but few who read it right.
Some people in these latter days,
Have read the Bible in so many ways
That few can tell which system is the best,
For every party contradicts the rest!
But read it prayerfully and you will see,
Although, men contradict, God's words agree.
For what the early Bible prophets wrote,
We find that Christ and his apostles quote:
So trust no creed that trembles to recall
What has been penned by one and verified by all.—Selected by Sister Florence Westfall.

THE KINGDOM DELIVERED TO MESSIAH; or The Temporal and Eternal

H. V. Reed

"For the Things That are Seen are Temporal; but the Things Which are not Seen are Eternal" (II. Cor. 4:18).

In the above text the apostle makes a striking contrast between the temporal and the eternal. That which is temporal is to pass away, but that which is in the unseen is eternal. It is a most impressive thought that all of the great promises of God, made known to us in the Prophets and by the Apostles, are to be endless.

1. The Redemption which is in Christ Jesus is eternal (Heb. 9:12).

2. The Covenant Confirmed in Christ is an everlasting Covenant (Heb. 13:20-21; Gal. 3:17-18).

3. The inheritance under this Covenant and Redemption are also eternal (Heb. 9:14-15).

4. Christ is the Mediator of this Covenant which is declared to be eternal (Heb. 8:6-13).

5. The Priesthood of our Lord is after the order of Melchisedic, which is forever as "he ever liveth to make intercession" (Heb. 7:16-17, 22-26).

6. The Life offered to men in Christ is eternal (Rom. 6:23; John 6:40).

7. The Kingdom of our Lord is an eternal kingdom and to have no end (Luke 1:31-33).

The above propositions are abundantly sustained by the united testimony of the Prophets and Apostles.

The general impression conveyed by the current teaching is that the priestly office and the office of Mediator of Messiah is to end; and that when he assumes the functions of judge and king he is to cease to be an intercessor or a mediator.

This position contradicts the plain statements made in the Scriptures and destroys the very foundation upon which the Christian Hope is based.

The text upon which the above theory is affirmed is I. Cor. 15:24, which reads as follows: "Then comest the end, when he shall have delivered up the Kingdom of God, even the Father; when he shall have put down all rule, and all authority, and power."

It is claimed that when our Lord returns from heaven he leaves his priestly office and his meditorial throne and becomes the judge of quick and dead. The whole stress is laid upon the phrase, "when he shall have delivered up the kingdom to God," etc. It is argued by some that Christ's reign precedes his coming and by others that his reign only begins after he comes again; and that his kingdom will end when all things are subjected to him, etc. The point seems to hinge upon what is meant by the phrase, "then cometh the end." Wakefield gives a very lucid translation of the whole text and obviates any technical difficulty. "Then will the end be, when God the Father delivereth up the Kingdom to Him; during, which he will destroy all dominion, and all authority, and power, for he will reign till he hath put every enemy under his feet; and so the enemy death will be destroyed at last. Now, when the Scripture saith. All things are put under him, it manifestly means a subjection besides the subjection to him, who put all these things under Christ. But the son himself, when all these things are put under him, will also submit to God, who put all things under him; that God may be all in all."—Wakefield's translation of I. Cor. 15: 24-28.

The learned translator makes the following comment upon the above text: "The received reading of this verse anticipates and is not consistent with verse 28, nor with other passages of the New Testament. All difficulties are avoided by the present translation, which rest upon the Ethiopic Version. Moreover, the Coptic and Syriac versions have pasan dunamin.

The following points seem to be well established and are in exact harmony with Wakefield's translation:

1. Our Lord has gone away to receive for himself a kingdom and to return.

This is made plain by the following testimony from Luke: And as they heard these things, he added and spake a parable, because he was nigh to Jerusalem, and because they thought that the kingdom of God should immediately appear. He said therefore, a certain nobleman went into a far country to receive for himself a kingdom, and to return. And he called his ten servants, and delivered them ten pounds, and said unto them, Occupy till I come, * * * And it came to pass that when he was returned, having received the kingdom, then he commanded these servants to be called unto him," etc.

It will be noticed that Jesus does not reject their view of his establishing a kingdom, but he shows the disciples that he must ascend to the father and receive his kingdom, and then return.

2. Our Lord, as the son of man, is to receive his kingdom, when he is in the presence of the ancient of days, which takes place in connection with the sounding of the seventh angel's trumpet, as stated in Rev. 11:15.

The above proposition is well supported by the Scriptures of truth as the following texts will show: "I saw in the night visions and behold one like the son of man came with the clouds of heaven, and came to the Ancient of Days, and they brought him near before him. And there was given him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, nations, and languages should serve him: his dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed (Dan. 7:13-14).

The above testimony is explicit that the son of man or the Messiah, receives his kingdom when he is in the presence of the Ancient of Days, who is to sit in judgment upon the world power at the time of Messiah's glory and kingdom. The little horn of Daniel's fourth beast is to war against the saints "until the Ancient of Days came," and it is then that judgment is to be given to the saints and they are to possess the kingdom (Dan. 7:21-22).

These events are connected with the sounding of the seventh angel, as recorded in Rev. 11:15. "And the seventh angel sounded; and there were great voices in heaven, saying, The kingdoms of this World are become the kingdom of our Lord and his Christ. And he shall reign forever and ever. * * *

We give the thanks, O Lord God Almighty, which art and wast and art to come, because thou hast taken to thee thy great power, and hast reigned."

That this applies to the time of Messiah's coming is clear, as will be seen by the other events under this seventh trumpet: 1. The nations are angry; 2. God's wrath has come; 3. And the time of the dead that they should be judged and the reward given to God's servants, prophets and saints; 4 And those that corrupted the earth should be destroyed.

These events agree with what Daniel says that the Ancient of Days shall come, at which time judgment shall be given to the saints and they shall possess the kingdom forever and ever. And it gives force and emphasis to Paul's charge to Timothy: "I charge thee therefore before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his Kingdom" (II. Tim. 4:1).

The above testimonies most clearly establish the position that our Lord has gone before the Father to receive for himself a Kingdom. It is also plain that the Kingdom is given to him in the presence of the Ancient of Days, who is represented as coming at the time of the sounding of the seventh trumpet. It is in harmony with both Daniel and John, that the Ancient of Days appears at the time when the persecuting power against the saints comes to his end by the judgment of God, and the saints become possessors of the kingdom forever and ever (Dan. 7:21-22). So it is clear that saints are to be joint possessors with our Lord in this kingdom, for it is written: "It is your Father's good pleasure to give you the Kingdom" (Luke 12:31-32). All of the great events connected with the coming and kingdom of Messiah, will become blessed realities. Therefore instead of the kingdom being delivered up by the Messiah to his Father at the time of his coming, he is to "return, having received the Kingdom."

The order of worship in Messiah's kingdom will be eternal, and it will reach out and beyond all the ages of reconciliation, thanksgiving, glory, honor, praise and alleluias will be offered through the eternal Priesthood of Jesus Messiah, and his position as mediator of the everlasting covenant will remain, as long as the kingdom, which has no end. This will be the Blessed Consummation of the ever lasting redemption in Christ, when God's will shall be done in earth as it is done in heaven.

WHAT I BELIEVE AND WHY NO. III

Charles Clifford Maple

We come now to consider the things concerning the name of Jesus Christ.

We learn from Matthew 16 that the church, which Christ said he would build, was established upon the truth which Peter confessed, "Jesus was the Christ, the Son of the Living God."

Peter's confession reaches that there is one God, and that Jesus Christ is the son of God.

We hear many times about "the Holy Spirit, the third person in the Trinity." The Holy Spirit is the power proceeding from God. God and the Holy Spirit are not two separate and distinct persons.

A Bible student told me that this truth came to him in trying to answer the question, Who is the Father of the Lord Jesus Christ? and the statement of Luke 1:35, The Highest is God, the power of the highest is the power of God, and it says also it was the Holy Spirit.

The truth therefore came upon this Bible student that there was no third person called Holy Spirit. To return then, to our thought: Christ, the Son of God became the central truth of the gospel, that which all must acknowledge.

Philip preached it to the people of Samaria (Acts 8:5-12), also to the Ennuch, who demanded baptism. "If thou believest with all thy heart that Jesus is the Christ the Son of God thou mayest be baptised," was the teaching (Acts 8:36-48).

Believing in Jesus Christ gives us a Divine Creed.

We believe in a person, not in a thing, not in a set of rules or any doctrines or commandments of men, but in Jesus Christ—Our prophet, priest, and king.

Paul says, I know in whom I have believed" (II. Tim. 1:12). not in what, but in whom. Again, he says, "I was determined to know nothing among you save Christ and him crucified" (I. Cor. 2:2). What a grand thing to be known among the churches.

Paul preached the things that concerned the Lord Jesus Christ.

Now we are not to understand, as some seem to teach, that this is all of the gospel, that is, that the things that the apostles preached were the death, burial, and resurrection of Christ, and nothing more. These truths are a part of the gospel, but the things concerning the kingdom were also preached as the gospel as well as those things which concerned the Lord Jesus Christ. (Act 8:12; Mark 1:14; Luke 9:2-6; Acts 28:30-31).

We must not loose sight of these basic truths upon which the gospel rests.

I am all out of sympathy with any teaching that in any way dethrones the Christ from his rightful place at the head of the church. In order to be a Christian we must be a follower of Christ and in order to be a follower of Christ we must be a believer in him and in order to be a believer in him we must know him; thus knowing him we believe, and believing we follow, and following we become partakers of his promises.

We learn next that the Christ proves his divinity by his resurrection from the dead.

Paul establishes that part of the gospel which concerns the Lord Jesus Christ upon the Lord's death, burial, and resurrection (I Cor. 15:1-4). In his resurrection we have also the token of our resurrection. If he lives we shall live also (John 14:19).

This leads us to say just a word regarding the resurrection, outside of that class who are ignorant of the gospel who remain in the congregation of the dead Prov. 21:16). There will be a resurrection of all the dead; some unto life and some unto death. And can we read the scripture and not find the resurrection? A man on the train a short time ago said he "did not believe it could be possible." He led out into a long line of reasoning and then reached the conclusion that there was no resurrection. But the word says there shall be and "I don't know any better than to believe it."

In our next article we shall consider the church.

ALL THINGS

E. W. Knapp

The phrase "All Things" occurs about 225 times in the Bible, and is in most cases a class phrase. And the Lord blessed Abraham in all things (Gen. 24:1). He hath given him flocks, and herds, and silver, and gold, and men servants and maid servants, and camels and asses (35th verse) And in all things that I have said unto you, be circumspect, and make no mention of the name of other gods, neither let it be heard out of thy mouth (Ex. 24-13). So Aaron and his sons did all things which the Lord commanded by the hand of Moses (Lev. 8:36). According as we hearkened unto Moses in all things, so will we hearken unto thee (Josh. 1-17). Yet he hath made with me an everlasting covenant, ordered in all things and sure; for this is all my salvation, and all my desire (II. Sam. 23:5).

And he did very abominably in following idols, according to all things as did the Amorites (I. Kings 21:26). Therefore I esteem all thy precepts concerning all things to be right; and I hate every false way (Ps. 119-128). Evil men understand not Judgment, but they that seek the Lord understand all things (Prov. 28:5). Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them (Matt. 7:12).

All things are delivered unto me of my Father. And when they were alone, he expounded all things to his disciples (Mark 4:34). All things are possible to him that believeth (Mark 9:23). But take ye heed; behold, I have foretold you all things (Mark 13:23). These are the words which I spake unto you, while I was yet with you, that all things must be fulfilled which were written in the law of Moses, and in the prophets, and in the psalms, concerning me (Luke 24:44).

Things that Jesus did and taught were considered the "all things." He foretold the destruction of the temple; the persecution for the gospel; the gospel must be preached to all nations; that great calamities should happen to the Jews; the hour of judgment known to none; and then said to his followers: Take heed, behold I have foretold you all things (Mark. 13). The woman of Samaria believed that when Christ is come he will tell us all things, and when he told her all things, she believed him to be the Christ. The people found that the "all things" that John spake of this man were true. All things that I have heard of my father I have made known unto you. The Holy Spirit shall teach you all things and bring all things to your remembrance whatsoever I have said unto you. Jesus knew all things that should come upon him.

At his crucifixion he knew all things were accomplished, that had been spoken by the prophets, and that the Scripture might be fulfilled said, I thirst. Paul in his defense before Felix said, But this I confess unto thee that after the way which they call heresy, so worship I the God of my fathers believing all things which are written in the law and in the prophets (Acts 24:14). The resurrection of the dead was one question in the controversy. Paul found that the prophet Daniel wrote about the resurrection, and when before King Agrippa he said, I continue unto this day, witnessing both to small and great, saying none other things than those which the prophets and Moses did say should come, that Christ should suffer, and that he should be the first that should rise from the dead, and should shew light unto the people, and to the Gentiles (Acts 26:22-23).

The all things that he taught unto the people after his conversion and baptism was that Christ was and is the Son of God. And when near Paphas where was a false prophet and some of the people desired to hear the word of God, this false prophet withstood him, and Paul, filled with the Holy Spirit, said unto him, O full of all subtility and all mischief, thou child of the devil, thou enemy of all righteousness, wilt thou not cease to pervert the right ways of the Lord?

And the Lord caused him to be blind for a season. So the things he spake were not the all things that should be believed. Then Paul speaking of David said, Of this man's seed hath God, according to his promise, raised unto Israel a Savior, Jesus. Whosoever among you feareth God, to you is the word of this salvation sent, and they of Jerusalem did not know him neither believed the prophets which are read every Sabbath day, but fulfilled the prophecy by condemning him, and all the prophets had written of him was fulfilled when they took him down and laid him in a sepulchre, but God raised him from the dead, and now we declare unto you glad tidings how that the promise which was made unto the fathers, God hath fulfulled the same unto us their children, in that he hath raised up Jesus again. Through this man is preached unto you the forgiveness of sins; and by him all that believe are justified from all things, from which ye could not be justified by the law of Moses. The "all things" that Christ and all his apostles taught, are the things to be believed, and obeyed, in order to obtain the precious promise of eternal life. They are the gospel, and not the law; the promises of God, and not of man, the hope of life on earth, and not in heaven.

GOLD DUST

Forget the things behind, look forward to the things before. The wisdom of a divine life lies hid in this principle.

As every drop of water falling on a rock leaves its impress, so does everything you do and every word you utter. They leave their impress on your fellow men living marks which will out last yourself, additions to the character of the world.

Half the world is on the wrong scent in the pursuit of happiness. They think it consists in having and getting and in being served by others. It consists in giving and serving others.

That may be right which is not pleasant and that pleasant which is not right, but Christ's religion is both. There is not only peace in the end of religion, but peace in the way.

The debt of love underlies and precedes all other debts.

ANNA DREW.

A man possessing the truth, but destitute of the principle of love, in which it has its origin and end, is a bastard and not a son, an ugly abortion in the family of God, a swine whose prying snout has unearthed the jewels of the sanctuary, and profaned them by an unholy appropriation.

One of the first features of an excellent man's excellence is that he cares little whether anybody knows it or not. He does not parade his good works in any sense, but that of doing them.

The Restitution

Issued weekly by

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING COMPANY.

Entered as second-class matter under act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

TERMS.

One year $1.50; six months 75 cents, in advance.

ROBT. G. HUGGINS.....Editor
BUELL W. NUTT.....Manager

BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Burton H. Lang, Harry Pott,
Chas. A. Goss, Robt. G. Pate,
Buell W. Nutt, D. G. Robison,
W. B. Tomlinson.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

All remittances should be sent by bank draft, post office money order or express money order to The Restitution Publishing Co., 803 Parkwood drive, Cleveland, Ohio.

All communication intended for publication should be sent to the editor, Robt. G. Huggins, 10623 Lee avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

It is necessary to adhere strictly to the rule of not returning unused manuscripts. Writers will please keep copies, or risk the loss.

While the editor exercises a general supervision over the articles appearing in The Restitution, his endorsement does not extend to the interpretation of details nor the exegesis of particular texts in the writings of contributors.

Cleveland, Ohio....June 18, 1912

EDITORIAL

COMMUNICATIONS

Dear Brother Huggins—I have frequently heard my husband's father, S. H. Thomas, remark about the many good words spoken of people in their death notices, and wonder if they said such words of praise to them while alive, and that he hoped if any one had a good word to say of him they would say it now, not wait until he could not appreciate it. So will see if I can express my opinion of him so you will see him as he is to us in every day life.

He is the personification of all that is good, just, religious and honest. An example for his children, who are all married, and all who are intimately connected with him, or who have any dealings with him.

As you no doubt know, he is the leader of the Pinehurst Bible Class, and solver of all our puzzles. This may sound rather complicated but I have never felt in doubt on any subject concerning the Bible that he could not explain in a perfectly satisfactorily manner.

Father Thomas has, I believe, been an ardent believer for over thirty years and has in that time baptized a large number and helped ever so many see the Bible in its true light. He has had stomach trouble for years, but never complains, is very sympathic and quick to do all in his power for any one else. Ever ready with the word of praise, even in little matters and very patient with all our short comings, and if we fail to do just the right thing always, by his careful selection of a reading at our next meeting and kindly actions he shows us our mistakes and urges us to do better next time.

In closing will add that I hope I will be able to accomplish one third the good he has in life.

MRS. JEROME THOMAS.

"Casting all your care upon him for he careth for you (I. Peter 5:7).

God cares for us because he has a personal interest in us. We are the work of his hand (Ps. 119:73), and as such he is interested in our prosperity. He watches over the development of our lives; he notes every step of our progress. The one who plants a flower, waters it, cares for it, and watches the development of each tiny shoot and bud cares more for that flower and has a deeper interest in it than has the one who merely stops for a few moments to admire its full blown beauty and to enjoy its fragrance. To the one it is only one plant out of many, to the other it has a special meaning and attraction and worth, because its bloom and fragrance is the result of his labor and patience. It is his plant. So it is with God. He gave us our being; he has nourished and protected us; he has seen us develop day by day. He is interested in us and desires our lives to bloom and send forth a fragrance of trueness and purity all around. May God help us to live such pure and holy lives, that he shall not be disappointed in us on that great day when he comes to make up his jewels (Mal. 3:17).

He cares for us because he created us for his glory and to fill a place in his eternal kingdom. We were created not merely that we might have an existence, but for a purpose for himself.

He wants us to make a success of our lives, not empty for our own advantage, but to fill the place for which he created us for his purpose and glory; and because of this he will endeavor to help us succeed in our life. He cares for us because he loves us. "The Father himself loveth you" (I John 3:1). "I have loved thee with an everlasting love" (Jer. 31:3). "God so loved the world" (John 3:16). He has deep, abiding affection for every one of us; even when we stray away from him into the depths of sin, his heart yearns over us as a mother over her erring child, only that his love is stronger than a mother's (Isa. 49:15-16). He loved us while we were sinners, he sends his servants out to seek the lost, and his spirit to plead with us. Yes, even if we have grieved him and have repelled his spirit over and over again, yet his eye beams with pity, his heart is tender with love, and his arms are outstretched toward us to welcome us to his loving embrace. In the dark and troublous hours, when we stand mourning around the grave of our loved ones, when Yes he did care; at once he arose as did the disciples of old when they cried out in their distress, "Careat thou not that we perish?" Yes, he did care, at once he arose and rebuked the elements and brought the disciples safely to land. His help may sometimes seem delayed, but it will come and just at the time it is most needed.

In our joys and seasons of refreshing he cares for us as well as in the time of trial, of heaviness, and longing and bitterness of heart. He will bring us through when he sees that we are refined and fitted for his purpose. "He careth for you." Let us be glad and rejoice and shout aloud. Or if in our sorrow we can only whisper it, may our hearts still say, "He loves and he cares." I will trust him and be contented.

He also cares for our temporal wants and gives us countless blessings every day. He cares for us spiritually, giving us his grace to help in every time of need, to shield us in temptation, and strengthen us in trials, to make us strong and courageous in danger. He truly cares for us. Let us, therefore, doubt and fear no more, but commit ourselves to him, knowing that he will in no wise fail us.

There's a word of tender beauty
In the sayings of our Lord,
How it stirs the heart to music
Waking gratitude's sweet chord;
For it tells me that "Our Father"
From his throne of royal might,
Bends to note a falling sparrow,
For 'tis precious in his sight.

Though I'm least of all his children,
So unworthy of his love,
Yet, for me there's kind remembrance,
In the Father's heart above;
He will save and keep me,
He will guide me on the way,
For my Savior gently whispers,
"Are ye not much more than they?"

Oh, the wounded hands of Jesus
All the springs of life control,
Is there any ill can harm me,
While his blood is on my soul;
Let me, like the little sparrow,
Trust him where I cannot see,
In the sunshine and the shadow,
Singing "He will care for me."

MAY KLINGENSTEIN.

CORN SHEAVES GATHERED FROM EVERYWHERE

The Nature of Death—Death is the failure of life. When life begins to fail, the living begins to die; when life has utterly failed, it is dead. We often speak of "dead matter," meaning thereby lifeless matter. But properly speaking, nothing is dead that has not died, and consequently that has not lived. Now there are various kinds of life, therefore, various kinds of death. But death always means the failure of some kind of life. It may be used figuratively, as, for instance, "the death of a hope." But we only say that, because the hope is conceived of as having been alive. We read of "A lively hope," i.e., a living hope. When the hope ceases it is said to expire or die.

Soul and Spirit—It is an important saying of the Old Testament, the blood is the soul, or life. When the blood is poured out, an animal becomes inanimate. The breath is the bodily sign of the spirit, the blood, of soul. So the son of man breathed forth his spirit to the Father, but his soul he poured out unto death.

Napoleon's Opinion of Christ.—No one will accuse the first Napoleon of being a pietist or weak-minded. He strode the world in his day like a Colossus, a man of gigantic intellect, however worthless and depraved in moral sense. Conversing one day at St. Helena as his custom was about the great men of antiquity and comparing himself with them, he suddenly turned round to one of his suite, and asked him: "Can you tell me who Jesus Christ was?" The officer owned that he had not yet taken much thought of such things. "Well, then," said Napoleon. "I will tell you." He then compared Christ with himself, and with the heroes of antiquity, and showed how Jesus far surpassed them. "I think I understand somewhat of human nature," he continued. "and I tell you all these were men, and I am a man; but not one is like Him. Jesus Christ was more than man. Alexander, Caesar, Charlemagne, and myself founded great empires but upon what did the creations of our genius depend? Upon force. Jesus alone founded His empire upon love, and to this very day millions would die for Him. Men wonder at the conquests of Alexander, but he is a conquorer who draws men to Himself for their highest good; who unites to himself, incorporates into himself, not a nation, but the whole human race."

From Whence Is Wisdom.—From whence shall wisdom be found, and where is the abode of understanding. Man knoweth not his worth, nor is it to be found in the land of the living.

The deep saith, It is not in me,
And the sea saith, It is not with me.
Refined gold cannot be given in exchange for it,
Nor can silver be weighed out for its purchase.
It cannot be estimated by the ingot of Ophir,
By the precious onyx or the sapphire.
Neither gold nor the diamond can compete with it,
Nor for vessels of pure gold, can it be bartered.
Rock crystal and pearls, cannot be mentioned,
Yea, to draw forth wisdom is more than rubies can do.
The topaz of Cush cannot be compared with it,
Nor with the pure ingot can it be bartered. — Coleman's Translation of Job.

LOVE

S. Roxana Wince

"Love covereth all sins," (or all transgressions) says Solomon; "He hath (clothed, wrapped us in) covered me with the robe of his righteousness,' says Isaiah. "Charity shall cover the multitude of sins," says Peter. "Blessed is he whose sin is coverd," says David, "I, even I, am he that blotteth out thy transgressions for mine own sake, and will not remember thy sins," says the Lord.

We may cover or conceal the faults, foibles and transgressions of our friends and acquaintances from the pitiless babbling world, but we cannot wash their guilt away so they will be pure in the eyes of God. We cannot redeem them from death, nor pay to our Heavenly Father a ransom for them, much as we love them. Only the love of God can so wrap and cover sin that it is put out of sight forever.

But we can be the agents of God in helping others to get "the garment of salvation." We can teach them the truth, we can show them that, having broken God's laws, they are sinners and must have a Savior or perish, because forgiveness and hope and God are found only in and through him, and without him they are "without hope, and without God"—the prayers of willfully disobedient, unrepentant sinners never reaching his ears. That without a Savior they are as helpless as the Titanic's passengers left with no lifeboat at hand when the thought-to-be-unsinkable-ship sheared in twain by the shears of God plunged into the depths of the sea. That even though they believe the truth and contend earnestly for it, they will not be saved unless they obey it, being sorry after a godly sort for the sin, turn from it, die thereto, and being buried as dead men ought to be, rise to walk in the new life of love and service to God.

Happy in being ourselves wrapped and covered with life-saving robe, and rejoicing in "the peace that passeth all understanding," the we are impelled by love to God to do this for him, grateful for the great love that has reached out and rescued us "when there was no eye to pity, and no arm to save."

"Love worketh no ill to his neighbor." It does not defraud him, injure his wife or children, or lead them into paths of the destroyer. But it does more than this; it has more than a negative side. While refraining from doing him wrong in any way and setting a good example before him in an upright and well ordered life, it goes farther than this. It does more than pray. It does more than to help him in temporal things. It does more than to visit him in sickness, and to speak kindly words to him in times of sorrow. It sees him a lost and hopeless sinner, and longs to touch him with the finger of faith and the gospel of power. It seeks his best, his everlasting good. It faces all dangers, all perils, to save him. It perseveres to the five hundredth time. It works, if need be, to the twentieth year. It sacrifices wealth, it exiles itself from home and friends, it counts not its own life dear unto itself. It suffers all things, endures all things, hopeth all things, believeth all things, in its chosen field of labor. It does not flinch at the angry threats of Romanists, or infidel, nor run away when the arrows of savages are held tant in the bow, but goes on telling the story of Jesus, till the threat is silenced, and the arrow falls to the ground.

"Beyond us God sees the other man," and gives us the light of truth and washes and sets us apart that he may use us in reaching that other man." We do not love, as Jesus and Paul bade us love, if we do not use every means in our power to reach him, no matter whether he be Italian, Koord, Figean, or Chinaman, Christ said, "Go teach all nations;" "Freely ye have received, freely give." The loaves and fishes of truth, will feed and save the perishing multitudes, if we but break them. Let us up and be doing—the Lord is coming, scatter the papers, patiently expound the word, live uprightly, give constantly, love the brethren, "pray without ceasing," watching and waiting for the Master.

THE GREAT AND PRECIOUS PROMISES OF THE GOSPEL

Whereby are Given unto us Exceeding Great and Precious Promises; that by These ye might be Partakers of the Divine Nature." (II. Pet. 1:4).

The promises which have been given us are great and precious, inasmuch as they secure all things that pertain to life and godliness. A promise is an assurance on the part of another, of some good for which we are dependent on him. God is the promiser and we are the receivers. Therefore, the promises are God's assurances of what he purposes to do for us. The promises embrace "all things that pertain to life and godliness." They are given to us in and through Jesus Christ. "For all the promises of God in Him are yea, and in Him amen" (II. Cor. 1:20).

What a comfort they are to us in the hour of trial and temptation. "God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able to bear, but will with the temptation make a way to escape," (I. Cor. 10-13). How pleasing it is to hear the voice of God, saying, "My grace shall be sufficient for you" (II Cor. 12-9).

During the time of affliction and persecution, when the whole world seems turned against us, what comfort there is in the words of Christ, "Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid." (John 14:27); also, "These things have I spoken unto you that in me ye might have peace. In the world ye shall have tribulation, but be of good cheer; I have overcome the world," (John 16:33). "Our light affliction which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory," (II. Cor. 4:17).

When we look into the future and contemplate the difficulties which befront us, our faltering steps are renewed by the blessed assurance of God, "I will never leave thee, nor forsak thee," — (Heb. 13:5).

By the promises we are sure of a glorious resurrection. Who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body, according to the working whereby He is able to subdue all things unto himself (Phil. 3:21). The great change which will take place will be from weakness to power, from dishonor to glory, from materiality to spirituality, from corruption to incorruption, and from mortality to immortality. "We know that when he shall appear we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is," (I. John 3:2).

Arrayed in glorious grace,
Shall these vile bodies shine;
And every shape and every face
Be heavenly and divine.

In speaking of the wicked Matt. 25:46 says, "These shall go away into everlasting punishment, but the righteous into life eternal." "Then we which are alive and remain, shall be caught up to meet the Lord in the air, and so shall we ever be with the Lord" (I. Thess. 4-17). What blessed promises are these! What a glorious revelation was that of St. John the Divine: "Therefore are they before the throne of God, and serve him day and night in his temple, and he that sitteth on the throne shall dwell among them. They shall hunger no more, neither thirst any more; neither shall the sun light on them, nor any heat. For the lamb which is in the midst of the throne shall feed them, and shall lead them unto living fountains of water, and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes" (Rev. 7:15-16-17).

The last part of the text reads, "That by these ye might be partakers of the divine nature" (II. Pet. 1:4). This means that we might be restored to the image of God, and partake of his moral and divine nature, so as to be like him.

I pray, dear brothers and sisters that we may all have such faith in the promises of God, that when we approach life's closing hour and think of death, we will be able to pray as David did, "Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me" (Ps. 23:4).

Your sister in the One Blessed Hope,

VIOLA GAZELEY.

INDIANA CONFERENCE REPORT.

The annual June meeting at Old Antioch convened June 1 to 9, 1912, being presided over by the president, Bro. F. M. McCrory.

Ministers present: Bro. and Sister D. C. Robinson, of Salem, Ohio; and Bro. D. E. Van Vactor, of Argos, Ind., who gave us splendid and helpful discourses. There was a general disappointment in not having the privilege of listening to Bros. Wagoner and Williams, who were unable to attend and fill their places on the program.

Four churches, viz.: Argos, Plymouth, South Bend, and Rensselaer answered to roll call and gave reports.

Though the attendance was not as large as usual this year, there seemed to be an increased interest shown. Many of the familiar faces that we are accustomed to see at Old Antioch were missing, but many new ones filled their places. It was a pleasure to welcome several brothers and sisters from Ohio, a sister and little son from Illinois, and a brother from Iowa, as our guests.

A kindly Christian spirit and wide awake interest was manifested throughout the meeting which was edifying. This was especially noticeable in the social and Berean meetings.

Financial report from time of October conference:

Amount in treasury	$121.43
Amount paid out during Annual Conference held at Rensselaer, Oct., 1911, and June Conference, 1912:
Bible School at Plymouth	$176.90
Amount paid in	88.29
Balance on hand	$312.82

FLORA HARRIS, Sec.

THE CONSTITUTION

Of the Organization of Isolated Members of the Church of God of the Abrahamic Faith in the United States and Canada.

Article I.

This organization shall be called the Organization of the Isolated members of the Church of God of the Abrahamic Faith in the United States and Canada.

Article II.

The membership shall be composed of the isolated members of the one faith, others of the faith not barred, who wish to work with them.

Article III.

The officers shall consist of a president; vice-president, secretary, assistant secretary, and treasurer.

Article 4.

It shall be the duty of the president to preside at all the meetings, issue all orders on the treasurer, and take general oversight of the work.

Article V.

The vice president shall assume the duties of the president in her absence or inability to act.

Article VI.

It shall be the duty of the secretary to carry on all necessary correspondence. Record in a book provided for that purpose, the names of all members and their addresses. Receive all subscriptions to the working fund, and turn same when collected, over to the treasurer. Sign all orders with the president, and publish a report of the work being done every quarter.

Article VII.

The assistant secretary shall assume the duties of the secretary upon her inability to act.

Article VIII.

It shall be the duty of the treasurer to receive all money from the secretary, receipting for same. The treasurer shall pay no money for the work in hand. The election signed by the secretary.

Article IX.

The officers shall be permanent and their positions can become vacant only by death, resignation, or removal for cause.

Article X.

The president, secretary and treasurer shall constitute a board of directors, who shall send out evangelistiats, who according to their judgment are the best fitted for the work in hand. The election shall be made with a view to as little expense as possible, when it can be done without detriment to the cause.

Article XI.

The evangelists are to receive not less than $65.00 nor more than $75.00 and expenses per month.

Article XII.

Each member shall be required to send 25c with their membership as a fee which shall be sent every year, the same to be used as an expense fund to provide stationary, stamps and books for the officers, and any other expense incurred by them.

Article XIII.

All money collected by the evangelist shall be accounted for to the secretary and treasurer.

Article XIV.

The evangelist shall report once a month to the president.

Article XV.

While we believe that God's way of giving to support his cause is the tenth, it will be left to the members to give as the Lord has prospered them.

Article XVI.

Five members shall constitute a quorum, who shall have power to transact any business of the organization.

Article XVII.

This constitution can be amended by a two-thirds vote of members present.

MINUTES

The undersigned members of the church of God of the Abrahamic Faith met at Blair, Nebraska, May 27, 1912, and effected the organization known as the Organization of the Isolated Members of the Church of God of the Abrahamic Faith of the United States and Canada.

Bro. Almus Adams, of Omaha, Neb., stated the object of the meeting and moved that Bro. M. D. Newell be elected temporary chairman. The motion was seconded and carried.

The chairman appointed Sister Carrie Free temporary secretary. Motion was made and seconded to make the temporary organization a permanent organization. Motion carried.

It was moved and seconded that the president appoint a committee to draft a constitution, and the following committee was appointed: Bro. Almus Adams, of Omaha, and Sister Carrie Free. It was moved and seconded that the constitution be read and considered as a whole. Motion carried.

It was moved and seconded that the constitution be adopted as read. Motion carried.

The following permanent officers were elected: President, Carrie Free, Blair, Neb.; vice president, Helen Eberle, Kansas City, Kansas; secretary, Leota B. Hanson, 3609 McDonald Ave., St. Louis, Mo.; treasurer, Mrs. E. A. Pendarvis, Enid, Okla.

Moved and seconded that we adjourn. Motion carried.

Almus Adams
M. D. Newell
Sue Newell
John Compton
Nancy Compton
Carrie Free

Carrie Free, Sec.

CONFERENCE NOTICE

The Nebraska State Conference will be held from August 17 to 25 inclusive. This date has been selected so that all those engaged in school work may attend conveniently. The place has not been decided upon, but will be published later, with other particulars.

ALTA KING, Secretary.

BEREAN DEPARTMENT

Steadfastness

Dear Bereans:

While we are laboring through life's journey we find many things that are hard to bear, and yet we do not give enough time to the study of God.

Therefore, my brethren, be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord (I. Cor. 15:58.)

If we believers in Christ have something worth accepting is it not worthy being steadfast for? If ye think not it is high time we are finding it out. If we believe this strongly enough to have full confidence of faith we shall all be greatly helped in steadfastness of the same (Col. 2:5).

Although knowing our labors are not in vain, but shall be more profitable to us in the eternal future.

LETTIE LONG,
Rushville, Ill.

Dear Bereans:

Our Savior says: "If any man serve me, let him follow me" (John 12:26). "If any man serve me, him will my Father honor."

There is a depth of meaning in this short sentence, which is not seen at first sight. It distinguishes the service, which Christ demands and which is acceptable to him.

"If any man will come after me, let him deny himself and take up his cross and follow me" (Matt. 16:24). This means active service, cross bearing service, we should not think this service hard, for it is coupled with the promise: "My grace is sufficient for thee" (II. Cor. 12:9). It is a mistake to think any service will take the place of obedience.

"Even Christ himself, although a Son, yet learned he obedience by the things which he suffered. And being made perfect he became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him (Heb. 5:8-9).

Oh, blessed Son of God, we adore thee for thy greatness of power, and for thy greatness of humility.

May each one of us strive to be doers of the word and at last be numbered with the worthy ones.

Yours in Christian Love,
MITTIE CHANDLER
Burbank, Okla.

Dear Bereans:

If we have no opportunity to do great things we can "let our light so shine before men, that they may see our good works and glorify our Father which is in heaven" (Matt. 5:16).

If we let the love of Christ reign in our hearts we will show our fruits and good works of love, peace, and kindness to all those with whom we come in contact.

We can be patient toward all men and abstain from all appearance of evil. "Flee also youthful lusts; but follow righteousness, faith, charity, peace, with them that call on the Lord out of a pure heart" (II. Tim. 2:22).

And we can learn the lesson that Paul gave when he said, "I have learned in whatsoever state I am, therewith to be content" (Phil. 4:11). "But Godliness with contentment is great gain. For we brought nothing into this world, and it is certain we can carry nothing out. And having food and raiment let us be therewith content. (I. Tim. 6: 6-8).

"Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted fro. the world (James 1:27).

"Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter: fear God, and keep His commandments, for this is the whole duty of man" (Eccles. 12:13).

Don't waste your time in longing
For bright impossible things;
Don't sit supinely yearning
For the swiftness of angel wings;
Don't spurn to be a rushlight
Because you are not a star;
But brighten some bit of darkness
By shining just where you are.

There is need of the tiniest candle,
As well as the garish sun,
The humblest deed is ennobled
When it is worthily done,
You may never be called to brighten
The darkened regions afar,
So fill for the day your mission
By shining just where you are.

Your Sister in the Faith,
RUTH A. VAN ANTWERP,
Vermont, Ill.

When a man has a really musical instrument it will be called for. He is not given to perform on it himself.

THE SABBATH QUESTION

Chas. A. Goss

The Sabbath is first mentioned in Gen. 2:2-3, as follows: "And on the seventh day God ended his work which he had made, and he rested on the seventh day from all his work which he had made. And God blessed the seventh day, and sanctified it, because that in it he had rested (or ceased) from all his work which God created and made."

We do not find that God gave Adam or any of his posterity any specific commandment to rest from their labors every seventh day as he himself had done, and we can only speculate and guess in regard to what the few faithful ones did before the law was given to Israel by Moses, their mediator.

Those who worshipped God may have kept the Sabbath, but by what observance we know not, as we have no record from the earliest period. The book of Genesis gives us only a brief sketch of the history of that age.

In the seventh chapter of Genesis, when instructing Noah concerning the loading of the ark, we read that God marked off or set apart a week of seven (7) days before the flood should come upon the earth, saying, "For yet seven days and I will cause it to rain upon the earth forty days and forty nights." "And it came to pass after seven days (margin reads on the seventh) that the waters of the flood were upon the earth." This may have been a type of the day of the Lord—1000 years—the seventh thousand years in which the world will be judged in righteousness by the Lord and his saints (II. Peter 3:8; Rev. 20:2-6).

And Noah sent forth the raven and the dove thrice at intervals of seven days. These things do not prove that a Sabbath law like that given to Israel was then in force, but they show that God has always ruled this world and its affairs on the weekly basis, or in other words, by the fundimental rule of sevens. We cannot here take up that great subject—the golden number seven—which runs through the whole Scriptures, but will confine our attention to the Sabbath question for what and to whom given.

In Ex. 16:22-23, which refers to a time before the law was given to Moses on Mount Sinai, we find that Israel was given a double supply of manna on the sixth day and were instructed by God through Moses to prepare it and lay it by for food for the seventh day. "See, for that the Lord hath given you the Sabbath, therefore he giveth you on the sixth day the bread of two days, abide ye every man in his place, let no man go out of his place on the seventh day" (Ex. 16:29). Who did he command? It says he commanded Israel—none other people are required to obey.

In Exodus 20 we find the record of what is called the "Ten Commandments." In it we read the first command to Israel to observe the Sabbath or seventh day as a rest day from all forms of labor. "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy. Six days shalt thou labor and do all thy work. But the seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God, in it thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, thy man servant, nor thy maid servant, nor thy cattle, nor thy stranger that is within thy gates. For in six days the Lord made heaven and earth, the sea, and all that in them is, and rested on the seventh day, wherefore the Lord blessed the Sabbath day, and hallowed it. And the Lord said unto Moses, Thus thou shalt say unto the children of Israel, Ye have seen that I have talked with you from heaven.

Should not this settle the question of who God gave the commandments to, and therefore who were under obligation to obey them?

"And the Lord spoke unto Moses, saying, speak thou also unto the children of Israel, Verily my Sabbaths ye shall keep: for it is a sign between me and you throughout your generations, that ye may know that I am the Lord that doth sanctify you." Read Ex. 31:13-17, and Ex. 35:1-3 inclusive.

By these passages we see a death penalty positively threatened for any failure to keep the command, for even so much as the kindling of a fire on the Sabbath day. This law is not enforced since Israel ceased to be a people and nation, and God does not inflict the penalty, plainly showing that the law has been annuled.

We have been considering the seventh day sabbath so far, but now let us consider some other of the Sabbaths which were just as binding as the seventh day was—on Israel only.

In Lev. 25: 1to 11 we read concerning a Sabbath year every seventh year. "The seventh year shall be a Sabbath unto the land, thou shalt not sow the field, nor prune the vineyard. And thou shalt number seven sabbaths of years unto thee, seven times seven years, and the space of the seven sabbaths of years shall be unto thee forty and nine years. Then thou shalt cause the trumpet of the jubilee to sound."

Again, concerning the meaning and purpose of God's institution of the Sabbath, we read in Deut. 5:15. "And remember that thou was a servant in the land of Egypt and that the land thy God brought thee out thence through a mighty hand and by a stretched out arm, therefore the Lord thy God commanded thee to keep the Sabbath day."

In Heb. 3:5, we read that Moses was faithful in all his house, "as a servant, for a testimony of those things which were to be spoken after." In this faithfulness he was a type of Christ, for he interceded for his people when God would have destroyed them for their idolitry. (Ex. 32:7).

Paul's comment brings two houses into view, a fleshly or natural house with a typical leader or head, also a spiritual house with an anti-typical leader or head. Of the first, Moses, we read, "The Lord your God will raise up unto thee a prophet from the midst of thee, of thy brethren, like unto me, unto him ye shall hearken."

Now concerning Moses, Paul wrote to the Corintheans, "Moreover, brethren, I would not that ye should be ignorant how that all our fathers were under the cloud, and all passed through the sea, and were all baptized unto Moses in the cloud and in the sea, and did all eat the same spiritual meat, and did all drink the same spiritual drink, for they all drank of that spiritual rock that went with them, and that rock was Christ" symbolically or in type, that is to say, represented Christ just as the broken bread "is his body" to us, and the wine is his blood which was shed for us.

Now Paul says these things happened unto them for examples (margin types) and they are written for our admonition, upon whom the ends of the world (age) are come (I. Cor. 10). After speaking of Moses and his house, that is Israel, the apostle Paul writes of the church or spiritual Israel, thus: "But Christ as a son over his own house, whose house are we, if we hold fast the confidence and the rejoicing of the hope firm unto the end." (Heb. 3:6).

And again in the next chapter (Heb. 4) he says: "Seeing then that we have a great high priest that is passed into the heavens, Jesus, the Son of God, let us hold fast our profession."

In the Collossians he wrote; "And ye are complete in Him, which is the head of all principality and power." In whom also ye are circumcised with the circumcision made without hands, in putting off the body of the sins of the flesh by the circumcision of Christ. Buried with him in baptism, wherein also ye are risen with him through the faith of the operation of God, who hath raised him from the dead. Blotting out the hand writing of ordinances that was against us, which was contrary to us, and took it out of the way, nailing it to the cross. Let no man therefore (because it is blotted out) judge you in meat, or in drink or in respect of an holy day, or of the new moon, or of the sabbath days, which are a shadow of things to come, but the body is of Christ (Gal. 2:11-16; 3: 21-29). Sabbath keeping a part of the law, which was nailed to the cross, was a shadow of which we now have the substance the reality in Christ. The law was a school master, a teacher, to bring Israel to Christ. Why retain it after that to which it served to point the way has been received?

In Gal 4 Paul shows that after having come to the knowledge of Christ, we are or should be, no longer under tutors (schoolmasters) and governors to which he had before likened the law, and they are likened to children who are under its teachings, for God sent forth his son, made under the law to redeem them that were under the law that we might receive the adoption of sons. And because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the spirit of his son into your hearts, crying, Abba, Father. Wherefore thou (believer) art no more a servant (as under the law) but a son, and if a son, then an heir of God through Christ. But after ye have known God, or rather are known of God, how turn ye again to the weak and beggarly elements whereunto ye desire again to be in bondage (as servants were bond slaves). What was the bondage he refers to, if not the observances of the mosaic law and customs of the Jews? See what follows:

"Ye observe days, and months, (or moons) and times, and years. I am afraid of you, lest I have bestowed upon you labor in vain. Tell me, ye that desire to be under the law, do ye not hear the law?"

"For all the law is fulfilled in one word, even in this, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." (Gal. V).

Note that if "all the law" is fulfilled in this command then the purpose for which the law was given was, or is accomplished by carrying out its provisions. And Jesus gave but two commandments prominence: Thou shalt love the Lord thy God," and "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thy self"—for "on them," said he, "hang all the law and the Prophets" The words "all the law," clearly includes all observances commanded in the law, otherwise we would make the formal rites and ceremonies more important than the spirit of the law. But Christ said the observance of the letter of the law "killeth," but the spirit of the law made alive.

Now in contrast with the liberty of sons and daughters which belongs to the true believers in Christ, we find the house of Israel, called servants; and Moses himself called a servant. (Heb. 3:5), and the law is called "a yoke of bondage." Now Jesus says: "The servant abideth not in the house forever, but the Son abideth ever. If the son therefore shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed," (John 8:35-36).

This shows that the "servant" period of Israel was a temporary condition, whereas the sonship, though it be by adoption through faith, is forever—the son "abideth ever, and those in his name also, for Jesus said that "of all which the father hath given me I shall lose nothing, but shall raise it up again at the last day," (John 6: 39).

We have seen that the observance of the Sabbath or seventh day as a day of rest, was given only to the people of Israel—and that two reasons were given: first, to commemorate the creation of the world by God, thereby calling forth the worship due unto him as the great creator of heaven and earth and preserver of all; the second reason is given in Ex. 31:13-17. It was to be a sign between God and Israel for all generations—also as in Deut: 5:15 they were to remember that they had been servants in Egypt, and that the Lord had brought them out with a mighty hand—"therefore the Lord their God commandeth thee to keep my sabbaths."

But some may say: "If commanded to Israel for "all generations" why do you say it is not now in force? How is it possible that Paul refers to this part of the law of Moses as being "nailed to the cross?" Are we mistaken? We do not say it is abolished to them who are under the law." The Jew is under the same obligation to keep the whole law as he was 2000 years, ago unless released from that "yoke of bondage," as Paul was, through faith in Christ and baptism into him, walking by faith—And the law is not of faith (Gal. 3:12).

The Apostle Paul tells the brethren that "he is our peace (and that includes the Jew, Paul, and the Gentile Ephesians), who hath made both one, and hath broken down the middle wall of partition between us. How has Christ made the Jew and the Gentile ONE? He answers: "Having abolished in his flesh the enmity, even the law of Commandments contained in ordinances, for to make in himself of twain, ONE NEW MAN" (Eph. 2:14).

Did not the Law of Moses in its entirety, both by positive commands and by its rites and ceremonies, festivals, feasts and fasts of various kinds, seperate Jews from Gentiles like a Chinese wall, excluding them from mixing in any of the affairs of life with each other? See Acts 10:28. But under the Gospel all this is changed. As Paul wrote II. Cor. 5: "If any man (not Jews only) be in Christ, he is a new creature, old things (customs) are passed away, behold all things are become new." How clear this becomes when we read what he had written them in his former epistle (I Cor. 12:13).

He had said: "For by one spirit we are all baptised into one body whether we be Jews or Gentiles, whether we be bond or free." He adds in Gal. 3:27-29: "For as many of you as have been baptised into Christ have put on Christ. There is neither Jew nor Greek, neither bond nor free, neither male or female: for ye are all ONE in Christ Jesus. And if ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise."

Now Abraham was not under the mosaic law, for it was not given and none of the Scriptures were written until 430 years after the Gospel promise to him.

This Gospel of grace was a hard thing for Jews to adapt themselves too, so that even the apostles were slow to apprehend the new conditions. Therefore Peter had to be corrected in some matters concerning the freedom from the law of those under gospel. In Gal. 2:11 we read: "But when Peter was come to Antioch, I (Paul) withstood him to the face, because he was to be blamed. For before that certain (persons) came from James, Peter did eat with the Gentiles, but when they were come, he withdrew and seperated himself, fearing them which were of the circumcision.

And the other Jews dissembled likewise with him; insomuch that Barnabas also was carried away with their dissemulation. But when I saw that they walked not uprightly according to the truth of the gospel, I said unto Peter before them all, if thou (Peter) being a Jew, livest after the manner of the Gentiles, and NOT as do the Jews. WHY compellest thou the Gentiles to live as do the Jews? We who are Jews by nature, and not sinners as the Gentiles, knowing that a man is not justified by the works of the law, but by the faith of Jesus Christ, that we might be justified by the faith of Christ, and not by the works of the law; for by the works of the law shall no flesh be justified."

We are sometimes told by Sabbatarians that keeping the Sabbath is the test of the age—yet it is not the test given by Jesus.

He that believeth (the gospel of the kingdom) and is baptised shall be saved (Mark. 16:15), but nothing about keeping the Sabbath.

Now read what he said in Mark 12:13; Matt 22:40; Acts 20:7; I Cor. 16:1-2. These passages clearly show how comparitively unimportant the Sabbath was, in not being a saving ordinance, and that the first day of the week was already becoming the day of meeting together for Christians shortly after the gospel message was sent to the world.

Did not Jesus keep the Sabbath? We are asked. Answer: Yes, surely he kept the whole law and therefore the Sabbath as well as other parts of it. In being

THE NATURE OF MAN

By S. T. Blessing

Is He a Dual Being, Composed Body and Soul, each Being a Separate Entity; the Soul Continuing to Live When the Body is Dead? Or Is He a Unitarian Ceases to Exist In a Conscious State When Death Overtakes Him?

Where the Scriptures are silent, science and philosophy may write learned dissertations and deliver proofs that in their opinions are demonstrations, but to those who believe that the Bible is the Word of God, one "Thus saith the Lord" is worth more, is stronger proof, than volumes of lore, evolved by the thinking of the flesh, by uninspired man, or "Wizards that peep and mutter." "To the law and to testimony; If they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them" (Isa. 8:19, 20).

Since the days of Plato, who learned it of the Egyptians, the doctrine of the inherent immortality of the soul has been taught by philosophers of his school. This doctrine was introduced into the church by hearers being won to Christianity who were not willing to give up their former teachings, but engrafted their dogma of inherent immortality on to the Bible doctrine of eternal life, until it gardually became infused into the Christian creed. Designing leaders saw in it an opportunity to awe the laity and promote their own self aggrandizement. The clergy held the people in submission by teaching unending torment, unless sins were atoned for through their mediation, which had to be purchased with a price.

When the Catholics gained the supremacy, they, in their councils and cannons, set their seal on the doctrine as truth, and strictly inhibited all from teaching otherwise; declaring such teachers heretics, and to be punished as such (Lantern Council, A. D. 1513; Council of Trent, A. D. 1545-62; Pope Clement V, Pope Leo X), one item of which reads: "The reasonable soul is immortal, and we strictly inhibit all from dogmatizing otherwise, and we decree that all who adhere to the erroneous assertions shall be shunned as heretics."

The Reformation failed to purge the church from this doctrine, although some of the reformers saw

THE BIBLE; ITS PRINCIPLES AND TEXTS

As indicated by the title this book is divided into three sections. The first consists of a remarkable dissertation on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "principles" in formulated propositions, and the third expounds in a clear, impressive and homelitic manner particular "Texts." The knotty and perplexing texts of the Bible are united and solved satisfactorily to the most fastidious and critical. More than one hundred and fifteen subjects of intense interest to every Bible student are forcibly discussed. Both simple and scholarly—the child is fascinated and taught; the scholar is entertained and instructed. Bible lovers, here is a feast for you. Throw open the door of your home; let the Bible—its Principles and its Texts come in and bless you and your family. 309 pages, 5x7 1-2 inches, durably and handsomely bound in whole cloth, with title embossed on back in gold. One copy, $1.10, two copies or more $1.00 each. R. G. Huggins, 10623 Lee Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

PROOFREADER

Years of experience in proofreading; now completing a technical course in the art. MSS prepared for the printer and proofs read. Book work a specialty. Limited amount of work by mail accepted at popular prices.

ROBT. G. HUGGINS,
10623 Lee Avenue,
Cleveland, Ohio

The truth gives a man the hope of seeing with his own eyes the work of God, at last triumphant in the earth whether he live or die; and of himself sharing the blessedness for ages covenanted for all the earth through Abraham and his seed.

Forgetful hearers allow themselves to be diverted by the ephemeral things of life from the important business of making themselves familiar with God's word by reading. They are without excuse.

Real faith is a treasure, a companion of delight, a spring of living water, a fountain of purity.

The man who possesses faith unfeigned will do what others will not do: but a man of sham faith will not sacrifice anything for the sake of it.

Ladies! Save Money and Keep in Style by Reading McCall's Magazine and Using McCall Patterns

McCall's Magazine will help you dress stylishly at a moderate expense by keeping you posted on the latest fashions in clothes and hats. 50 New Fashion Designs in each issue. Also valuable information on all home and personal matters. Only 50c a year, including a free pattern. Subscribe today or send for free sample copy.

McCall Patterns will enable you to make in your own home, with your own hands, clothing for yourself and children which will be perfect in style and fit. Price—none higher than 15 cents. Send for free Pattern Catalogue.

We Will Give You Fine Premiums for getting subscriptions among your friends. Send for free Premium Catalogue and Cash Prize Offer.

THE McCALL COMPANY, 239 to 249 West 37th St., NEW YORK

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

We, whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones.

This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of their paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

Miss S. Sollburg ..... .75
T. T. Blessing $1.00

Read This Special Subscription Offer

By a special arrangement just made with THE FARM JOURNAL, a sixty-four page magazine, we are able to make for a limited time a very generous combination subscription offer. The Farm Journal is one of the best farm and home magazines published in the country, a large, interesting journal which is known the country over. The Farm Journal also publishes the booklets of "The Money Making Secrets" series, including "Poultry Secrets," "Horse Secrets," "Corn Secrets," "The Million Egg Farm," "The Butter Book" and "Duck Dollars." The subscription price of the "Farm Journal" is $1.00 for five years, or $1.00 for 4 years and any one of the booklets of "The Money Making Series."

Now for the Special Offer

Regular Price of Restitution 1 year . . .	$1.50
Regular Price of Farm Journal 5 years . .	1.00
(Or Farm Journal four years and one booklet)
	2.50

We Will Send Both the Above to You for the Special Price of

$1.50

Remember the Restitution for 1 year, The Farm Journal for 5 years all for the price of $1.50

SEND IN YOUR SUBSCRIPTION TODAY

Books and Tracts
By W. H. WILSON

A BIBLE STUDY OF HADES.....15c each, or 5 for 50c.
(As compared with our modern ideas).
A critical study of Hell, showing the difference in the word in the past and in the present time.

STUDENTS TEXT BOOK 50c
How to study the Bible and rightly understand God's Word. Cloth bound, 200 Pages.

PINE WOODS BIBLE CLASS.....$1.25
Studies carried on between a class and its teacher. Cloth bound, 480 Pages.

CUNNINGLY DEVISED FABLES, 28 Pages.....10c

WHERE WILL YOU SPEND ETERNITY, 4 Pages, ... 25c per hundred

ARE YOU IN NEED OF MONEY, 4 Pages, 25c per hundred

WILL IT PAY TO BECOME A CHRISTIAN?.....25c
By Jas. W. Wilson. A neat Cloth book of 96 Pages which every one should read.

Bro. Wilson's Latest Book
Is Ready for Distribution
THE DESTINY OF RUSSIA AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES
96 Pages, Bound in Cloth, 25c.

W. H. WILSON, 625 North Willow Ave.

WANTED!
Subscription Solicitors

We will pay an actual salary to men and women in all parts of the country, to act as agents for The Restitution. This salary will be based on your ability to take subscriptions, take care of renewels, and make collections, and will be paid weekly. You can devote all or part of your time, and can make a special offer to prospective subscribers, which we will tell you about if you are interested. We will have some announcements to make in the near future that will also help you.

If you want to work, sit down NOW and write for full information.

B. W. NUTT, Manager.

"There is a great difference between the man who is sure of what he knows an dthe one who thinks he knows it all. The one has the beginning of knowledge. The other will never truly know anything"

"Courage is the power of going forward in spit of difficulties to reach a chosen and worthy object."

"No truth is absolutely new; what is true is eternal; but old truth is new to the man who has just now found it out."

"You may depend upon it that he is a good man whose intimate friends are all good."

60 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents.

Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the

Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co.
WHOLESALE OPTICIANS

We make a specialty of High Grade Prescription Work, and carry a full line of all kinds of Optical goods. All orders filled same day as received.

"S. K. N." SERVICE

Means prompt returns, careful work, moderate prices.
Goods shipped to all parts of the country.

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co. 318 SCHOFIELD BUILDING CLEVELAND, OHIO

SPECIAL OFFER!

IN ORDER to increase the circulation of The Restitution, the following special offer is made:

One new subscriber for 1 year, choice of:

W. H. Wilson's "Student's Text Book," regular price.....50c
Or 5 Copies of "Cunningly Devised Fables," reg. price 50c
Or 5 Copies of "Bible Study of Hades," reg. price 50c

For Two New Subscribers

One Copy "Pine Woods Bible Class," 480 pages, reg. price, $1.25
Or "The Bible, Its Principles and Texts," 309 pages, reg., $1.25
Or One Hundred of Bro. Joblin's Tracts, regular price $1.00

Here is a chance to get some of the books you all should own. By making special arrangements with the authors we are able to offer them to you without the payment of a cent on your part, just a few minutes effort. We cannot afford to continue this offer long, so take advantage of it at once, get some new subscribers today.

THE RESTITUTION, 803 Parkwood Drive

"A LETTER TO A FRIEND"

This tract needs no introduction further than to say that it is one of the most convincing Gospel sermons ever written. Originally written as a letter to a friend by Sister C. C. Woodruff it was published and has sold extensively in tract form. In its present edition it is a 32 page tract, the price is

10c each; 12 for $1.00

There is no better way of spreading the Gospel than handing out one of these tracts wherever you have the opportunity.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

"Future Probation,
is that Awaiting any of the Unrighteous?"

Here is a work by Wm. Glenn Mencrieff that every one should read. It is one of the best things on the subject ever written and will appeal to every student of the word. It is a book of 150 pages, made to sell at 25c. We have a limited number left which we will sell at the special price of

10c each; 12 for $1.00

Send for some at once.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

Oregon Bible College

The Restitution
IS THE OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA.

The Restitution.

Founded in A. D. 1852

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:16, 17) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:14, 18, 27) at the return of Christ (Lk. 19:12-18), who will be King of Kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-53); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17), and belief in, the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Lk. 13:3), and obedience by Baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation of God, and the name of Jesus Christ." (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31).

ROBT. G. HUGGINS, Editor.

—Terms of— Subscription
ONE YEAR, $1.50;
SIX MONTHS 75 CTS. IN ADVANCE

VOL. 60 CLEVELAND, OHIO, JUNE 25, 1912 No. 73

THE MESSAGE

'Twas the message of the angel
To the little band of men,
While they still stood gazing upward,
"He is coming back again;
'This same Jesus which is taken
Up to Heaven (would have you know)
He shall so come in like manner
As ye all have seen him go."

'Twas the grand Apostle's message
To the Gentile and the Jew,
"He shall send again Christ Jesus
Which before, was preached to you,
Whom the heavens must receive
Until the restitution time,
Which our God spake thro' His Prophets,"
Unto every land, and clime.

'Twas the message of the prophet,
Given by Divine Command,
Hear the royal proclamation,
"Your God will come with strong hand;
Behold, His reward is with Him;"
Pray what need to tell us more;
If he then rewards His servants,
'Twill be then; and not before.

'Twas the message of our Savior,
And it reaches even me;
"I come quickly to reward thee
Even as thy work shall be."
And the burden of the message
To all men is surely clear,
That the Saints shall be rewarded
When "Our shepherd shall appear."

After the grand "restitution,"
"There will be no more complaints,
Earth made new shall bloom like Eden,
Be the home of all the Saints;
'Tis the burden of the message,
Long before, and since his birth,
(Not that we shall go to Heaven)
But "His coming back to earth."
—Selected by Mrs. Aledn Overholser.

BAPTISM; OR THE SEAL OF THE NEW COVENANT

F. M. Howell

What is it? and why is it essential to salvation?

After Jesus had risen from the dead, he appeared to his eleven disciples at an appointed place in Galilee, and told them to go into all the world, and teach all nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever he had commanded them (Matt. 28:19,20). He said, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned" (Mark 16: 15, 16).

Before we can understand the reason for our Lord's commission, with the promise of eternal life to those who believed and obeyed, and condemnation to those who believed not, we must go back to the cause that made such a commission necessary.

When God created Adam and Eve and put them in the garden of Eden, he gave them a law to obey, and warned them that if they disobeyed him the result would be death—a return to the dust of the earth from whence they had been taken. The serpent beguiled Eve and caused her to disbelieve God, and the result was she and Adam both disobeyed him, so they and all their descendants are doomed to return to dust; and as a result of their sin, the earth was put under a curse.

God has said by his prophets that he created the earth not in vain, he formed it to be inhabited (Isa. 45:18), and has given it to the children of men (Psa. 115:16), and the wicked shall be cut off, but the righteous shall inherit the land and dwell therein forever (Psa. 37:28-29). So, in the fulfillment of this divine plan, God promised that the seed of the woman should bruise the serpent's head—that is, in due time the offspring of the woman shall overthrow the power of satan, and redeem man from death, and the earth from the curse, so that God's purpose will prevail, and the earth will become as Eden, and the garden of the Lord (Isa. 51:3), and there will be no more curse (Rev. 22:3).

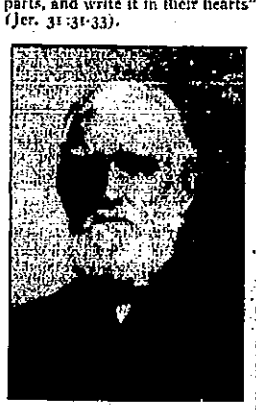
As a means to this end, in due time, God called Abram to be the father of a peculiar people, a called out people, to whom he could commit his oracles (Rom. 3:2) which were essential to the preparation of a righteous people who were to be benefited by the end sought. God then made known to Abraham his purpose, and he made a covenant with him by which he promised to make him the father of many nations, and to give him and his seed the land of Canaan for an everlasting possession, and in him and his seed to bless all nations of the world (Gen. 17:2-14). Now this covenant between God and man was practically a Testament or Will by which God promised man an eternal inheritance on the earth conditioned on faith, repentance, and obedience on the part of man.

A covenant to be binding, requires a confirmation or seal, and of this covenant of promise by which Abraham and his seed became heirs of the world (Rom. 4:13), Paul says, "Wherein God, willing more abundantly to show unto the heirs of promise the immutability of his counsel, confirmed it by an oath" (Heb. 6:17). After God had confirmed or sealed his covenant by an oath, he required Abraham, and all who are to enjoy the blessings of his promises, to confirm or seal the covenant on their part by the sign of circumcision as a token of the covenant between them and God (Gen. 17:11; Rom. 4:11).

The kingdom of Israel was the initiatory of the kingdom of heaven, which will finally be established on the earth, and the various experiences of the Israelites in their journey from Egypt to Canaan, and their various religious rites, were figures or symbols of what is required in the Christian's journey through life, and the change that is essential before he can inherit the kingdom of heaven (Heb. 8:5; 9:24). The Israelitish people as a nation were only shadows or types of the coming kingdom of spiritual Israel, which will consist of Abraham's spiritual seed according to promise. While in God's covenant to Abraham and his seed the promise for a possession of Canaan of Canaan, the covenant he made with Israel on Mount Sinai was was for a possession of Canaan only so long as they obeyed his voice. (Lev. 26). Remember that the right of the Israelites to possess the land of Canaan and enjoy the fruits of other men's labor, was a gift of God on conditions that they accept the terms of that covenant and seal it by the sign of circumcision, so that they would ever have a reminder of that covenant in their flesh (Gen. 17:13) to cause them to remember that while they enjoyed these blessings of plenty they were under obligations to God to keep his statutes and his commandments.

The sealing of this covenant is of such vital importance that God said that any uncircumcised manchild, whether born in the house of Israel, or bought with money from strangers, should be cut off from his people, because he had broken his covenant. As I have stated, God had chosen Israel as a peculiar people to whom he could commit his oracles, and as a medium between himself and the world, through whom he could prepare the world for the next step in the great plan of redemption.

But as the time was approaching when the house of Israel would have served its present mission, and the great promised Messiah would come and establish a different era on the earth, God by his prophet Jeremiah said, Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel, and with the house of Judah. Not according to the covenant I made with their fathers in the day that I took them by the hand to bring them out of the land of Egypt; which covenant they broke; but this shall be the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel: After these days, saith the Lord, I will put my law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts" (Jer. 31:31-33).



LIFE AND LABORS OF ELDER J. S. HATCH

J. E. Hatch

Jeremiah Stimpson Hatch was born February 28, 1823, in Ripley Township, Huron County, Ohio, near New Haven. He was a son of Jeremy and Mary (Sophia (Foster) Hatch, who were married in New York state and came to Ohio when the county was new. His father died in a well from "damps" in 1822, seven months before his birth. His mother married A. Servis in 1824, and died in 1839. She was born in 1799. About 1840 Elder Hatch moved with his parents to Porter County, Ind. He attended summer school and three months winter school from the age of 6 to 14, and in 1840 started out to shift for himself. He went to Valparaiso and bound himself out for three years to learn the blacksmithing trade.

While serving his apprenticeship he married Sarah Adams, July 3, 1842. To this union were born five children, only one of whom, the first born, Levi S. Hatch, is living, and resides in Deepwater, Texas. This wife dying in 1853, he later married Dursilla Eacken, at Crawfordsville, Ind., where he then resided. She lived but twenty-one months after marriage, leaving but one child, who died in 1897.

In July, 1855, he was again married, the bride being Martha McCullough. To this union were born two children, Eva and Carroll E., the former dying in infancy, the latter living in Justin, Cal. This wife died in 1860.

Caroline Long, the fourth and last wife, was born in 1822 and died in 1899, at Circleville, Ind. Two children were born to this union, Azorah M. and Jeremiah E., both of whom are living, the former at Gold Hill, Ore., the latter, the writer of this sketch, at Chicago, Ill.

In 1881 the family moved to Berrien County, Michigan, a farm, where they remained four years, when the home was broken up. He lived for a time at Lanark and Paris, Ill., and Memphis, Tenn., finally settling at Scircleville, Ind.

In the early 60's Elder Hatch, through the influence of his half brother, Aaron F. Service, saw the truth of the gospel and embraced it and was baptized and in 1864, his health having failed, he gave up his work at blacksmithing, and began preaching, continuing the work until mental and physical weakness overtook him.

During his years of labor for the Master he baptized several hundred into the all-saving name, and engaged in seven debates with preachers of different denominations.

He was one of the old pioneers in the spreading of the gospel, and cheerfully withstood the hardships and privations of traveling about and endeavoring to earn a scant livelihood. The writer well remembers the struggle of the father and mother in his youth to "make ends meet." Often weeks and months would elapse ere we saw him, for money was very scarce and he was compelled to remain away preaching until he could accumulate enough to return. In the meantime the wife and mother was compelled to do washing to support the family.

A few months before his death, his mind became weak and he became such a care and burden he was taken to the insane hospital at Indianapolis, where he died, October 15, 1905.

He was laid to rest beside his wife in a country graveyard within sight of the church house near Hillsburg, Ind., where he labored in God's vineyard for many years.

He and his faithful companion are asleep in Jesus, awaiting the call of the Master to come forth.

Asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep,
From which none ever wake to weep;
A calm and undisturbed repose,
Unbroken by the last of foes.

Your brother in Christ,

REASONS

Why Man Does Not Possess an Inherent Immortal or Deathless Nature—Because

God only hath immortality (I. Tim. 6:15-16).

We are to seek for immortality (Rom. 2:7).

The dead praise not the Lord (Psa. 115:17).

Man's thoughts perish at death (Psa. 146:4).

In death there is no remembrance (Psa. 6:5).

None can keep alive his own soul (Psa. 22:29).

God told Hezekiah he should die and not live (Isa. 38:1).

He is forgotten as a dead man out of mind (Psa. 31:12).

The soul that sinneth it shall die (Ezek. 18:4; Jas. 5:19-20).

Immortality is a gift only to the righteous (Rom. 6:22-23).

We are to put on immortality at the resurrection (I. Cor. 15:52-54).

Immortality was brought to light through the gospel (II. Tim. 1:10).

Man and beast die alike, have one breath, go to one place (Eccl. 3:19-20).

The dead know not anything; their love, hatred and envy have perished (Eccl. 9:5-6).

There is no work, device, wisdom or knowledge in the grave, whither thou goest (Eccl. 9:10).

Immortality is to be conferred upon the body, and not upon an invisible nonentity (Phil. 3:21; I. Cor. 15:44).

His sons come to honor and he knoweth it not; they are brought low, but he perceiveth it not of them (Job. 14:21).

God said to Adam, "dying thou shalt die" [illegible] Dan. 12:2; Luke 20:37) for dust thou art and unto dust shalt thou return. (Gen. 3:19).

A merciful God placed cherubim and flaming sword to guard the tree of life, lest man have continued access to it and eat and live forever in sin (Gen. 3:24).

Nowhere do the scriptures teach that man possesses an immortal soul, and not once are the terms immortal soul, deathless spirit, never-dying soul used therein. Immortality on condition of obedience only is taught.

Christ has spoken from heaven, "I am he that liveth and WAS DEAD, and behold I am alive forever more, and have the keys of hell (the grave) and of death" (Rev. 1:18) The first fruits of them that sleep (I. Cor. 15:20).

If we believe we naturally possess immortality we accept Satan's word ("Thou shalt not surely die"), in preference to God's word ("Thou shalt sure die"). Satan was a liar and murderer from the beginning of creation (John 8:44).

The apostles preached Christ and the resurrection (I. Cor. 15:15) and not Christ and the immortality of the soul, as is now popularly taught. See also John 5:28-29, 6:40-44-54, 11:24; Acts 4:2, 17:18; II. Cor. 4:14, 5:4; Rev. 20:6.

Jesus Christ, our High Priest, has entered the holiest of holies, heaven itself, and is there making intercession for us by the sprinkling of his own blood, shed once for all (Heb. 4:14, 5:10, 6:19-20, 7:17, 9:24) and none can follow him there (Heb. 9:7-12; Lev. 16: 17; Num. 6:17-20), for it was certain death to enter, look into (I. Sam. 6:19) or even touch (II Sam. 6:7) the typical holy of holies, except by the high priest, a type of Christ.

II—WHY THIS EARTH AND NOT HEAVEN IS TO BE THE HOME OF THE RIGHTEOUS

Because

Christ said, "I will come again" (John 14:3).

No man hath ascended up to heaven (John 3:13).

David is not ascended into the heavens (Acts 2:29-34).

The earth abideth forever (Eccl. 1:4; Psa. 104:5; 119:90).

The Lord (Christ) shall be king over all the earth (Zech. 14:9).

"He shall stand in the latter day upon the earth" (Job. 19-25).

Jesus said, "Whither I go ye cannot come" (John 7:33-34, 13: 33).

No scriptural interpretation warrants the belief in a sky kingdom.

The righteous shall never be removed from the earth (Prov. 10: 30).

He cometh in clouds to reign and every eye shall see him (Rev. 1:7).

The meek shall inherit the earth (Psa. 37:9, 11, 22, 29, 34; Matt. 5:5).

The Lord (Christ) shall reign in Mount Zion and Jerusalem (Isa. 24:23).

"And hast made us unto our God kings and priests and we shall reign on the earth" (Rev. 5:10).

"The heavens are the Lord's but the earth hath he given to the children of men" (Psa. 115:16).

"Unto them that look for him shall he appear a second time without sin unto salvation" (Heb. 9:28).

"The law shall go forth from Mount Zion and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem" (Isa. 2:3; Micah. 4:2).

"Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above and COMETH DOWN from the Father of lights" (Jas. 1:17).

"He shall have dominion also from sea to sea and from the river unto the ends of the earth" (Psa. 72:8; Zech. 9:10).

"The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdom of our Lord and of his Christ and he shall reign forever and ever" (Rev. 11: 15).

The righteous shall be recompensed in the earth, not in heaven (Prov. 13:21), at the resurrection (Luke 14:14; Dan. 12:2; Luke 20:35-36).

Abraham and his seed are to inherit the land of Canaan for an everlasting possession (Gen. 13: 15, 17:8; Heb. 11:8-13, 39; Acts 7:5).

It was said, "This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven (Acts 1:11).

He will bring our reward with him. "Behold I come quickly and my reward is with me to give every man according to his work (Rev. 22:12).

The throne and kingdom of David will be established forever, with Jesus Christ, his son, as King forever (II. Sam. 7:12-17; Psa. 2: 6-9, 72:9-11).

"The kingdom and dominion and greatness of the kingdom UNDER the whole heaven shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High" (Dan. 7:27).

"The Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever and of his kingdom there shall be no end" (Luke 1:32-33).—An old tract (now out of print) by our lamented Bro. J. S. Hatch.

WHAT I BELIEVE AND WHY NO. IV.

Charles Clifford Maple

In this article our question will be What I Believe the Scriptures of the New Testament to teach concerning the Church.

It may be well to remember that the church is a New Testament institution and was not in existence until the day of Pentecost. Christ spoke of it as future in the days of his personal ministry (Matt. 16:18).

And in recording the events of Pentecost. Luke speaks of it as being an existing institution (Acts 2:47). We will inquire first as to the name of the New Testament church.

New Testement writers have spoken of it the Church of God (Acts 20:28; I. Cor. 1:2; 10:32; 11:22; 15:9; I. Tim. 3:15).

Christ calls it his church, but never asked that it be called by his name. It was his prayer that the body of believers should be kept in the Father's name (John 17:9, 11, 12).

The church being Christ's, he also having all power in his hands had the authority to call the church by any name he chose, and he requested that the name of God be the name by which his followers be known.

We have, then, a number of descriptive titles, not names, which are applied to the church: God's husbandry; an holy temple; the body of Christ; The Church of the firstborn; the churches of Christ; The Israel of God; the family of God, etc. These are all scriptural titles, but not names. We may speak of the president's home, or Wm. Taft's home, if we call it Mr. Taft's, we give it a name; if we say the president's, we give it a title. It is not necessary to say that there is no authority to call the church by any sectarian name.

After the New Testament has given us a name we should be content to use that which Divine Authority has named. We should not wear any sectarian name for the reason that it divides the church which is exactly opposite to the request of Christ, "That they all ought be one" (John 17:11). I believe that it is just as essential that we be scriptural in name as well as in other matters of faith.

Some religious people seem to have an idea that they must select a name that will tell the world what they believe, but we believe all the truths revealed to us in the New Testament, and how can we emphasize them all in our church name? And are we commanded to select one and give that special prominence over the others? For instance, we believe in Baptism, The Lord's Supper, The Second Coming of Christ, The Resurrection, the Judgment, the Age to Come, the Kingdom, Conditional Immotality, etc.

But when I select one of these and call the church by that name, I at once begin to gather a "one idea people," and thus a sect branches off from the vine to emphasize some one truth and place it out of its proper relation to all other truths. The result is many have a part of the truth, but have never seen the entire system of truth as a connected chain running from eternity to eternity.

We want the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth.

We want the scriptural name for the church, and then in the church preach all the truth as it is in Christ Jesus our Lord.

It is an easy thing to do good to those who do good to you; the world does this; but the goodness that Jesus expects, and will only approve, is a goodness done to those who cannot give a recompense. This is what Jesus commands, and we are his servants only if we obey.

Oregon Bible College

The Restitution

Issued weekly by

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING COMPANY.

Entered as second-class matter under act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

TERMS.

One year $1.50; six months 75 cents, in advance.

ROBT. G. HUGGINS.....Editor
BUELL W. NUTT.....Manager

BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Burton H. Lang, Harry Pott,
Chas. A. Goss, Robt. G. Fate,
Buell W. Nutt, D. C. Robison,
W. S. Tomlinson.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

All remittances should be sent by bank draft, post office money order or express money order to The Restitution Publishing Co., 803 Parkwood drive, Cleveland, Ohio.

All communication intended for publication should be sent to the editor, Robt. G. Huggins, 10833 Lee avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

It is necessary to adhere strictly to the rule of not returning unused manuscripts. Writers will please keep copies, or risk the loss.

While the editor exercises a general supervision over the articles appearing in The Restitution, his endorsement does not extend to the interpretation of details nor the exegesis of particular texts in the writings of contributors.

Cleveland, Ohio ....June 25, 1912

EDITORIAL

Bro. Blakely points out an error that was made in the Michigan Conference notice. We regret it very much, and take occasion to ask all secretaries to be sure and plainly write all dates in their conference announcements, and when they first appear give them a close reading, particularly the dates; and if they have not been correctly entered, write us a note of correction at once.

Bro. O. J. Allard writes that he has just closed a week's meeting at Iowa Center, Ia. "We feel," he says, "that we have done our duty and we leave the results to God."

Sister Russell, of Calif., will read with great interest of the efforts being made to organize the isolated members for more effectual work in the truth. Her long letter to the editor is fully answered in this and last week's Restitution.

The article this week by Bro. Howell is the first of a series he desires us to issue in tract form. About this matter he writes:

"I have tried to write the article to fill a special need of the people of this country, for judging from what experience I have had among them in my talks, and articles in the county papers, and in circulating tracts and papers, there seems to be the need of a tract on the plan of redemption which is complete, yet brief.

If this should suit the readers, and you put it in tract form, I want to order about a hundred to give to my acquaintances in this county, just as soon as they are ready.

Yours for the promulgation of Truth,

F. M. HOWELL.

COMMUNICATIONS

Dear Bro. Huggins:

I am sending a report of our Indiana Bible school which I am happy to say was a grand success. The enthusiasm and good feeling was apparent from the beginning of the conference, and there was enough to last clear through.

I think you will decide with me that there is a charm about old Antioch. I know Sister Huggins will. The burden of the preaching fell upon Brother Robison and wife, Bro. VanVactor preaching Friday and Sunday nights and took charge of the communion service on Sunday. I thought of you on those pleasant rides to and from the church, and the country is so beautiful now. Mrs. McCrary sends love to you both, and we want you to come to see us if ever you come in this part of the state. There were seven here from Ohio, viz.: Brother and Sister Robinson and young Brother Smith from Sandusky, Brother Eidemiller, and Sisters Florence Westfall and Ethel Lehman and her mother from Troy; Brother John Channan from Ft. Dodge, Iowa; Sister Morron and son from Springfield, Ill., and Sisters Rose Miller and Bertie Smith from Adrian, Mich.

Your Brother in Faith,
F. M. McCRARY.

To All of Like Precious Faith:
O may we all be One in the Father

At this eventide as the night of darkness creeps on the world and gross darkness the people, let us rejoice in the Lord for the glorious light of the gospel and prophetic words. Again, I say, Rejoice.

Let every heart rejoice and sing
For he is good, the Lord is good
And kind are all his ways.
With songs and honors sounding loud
The Lord Jehovah praise.
Let the rocks and the rills
Let the vales and the hills
Let choral anthems raise
Let each prolong the joyful song
And the Lord Jehovah praise.

At present I am in rather poor health, weak in the flesh, but want to be strong in the Lord and in the power of his might.

I think sometimes if as our days our strength shall be, we transgress the laws of nature and then have to pay the penalty. Let us learn to be careful in all things, not forgetting the lesson of temperance in all things. Those lessons were written for our learning and we ought to profit by them. If we learn to do that which is right all will be well.

He bids the sun to rise and set,
In heaven his power is known
And earth subdued to him
Shall bow low before his throne.

Hoping to be in readiness when the Lord comes, whether sleeping or waking.

MRS. ANGIE STEVENS.

Dear Ones of Like Precious Faith

The piece that Brother Adams has in our paper of June 4, just suits us. It is on the same line that I have been thinking for years past. How to spread the good news and how to reach the isolated one. How often we say that if it had not been for Brother J. F. Wagoner, we might never have learned the true Gospel. Oh, how thankful we feel to him! No wonder Father Lehman used to clasp him in his arms and greet him with tears in his eyes every time he met him. It was he, who led father and mother into the water some forty years ago, with one other brother, they being the first ones at the Brush Creek church of Ohio.

Dear ones, it is our duty to do all that is in our power to send the glad tidings to others, and here is a grand opportunity. Let us answer the Macedonian call and pledge ourselves to go over and help them. The Lord looks on us and knows if we turn a deaf ear to such calls. Let us encourage our leaders. Oh, how thankful we are that we have some who are able to lead. If we will only follow and do our part. We often sing, "Wherever he leads me there will I follow." Surely the Lord has a hand in this. Move, we will follow.

Bro. and Sister W. H. Eidemiller.

Dear Bro. Huggins:

I am very, very thankful to you for article in The Restitution for June 28, "The Historical and Futurist Systems of Prophetic Interpretation." Thankful not only to you, but also to God for giving you the courage to stand up for the truth, when so many of our worthy brethren and sisters and also prominent writers in other churches as well, on both sides of the Atlantic, are following the Jesuit priests, Ribera and Bellarmine, and taking sides with Rome.

I greatly enjoyed the articles on prophecy in your earlier issues of The Restitution. They were meat indeed.

You say "you are not assured as to the origin of the historic school of interpretation" but that "it originated in the eleventh century among the Waldenses, Wickliffites and Hussites." It originated much earlier than this according to Frederick Fish and H. Grattan Guiness. The latter in "Romanism and the Reformation," page 185, says:

"The historic school of interpretation has existed from the beginning and includes the larger part of the greatest and best teachers of the church for 1800 years." He also says in the same connection: "We shall show that the fathers of the church belonged to it, that the confessors, reformers, and martyrs belonged to it, and that it included a vast number of erudite expositors of later times." On page 189 he says the interval in which the fathers lived "extended from apostolic times to the fall of the Roman Empire in the fifth century." A multitude of their writings remain to us containing not only countless references to the prophecies in question, but complete commentaries on Daniel and the Apocalypse. It is boldly asserted by many that the fathers of the first five centuries held the futurist interpretation of these books. We deny the correctness of this position and assert that the fathers of the first five centuries belonged to the historical school of interpretation."

To prove his position, he then gives a brief summary of their views, showing that they interpreted the wild beasts of prophecy just as we do, as representing Babylon, Medo-Persia, Greece and Rome, holding that "the little horn of Daniel, the man of sin fore told by Paul, and the revived head of the Roman Empire predicted by John, represented one and the same power, and that power the Anti-Christ."

That Hippolytus so interpreted them, making the legs of iron the great and terrible beast whereby the Romans were meant, the toes of clay and iron the tin horns, and the other little horn springing up in their midst the Anti-Christ. And Christ, the stone that is to smite the image and break it in pieces and fill the whole earth. And that Origen, Irenaeus, Justin Martyr, Cyprian, Tertullian, Augustine, Chrysostom and Jerome all held the same views.

Paul knew and the Thessalonians knew what the "let" or hindrance was the development of the man of sin. And the fathers tell us that that hindrance "was the Roman Empire as governed by the Cesasrs. From Irenaeus, the disciple of the disciple John, down to Chrysostom and and Jerome, it was understood that "the hindrance to the manifestation of the man of sin was the imperial power ruling and residing at Rome," a very important point.

Not one of the fathers held the Futurist gap theory. They all looked for the appearance of the man of sin, whenever the Roman emperors were moved away from their seven-hilled seat.

Justin Martyr saw him whom Daniel foretold would have dominion for time, times and a half, already even at the door about to speak blasphemous and daring things against the most high, and Cyprian, seeing the hateful time of Antichrist already beginning to draw near, sought to collect exhortations from the sacred Scriptures that would prepare and strengthen his brethren for the fearful conflict.

So we can safely say that the historic school of interpretation dates back to apostolic times, while the Futurist interpretation goes back only to the sixteenth century, and was given birth to prop up the Papacy—it being one of the chief pillars of that apostate church, popes, cardinals, bishops, and priests all being Futurists and the Futurist school of interpretation "chiefly represented by teachers belonging to the church of Rome."

The Vaudois—the ancestors of the Albigenses—were descended from the disciples of Paul in Italy who, fleeing from their persecutors to the fastnesses of the Alps, from thence sent their barbes, or pastors by turns into every part of Europe to spread the gospel, and thus sowed the seed that eventually resulted in the reformation. They kept the gospel light burning all through the dark ages. Their heraldic design was a lighted candlestick, surrounded with seven stars, with the motto: "Lux Tucet in Tenebris"—"the light shineth in darkness."

And this Vallensic church was strenuous in maintaining that the corrupt Roman church was the Apocalyptic Babylonian Harlot and that the Sovereign Pontiff himself was the man of sin. So here again we trace the historic interpretation—if not by actual date, by inference at least to the times of the Apostles, for Paul taught the ancestors of the Vaudois how to recognize the man of sin when he should appear, and they in turn taught their children, and these children knew him and flung it in his teeth that he was the predicted fellow, and suffered no less than thirty-three wars, banishment and nigh on to extermination because of their protesting. Frederick Flake tells their story in a most graphic way. They committed the Bible to memory so that if every copy was destroyed by their enemies they could reproduce it. They still exist.

And now as the popes of Rome have risen "at the time" and "in the manner" and "for the cause" assigned by Paul, does their character justify us in applying to them the term that Paul applies? Can any Futurist conceive of a more incarnate fiend than the man of sin of the Church of Rome has been?—this continuous man, seated on seven hills?—always a man—deathless in his priestly character?—guilty of every crime under the sun? Sanctioning and pardoning every crime? Making evil good and good evil? Claiming to be above all law both human and divine? To have the same consistory as God? To be God? And to be able to do almost all that God can do?

That "to be subject to the Roman Pontiff is to every human creature altogether necessary for salvation?" That he is infallible. That he can change interdict and burn the Holy Scriptures? That murder of heretics is not murder? Idolatry all right? And that he must be worshipped as the image or vicar of Jesus and as God is worshipped?

The term "man of sin" surely fits the blasphemous, deceiving, lying popes. No future Antichrist can overtop them in plentitude of power or in heights of guilt, for their sins have reached to the very heavens.

S. ROXANA WINCE.

CHEERFULNESS

What is said of the heavy hearted and the effects of cheering words upon them in Prov. 12:25? "Heaviness in the heart of man maketh it stoop, but a good word maketh it glad." "Blessed be God, even the Father of our Lord Jesus, the Father of mercies, and the God of all comfort, who comforteth us in all of our tribulation, that we may be able to comfort those that are in any trouble, by the comfort where with we ourselves are comforted of God." In other words, cheerfulness of God. I think we should all learn the true worth of cheerfulness, for a cheerful countenance is like a ray of sunshine and many times a day turns away wrath. How much more a cheerful smiling face brightens the home and makes the weary tasks seem lighter than a gloomy sad face.

A merry heart doeth good like a medicine, but a broken spirit drieth the bones. Should the Christian be joyful in God under adverse and trying circumstances? Blessed are ye when men shall separate you from their company, and shall reproach you and cast out your name as evil, for the Son of Man's sake. Rejoice in that day and leap for joy, for behold your reward is great in heaven (Luke 6:22-23).

The Savior says, "These things have I spoken unto you that in me ye might have peace. In the world ye shall have tribulation, but be of good cheer; I have overcome the world." "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me on my throne, as I have overcome and set down with my Father on his throne." Rejoice in the Lord always, and again I say, Rejoice.

MYRTLE FISHER,
Colo, Ia.

THE RICH MAN AND LAZARUS

John Remer

The narrative recorded in Luke 16, that many say is no parable, sounds very fishy, and always will until we fully understand it, and have the eyes of our understanding enlightened, as Paul says in one of his epistles. This story always sounded fishy to me, until I got to where I could understand just where it belonged. To know where it belongs we must become acquainted with Paul's teachings, as he is the Lord's mouthpiece or vessel to bring light to us, for he was chosen a light to the Gentiles.

In reading Rom. 2:7 we find that eternal life is promised only to those who seek for it by a patient continuance in well doing, and the Lord says nothing about Lazarus' well doing or patience; neither does he mention the rich man's evil doing. We all know that if the parable represents a life and a death at the same time, it was to both death, and to both life, and makes Paul a false teacher, according to my understanding of his writing in Rom. 2:1-7.

But we want people to know that we believe God to be true if it makes every man a liar. When God spoke to King Hezekiah and told him to set his house in order, for thou shalt die and not live, he believeth that God meant just what he said, and began to pray for a special favor. But we find in the case of the rich man that he was still living after death and burial, and talking and knowing. But since we have found that the Bible teaches that the dead know not anything and their memory is perished, we find that we must search for a different construction on the rich man and Lazarus, other than the popular construction. In Eccl. 9:5, we read, "The living know that they shall die, but the dead know not anything, and we hear the Lord say in Luke 16, that these two men he mentions both died.

Now then, how can we harmonize where Luke says they know and Eccl. 9:5 which says they dont know?

This brings us to our teacher again, Paul, "We say let God be true." Hear what God says by the mouth of Paul, Rom. 4:17, "As it is written, I have made thee a father of many nations, before him whom he believeth, even God, who quickeneth the dead, and calleth those things which be not as though they were." Paul makes this mystery very plain to me. We find that he was talking to the blinded Jew, and we are told in the New Testament that he spoke unto them in parables, and without a parable spake he not unto them. (the Jews).

When we fully understand his teaching it all harmonizes nicely. He spake of those men being, when they were not, for a purpose best known to him. Cook's Sunday School Quarterly says it represents or describes the different states of the two classes after death. I have to differ with him and the international people, for they make the Lord contradict his own word. They send a man to his reward at death, when Jesus, speaking of our reward says, "Ye shall be recompensed at the resurrection of the Just." They say Lazarus was carried some where by the Angels and the rich man lifted up his eyes and saw him afar off, indicating at a glance that Lazarus was up and the rich man down, both receiving their rewards. We hear Jesus say that we all shall receive our reward at the resurrection (Luke 14:14). John 5:28 and 29 says, "Marvel not, for the hour cometh in which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice—the Lord's voice—and shall come forth. Hear what God has said in Daniel 12:2, "Many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life and some to shame and everlasting contempt."

Another statement in Cook's Quarterly, page 26, lesson 5, you will find in the lesson notes, "Hell—Hades, the abode of the spirits of men until the resurrection. There are two places in Hades, Gehenna, the abode of the lost, in torment, and Paradise, the abode of the saved.

Isn't this wonderfully misleading? I think so. I wonder why Mr. Cook don't get in his own crowd, the Spiritualists. I think it is the money he is after and not the truth, and he couldn't sell the truth to the international people.

This parable does not describe the state of the dead, as it puts them far apart, while the Bible puts them both here in the earth. Prov. 11:31, "The righteous shall be recompensed in the earth; much more the wicked and the sinner." Matt. 25-31, "When the Lord shall come in his glory, then shall he sit on the throne of his glory, and they shall be placed, the one on his right hand, and the other on his left, and he shall say, 'Come' to one, and 'depart' to the others." If the rich man that Jesus spoke of, was a real man he will be there, and so will Lazarus.

"CHRIST NOT THE MAN CHILD"

A Friendly Letter

Brother:

I have carefully examined what you say in your exposition of Matt. 24 concerning the tribulation of verse 21, and of verse 29 I see no evidence in Mark, nor in Luke tending to show that it is not the same tribulation in both instances, and is spoken in reference to the Jews. Your exposition is good according to my judgment with the exception of verse 29.

In your exposition of the man child of Rev. 12, you say, 'Writers have puzzled themselves to find a symbolic child as the fruit of a symbolic woman, forgetful of the fact that the literal is oft mingled with the figurative. No one need mistake that her child was the Lord Jesus Christ; first, because he is to rule all nations with a rod of iron (see Psa. 2:8,9 and Rev. 2:27); and second, because he was caught up to God and to his throne."

My objections to this exposition are many.

First, because the revelation is a propheey of things shortly to come to pass (Rev. 1:1). The fact of Jesus Christ's birth and ascension was historic years before John wrote the Revelation; therefore, any exposition that makes the man child historic in the Revelation is faulty. In the second place, the woman is a symbolic woman, and her offspring must be of the same kind, because the divine order is "everything after his kind" (Gen. 1:24-25). Third, it is not necessary to depart from the divine order in finding a symbolic son as the fruit of the symbolic woman. In one of your proof texts to prove that the child was Jesus Christ, you refer to Rev. 2:27. And there we find the symbolic man child, that is to "rule all nations with a rod of iron." Who is it? Not Jesus Christ but the overcomer of Thyatira. Here we find a symbolic child, the fruit of a symbolic woman; in this man child is condensed all the overcomers in all the centuries from Patmos to the Holy City. "And he that over cometh, and keepeth my works unto the end, to him will I give power over the nations: and he shall rule them with a rod of iron; as the vessels of a potter shall they be broken to shivers; even as I received of my Father" (2:26-27).

Your objection to my statement, that the signs in the sun, moon, and stars of the sixth seal are yet future is I think based on a wrong view of the construction of the apocalypse.

The substance of your argument is this: That because events noted under the sounding of the three first trumpets are in the past; so the sixth seal is in the past; because it is revealed prior to the sounding of the trumpets. The events do not take place in the order as given, chapter after chapter: This will appear plain if we notice the events in chapters eleven and twelve.

In chapter eleven we read: "The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ." But in chapter 12 we find the woman persecuted by the dragon, and has to fly into the wilderness for a long period of time. It is evident that the writer was given a view of a certain class of events leading up to the establishment of the kingdom: Then going back and taking up another class leading up to the same period of time. So that the opening of the seals reveals one class of events properly grouped together; then goes back and takes up another class of events, properly represented under the seven trumpets. The symbolism of the number seven is fulness, completeness in the Old Testament and especially in the Revelation.

Yours fraternally in hope of Life Eternal when the Chief Shepherd shall appear.

GEO. FRANCIS.

BIBLE SCHOOL REPORT

Knowing the brethren everywhere will be pleased to know of the success of our Bible school, I will give you these notes.

After a very interesting June Conference at old Antioch, which has ben reported, the brethren old and young to the number of 71 enrolled themselves at the school in Plymouth for a week of instruction in God's word of truth. Brother D. C. Robison, of Salem, Ohio, and Bro. Williams our state evangelist, were teachers and right well did they acquit themselves, beginning with the "covenants of promise" made to the fathers, then the study of "the kingdom" that God has promised over which Jesus will rule in righteous.

Baptism into his all saving name, salvation and adoption were each treated in a masterly style.

These young people showed themselves by their studiousness and careful study of the subjects to be here for instruction rather than an outing, for which they earned the open commendation of Bro. Robison. Ohio, Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa and Nebraska were represented, for which we are thankful and say, come again.

This school is conducted on funds donated by the brethren and they were sufficientiy liberal this year to pay all expenses and add a small amount to the neat egg already on hand. On Friday, Miss Ethel Cordray, of South Bend, Ind., announced her desire for baptism and she was buried into the all saving name of Jesus by Bro. Williams.

Sister Ethel is an orphan girl who lives with her grandmother, who has carefully brought her up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord, and came specially to be present at the administering of this sacred rite. It is hoped enough interest is awakened that the numbers will be increased another year and all the churches throughout the state will send a goodly representation.

MRS. F. M. McCRORY,
Sec. and Treas.

AN EXPLANATION

In our issue of May 28th under the heading of "Ohio Conference Dues," I seem to have given a wrong impression to some who read it In saying that WE HOPE to have funds sufficient to entertain all who come without charge for either food or lodging, if all respond to this call as they should, I only expressed my personal desire, not a plan already adopted by the brethren.

There has been no action toward changing the arrangements of previous years in making a minimum charge for meals to cover expenses. Trusting the above explanation will set all right upon this matter, I remain,

Yours in the Blessed Hope,
CHAS. A. GOSS,
Chairman Con. Com.

OHIO CONFERENCE DUES

In order that the incidental expenses of holding the State Conference might be provided for in advance, and that such expense might be shared by all the brethren, a resolution was adopted at the last conference, which was held at Brush Creek last August, recommending that an annual assessment of one dollor ($1.00) be collected of every male member, and fifty cents of every female member affiliating with the conference, i.e., all members of the several churches participating in our State Conference, and all isolated ones not affiliated with any of these organized ecclesias, but who have shared, or wish to share in the conference work.

The following persons were named as sub-committees to act in the various churches as collectors of this fund as well as the usual evangellat fund, from which it is entirely distinct and separate:

Ella Knowles, Salem; Alden Overholzer, Springfield; Ethel Lehman, Brush Creek, H. Juergensen, Barberton, and isolated ones; S. J. Elton, Delta; W.A.Heacock, Canton; C. A. Goss and Frances Russell, of Cleveland.

The object of this arrangement is to avoid the necessity of cutting down our evangelist fund to pay part of conference expenses, as has been every year. It will also be the means of permitting many who have not previously shared in this good work to do so to a small extent.

We know many have already responded by paying their dues to the appointed collector. Now it is time to take up the matter vigorously in each church and follow it up until all funds are in the hands of our Conference treasurer, W. C. Heacock, 230 Arlington Ave. Canton, O.

CHAS. A. GOSS,
Chairman Conference Com.

THE NATURE OF MAN

By S. T. Blessing

Is He a Dual Being, Composed Body and Soul, each Being a Separate Entity; the Soul Continuing to Live When the Body is Dead? Or is He a Unit and Ceases to Exist in a Conscious State When Death Overtakes Him?

(Concluded)

except for those who get into Christ by faith and obedience is so unpopular that people do not care to risk their standing in society and the church by advocating it, but is it essential to know and obey the truth? Hear Jesus: "Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free" (John 8:32). In vain do ye worship me, teaching for doctrine the commandments of men" (Matt. 15:9). It is almost universally taught by theologians and other religionists, as well as by rejectors of the Bible, that man has within him an entity called the immortal soul, which is really the thinking, responsible self; the flesh and blood organism being only the house or shell—the media—through which the soul is manifested; and that what is called death is only the separation of the soul from the body, the body being cast off as of no more use, while the soul wings its flight to another abode, where it continues in life, freed from this mortal coil. To sustain this doctrine, Bible proof is sought for; therefore, let us go to the Bible and see what it does teach on the subject.

The word soul is found 524 times in the English Bible. The Hebrew word, Nephesh, and the Greek word, psuche, from which the word soul is translated, are found 825 times. 524 times they are translated soul, 149 times life, the remaining 152 times that they occur they are rendered by thirty-seven different words, such as appetite, lust, mind, heart, you, us, etc. The words immortal, ever living, undying, or words of like import, are not found in the Bible in connection with soul; on the contrary, it is said that souls die (Joshua 11:11; Psa. 22:27; Psa. 33:19; Psa. 78:50; Ezek. 18:4, 20; Acts 3:23; James 5:20; Rev. 16:3) Souls hunger and thirst (Prov. 16 20; Prov. 19:15; Prov. 25:25). Souls eat (Isa. 55:2; Luke 12:19). Souls have blood (Jer. 2:34). Souls can be utterly destroyed with the sword (Psa. 7:2; Psa. 22:20; Joshua 10:28, 30, 32, 35, 37, 39). Beasts have souls (Num. 31:28); and many like things that pertain to the animal organism. Hence it is evident that the Bible soul denotes the physical being, the person, or some attribute pertaining to the physical or animal organism.

But since it is claimed that the Bible sustains the doctrine of the immortality of the soul, let us examine some of the passages that are relied on for proof. Gen. 35:18, "When her soul was departing;" I Kings 17:21, "Let the child's soul come unto him again;" Matt. 10:28, "Cannot kill the soul." As we have already shown, the Hebrew and Greek words here translated soul are in other passages rendered life. If we here substitute the word life, which we are fully warranted in doing, the thought conveyed is quite different. Luke 16:23, "In hell he lifted up his eyes, being in torments." This text does not contain the word soul, but says, "The rich man died and was buried." This account of the rich man and Lazarus is no doubt, a parable, because, as a literal narrative, it contains statements of impossibilities. As a parable, based on Jewish traditions (Matt. 15:1-9), it unveiled to that faithless generation their rejection of Jesus as the Christ, even though he rose from the dead.

Luke 23:43, "Today shalt thou be with me in paradise." Jesus could not have meant to promise the thief that he would be with him in paradise ("Thy Kingdom," see verse 42) that self-same day, within six hours from the time he was speaking, because "Thy Kingdom" was not yet established; nor had Jesus left the earth three days thereafter (John 20:17); and it was not till forty-three days after that he ascended to heaven (Acts 1:3-9). Besides, it is probable, yea, almost certain, that the thief did not die on that day. History tells us that those crucified often lived several days before death ended their sufferings. The Scripture account indicates that the thieves were not dead when taken from the cross. The soldiers brake their legs, but they brake not the legs of Jesus because they saw he was dead already (John 19:32, 33). Why break their legs? Doubtless to keep them from escaping when taken from the cross. For Pilate, in deference to the request made by the Jews, had commanded that they be taken down, that they might not hang on the cross on the Sabbath day. So if the thief was with Jesus in paradise that self same day, he must have been while he was yet alive, and Jesus dead.

Jesus' reply to the thief was no doubt an answer to his request, and in harmony with all Bible teaching on the subject. Jesus' words could be paraphrased thus: The thief's request: "Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom." Paraphrased reply: "Verily I say unto thee today (now), when I come into my kingdom, which my Father has, in purpose and promise, prepared for me, and sit on the rebuilt tabernacle and throne of David, to reign over the house of Jacob (Acts 15:16; Luke 1:32)) when the heathen shall be given to me for an inheritance and the uttermost parts of the earth for a possession (Psa. 2:8); when my apostles shall sit, each on his throne, judging the twelve tribes of Israel (Matt. 19:28); when I shall sit on the throne of my glory (Matt. 25:31); and the immortalized saints of all ages (Heb. 11:39, 40; I Thess. 4:14-18; I. Cor. 15:51-54; II Pet. 1:4; Luke 20:35, 36) shall have been made kings and priests to God, and are reigning on the earth (Rev. 5:10; 20:6; Rev. 2:26, 27; 3:21); when the Son of Man comes to give reward (Matt. 16: 25) to those who have "feared the Lord and thought on his name;" when I make "up my jewels" (Malachi 3:16, 17)—in that day shalt thou be with me in paradise" (Rev. 2:7).

To those who already believe the doctrine there are other passages which seem to favor it, but which can readily be explained in harmony with the truth. However it must be admitted that there is one text that absolutely teaches the doctrine in so many words, and it cannot be controverted. It is found in Gen. 3:4,5, and reads: "Ye shall not surely die  * * ye shall be as Gods." Read the whole connection, and see if you wish to be in fellowship with the author.

We will now examine into the positive and direct teaching of the Scripture concerning the nature of man.

Eccl. 9:5, 10: "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might; for there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom in the grave whither thou goest." "The living know that they must die; but the dead know not anything, neither have they any more reward; for their memory is forgotten." Psa. 6:5: "For in death there is no remembrance of thee, in the grave who shall give thee thanks?" Psa. 146:3,4: "Put not your trust in princes, nor in the son of man, in whom there is no help. His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish."

Isa. 38:18: "For the grave cannot praise thee, death cannot celebrate thee; they that go down to the pit cannot hope for thy truth."

Psa. 49:20: "Man that is in honor, and understandeth not is like the beasts that perish."

Prov. 21:16: "The man that wandereth out of the way of understanding shall remain in the congregation of the dead."

Isa. 26:14: "They are dead, they shall not live; they are deceased, they shall not rise; therefore hast thou visited and destroyed them, and made all their memory to perish." (In contrast to the above, read verses 19, 20, 21, and see what is in store for the saints).

Jer. 51:57: "I will make drunk her princes, and her wise men, her captains, and her rulers, and her mighty men, and and they shall sleep a perpetual sleep, and not wake, saith the King, whose name is The Lord of Hosts."

Obadiah 16: "So shall all the heathen drink continually, yea, they shall drink and they shall swallow down, and they shall be as though they had not been."

Psa. 37:38: "But the transgressors shall be destroyed together; the end of the wicked shall be cut off."

Rom. 2:12: "For as many as have sinned without law shall also perish without law."

In Ist Tim. 6:16, it is declared that God only hath immortality (resident in Himself). That being the case, man cannot have immortality inherent in himself, regardless of his attitude towards God and the salvation that He offers through Christ.

If man by nature were immortal, there would be no occasion for the Scriptures to urge us to "Seek for glory and honor and immortality" (Rom. 2:7). Jesus exemplified in himself how alone man may attain to immortality, namely, by faith in, and obedience to, the requirements of God. God delighteth not in the death of any, but would that all should turn to Him and live. "For God so loved the world that He gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." But that life is based on Jesus' reply to Martha: "I am the resurrection and the life." "To him that overcometh I will give to eat of the tree of life, which is in the midst of the paradise of God. Paul, in Rom. 6:21-23, makes a clear and concise statement of the Scripture teachings of the condition and destiny of man in his fallen state, and God's plan for his redemption, when he says, "For the end of those things (aliens, strangers, no hope, without Christ, without God, Eph. 2:12) is death." "For the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord."

From these testimonies it is evident that man is a unit, and because of sin, death works in him, resulting finally in his disolution. Had not God in His mercy and love, made provision, through the atoning sacrifice of His only-begotten and well beloved Son, for the forgiveness of sin, and a cancellation of the death sentence by the promise of resurrection, conditioned on faith in and obedience to His requirements, death would have held the whole human family in its everlasting embrace. Because Jesus the Christ kept the law in every particular, and made it honorable, thus fulfilling the righteousness of the law, His Father constituted him the life-giver, and gave him power over all flesh, that he might give everlasting life to those who heartily accept of the provisions that God made, and render a willing obedience to the same. This salvation is offered to the personal sinner of the sons of Adam, and not to an imaginary entity that does not exist. Therefore it is absolutely essential that we know our condition by nature, in order to have an intelligent conception of the salvation that God offers, namely, everlasting life and an inheritance in the Kingdom of God for our personal selves, and not for an immortal soul that does not exist. (If it did exist, as is taught by the Apostasy, it already has immortality, and therefore would need no Savior to give it life). Paul says in his second Corinthian letter (5:10) that the saints must appear before the judgment seat of Christ, that every one may receive in body the reward. Seeing, then, it is the body, the person, that is to be saved and rewarded by being made like unto Christ's glorified body (Phil. 3:21), let us be diligent, that we may be found in Him "when He shall come to be glorified in His saints, and to be admired in all them that believe" (Thess. 1:10); when the meek shall inherit the earth, and the righteous inherit the land, and dwell therein forever" (Matt. 5:5; Psa. 37:11,29). Do not pass this over as a doctrine of no importance. Your eternal life depends on an accurate knowledge of the salvation offered in the Scriptures, without which you cannot render that obedience (Mark 15:15,16) to the mould of doctrine (Rom. 6: 17) which inducts into Christ and makes us Abraham's seed (Gal. 3:25-27) and joint heirs with Christ (Rom.8:17; Rev. 2:21; Rev. 5:10) in glory, honor and immortality (Rom. 2:7).

THE THEOLOGICAL HELL HAS NO FOUNDATION IN TRUTH

A Sermon by the Late Brother M. Joflin

(Continued)

The second is called styx, rather a lake than a river. Styx was the fabled daughter of Oceanas, and was changed in the Styqian lake by which the gods swore, and kept their oaths. The third river is called Cocytus, the runs out of the Stygian lake and groans and laments to imitate the howlings of the damned, and increase their exclamations. The fourth river is called Phelegethon, so-called because it swells with waves of fire, and all its streams are flames.

All these rivers the souls must pass over and then they arrive at the Palace of Pluto, the god of hell. The gate of Pluto is guarded by Cerebus, a dog with three heads, whose hair is living snakes. He is considered the porter of hell. Satan gave his son Pluto this infernal dominion before he invented burying and infernal mourning. He likewise reigns over death. He sits upon his throne in the dark, holding a key instead of a sceptre. He is crowned with ebony. Pluto, which signifies wealth, is king.

The Greeks call him Hades, or Gloom, darkness or melancholy (this last is very significant) Pluto, is said, has a queen named Proserpine who enjoys the infernal regions with him. There are three old women called fates, ordering the past, the present and the future. They fix every thing so that nothing can be altered to eternity. To them is entrusted the management of the fatal thread of life. Clotho gives us life; Lachesis determines what shall befall us here; and Atropos concludes our lives. In hell are likewise three furies, who punish the wicked and torment the consciences of secret offenders. There is likewise an inferior God, called Nox, represented as a skeleton with black wings. Another god is called Samonas, or sleep, he is thought useful to men. There are three judges in this hell, which judge the souls which go there. There are some giants and some kings there. All are doomed to endless existence in misery.

Phelegyas, a king, burned the temple of Apollo, and was condemned to remain in hell forever, with a great stone hung over his head, which he expects every moment to fall upon him and crush him to pieces (so he sits eternally fearing that which will never come to pass). Ixion for his crime was struck down to hell with thunder, and tied fast to a wheel, will eternally turn him around. A robber is condemned to roll a great stone to the top of a hill, which invariably slips down before he reaches the top.

In this hell there is a place called the Elysium. This, though in the dominion of Pluto was a region of delights. To this region resorted the souls of the good, after being purged from the light offences committed in this world. "And here friends, is doubtless, the origin of purgatory, and of the spirit land, and perhaps of the paradise, as at present supposed to exist." The account continues: "Elysium has verdant fields, shady groves, fine breezes and all fine things. There is likewise a river called Lethe, causing forgetfulness to all who drink of its waters of all their former troubles."

This friends, is the fanciful wisdom of the heathen, who had no light from God's word to direct their thoughts or unfold the darkness of the future; and how it should cause those to blush, who, in these days hold such trash for truth as can be traced to the benighted Gentile or heathen. Here we find the origin of money in the hand of the dead, to pay Peter instead of Charon. Here too, we trace the origin of an already existing hell as a place for living souls, of purgatory, of paradise, and other errors. The location of this hell is not defined.

Homer assumes the place of the dead to be a land at the extremity of the ocean, attainable by navigation, Virgil, a region attainable only by descending into the bowels of the earth. But we must

Secondly, notice the Mahommedon Hell. The Alcoran describes a last judgment where all will be judged according to their works. The trial being over and the assembly dissolved; those who are awarded to paradise take the right hand, while those who are destined to hell, fire, take the left hand. But both must pass the bridge Alsirat, which is laid over the middle of hell, which bridge is finer than a hair and sharper than a sword. The wicked miss their footing and fall headlong into hell. This hell has seven gates; the first for Musselmen; the second for Christians, the third for Jews, the fourth for Sabians, the fifth for the magicians, the sixth for pagans and the seventh for the worst of all, for hypocrites of all religions. The inhabitants of this hell will suffer a variety of torments of eternal duration; with the exception of those who have embraced the true religion; such will be delived from hell after expiating their crimes by suffering. This brief account of the Mahommedan hell is taken from Adam's views of religions, page 322.

Thirdly, We Notice the Catholic Hell. The Papists describe hell as a place burning with fire, in which the wicked dying out of the church will be eternally tormented. They hold likewise to a place of purgation, called purgatory. This was taken from the pagans.

Mosheim says in volume 2, page 38, "The famous pagan doctrine concerning the purification of departed souls by means of a certain kind of fire, was more amply explained and confirmed now than it had formerly been. And in the tenth century the people dreaded the fire of purgatory more than the fire of hell; for they supposed that by being enriched with the prayers of the clergy when they were dying they should certainly escape hell. But they were taught that if they went to purgatory it was a matter of doubt whether they should be delivered from that dreadful place.

Here is an historical fact, proving that priests led the people astray for the sake of filthy lucre. Therefore try the spirits whether they be of God, because many false teachers have gone out into the world. And while you despise not prophecies, prove all things, and hold fast only to that which is good.

Fourthly, But Then the Protestants Have a Hell Too. They could not complete their system either, without a hell, and we now proceed to describe the hell which those called Christians believe in, as a place of the most intense misery, without mitigation and without end. We have seen that the pagans hold to a hell that has a place to purify at least a portion of those cast into it. But we know of but one sect of Protestants who believe in this part of paganism. That one, is a sect of the Universalists and for this they are indebted to the heathen. But while Protestants borrow the Catholic hell, a little modified from the pagan, they reject its better feature, a chance for a few to escape its fatal horrors.

As Mr. Benson is the acknowledged standard orthodox writer of Methodism, his description will suffice for the Protestant hell. Hear him: "God is present in hell in his infinite justice, and Almighty wrath, as an unfathomable sea of liquid fire, where the wicked must drink in everlasting torture. The presence of God in his vengeance, scatters darkness and woe through the dreary regions of misery. As heaven would be no heaven if God did not there manifest his love; so hell would be no hell, if God did not there display his wrath. It is the presence of God which gives every thing virtue and efficacy, without which there can be no life, no sensibility, no power. God is therefore himself present in hell to see the punishment of those rebels against his government, that it may be adequate to the infinitude of their guilt. His fiery indignation kindles and his incensed fury feeds the flames of their torments, while his powerful presence and operation maintains their being, and renders all their powers more acutely sensible; thus setting the keenest edge upon their pain, and making it cut most tolerably deep. He will exert all his divine attributes to make them as wretched as the capacity of their being will admit." After all this Mr. Benson goes on to describe the duration of this work of God, and calls to his aid all the stars and sand, and drop of water, and makes one tell of million of ages, and when all these ages have rolled away, he goes over the same number again, and again and so on forever!

Now, friends; there is one of two things about what this man has said, it is either the result of the grossest ignorance, or else it must be wilful blasphemy. We will assume that he knows no better.

(To be Continued)

PARADISE

The word paradise comes direct to us from the Greeks, but the Greek here borrowed from the eastern tongues. The Sanscrit has paradesa, a region of beauty and excellence. In Armenian and Persian, pardes was the term applied to the fine parks or pleasure grounds of the wealthy, and especially such as were possessed on a larger scale by monarchs. In the Septuagint of Gen. II.8, "Paradise" is used for the garden of Eden. In the later books of the Old Testament, it appears in this sense as a Hebrew word. Thus, in Neh. II. 8, where it is translated "forest,"—A letter unto Asaph, the keeper of the pardes of the king; not exactly forest, in the sense commonly understood by us, yet in a sense that must have comprehended forest trees, if also others that were rather for ornament and pleasure; for the object of the letter was to procure from this man wood for the doors and beams of certain houses Nehemiah was going to build. In Eccles. ii. 5, the preacher, speaking under the character of king of Jerusalem says, "I made me gardens and paradesim;" "orchards," our translators put it: so it might be; or parks furnished with animals, as well as shrubs and trees. And in Song iv:13, "Thy plants are a pardes of pomegranates, with pleasant fruits; camphire, with spikenard;" which suggests very much the idea of our orchard, or fruit and pleasure garden. Hence the Greek translators quite naturally gave paradise as the equivalent of garden in Gen. ii. 8: "The Lord God planted a paradise in Eden." Josephus uses the same word. He writes: "Moses says farther, that God planted a paradise in the east, flourishing with all sorts of trees; and that among them was the tree of life, and another of knowledge, whereby was to be known what was good and evil; and that when he brought Adam and his wife into this garden, he commanded them to take care of the plants." Paradise was thus used among the Jews to express the beauty and fertility of the earth, and the peace and happiness of men, under the blessed reign of Messiah."

Happiness eludes every searcher for it, but comes quickly and abundantly to the one who seeks to bestow it upon someone else. The searcher for happiness may get wealth, and power, and fame, but none of these advantages will avail anything in getting happiness. Even from friends it cannot be obtained, for happiness comes from what is given out rather than from that which is gathered in. Loving, unselfish service, the persistent, enthusiastic effort day by day to bring sweetness, light, comfort and good ness into the lives of others, will surely bring happiness into the life of any man, woman or child. No sorrow of heart, no doubt of the future, no restlessness of aimlessness of the present, no loneliness or bitterness of soul, but will yield and be resolved into joy and peace and purpose as soon as the days are filled with labors of love—as soon as the eagerness to get happiness is replaced by an eagerness to give it to others.—Eugene Thwing.

What an exalted honor to have Christ mention your name at last with approbation in the presence of a countless assemblage of his approved brethren from all ages, and myriads of attendant angels! The sinner's honor is a mere flash in the pan compared to this; it is nothing at all in the eternal reckoning. It is a momentary affair. It is soon over. It is not worth the purchase.

It is a moral impossibility to love everybody; but we can be kind; that is another thing. It is possible to take a benevolent interest in people. God does not love the wicked—neither does Jesus, for he is coming to destroy them; but he is kind and patient for the present, and so must we be.

THE BIBLE; ITS PRINCIPLES AND TEXTS

As indicated by the title this book is divided into three sections. The first consists of a remarkable disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "principles" in formulated propositions, and the third expounds in a clear, impressive and homelitic manner particular "Texts." The knotty and perplexing texts of the Bible are united and solved satisfactorily to the most fastidious and critical. More than one hundred and fifteen subjects of intense interest to every Bible student are formally discussed. Both simple and scholarly—the child is fascinated and taught; the scholar is entertained and instructed. Bible lovers, here is a feast for you. Throw open the door of your home; let The Bible—its Principles and its Texts come in and bless you and your family. 309 pages, 5x7 1-2 inches, durably and handsomely bound in whole cloth, with title embossed on back in gold. One copy, $1.10, two copies or more $1.00 each. R. G. Huggins, 10623 Lee Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

PROOFREADER

Years of experience in proofreading; now completing a technical course in the art. MSS prepared for the printer and proofs read. Book work a specialty. Limited amount of work by mail accepted at popular prices.

ROBT. G. HUGGINS,
10623 Lee Avenue,
Cleveland, Ohio

The truth gives a man the hope of seeing with his own eyes the work of God, at last triumphant in the earth whether he live or die; and of himself sharing the blessedness for ages covenanted for all the earth through Abraham and his seed.

Forgetful hearers allow themselves to be diverted by the ephemeral things of life from the important business of making themselves familiar with God's word by reading. They are without excuse.

Real faith is a treasure, a companion of delight, a spring of living water, a fountain of purity.

The man who possesses faith unfeigned will do what others will not do: but a man of sham faith will not sacrifice anything for the sake of it.

Ladies! Save Money and Keep in Style by Reading McCall's Magazine and Using McCall Patterns

McCall's Magazine will help you dress stylishly at a moderate expense by keeping you posted on the latest fashions in clothes and hats. 50 New Fashion Designs in each issue. Also valuable information on all home and personal matters. Only 50c a year, including a free pattern. Subscribe today or send for free sample copy.

McCall Patterns will enable you to make in your own home, with your own hands, clothes for yourself and children which will be perfect in style and fit. Price—none higher than 15 cents. Send for free Pattern Catalogue.

We Will Give You Fine Presents for getting subscriptions among your friends. Send for free Premium Catalogue and Cash Prize Offer.

THE McCALL COMPANY, 238 to 248 West 37th St., NEW YORK

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

We, whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones.

This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of their paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

Read This Special Subscription Offer

By a special arrangement just made with THE FARM JOURNAL, a sixty-four page magazine, we are able to make for a limited time a very generous combination subscription offer. The Farm Journal is one of the best farm and home magazines published in the country, a large, interesting journal which is known the country over. The Farm Journal also publishes the booklets of "The Money Making Secrets" series, including "Poultry Secrets," "Horse Secrets," "Corn Secrets," "The Million Egg Farm," "The Butter Book" and "Duck Dollars." The subscription price of the "Farm Journal" is $1.00 for five years, or $1.00 for 4 years and any one of the booklets of "The Money Making Series."

Now for the Special Offer

Regular Price of Restitution 1 year . . . $1.50
Regular Price of Farm Journal 5 years . . 1.00
(Or Farm Journal four years and one booklet)
2.50

We Will Send Both the Above to You for the Special Price of

$1.50

Remember the Restitution for 1 year, The Farm Journal for 5 years all for the price of $1.50

SEND IN YOUR SUBSCRIPTION TODAY

Books and Tracts
By W. H. WILSON

A BIBLE STUDY OF HADES.....15c each, or 5 for 50c.
(As compared with our modern ideas).
A critical study of Hell, showing the difference in the word in the past and in the present time.

STUDENTS TEXT BOOK 50c
How to study the Bible and rightly understand God's Word. Cloth bound, 200 Pages.

PINE WOODS BIBLE CLASS.....$1.25
Studies carried on between a class and its teacher. Cloth bound, 480 Pages.

CUNNINGLY DEVISED FABLES, 28 Pages.....10c

WHERE WILL YOU SPEND ETERNITY, 4 Pages, ... 25c per hundred

ARE YOU IN NEED OF MONEY, 4 Pages, 25c per hundred

WILL IT PAY TO BECOME A CHRISTIAN?.....25c
By Jas. W. Wilson. A neat Cloth book of 96 Pages which every one should read.

Bro. Wilson's Latest Book
Is Ready for Distribution
THE DESTINY OF RUSSIA AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES
96 Pages, Bound in Cloth, 25c.

W. H. WILSON, 625 North Willow Ave.
AUSTIN STA., CHICAGO, ILL.

WANTED!
Subscription Solicitors

We will pay an actual salary to men and women in all parts of the country, to act as agents for The Restitution. This salary will be based on your ability to take subscriptions, take care of renewals, and make collections, and will be paid weekly. You can devote all or part of your time, and can make a special offer to prospective subscribers, which we will tell you about if you are interested. We will have some announcements to make in the near future that will also help you.

If you want to work, sit down NOW and write for full information.

B. W. NUTT, Manager.

"There is a great difference between the man who is sure of what he knows an dthe one who thinks he knows it all. The one has the beginning of knowledge. The other will never truly know anything"

"Courage is the power of going forward in spit of difficulties to reach a chosen and worthy object."

"No truth is absolutely new; what is true is eternal; but old truth is new to the man who has just now found it out."

"You may depend upon it that he is a good man whose intimate friends are all good."

60 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents.

Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the

Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

The Restitution Publications

Send for all of the following books and tracts to

W. S. TOMLINSON, 10825 Orville Ave. N.E., Cleveland

A LETTER TO A FRIEND, 32 Pages 10c each, 12 for $1.00
FUTURE PROBATION, 150 Pages, 10c each, 12 for $1.00

The following tracts by M. Joblin:
THE KINGDOM OF GOD.
OLD MOTHER EARTH TO BE BORN AGAIN.
STRANGERS FROM THE COVENANT OF PROMISE.
VAIN WORSHIP.
NO IMMORTALITY OUT OF CHRIST.
GOD'S LOVE AND SOLICITUDE FOR MANKIND.
WHAT SHALL WE DO TO BE SAVED?
THE FOOLISHNESS OF PREACHING.
SALVATION, WHAT IS IT?

All the above are 16 page tracts, 100 for $1.00 any assortment.

THE PATERNITY OF JESUS, by M. Joblin, 122 Pages, each 10c. A work that proves Jesus was the son of God and not the natural son of Joseph.

THE SCRIPTURE SEARCHERS ASSISTANT, by M. Joblin, each 6c. A valuable aid to the study of the Scriptures, contains 400 references.

A WRONG DEFINITION OF LIFE AND DEATH, a six page tract, a most excellent booklet, 10 copies 25 cents; 50 copies 35 cents; 100 copies 60 cents.

THE DEVIL: WHAT, WHERE AND WHY—A 24 page tract, 5 cents a copy.

"SIGNS OF CHARACTER OR HOW TO READ CHARACTER AT SIGHT" and "HEALTH THROUGH NATURE'S LAWS"
Two books by Dr. A. Wallace Mason. One is a study of character and how we may read it by the face and head. Brother Mason has made a very close study of this subject for years, and the information given in this book will prove interesting and instructive. Price 25c, 73 pages.
The other is a work which tells how to gain and keep health as its title says, "through nature's laws" Every family should have a copy. Price 10c.

SALVATION: WHAT IS IT? A Sermon in German, translated by Henri Jerguen. Price, 10 copies, 15 cents; 50 copies, 35 cents; 100 copies, 60 cents

FOUR PAGE TRACTS:

Can You Believe? 20 for 10c, 50 for 25c.

State of Men in Death, 10 for 10c, 50 for 25c, 100 for 40c.

Life and Death, 10 for 10c, 50 for 25c, 100 for 40c.

Age to Come Not a Heresy, 10 for 10c, 50 for 25c, 100 for 40c.

TWO PAGE TRACTS

Bible Pearls—Suitable for wide distribution. 1. The Gospel. 2. Coming and Kingdom of Christ by 20,000 Baptists in 1660. 3. Immateriality. 4. Kingdom of God. 5. Nature of man and Thoughts for Thinkers. 6. Two Advents. 7. What is Religion? 8. Restitution Age. 9. Destiny of the Wicked. 10. Baptism. Ten copies for 5 cents, or assorted packages of 100 for 20 cents.

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co.
WHOLESALE OPTICIANS

We make a specialty of High Grade Prescription Work, and carry a full line of all kinds of Optical goods. All orders filled same day as received.

"S. K. N." SERVICE

Means prompt returns, careful work, moderate prices.
Goods shipped to all parts of the country.

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co. 338 SCHOFIELD BUILDING CLEVELAND OHIO

SPECIAL OFFER!

IN ORDER to increase the circulation of The Restitution, the following special offer is made:

One new subscriber for 1 year, choice of:

W. H. Wilson's "Student's Text Book," regular price.....50c
Or 5 Copies of "Cunningly Devised Fables," reg. price 50c
Or 5 Copies of "Bible Study of Hades," reg. price 50c

For Two New Subscribers

One Copy "Pine Woods Bible Class," 480 pages, rg. price, $1.25
Or "The Bible, Its Principles and Texts," 300 pages, reg., $1.25
Or One Hundred of Bro. Joblin's Tracts, regular price $1.00

Here is a chance to get some of the books you all should own. By making special arrangements with the authors we are able to offer them to you without the payment of a cent on your part, just a few minutes effort. We cannot afford to continue this offer long, so take advantage of it at once, get some new subscribers today.

THE RESTITUTION, 803 Parkwood Drive

"A LETTER TO A FRIEND"

This tract needs no introduction further than to say that it is one of the most convincing Gospel sermons ever written. Originally written as a letter to a friend by Sister C. C. Woodruff it was published and has sold extensively in tract form. In its present edition it is a 32 page tract, the price is

10c each; 12 for $1.00

There is no better way of spreading the Gospel than handing out one of these tracts wherever you have the opportunity.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

"Future Probation,
is that Awaiting any of the Unrighteous?"

Here is a work by Wm. Glenn Moncrieff that every one should read. It is one of the best things on the subject ever written and will appeal to every student of the word. It is a book of 150 pages, made to sell at 25c. We have a limited number left which we will sell at the special price of

10c each; 12 for $1.00

Send for some at once.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

The Restitution
IS THE OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA.

The Restitution.

Founded in A. D. 1852

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Lk. 19:12-15), who will be King of Kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:50-53); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17), and belief in, the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Lk. 13:3), and obedience by Baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ." (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31).

ROBT. G. HUGGINS, Editor.

—Terms of— Subscription
ONE YEAR, $1.50;
SIX MONTHS 75 CTS. IN ADVANCE

VOL. 60 — 4 CLEVELAND, OHIO, JULY 2, 1912 No. 74

WORK WHILE IT IS CALLED TODAY

German Hymn

In the name of God go forward,
Joyfully thy work pursue;
Sow thy seed in early morning,
What is done is not to do.

Do not look on what is distant,
With the near work do thy best;
Thou must sow if thou would'st gather,
Only busy hands shall rest.

It is dangerous to loiter,
Good it is to work alway;
Honorable is the sweat drop
On the brow at close of day.

What will prosper or miscarry,
Canst thou ne'er beforehand know;
But we know in way of duty,
God before thee e'er will go.

In the name of God go forward,
Joyfully thy work pursue;
Sow thy seed in early morning,
What is done is not to do.

RELIGIOUS CHANGES

In Belief and Practice Between the Resurrection of Christ and the Death of Constantine in 337 —Asceticism and Miracle Working.

Professor Harnach, one of the ablest of modern religious critics, says, "The Catholic church is that form of Christianity in which every element of the ancient world has been successively assimilated which Christianity could in any way take up into itself with out forfeiting losing itself in the world. . . . 'Christianity' has throughout sucked the marrow of the ancient world, and assimilated it."

This process of sucking up heathenism went on very actively during the third century, and with deadly effect upon the character and life of the church. The following quotation from the writings of Cyprian shows the effect that heathen philosophy was having upon the character and life of professed believers, and this description of his, slightly varied at times would very well apply in all ages to heathenized Christians.

"Each had been bent on improving his patrimony, and had forgotten what believers had done under the apostles, and what they ought to do. . . . . The pastors and deacons each forgot their duty. Works of mercy were forgotten, and discipline was at the lowest ebb. Luxury and effeminacy prevailed. Meretricious arts in dress were cultivated. Fraud and deceit were practised among the brethren. Christians could unite themselves in matrimony with unbelievers, could swear not only with reverence, but even without veracity. With haughty asperity they despised their ecclesiastics' superiors. They railed against others with outrageous acrimony, and conducted quarrels with determined malice. Even many bishops, who ought to be guides and patterns to the rest, neglecting the peculiar duties of their station, gave themselves up to secular pursuits. They deserted their places of residence and their flocks. They traveled through distant provinces in quest of pleasure and gain, gave no assistance to the needy brethren, but were insatiable in their thirst for money. They possessed estates by fraud and multiplied usury." Cyprian was bishop of Carthage from 248 to 260.

Mosheim says, speaking of this century: "The Platonism of Origen and his fame increased daily among the Christians, and in proportion to his rising credit his methods of proposing and explaining the doctrines of Christianity gained authority till it became almost universal." Here are some of the Platonic maxims adopted by these professed Christians. "The soul of the wise man ought to be removed to the greatest possible distance from the contagious influence of the body. And as the depressing weight of the body, the force of its appetites and its connections with a corrupt world, are in direct opposition to this sacred obligation, therefore all sensual pleasures are to be carefully avoided, the body is to be supported or rather extenuated by a slender diet, solitude is to be sought as the true mansion of virtue, and contemplation to be employed as the means of raising the soul as far as possible to a sublime freedom from all corporeal ties, and to a noble elevation above all terrestrial things. The person who lives in this manner shall enjoy, even in the present state, a certain degree of communion with the Deity, and, when the corporeal mass is dissolved, shall immediately ascend to the sublime regions of felicity and perfection, without passing through that state of purification and trial that awaits the generality of mankind."

These theories were enthusiastically adopted by many professing Christians. In Egypt, more especially at first, did this austere system of religion appeal to the imagination of the people. They reasoned that if their bodies could be properly emaciated they could get rid of the invisible demons who were constantly lurking round them; and more than that, by emaciating their bodies they would expect to get their souls the sooner free of the encumbrance of clay. Many of these semi-heathens fled to the deserts and lived alone (almost naked) on roots and herbs which they could gather, and the man who could invent the greatest torture for himself was considered the greatest saint. This thing grew and spread until the deserts were filled with a vast army of lazy, unclean mortals, deluding themselves into the idea that they were wonderful saints, and were sure of heaven when they should shuffle off this mortal coil.

This thing grew like the upas tree until it resulted in the famous "pillar saints" in the beginning of the fifth century, when Simon Stylites built a pillar over 60 feet high where he lived without ever descending for many years, living sometimes on one meal a week, and fasting at Lent for 40 days. These "saints" were supposed to have wonderful power with God, and to be able to work miracles; and many wonderful things are recorded of their powers in that direction.

At the present time we have many bodies all in opposition to each other, all denouncing each other, and all claiming the power of working miracles. Foremost come the Roman Catholics, then follows a vast multitude of denominations too numerous to mention, each one claiming to be specially sent of God because of their power of curing the sick. I am not aware of any of them of recent years who claim to be the successors of the apostles professing to raise the dead, yet this was one of the powers given to the apostles. The fact is, since at least the middle of the second century, this extraordinary power of working miracles was withdrawn by God. There is not the slightest doubt that God hears and answers prayer; the prayers of God's servants, we can be sure, have been and will be answered in all ages when they are according to His will, but this is a very different thing from the gift that was given by God on the day of Pentecost, and to Cornelius, and directly to Paul, which gave them the power to speak with tongues they had never learned, to cure the sick, and even to raise the dead. We have no reason to suppose that any received this power direct from God unless those mentioned. Those who received it afterwards received it by the laying on of the hands of some one who had thus received it direct from God. Paul desired to go to Rome, which he did later, to confer some spiritual gifts upon them. When all those who had received this special gift direct from God had died there was no one left who could communicate it to others; and that power, that special miraculous power, died out consequently some time in the second century. I know that many strenuously claim at the present that this power is still in existence and has been with God's people in all ages; when any of them can substantiate their claim by raising the dead, we will believe them.

There are two natural God given powers in man that have led to the cure often of very serious diseases in all ages, and it is the fact of these powers not being understood which has led to the belief in miracles worked by various denominations in bitter opposition to each other. One is the electric and brain condition of the sufferer which can be powerfully stimulated for either good or bad, sometimes by self, but more generally by powerful outside influences. The other is, that many persons have a magnetic influence apart altogether from religion of any kind, but if a powerful religious influence is brought to bear at the same time on the sufferer, as a rule so much greater will be the effect. I have relieved sufferers for many years by simply laying my hands on them. The first person I ever saw do this was Bro. George Dowie, of Edinburg, about 35 years ago, and he made no claim to miraculous power of any kind.

These two factors were brought to bear, combined with a wild fanaticism, in the third century, the result was that many miracles were claimed to have been worked by the desert saints. But Christ gives us the touchstone to try all who make such claims—"by their fruits shall ye know them." The question to settle all such claims of Divine power so extensively and loudly claimed is, "Do they believe the simple elements of the gospel as preached by Christ and His apostles without the adulteration of heathen philosophy? Are they who made the claim of having miraculous powers like Christ and His apostles in humanity, and purity of character, and self-denial?" If they claim, like the Roman Catholics, the Mormons or latter-day saints, etc., to be the only true successors of the apostles, let them manifest the apostolic power by raising the dead, if they do not comply with the two first necessary Scriptural conditions. The time came, by the developments of the third century, that not only the living "saint" who had emaciated his body in some wonderful manner was able to work miracles, but even his grave and his bones possessed this wonderful power, and that superstition has been handed down to our own time; but these miracles only occur, as they did in the third century, when the right conditions come together of brain and body of the sufferer being susceptible to powerful mental and religious influences.

While this stream of heathen philosophy was pouring into the church whose flood gates were opened, as we have seen, by Origen, we get glimpses here and there to show that the gospel of Jesus Christ had not as yet been swept entirely away by this malodorous flood. Commodian, a writer who lived after Cyprian, tells us, in some scraps of his writings we have left, that he had been a Pagan, but by a study of the Bible had come to believe in it. He tells us that as he had believed with the great majority that death made an end of man's personal existence, he was especially attracted to the promise of eternal life through Christ which was offered him in the Scriptures. So here was a learned heathen attracted to the life in Christ, when, as he tells us, along with the vast mass of the heathen he had no belief in a future life. Our modern believers in the inherent immortality of man claim that it is true because all men have believed it; in Commodian's time they evidently did not do so.

Arnobius lived at the end of the third century, and was probably put to death in the great persecution in the beginning of the fourth century under Diocletian. Arnobius was a very learned man, and was converted from heathenism in mature life; he has never been a favorite with the "fathers." He certainly was not a disciple of Origen, for he appears to have accepted the plain teaching of the Scriptures concerning life in Christ only. There is a work of his extant called Arnobius among the Heathen. In this, among many other things, he deals with the heathen doctrine of the immortality of the soul. He says: "'But,' say my opponents, 'if souls are mortal and of neutral character, how can they from their neutral properties become immortal?' If we should say that we do not know this, and only believe it because said by One mightier than we, when will our readiness of belief seem mistaken if we believe that to the Almighty King nothing is hard, nothing difficult, and that which is impossible to us is possible to Him at His command. For is there anything which may withstand His will, or does it not follow of necessity that what He willed must be done. . . . In the same way, then, in which the boon of immortality is God's gift to those who were assuredly produced will He deign to confer eternal life upon souls also, although fell death seems able to cut them off and blot them out of existence in utter annihilation."

This was rank heresy to the orthodox followers of Origen's heathen philosophy concerning the deathlessness of all souls. No wonder then that Arnobius should have been ignored and despised by the fathers in all ages, because he dared to believe and teach that no one had immortality in the present state, and can receive it only through Jesus Christ. He says further: "None but the Almighty God can preserve souls, nor is there any one besides who can give them length of days, and grant to them also a spirit which shall never die, except He who alone is immortal and everlasting, and restricted by no time limit."

A. WALLACE MASON.

THE TRUTH DEFENDED—9

An Ex-Methodist Pleads for the Truth

Mrs. Chas. Thomas

Harken, my brethren, hath not God chosen the people of this world, rich in faith, and heirs of the kingdom, which he hath promised to them that love him? (Jas. 2:5). Is anything promised to another if they already have it? They were "heirs" of a promise. Speaking of the judgment Jesus said, Then shall the king say unto them on his right hand, Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world. Fear not, little flock, for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom (Luke 12:32). Not has given you, but they were to fear not because an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ (II. Pet. 1:11)—not has been, but "shall be," future.

In the parable of the pounds the fact that the kingdom was future is made very plain. Jesus was passing through Jericho teaching as he went, and he spake this parable, because he was nigh Jerusalem, and because they thought that the kingdom should immediately appear (Luke 18:11-19). Notice the reason he had for speaking this parable, because they thought that when he reached Jerusalem that the kingdom of God should appear. He said therefore, A certain nobleman went into a far country to receive for himself a kingdom and to return. He had come to receive for himself a kingdom. He called his ten servants and delivered them ten pounds and said unto them, Occupy till I come. The servants are those who believe on Jesus. But his citizens hated him and sent a message after his saying, We will not have this man to reign over us. (The citizens are the Jews and those that reject him). And it came to pass that when he was returned, having received the kingdom, then he commanded those servants to be called unto him to whom he had given the money, that he might know how much every man had gained by trading. Then came the first saying, Lord thy pound hath gained ten pounds. And he said unto him, Well done, thou good and faithful servant, because thou hast been faithful in a very little thing have thou authority over ten cities. (Luke 19:12-17). This is the judgment day, for he will judge his servants when he has received the kingdom and returned.

This story, like all others, point to but one thing; that they expected the kingdom then, and Jesus tells them that they were to await until his return. We know that the disciples looked for the kingdom at their time, for when they were come together they asked him saying, Lord, wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel? And he said unto them, It is not for you to know the times, or the seasons which the Father hath put into his own power (Acts 1:7). In the Lord's prayer the fact that the same kingdom we have been reading about, is to be set up in the future, is made plain. We are to pray, Thy Kingdom come; thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven. When his kingdom does come then his will will be done on earth as it is now done in heaven. Let the nations be glad and sing for joy, for thou shalt judge the people righteously, and govern the nations upon the earth (Psalm 21:20). He now governs in heaven and in the hearts of his people, the people that are heirs of the coming kingdom, but he shall come and set up a divine political dominion on this earth. Blessed are the meek; for they shall inherit the earth (Matt. 5:5). And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed, and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall stand forever (Dan. 2:4-4). And the seventh angel sounded, and there were great voices in heaven saying, The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdom of our Lord and of his Christ, and he shall reign forever and ever (Rev. 11:15). For thus saith the Lord that created the heavens, God himself that formed the earth and made it, he hath established it, he created it not in vain, he formed it to be inhabited.

WHAT I BELIEVE AND WHY No. 5.

Charles Clifford Maple.

We find also that the New Testament has given us names for the individual members of the church, as well as for the church. If, therefore, we would be scriptural, let us use the terms that inspiration has given us.

I wish to mention four that appear as quite general after the day of Pentecost, and continued during the history of the church as we find recorded in the word of God.

I.—The Disciples of Christ was the first name by which the followers of Christ were called. A disciple is a learner or follower. John had his disciples; other teachers had their disciples; so Christ had his. We find this term used quite frequently in the Acts of the apostles. In 9:26, "Saul assayed to join the disciples." In 19:1, At Ephesus he found certain disciples. In 20:7, The Disciples come together to break bread. This term implies that we are followers or learners of Christ and can properly be applied to any today who are in the church of God—members of the body of Christ.

II.—Christians. The disciples were called Christians (Acts 11:26). Christians and disciples were then one and the same, Christian being only another name for the follower of Christ. If any man suffer as a Christian (I. Pet. 4:16). "Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian." (Acts 26:28). This name appears to have become quite a general name applied to the followers of Christ. However, the early church were Christians, only they were content with that name and did not, as do many modern societies, prefix another title to designate what kind of Christians, or what particular branch of Christians; they were all one.

III.—Brethren. The disciples or Christians were also called brethren, and this term appears very common in the acts of the apostles and in the epistles. "One is your Master, even Christ, and all ye are brethren." We are all in the same family, if members of the house of God.

How much more scriptural for us to speak of the followers of Christ as brethren and sisters than to say Mr. and Mrs. How much more the spirit of fellowship may be felt and the bond of union. Paul wrote to different churches and in addressing them he generally called them "brethern" (Rom. 1:13; Col. 1:2; I. Thess. 4:1; Heb. 2:11).

IV.—Saints. "Beloved of God, called to be saints" (Rom. 1:7). Some people are wonderfully afraid of the term "saint." But it is just as scriptural as that of disciples, Christian, brethern or any other term we may mention. Paul in addressing his letters to the people of God in the different cities, often addressed them as saints (Eph. 1:1; Phil 1:1; Col. 1:2; Rom. 1:7; I. Cor. 1:2). The people thus addressed are the followers of Christ. Disciple, Christian, brethern. These expressions, I believe, does or should at any rate, properly designate the follower of Christ. Many are the promises made to the saints in the word. These terms are all scriptural, and we may apply them to the followers of Christ today, but let us remember that they are all individual terms and never once applied to the church as a name or title for that organization.

Alexander Campbell once said, "Speak where the Bible speaks, and be silent where it is silent." We need to remember this in our preaching and in our practice.

NEEDY FIELDS FOR LITERATURE

Lillie H. Willis

The Y. W. C. A. is doing splendid work in the United States Army and Navy, in both of which it has a large membership and many branches, and its activities have the hearty approval and encouragement of our government.

The distribution of good reading matter among our soldiers and sailors is one of the many good things it does, but it seems that the demand for current literature at the army posts and naval stations exceed the supply and John S. Tichenor, secretary of the Army and Navy Y.M.C.A., headquarters in New York City, is making a general appeal to the people to send in their spare reading matter for this purpose. By his request we print the following extract from his recent letter to Comfort:

Old books and magazines are greatly appreciated by our United States soldiers and sailors all over the world. We are constantly receiving urgent requests from Alaska, Philippine Islands and other isolated posts as well as from our men-of-war, for reading matter. Would you be willing to mention this fact in your paper and state that books and magazines may be sent freight prepair to the Army and Navy Y. M. C. A., 1543 East 28th st., New York City, from which office they will be forwarded to the men.

Very truly yours,
J. S. TICHENER,

Don't forget to prepay freight, express or postage, on anything you send as this is a most worthy charity.

The Restitution

Issued weekly by

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING COMPANY.

Entered as second-class matter under act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

TERMS.

One year $1.50; six months 75 cents, in advance.

ROBT. G. HUGGINS.....Editor
BUELL W. NUTT.....Manager

BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Burton H. Lang, Harry Pott,
Chas. A. Goss, Robt. G. Pate,
Buell W. Nutt, D. G. Robison,
W. E. Tomlinson.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

All remittances should be sent by bank draft, post office money order or express money order to The Restitution Publishing Co., 803 Parkwood drive, Cleveland, Ohio.

All communication intended for publication should be sent to the editor, Robt. G. Huggins, 10422 Lee avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

It is necessary to adhere strictly to the rule of not returning unused manuscripts. Writers will please keep copies, or risk the loss.

While the editor exercises a general supervision over the articles appearing in The Restitution, his endorsement does not extend to the interpretation of details nor the exegesis of particular texts in the writings of contributors.

Cleveland, Ohio ....July 2, 1912

EDITORIAL

As we go to press we have to report the sudden death of Bro. F. A. Bond, of this city. Full particulars will be published next week.

RICH SEEN AS FOES OF ZION MOVEMENT

Zionists Began to Arrive in Cleveland June 28th for a Six Day's Session

The task of securing Palestine for Jewish colonization belongs to the idealist.

That is how Bernard A. Rosenblatt, general secretary of the Federation of American Zionists, which opened its fifteenth annual session in Cleveland yesterday, answers some of the wealthy members of his race, who, he charges, say they believe in Zionism, providing that with the establishment of a Jewish political nation they be given the position of state.

Wealthy Jews don't have to desert their counting houses for unfruitful farms in Palestine in order to carry out the Zionist movement, he says. They can step aside and give place to the Jewish idealist, whether from gilded palace or hovel of the ghetto. That is the Rosenblatt doctrine.

"Those who belong to the fortunate leisure class look with scorn upon what they regard as a retrograde movement," said Rosenblatt. "It takes a long propaganda to make them understand that Zionism does not imply that all Jews must immediately pack up and move back to the land of our forefathers.

"We would establish a Jewish nation in Palestine, and those individuals who cannot fit into the national life of a rejuvenated Jewish people not only should not, but must not, emigrate to Palestine. Those Jews who would not settle in Palestine owe a duty to their persecuted brethren in Russia, Roumania and Galica, to whom Palestine would mean a safe home.

"In short, we expect the Jewish nation to be rebuilt by idealists, who want to preserve our nation and increase its powers for righteousness, and our persecuted brethren to whom Palestine would be an economical blessing."

MANY THOUGHTS FROM MANY MINDS

A pound of pluck is worth a ton of luck.—T. A. Garfield.

Co-operation—a spirit of helpfulness. Fear is the Graveyard of Prosperity.—Loth.

Be satisfied with nothing but your best.—E. R. Sill.

One today is worth two tomorrows.—Poor Richard.

He that will not look before must look behind.—From the Gallic.

To believe in men is the first step towards helping them.—The Outlook.

The man who never makes a mistake is the man who never does anything.—Roosevelt.

Hath any wronged thee? Be bravely revenged. Slight it and the work is begun, forgive it and it is finished.—Quarles.

A very small amount of doing is better than a wagon load of resolutions.

It is not work that kills men, it is worry.—H. W. Beecher.

The five qualities necessary to a successful business career are:
Honesty.
Health.
Industry.
Ability.
Knowledge of the business you are engaged in.

The only way to have a friend is to be one.—Emerson.

Those can conquer who think they can.—Emerson.

A single fact is worth a cart load of argument.

The man who does a little and does it well, does a great deal.

You can't until you can—but you always can try.

One of these days is none of these days.

He who hunts for flowers will find flowers; he who loves weeds may find weeds.—Beecher.

Better aim at a star than shoot down a well; you'll hit higher.

Education makes the man.

As you learn, teach; as you get, give; as you receive, distribute.—Spurgeon.

Remember that when you are right you can afford to keep your temper and when you are wrong you can't afford to lose it.

If you would have things come your way go after them.

Not what you do but how you do it is the test of your capacity.—Dr. J. M. Studley.

In life, cheeriness is the ace of trumps and always wins the trick.—Sunshine Books.

CORN SHEAVES

Gathered from Everywhere

Darwinian Fables—Let those who like search for their ancestors in zoological garden; I prefer to trace up mine to the Garden of Eden and the hand of God.

Historic Providence — When God has a purpose to fulfil, says Palmer in his History of the Jewish Nation, the history of the whole world teaches us that an instrument is never wanting; and while men are wondering who next shall take up the cause and fulfil the mission, the man is found, and the people recognize with wonder and with awe that from the very first God has prepared him for the work.

Chinee Chronology—One of their sacred books, the Shu-King (treating the history and of the government and laws of the ancient monarchs) begins with the Emperor Yao, 2,357 years B. C. This date is just 76 years after the deluge, and 25 years before the birth of Peleg, in whose days the earth was divided into nations.

Have and Give—Such as I have give I thee. Have —give. Have and give should never be separated. What God hath joined together let no man put asunder.

The Mount of Moses—Mount Sinai is an immense block, isolated from the surrounding mountains by deep valleys, so that it would be an easy task to set bounds round it, and prevent persons from making the ascent. The nether end of the mountain is a magnificent bluff, rising precipitously from the plain, truly a mount which might be touched. In front of this stretches a broad plain, which has been ascertained by Captain H. S. Palmer, R. E., from the actual measurements of the Ordnance Survey, to be capable of containing over a million of spectators. The highest summit of the mountain is completely hidden from this plain; and on this secluded peak Moses might well have remained for forty days until the people "wot not what had become of him." The Arabs here show that traditional spot in which the law was delivered to Moses; from the lower peak, overlooking the plain, the lawgiver of Israel must have proclaimed the commandments of God to the expectant hosts assembled beneath. The distance from Egypt to Jebel Musa (Mount of Moses), exactly accords with the number of stations or days' journey mentioned in the Bible; the physical aspect of the mountain and its surroundings exactly answer the description given in the Bible of the Mountain of the law; and traditions of the events recorded in the Bible still linger in the tales which the untutored Arabs tell to their children over their camp fires.

A person who is a brother of Christ at the meeting of the ecclesia, but not in the wicked surroundings of the week, is a mere hypocrite. He is deceiving himself.

FALSE PHILOSOPHY

Viola Caseley

"Beware lest any man spoil you through philosophy and vain deceit, after the tradition of men, after the rudiments of the world, and not after Christ, for in him dwelleth all the fulness of the God head bodily" (Col. 2:8-9).

Here we are warned not to loose sight of the simple truth and power of the gospel, and seek empty substitutes which will ruin us by depriving us of our saving interest in Christ. Humanity is continually attempting to exalt human wisdom and human science above the authority of the Scriptures.

It seems to be pleasant pastime for philosophers to uproot the past, introducing some simple theory for the purpose of arousing sensation and gaining temporary honor. Nevertheless people will yield to such folly rather than stand upon the Scriptures as a sure foundation of the essence of divine truth.

Let us consider for a moment the Darwinian theory—the development of the race by the process of evolution. Who, as a believer in God and his word, will believe such an absurdity, when in the Bible it says, "And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul" (Gen. 2-7). "So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them" (Gen. 1-27).

Regardless of this people will believe that man was developed from the lowest form of animal matter.

We read in I Cor. 15:39, "All flesh is not the same flesh, but there is one kind of flesh of men, another flesh of beasts, another of fishes, and another of birds." If the process of evolution were available, all flesh would be the same.

The Bible and its teachings have stood for ages, while petty theories spring up now and then. Let us, beloved, remain steadfast, standing on the promises of Christ our Lord, "for in him dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily," i.e., the fulness of the divine nature. His gospel is what we need. It imparts to us a knowledge of God, a remedy for sin, and light and hope of the next world.

Sir M. Hale said, "There is no book like the Bible for excellent wisdom and use."

J. L. Adams said, "In what light soever we regard the Bible, whether with reference to revelation, to history, or to morality, it is an invaluable and inexhaustible mine of knowledge and virtue."

Let us hol dup the Bible as the "Ideal Book" and resort to it often to receive the inspiration therein.

THE NEW COVENANT

F. M. Howell

The "new covenant" is new to the house of Israel and the house of Judah as compared with the covenant that was made with their fathers on Mount Sinai (Ex. 34:28); which gendereth to bondage (Gal. 4:24); but it does not change or disannul the covenant that God made with Abraham and his seed (Christ), that it should make the promise of none effect (Gal. 3:17). Under the first covenant the Israelites were required to keep the law and the commandments to the letter, but under the new covenant all who accept and seal it, do not keep the letter, but the spirit of the law (Rom. 7:6; II Cor. 3:6). The "old covenant" required the Israelites to seal it with the sign of circumcision (Josh. 5:2-7), the same as when the covenant was made with Abraham (Gen. 17:10,11); but the law was added "because of transgressions, till the seed should come, to whom the promise was made" (Gal. 3:19). The "new covenant" was initiated by a Mediator between God and man, even Jesus the Son of God, who died as the Testator, so that "they which are called might receive the promise of eternal inheritance. For a Testament is of force after men are dead: otherwise it is of no strength at all while the Testator liveth" (Heb. 9:15-17). As God could not die, he gave his son to die as the Testator, and by his death he also broke down the middle wall of partition between the Jew and the Gentile, and made it possible for the Gentiles to become Abraham's seed, and heirs of the promises, for before this they were strangers to the covenants of promise, having no hope and without God in the world (Eph. 2:12).

The Mosaic law was given to the Jews only, and all of them were subject to that law until it was fulfilled by the death of Christ in so far as it relates to the Jews who accept Christ through faith and baptism into his death; for to them these ordinances which were against them, were blotted out and nailed to the cross (Col. 2:14), so that they, as well as Gentile Christians, are not now under the law, but under grace (Rom. 6:14).

The "words" of the "new covenant" are just what Jesus the Mediator of it has enjoined. After he had commissioned his disciples to preach the gospel of the kingdom, and to baptize believers, he said, "He that believeth and is baptized, shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned."

We find, then, that after the covenant has been accepted through faith in the gospel of the kingdom which is the same as the promises made to Abraham and his seed (Gal. 3:8), it must be sealed by baptism (Rom. 4:11; Col. 2:11). After we have become covenanters with God through faith and baptism, and members of his household, then the only laws requiring obedience under the new covenant are the two "great commandments" given by our Mediator, of which he said, "On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets" (Matt. 22:37-40). Thus the laws of the new covenant are written in the mind and in the heart.

The type under the first covenant and under the law that was used as a seal of the covenant, and typified the cutting off of the sins of the body, was circumcision, but under the gospel the seal of the "new covenant" was changed to a type of that evolution which is necessary in order to get rid of the body of flesh itself, which is accomplished through death and a resurrection; therefore the gospel type or figure is a temporary watery grave, and a rising again to a newness of life (Rom. 6:4).

In Paul's letter to the Hebrews he compares Christ with the Levitical priesthood of Aaron, and says, "But now hath he obtained a more excellent ministry, by how much also he is the Mediator of a better covenant, which was established upon better promises" (Heb. 8:6). Jesus is the Mediator between God and man, and sits as our advocate or intercessor with God, and helps the penitent seeker after truth to accept, seal, and obey this "new covenant."

It is a better covenant than that which God made with Israel, because the Christian does not have to obey the strict Mosaic law, but worships God with the heart and the mind, the Bible being his only infallible guide.

The "new covenant" is established also upon better promises, because the Israelites were only promised a temporal possession of Canaan while in this life, whereas Christians are adopted children of God, therefore are heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ, and are promised an everlasting possession of the uttermost parts of the earth (Psa. 2:8), and are to be partakers of the divine nature (I Peter 1:4).

The Spirit Shall Return Unto God Who Gave It.—Eccl. xii. 7.

When we tell people that man is mortal (Job. iv. 17), that he dies wholly on account of sin, and that in death there is no remembrance of God (Psa. vi. 5), they refer triumphantly to the statement at the head of this article, to prove, as they say, that "there is a part of man which never dies." In citing this passage in favor of the immortality of the soul, they have to assume the very thing they wish to prove. Let us take a calm view of this Scripture and its connections, and it will be found in perfect harmony with the rest of the Bible teaching on the condition of man in life and in death.

In this statement that at a certain time "the spirit shall return unto God who gave it," the existence of God is taken for granted, thou in other portions of Scripture it is set forth dogmatically. "There is a God in heaven, that revealeth secrets," said the prophet Daniel in presence of the haughty monarch of Babylon, Dan. ii. 28.

1. There is a God.

2. This God is in heaven.

The God who is "gave" something to something. That which was given. That which he "gave" who gave it" to that to which it was given. That which he "gave" is termed "the spirit." To whom was it given? To man. Was that which was given a being endowed with consciousness before and at the time so given? Did it have personality? Men who dogmatize on the immortality of the soul should engage their thoughts along this line. Their teaching is one sided and inconsistent. They have a great deal to say about the conscious existence of the immortal soul after the dissolution of the body, but we hear them say nothing about how or when this soul became conscious—in short, when it began to be a soul. If "the spirit" in the Scripture under discussion is the same as the theological immortal soul, was or is it conscious before being given? We would not evade the statement that "the body without the spirit (margin—breath) is dead" (Ja. ii. 26). The very "giving" of "the spirit" (Eccl. xii. 7) implies a necessity. But there are a few questions of which we should not lose sight. If that "spirit" was not endowed with consciousness before being given to man, upon what reasonable grounds can it be argued that there will be consciousness when it "shall return unto God who gave it?" It is a fact that we have no recollection of what transpired before the spirit was given. It is an unwarranted assumption that it will be conscious when it returns unto God who gave it. When the question of previous consciousness and knowledge is properly considered, the argument for consciousness after death falls flat.

What is "the spirit" when it returns "unto God who gave it?" Is it a man? a woman? an angel? a saint? a sinner? Was it pure and sinless when it was given? Is it so when it returns unto God who gave it? Or does the fact that "the spirit" animates "the body," (Jas. ii 26) modify its conditions? If this is affirmed, what modifies that spirit? Does the body, or do external conditions? If either, would not the ineyitable tendency be downward? In this case no spirit returns unto God pure and holy. The fact is, that "the body without the spirit is dead;" and how a body which of itself is lifeless, could influence a spirit for evil or good, is not so easy to imagine, much less to say. Let it be steadfastly kept in mind that "the spirit shall return (not go) unto God who gave it." It is no more "the spirit" when it returns unto God" than it was when he "gave it." Whatever entitles it to the distinction of the spirit when it returns, belonged to it when God gave it.

It is assumed that the statement under consideration means, "The immortal soul goes to heaven." Be it remembered, "The spirit shall return unto God," goes back to where it was before it was given. It was the spirit before God gave it. It was the spirit when he gave it, and will be the same spirit when it returns unto God who gave it. I repeat these things in order to rivet them upon the reader's attention.

It is supposed that when the spirit shall return to God who gave it, a sentinent being with thought, volition, and emotions, takes its flight upward, away from the earth, and passes through space into heaven. But stop and reflect a moment. The earth is supposed to be a globe. If six men die at the same time at six different points of the earth, and they each go up, the longer they go, the farther they will be apart. Do not dismiss this matter with a sneer. It needs and deserves looking into along with the rest.

Whose "spirit shall return unto God who gave it?" A further question will answer this one. In the first part of our text it is said, "Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was." Question: Whose dust returns to the earth? Man's when he is dead. Which man? Every man, whether good or bad. There is no difference. Then since the first statement applies to all, good and bad alike, why should not the second? No difference is made between "the spirit" of a good man and "the spirit" of a bad man. All men have this "spirit," and when "the dust shall return to the earth as it was, the spirit shall return unto God who gave it."

Theology has it something like this, "The immortal soul of a good man goes to God who gave it, and the immortal soul of a bad man goes to a hell of eternal torture (who gave it?)" This is not, of course, very consistent, but it is the only conclusion you can reach from the premise of the immortality of the soul. If "the dust" of the most pious "returns to the earth as it was," then with equal reason does 'the spirit" of the most wicked person "return unto God who gave it."

There is an adverb in this statement which we must not overlook. "Then shall" etc. Question, When? When "the silver cord is loosed, and the bolden bowl is broken, and the pitcher is broken at the fountain, and the wheel is broken at the cistern." Verse 6. "Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was." All of which is but the culmination of "the evil days" and "the years. . . . . in which thou shalt say, I have no pleasure in them." People want to die and go to heaven. They try to make themselves and others believe that their dying day will be a happy one, though they take medicine and do all in their power to ward off death and keep out of heaven as long as possible. They really feel like Hezekiah did when he was about to go to the gates of Sheol—They "chatter like a crane or a swallow." Solomon had "no pleasure" in the days which introduce and end up in the return of the dust to the earth as it was, and the return of the spirit unto God who gave it, and he knew there would be others to share this feeling with him.

What is that spirit which God gave to man? "The Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul." Gen. ii, 7. This is the simple narrative of man's creation, endorsed by the apostle Paul (I Cor. xv).

1. God formed man.

2. He formed him out of the dust of the ground (of the earth).

3. He breathed into his nostrils the breath of life.

4. Man became a living soul.

If anything further was done with man or added to him, to make him what he was, the record does not state it. Job said that "the spirit of God" was in his nostrils (margin, "That is, the breath which God gave him.") Job xxvii 3. This spirit (or breath) "God gave him" when he breathed into his nostrils the breath of life. It is the same breath (or spirit) referred to in Eccl. iii. 19, 20, where it is said, "Yea, they (man and beast) have all one breath; so that a man hath no pre-eminence above the beast; for all is vanity. All go unto one place; all are of the dust, and all turn to dust again." Where was "the spirit" before God "gave it?" Do you say "in heaven?" In that case a spirit will return to heaven where it came from. But where is your authority? Surely, the text does not say so. Read the first chapter of Genesis. "And the spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters." This is that which was in Job's nostrils, and is the element which causes man to live. When "the spirit" leaves the man and returns "unto God who gave it," it goes back to the fountain of life (Psa. xxxvi. 9)) which supplies all creatures with life and consciousness.

With God there is no less life because he gives of his spirit to quicken man, and no more when that same spirit returns to him. That spirit is not a person with consciousness or individuality, but the vital element that acts upon the organism of man causing him to live and move, and when it returns unto God who gave it, goes back to the great reservoir of life. In Ezek. xxxvi this breath came into the dead, and they lived. No immortal souls or immortal or deathless spirits came down from heaven, but "breath" came "from the four winds," and breathed upon the slain, and they lived. At the raising of Lazarus, John xi, that which had been laid into the tomb was by the Lord called "Lazarus," Lazarus "our friend" had not taken his flight to heaven, was not called and did not come from thence, but "came forth" from the "place" where he had been "laid" by human hands before.

Thus, then, Eccl. xii. 7, when duly considered in all its bearings, and divested of all preconceived notions, so far from teaching the immortality of the soul, teaches the exact opposite. The man of theology is immortal, does not die, and needs no resurrection, while the man of the Bible is mortal, dies, is buried, and needs a resurrection in order to live again: "Let God be true."—An old tract now out of print.

INDIANA BEREAN REPORT

The Indiana Bereans held their annual business meeting at Plymouth, Indiana, on Wednesday, of the Bible school, June 19, 1912. The meeting was opened with song, followed by prayer, offered by the president Sister E. C. Railsback, after which the different reports were read and accepted. A motion was then carried to draw funds from the treasury to pay for new Berean outlines.

The following officers were then elected by ballot: Emma C. Railsback, president; Rosa Roose, vice president; Flora Harris, treasurer; Glenn O. Logan, corresponding secretary, and Minnie Rouch, recording secretary.

MINNIE ROUCH, Sec.

The persons who do not walk in love are not of God, however clearly they may understand the truth, and however zealous and contentious they may be for it.

ETERNAL LIFE—THE MYTH OF SCIENCE—THE TRUTH OF SCRIPTURE

An Address by J. R. Norrie

Man is a noble animal, the head of the creation of God, all things have been put under his feet. He has tunnelled the bowels of the earth, and fathomed the depths of the sea; he has counted the number of the stars, and weighed the globe in a balance. But he remains ignorant of himself. He stands helpless before the mystery of his own origin, puzzled by the daily facts of his existence; while the problem of his destiny lies hid in impenetrable gloom. Not that he has made no efforts to lift the vail. Every age has left its chronicle of specious reasoning, patient research, and daring speculation; but all have been in vain, though the pride of man's heart has ceased the failure to be but tardily admitted, and has rendered the Divine communication on this point so unpalatable, that, rather than accept it, men have invented and proclaimed another scheme. Rather than abndon their own conceptions, for the plan of infinite wisdom, men have often been ready, even while professing belief in the sacred record, to bend that record to suit their own conceptions of the greatness of humanity and the eternal future reserved for every soul of man.

Our subect tonight may be appropriately treated under four heads. (1) Some assumptions which have been made, apart from Scripture, regarding the possession by man of Inherent immortality. (2) The testimony of science to this point. (3) Some assumptions which have been made from the Scriptures in support of inherent immortality, and (4) the true Scripture doctrine of immortality or eternal life.

I—Some Assumptions which have been made, apart from Scripture, regarding the possession by man of Inherent immortality.

In treating this division of the subject, I shall be content to quote from two well known writers, one a poet, the other a theologian, and I chose them because they are typical of a large class. When the poet, James Montgomery, wrote the touching lines:

"Friend after friend departs—who hath not lost a friend?
There is no union here of hearts, that finds not here an end."

he uttered a truth which needs no demonstration. He struck a chord which echoes through the empty chambers of every bereaved heart. But, when he goes on to say:

"Beyond the flight of time, beyond this vale of death,
There surely is some blessed clime where life is not a breath;
Nor life's affections transient fire, whose sparks fly upward and expire," he leaves the broad field of fact, and (speaking as a man) enters the airy heights of speculation. He indulges in a hope, the "wish" which is "father to the thought;" he expresses popular longings which have no ground or warrant in actual human experience. He speaks of that "undiscovered country from whose bourn no traveler returns;" and the entire annals of human biology afford no evidence that the end of "life's fitful fever" shall introduce the poet's "blessed clime." It may be true, but, speaking merely from the standpoint of nature, evidence fails. No son of Adam has ever come back from "beyond the vale of death" to confirm by personal experience the poet's idea.

To assert, as has sometimes been done, that the widespread existence of this desire goes to show that the thing longed for is the birthright and possession of all, scarcely requires a refutation, even admitting the desire for personal immortality to be universal (which is far from being the case). It might with equal force be maintained that the pangs of hunger betoken a hearty meal already enjoyed. It would be more reasonable and much safer to argue that the desire for immortality was implanted by the Almighty when He made and fashioned man, that he might "seek for" it.

The theologian whom I shall quote is Bishop Butler, author of the famous "Analogy of Religion Natural and Revealed." He urged in this work, 10 years ago, the reasonableness of a future life, from the facts supplied by the world of nature, on the ground that it does not involve a greater change after death than some changes which take place before it. His words are:

"From infancy to mature age, we find it to be a general law of nature in our own species, that the same . . individuals, should exist in degrees of life and perception, with capacities of action, of enjoyment and suffering, in one period of it. And in other creatures the same law holds. . . . Thus all the various and wonderful transformations of animals are to be taken into consideration."

The bishop's argument, even if granted, only means, that such a thing may be true; it does not and cannot demonstrate that it is true, and if the reasoning has any force at all, it has equal force in relation to a future life for the lower animals, a conclusion which the learned bishop candidly admits, and combats objections to it. Even Bishop Butler, however, in arguing for the reasonableness of a future life, is content to assume its immortality. He presents no analogy from nature to show that its duration must be eternal. Popular views have chimed in so closely with those quoted, that, as Mr. Edward White says in his Life of Christ, "Theologians and poets had it all their own way."

II—The Testimony of Science to the Inherent Immortality of Man.

There can be little doubt that the supposed analogy from nature was found, because it was previously held that the natural immortality of the soul was a Bible doctrine. But the latest available science has no voice in favor of this dogma. For the sake of brevity and clearness I shall limit my remarks under this head to some statements by Mr. Henry Drummond, professor of Natural Science in the Free Church College, Glasgow, and to some scientific opinions which he quotes from other writers in his recent remarkable work "Natural Law in the Spiritual World."

"Science meets the entire conception of immortality with a direct negative. In the face of a powerful consensus against even the possibility of a future life, to content one self with saying that science pretended to no argument in favor of it, would be at once impertinent and dishonest. . . . The fatal verdict is recorded by a hundred hands, and with scarcely a shadow of qualification (p. 222)." He quotes from Buchner's "Force and Matter" as follows (p. 223): "Unprejudiced philosophy is compelled to reject the idea of an individual immortality and of a personal continuance after death. With the decay and dissolution of its material substratum, through which alone it has acquired a conscious existence and become a person, and upon which it was dependent, the spirit must cease to exist." Another writer (Vogt) says—"Physiology decides definitely and categorically against individual immortality, as against any special existence of the soul." And Mr. Graham, to whose work "The Creed of Science," he also refers, "sums up the position of recent science with regard to the whole doctrine thus"—"Such is the argument of science, seemingly decisive against a future life. As we listen to her array of syllogisms, our hearts die within us. The hopes of men placed in one scale to be weighed, seem to fly up against the massive weight of her evidence placed in the other. It seems as if all our arguments were vain and unsubstantial, as if our future expectations were the foolish dreams of children, as if there could be no other possible verdict arrived at upon the evidence brought forward."

Mr. Drummond himself endorses these views, saying (p. 226) the difficulty of holding the doctrine that thought, volition or emotion as such are to survive the grave * * In spite of what has been advanced to the contrary, in spite of the hopes and wishes of mankind, in spite of all the scientific and philosophic attempts to make it tenable, is still profound. No secular theory of personal continuance, as even Butler acknowledged does not equally demand the eternality of the brute. No secular theory defines the point in the claim of evolution at which organisms become endowed with immortality. . . . And if we have nothing more to fan hope than the unexplored mystery of the whole region, or the unknown remainders among the potencies of life, then, as those who have 'hope only in this world,' we are 'of all men most miserable.'" This, then, is the latest voice of science, uttered by one of its ablest exponents, and it seems but to echo the angel's reproach to the bereaved disciples: "Why seek ye the living among the dead?"

III—Some Assumptions Which Have Been Made from the Scriptures in Support of Inherent Immortality.

It is commonly assumed that although the doctrine is not expressly stated, the Scriptures throughout take the Immortality of the Soul for granted. This is a tremendous assumption. It is a fact, of course, that the doctrine is not expressly stated in Scripture, and those who hold it, knowing it cannot be met with there in as many words, are compelled to fall back upon the assertion that it is implied in many passages. But this refuge is no shelter, for (1) not only is the Bible silent upon the Soul's Immortality, but (2) it is strongly outspoken as to its mortality.

We never meet such phrases as "immortal soul," "never dying soul," "deathless spirit," etc., in the Bible, although so common in current religious literature and teaching. On the contrary the consistent and abundant testimony of Scripture is that man, as such, is absolutely and wholly mortal. Here are some samples. "In the day thou eatest thereof, thou shalt surely die" (Gen. ii:17) —"Dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return" (Gen. iii: 19)—"That which befalleth the sons of men befalleth beasts, even one thing befalleth them: so that a man hath no pre-eminence above a beast" (Eccl. iii:19)—"In death there is no remembrance of Thee" (Psalm vi: 5)—"The soul that sinneth it shall die" (Ezek. xviii:4,20) —"The grave cannot praise Thee; death cannot celebrate Thee: they that go down into the pit cannot hope for Thy truth" (Isa. xxxviii: 18) —"By one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men" (Rom. v:12) —"The wages of sin is death" (vi:23).—"All flesh is grass, and all the glory of man as the flower of grass" (I Peter i:24). —"For what is your life? It is even a vapor, that appeareth for a little time, and then vanisheth away" (James iv:14). So we find that the Law, the Psalms, the Prophets, and Apostles all agree in describing men as possessing an essentially mortal nature.

It is further assumed that because man received the breath or spirit of the Almighty breathed into his nostrils, he must, from the necessities of the case, have received an immortal spirit; and because he was also created in the image of God, it is inferred that he was endowed with immortality. With regard to the first of these two assumptions, observe the testimony, "The Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul" (Gen. ii:17). Observe, the passage does not say that God breathed into man's nostrils "the spirit of God," but "the breath of life; and man became a living soul" (Gen. ii:7). Observe, the passage does not say that God breathed into man's nostrils "the spirit of God;" but "the breath of life," a term used to describe "all flesh." (Gen. vi:17; vii:15-22.) Nor is it said that he "received" a "living soul" but that he "became" one; and the kind of soul that he became was, not an "immortal, never dying soul," but simply "a living soul." If he was immortal, it was vain to debar him from the Tree of Life. Misconceptions as to the Bible meaning of the word "soul" have caused endless confusion. Here it simply has the force of "creature," and is frequently applied to the lower animals, e.g., "God said let the waters bring forth abundantly the moving creature that hath life"—(Heb. soul) —Gen. i:20)—"Every living creature (Heb. soul) that moveth"—v.21—"Let the earth bring forth the living creature (Heb.—soul) after his kind"—v. 24. "Everything that creepeth upon the earth wherein there is life" (Heb.—a living soul)—v. 30. Dr. Young, in his translation, renders Gen. ii. 7, "Man became a living creature," and the word is actually applied to dead men. See Lev. v:2; xxii:4; Num. ix:6.

The Scriptures then agree with the latest scientific conclusion that man, as such, has the same kind of life as any other soul or creature that lives by breathing.

With regard to the second inference, that man is immortal because he was created "in the image of God." This assumes that image means nature, and it proves too much, for the same reasoning would prove man to be omnipotent, omniscient, omnipresent, all wise, invisible, unchangeable, and to possess, not merely one Divine attribute, but all.

IV—The Scripture Doctrine of Immortality or Eternal Life.

These two terms are used as practically synonymous. Immortality occurs only once in the Bible, and is applied to God—1st Tim. i:17. Immortality occurs five times. Three times it is a Greek word meaning deathlessness—1 Cor. xv: 53,54. "This mortal must put on immortality."—1 Tim. vi:16; "Who only hath immortality." Twice it is a Greek word meaning incorruption. "Seek for glory, honor, and immortality" (Rom. ii:7). —"Christ hath brought life and immortality to light" (2 Tim. i: 10). Eternal life occurs thirty times, and Eternal is always the translation of a Greek word meaning "age lasting" (young), or "without limit as to duration" (Bagster). The phrase "everlasting life," occurs fourteen times, and the words eternal and everlasting in the New Testament stand for the same Greek word.

The Old Testament, while not silent on the subject of Eternal Life, does not say much about it, and to save time I shall not refer to its statements. But a distinct feature in the New Testament is the prominence given to the proclamation of Eternal Life. As Paul put it, "Our Savior Jesus Christ hath abolished death, and hath brought life and immortality to light through the gospel" (2 Tim. i:10). Science has for ages been trying to do this, and has utterly failed. It has never found the necessary conditions in the natural world, and it despairs of ever finding them, or creating them. "The problem is"—stated by Professor Drummond—"with a material body, and a mental organization inseparably connected with it, to bridge the grave."

But it has been done. The problem has been already solved, and the empty tomb, which, more than 1800 years ago, filled the startled Romans with fear, and the baffled Jews with rage, is an irrefragable testimony, that in the case of one man, mortality has been swallowed up of life. Jesus Christ has in His own person abolished death, by escaping from its bonds, now no more to return to corruption, and hath brought life and immortality to light. He hath shown how it is to be won by others in the glad tidings He proclaimed.

The first thing that meets us then is the great truth that Immortality is associated with Jesus Christ. He has made plain what before was obscure. He can speak with power, for He is Himself a living example of the truth which He declares. Death hath no more dominion over Him. "I am the resurrection and the life, he that believeth on Me, though he were dead, yet shall he live; and he that liveth and believeth on Me shall never die" (John xi:25). "I am He that liveth and was dead, and behold I am alive forevermore, and have the keys of death and of Hades" (Rev. i:18).

Here then is a solid basis of fact on which to rest; a basis established now for more than eighteen centuries. One Man has attained to Immortality. Why not others? May we not attain it? What do Christ and His Apostles say? Paul helps us a bit when he says "The wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord" (Rom. vi. 23). It is a gift, then; not a natural possession; but a gift bestowed through a certain channel, through Jesus Christ. To whom is the gift offered, and are there any conditions? We have an answer in many places, "God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have eternal life". (John iii:16).—"This is the will of Him that sent Me, that every one that seeth the Son and believeth on Him may have everlasting life, and I will raise him up at the last day" (vi: 40). "My sheep hear My voice, and I know them and they follow me, and I give unto them eternal life, and they shall never perish" (x:28). Also John xvii:2, xx:31, James i:12, I John ii:17. Such testimonies are copious, and they may be all summed up in these words that God in His mercy offers eternal life through Jesus Christ, to all who will accept it on the conditions He has laid down, viz., believing on the Lord Jesus Christ; believing what He Himself preached and what He sent His disciples to preach; that He was the Son of God, the King of Israel, the One to whom all the prophets had witnessed, Who had been born of a woman, and suffered even unto death for us, as the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world, and Who is coming back again to establish His kingdom over Israel and all nations, that the blessing promised to Abraham, should be fulfilled in every part.

But belief in the Scripture sense is more than a mere mental act; Those who "believe to the saving of the soul," are those who have patience to do the will of God. The necessity of repentance and of obedience to the commandments of Christ, is strongly and constantly enforced, Romans ii:7, viii:13; Gal. vi:8, etc.

Eternal life is also spoken of as a matter of promise and hope. "This is the promise that He hath promised us even eternal life" (I John ii:25). "In hope of eternal life which God that cannot lie promised before the world began" (Titus i:2, iii:7). Other passages speak of it as already in the believers' possession, "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life" (John iii:36). "This is the record that God hath given to us eternal life, and that life is in His Son; He that hath the Son hath life, and He that hath not the Son hath not life" (I John v:11-13). This verse explains the apparent contradiction existing between eternal life as a matter of hope, and as a present possession. The Life which God has promised or given is in Christ. It is reserved or guarded there for us. "Your life is hid with Christ in God. When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with Him in glory" (Col. iii:3). It is one of the attributes of God to see the end from the beginning, and things which He has determined and promised, He speaks of as already accomplished—"God quickeneth the dead, and calleth those things which be not as tho' they were" (Rom. iv:17). Thus, He said to Abraham, "I have made thee a father of many nations," while Abraham was yet a childless old man.

The time when believers are to receive eternal life, is expressly told, There is no man that hath left house, or parents, or brethren, or wife, or children for the kingdom of God's sake, who shall not receive manifold more in this present time, and in the world to come, everlasting life (Luke xviii: 29,30; Matt. xix:28,29; Mark x:29,30).

Let me quote a word or two from Professor Drummond, in which he powerfully contends for the simple meaning of the term life as used in the New Testament.—"It ought to be placed in the forefront of all Christian teaching, that Christ's mission on earth was to give men life. 'I am come,' He said, 'that ye might have life, and that ye might have it more abundantly.' And that He meant literal life . . . is clear from the whole course of His teaching and acting. To impose a metaphorical meaning on the commonest word of the New Testament, is to violate every canon of interpretation, and at the same time to charge the greatest of Teachers with persistently mystifying His hearers by an unusual use of so exact a vehicle for expressing definite thought as the Greek language, and that, on the most momentous subject on which He ever spoke to men. It is a canon of interpretation, according to Alford, that 'a figurative sense of words is never admissible except when required by the context.' The context, in most cases, is not only directly unfavorable to a figurative meaning, but in innumerable instances in Christ's teaching, life is broadly contrasted with death. In the teaching of the Apostles again, they accepted the term in its simple literal sense."

That science by its keenest research cannot find out the promise or potency of eternal life, is just what the Scriptures in plainest language led us to expect, and it is gratifying to those who fear God and who tremble at His Word, to know that the witness of science in this respect completely accords with the written Revelation. There is no conflict between true science and Scripture, for the God who inspired prophets and apostles to write His decrees, is the same One who has left His impress on all the works of nature.

We are not indebted then for our knowledge of Immortality to the intuitions of our own inner consciousness, to the speculations of Egyptian priests, to the attractive philosophy of Plato, or the profound researches of modern natural science. These all maintain the blackness of darkness regarding eternal life; but thanks be to God, we are carried far beyond them all. It is a good thing to know that science and religion are at one respecting the utter mortality of human nature; but it is a better thing to know the precious truth which Scripture alone reveals, which no science ever can find out, that "the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord."

While we maintain, as Professor Drummond does, that eternal life means eternal life in the simplest sense of the term, there is something associated with it which increases its attractiveness and value to the believer. Something more is promised than mere eternal existence in the sense in which a book, a house, or a table exists. The eternal life promised to believers is a vital, animated, happy existence, a life spent in joyful blessed work, reigning as kings and priests to God and to Christ, upon the earth, over a redeemed and righteous population "In Thy presence is fulness of joy, at Thy right hand, are pleasures evermore."

JESUS IS COMING

S. Roxana Wince

I was but a little child at my mother's knee when I first heard that Jesus was coming. I could not comprehend all that was said in the sermons of Bro. J. B. Cook, Bro. Ephraim Miller, Bro. Hoyt, and my father, about the great empires of Nebuchadnezzar's dream, and the long lines of years talked of by Daniel, but enough to understand that Babylon, Medo-Persia, Greece and Rome being all in the past, and certain lines of years ended, the Lord must certainly be coming, I remember as if it were but yesterday the solemn gatherings in the cabins of the settlers, the tearful exhortations, the songs, the prayers, and the look on my father's face when he said, "It will be but a few days now till Jesus will be here." The time went by and he did not come, but we did not give up. He had said he would come and we believed his word. The signs that he had given to tell us his coming was near, had been seen and it could not be far away.

Seventy years have gone by and the most of those dear preachers and early watchers have fallen asleep. The heedless world has heard the story so often that it has become to them "an old wives fable." Steeped in crime and drunken with pleasure, like the men in Noah's day, they rush on to be "taken unawares," and caught as a wild beast in a snare. For Jesus is coming. His coming is seventy years nearer than it was when I first believed. I do not know the day nor the hour when he will snatch his bride away from "the sudden destruction without remedy" that is to follow the present "peace and safety" cry, but it may be this very year. It is a strange year; we have never known quite such a year, and it will be stranger still before it ends. For God is angry at the wickedness of earth's rulers and the widespread corruption of the masses, not only in other lands, but in our own beloved country, and will visit them in his wrath, and vex them in his sore displeasure, as he has never done in the past.

We need not look for days of joy, and peace, and plenty, but for intensified woe and battle storms, great famine and stalking pestilence. But the watchers will escape, for Jesus is coming. We know he is coming soon far more certainly than we did when the midnight cry was sounded by William Miller. But "how do we know?" some one may ask. Take just one sign, that of "the sea and waves roaring."

Fifty years ago the height of the waves of the ocean as measured by a government vessel in the stormiest times were not more than fifty feet. This year waves have been measured more than one hundred feet high—waves that left their waters on three decks of the great ocean liner Cedric, to be "cascaded into the well aft," crushed windows and crashed against deck house and doors with the noise of thunder," sweeping all the life boats overboard; of another vessel, the British steamship Ripon, and smashing her bridge, tore off matched ceiling, bent in a window, and put out the lights on the Mauritania.

The windvelocity on February 22, 1912 was 110 miles an hour, and even higher records in wind velocity were made throughout the month of March. Do not these roaring winds and waves tell the story as nothing else ever has? To me they do. They speak in tones that cannot be ignored. They have broken all previous meteorological records, and they will grow worse and worse, as will all other conditions, until Jesus comes.

Be ready. Some day in the near future our long looked-for king will appear. He has tarried, but the tarrying time is almost over.

How glad Bro. Barnhill will be when he comes, for then he will not be helpless and almost speechless, and there will be no cancers there, Bro. Thomas, to eat the life away. And Bro. Wegener, your heart will not be wrung with anguish because of the illness of your beloved. Made immortal, we shall suffer no more. What "strong consolation" and "good hope" has been given us! Be comfort your hearts, for the day of redemption is near.

The fruits of the Spirit cannot emanate from carnal minded, unkind people. Jesus says we may know what kind of heart a man has by what he does.

THE BIBLE: ITS PRINCIPLES AND TEXTS

As indicated by the title this book is divided into three sections. The first consists of a remarkable disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "principles" in formulated propositions, and the third expounds in a clear, impressive and homelitic manner particular "Texts." The knotty and perplexing texts of the Bible are united and solved satisfactorily to the most fastidious and critical. More than one hundred and fifteen subjects of intense interest to every Bible student are formally discussed. Both simple and scholarly—the child is fascinated and taught; the scholar is entertained and instructed. Bible lovers, here is a feast for you. Throw open the door of your home; let The Bible—its Principles and its Texts come in and bless you and your family. 309 pages, 5x7 1-2 inches, durably and handsomely bound in whole cloth, with title embossed on back in gold. One copy, $1.10, two copies or more $1.00 each. R. G. Huggins, 10623 Lee Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

PROOFREADER

Years of experience in proofreading; now completing a technical course in the art. MSS prepared for the printer and proofs read. Book work a specialty. Limited amount of work by mail accepted at popular prices.

ROBT. G. HUGGINS,
10623 Lee Avenue,
Cleveland, Ohio

The truth gives a man the hope of seeing with his own eyes the work of God, at last triumphant in the earth whether he live or die; and of himself sharing the blessedness for ages covenanted for all the earth through Abraham and his seed.

Forgetful hearers allow themselves to be diverted by the ephemeral things of life from the important business of making themselves familiar with God's word by reading. They are without excuse.

Real faith is a treasure, a companion of delight, a spring of living water, a fountain of purity.

The man who possesses faith unfeigned will do what others will not do: but a man of sham faith will not sacrifice anything for the sake of it.

Ladies! Save Money and Keep in Style by Reading McCall's Magazine and Using McCall Patterns

McCall's Magazine will help you dress stylishly at a moderate expense by keeping you posted on the latest fashions in clothes and hats. 50 New Fashion Designs in each issue. Also valuable information on all home and personal matters. Only 50c a year, including a free pattern. Subscribe today or send for free sample copy.

McCall Patterns will enable you to make in your own home, with perfect fit and stylishness guaranteed, any garment for yourself and children which will be perfect in style and fit. Price—none higher than 15 cents. Send for free Pattern Catalogue.

We Will Give You Fine Presents for getting subscriptions among your friends. Send for free Premium Catalogue and Cash Prize Offer.

THE McCALL COMPANY, 238 to 248 West 37th St., NEW YORK

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

We, whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones.

This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of their paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

Ida Overholt,	$3.00

Read This Special Subscription Offer

By a special arrangement just made with THE FARM JOURNAL, a sixty-four page magazine, we are able to make for a limited time a very generous combination subscription offer. The Farm Journal is one of the best farm and home magazines published in the country, a large, interesting journal which is known the country over. The Farm Journal also publishes the booklets of "The Money Making Secrets" series, including "Poultry Secrets," "Horse Secrets," "Corn Secrets," "The Million Egg Farm," "The Butter Book" and "Duck Dollars." The subscription price of the "Farm Journal" is $1.00 for five years, or $1.00 for 4 years and any one of the booklets of "The Money Making Series."

Now for the Special Offer

Regular Price of Restitution 1 year	$1.50
Regular Price of Farm Journal 5 years (Or Farm Journal four years and one booklet)	1.00
	2.50

We Will Send Both the Above to You for the Special Price of

$1.50

Remember the Restitution for 1 year, The Farm Journal for 5 years all for the price of $1.50

SEND IN YOUR SUBSCRIPTION TODAY

Books and Tracts
By W. H. WILSON

A BIBLE STUDY OF HADES.....15c each, or 5 for 50c.
(As compared with our modern ideas).
A critical study of Hell, showing the difference in the word in the past and in the present time.

STUDENTS TEXT BOOK 50c
How to study the Bible and rightly understand God's Word. Cloth bound, 200 Pages.

PINE WOODS BIBLE CLASS.....$1.25
Studies carried on between a class and its teacher. Cloth bound, 480 Pages.

CUNNINGLY DEVISED FABLES, 28 Pages.....10c

WHERE WILL YOU SPEND ETERNITY, 4 Pages, ... 25c per hundred

ARE YOU IN NEED OF MONEY, 4 Pages, 25c per hundred

WILL IT PAY TO BECOME A CHRISTIAN?.....25c
By Jas. W. Wilson. A neat Cloth book of 96 Pages which every one should read.

Bro. Wilson's Latest Book
Is Ready for Distribution
THE DESTINY OF RUSSIA AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES
96 Pages, Bound in Cloth, 25c.

W. H. WILSON, 625 North Willow Ave.
AUSTIN STA., CHICAGO, ILL.

The Restitution Publications

Send for all of the following books and tracts to

W. S. TOMLINSON, 10825 Orville Ave, N.E., Cleveland

A LETTER TO A FRIEND, 32 Pages 10c each, 12 for $1.00
FUTURE PROBATION, 150 Pages, 10c each, 12 for $1.00

The following tracts by M. Joblin:
THE KINGDOM OF GOD.
OLD MOTHER EARTH TO BE BORN AGAIN.
STRANGERS FROM THE COVENANT OF PROMISE.
VAIN WORSHIP.
NO IMMORTALITY OUT OF CHRIST.
GOD'S LOVE AND SOLICITUDE FOR MANKIND.
WHAT SHALL WE DO TO BE SAVED?
THE FOOLISHNESS OF PREACHING.
SALVATION, WHAT IS IT?

All the above are 16 page tracts, 100 for $1.00 any assortment.

THE PATERNITY OF JESUS, by M. Joblin, 122 Pages, each 10c. A work that proves Jesus was the son of God and not the natural son of Joseph.

THE SCRIPTURE SEARCHERS ASSISTANT, by M. Joblin, each 6c. A valuable aid to the study of the Scriptures, contains 400 references.

A WRONG DEFINITION OF LIFE AND DEATH, a six page tract, a most excellent booklet, 10 copies 25 cents; 50 copies 35 cents; 100 copies 60 cents.

THE DEVIL: WHAT, WHERE AND WHY—A 24 page tract, 5 cents a copy.

"SIGNS OF CHARACTER OR HOW TO READ CHARACTER AT SIGHT" and "HEALTH THROUGH NATURE'S LAWS"
Two books by Dr. A. Wallace Mason. One is a study of character and how we may read it by the face and head. Brother Mason has made a very close study of this subject for years, and the information given in this book will prove interesting and instructive. Price 25c, 73 pages.

The other is a work which tells how to gain and keep health as its title says, "through nature's laws" Every family should have a copy. Price 10c.

SALVATION: WHAT IS IT? A Sermon in German, translated by Henri Jergues. Price, 10 copies, 15 cents; 50 copies, 35 cents; 100 copies, 60 cents

FOUR PAGE TRACTS:

Can You Believe? 10 for 10c, 50 for 25c.

State of Man in Death, 10 for 10c, 50 for 25c, 100 for 40c.

Life and Death, 10 for 10c, 50 for 25c, 100 for 40c.

Age to Come Not a Heresy, 10 for 10c, 50 for 25c, 100 for 40c.

TWO PAGE TRACTS

Bible Pearls—Suitable for wide distribution. 1. The Gospel. 2. Coming and Kingdom of Christ by 50,000 Baptists in 1660. 3. Immateriality. 4. Kingdom of God. 5. Nature of man and Thoughts for Thinkers. 6. Two Advents. 7. What is Religion? 8. Restitution Age. 9. Destiny of the Wicked. 10. Baptism. Ten copies for 5 cents, or assorted packages of 100 for 20 cents.

WANTED!
Subscription Solicitors

We will pay an actual salary to men and women in all parts of the country, to act as agents for The Restitution. This salary will be based on your ability to take subscriptions, take care of renewals, and make collections, and will be paid weekly. You can devote all or part of your time, and can make a special offer to prospective subscribers, which we will tell you about if you are interested. We will have some announcements to make in the near future that will also help you.

If you want to work, sit down NOW and write for full information.

B. W. NUTT, Manager.

"There is a great difference between the man who is sure of what he knows an dthe one who thinks he knows it all. The one has the beginning of knowledge. The other will never truly know anything"

"Courage is the power of going forward in spit of difficulties to reach a chosen and worthy object."

"No truth is absolutely new; what is true is eternal; but old truth is new to the man who has just now found it out."

"You may depend upon it that he is a good man whose intimate friends are all good."

50 YEARS' EXPERIENCE
PATENTS
TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.
Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the
Scientific American.
A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.
MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

"A LETTER TO A FRIEND"

This tract needs no introduction further than to say that it is one of the most convincing Gospel sermons ever written. Originally written as a letter to a friend by Sister C. C. Woodruff it was published and has sold extensively in tract form. In its present edition it is a 32 page tract, the price is

10c each; 12 for $1.00

There is no better way of spreading the Gospel than handing out one of these tracts wherever you have the opportunity.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co.
WHOLESALE OPTICIANS

We make a specialty of High Grade Prescription Work, and carry a full line of all kinds of Optical goods. All orders filled same day as received.

"S. K. N." SERVICE

Means prompt returns, careful work, moderate prices. Goods shipped to all parts of the country.

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co. 331 SCHOFIELD BUILDING CLEVELAND OHIO

SPECIAL OFFER!

IN ORDER to increase the circulation of The Restitution, the following special offer is made:

One new subscriber for 1 year, choice of:

W. H. Wilson's "Student's Text Book," regular price.....50c
Or 5 Copies of "Cunningly Devised Fables," reg. price 50c
Or 5 Copies of "Bible Study of Hades," reg. price 50c

For Two New Subscribers

One Copy "Pine Woods Bible Class," 480 pages, reg. price, $1.25
Or "The Bible, Its Principles and Texts," 309 pages, reg., $1.25
Or One Hundred of Bro. Joblin's Tracts, regular price $1.00

Here is a chance to get some of the books you all should own. By making special arrangements with the authors we are able to offer them to you without the payment of a cent on your part, just a few minutes effort. We cannot afford to continue this offer long, so take advantage of it at once, get some new subscribers today.

THE RESTITUTION, 803 Parkwood Drive

"Future Probation,
is that Awaiting any of the Unrighteous?"

Here is a work by Wm. Glenn Menerieff that every one should read. It is one of the best things on the subject ever written and will appeal to every student of the word. It is a book of 150 pages, made to sell at 25c. We have a limited number left which we will sell at the special price of

10c each; 12 for $1.00

Send for some at once.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

The Restitution
IS THE OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA.

The Restitution.

Founded in A. D. 1852

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Lk. 19:12-15), who will be King of Kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-53); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17), and belief in, the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Lk. 13:3), and obedience by Baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ." (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31).

ROBT. G. HUGGINS, Editor.

—Terms of—
Subscription
ONE YEAR, $1.50;
SIX MONTHS 75
CTS. IN ADVANCE

VOL. 60 CLEVELAND, OHIO, JULY 9, 1912 No. 75

IT COULDN'T BE DONE

Somebody said that it couldn't be done,
But he with a chuckle replied.
That "maybe it couldn't," but he would be one
Who wouldn't say so till he'd tried
So he buckled right in, with the trace of a grin
On his face. If he worried he hid it
He started to sing as he tackled the thing
That couldn't be done—and he did it!

Somebody scoffed: "Oh, you'll never do that—
At least no one ever has done it,"
But he took off his coat and he took off his hat,
And the first thing we knew he'd begun it.
With a lift of his chin and a bit of a grin,
Without any doubting or quiddit,
He started to sing as he tackled the thing
That couldn't be done—and he did it!

There are thousands who tell you it cannot be done,
There are thousands who prophesy failure;
There are thousands to point out to you, one by one,
The dangers that await or assail you.
But just buckle in with a bit of a grin,
Then take off your coat and go to it;
Just start in to sing as you tackle the thing
That "cannot be done," and you'll do it.—Selected by Sister Ethel Lehman.

THE FAITH AND HOPE OF THE GOSPEL

W. H. Wilson

Now what is faith? The divine answer is: "Faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen."

There can be no faith unless there is a real substance on which faith can be based. An unreal fancy of the mind will not answer.

Again, before faith can exist there must be presented to us undisputed evidence relating to the substantial thing promised.

Faith is a picture of future blessedness, the magnificence of which the natural eye has never seen, no ear heard, nor the heart of man conceived; while hope, anticipates the realization in fact of the things pictured by faith.

Faith as a mighty conqueror has invaded the domain of death, burst the bars of the grave, dissipated its awful gloom, robbed it of victory, and extracted death's venomed sting, while hope converts the gloom into glory, and shouts Victory Victory! Victory!

The message called the Gospel, presents to the mind that which faith and hope lays hold upon. It is in fact the "power" eminating from God, to make eternal Salvation on absolute surety.

Q. The gospel being the power of God unto Salvation, it must be what the Scriptures otherwise call the great salvation. Can we really ascertain what that great salvation is, and have no misgivings about it?

A. It can be done by all those who will accept clear Bible statements as evidence.

Q. Will you please give us a brief outline study along this line?

A. With pleasure I will call attention to Heb. ii. 3: "How shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation; which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard him; God also bearing witness, both with signs and wonders, and with divers miracles, etc."

Q. What points have we here?

A. 1st, The great salvation was that which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord.

2. Confirmed unto us by them that heard him.

3. Confirmed by God himself with signs, wonders, gifts, etc.

Q. How would you handle those three points?

A. I would first find that which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, then I will have found the great salvation.

Next I would find the confirmation by them that heard him. Next the confirmation by God himself, by means of signs and wonders, etc. Then I will have found the great salvation doubly confirmed. That will remove the enigma.

Q. Well, please trace out that which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord.

A. First I call attention to the case of Cornelius, who desired salvation, and he also was directed to the same great salvation, which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord. In Acts xi. 12, 13, Peter says the Spirit bade him go with the messengers to the house of Cornelius. He says: "And the Spirit bade me go with them, nothing doubting. Moreover these six brethren accompanied me and we entered into the man's house. And he showed us how he had seen an angel in his house, which stood and said unto him, Send men to Joppa, and call for Simon, whose surname is Peter, Who shall tell thee words, where by thou and all thy house shall be saved."

The "words whereby thou and all thy house shall be saved," was the words or great salvation which first began to be spoken by the Lord.

Now see Acts x. 30-37. Here we have the meeting of Peter and Cornelius. "And Cornelius said, Four days ago I was fasting until this hour; and at the ninth hour I prayed in my house, and, behold, a man stood before me in bright clothing. And said, Cornelius, thy prayer is heard, and thine alms are had in remembrance in the sight of God. Send therefore to Joppa, and call hither Simon, whose surname is Peter, he is lodged in the house of one Simon a tanner, by the sea side; who, when he cometh, shall speak unto thee. Immediately therefore I sent to thee; and thou hast well done that thou art come. Now therefore are we all here present before God, to hear all things that are commanded thee of God." As to what was commanded thee of God, or the words whereby thou and all thy house shall be saved, see Acts x. 37, where we find those saving words to be that which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord. It reads as follows: That Word, (saving word) I say, ye know, which was published throughout all Judea, and began from Galilee, after the baptism which John preached.

Q. When did Jesus first begin to preach?

A. After John's mission was ended.

Q. When did that end?

A. When John was put in prison.

Q. When did Jesus preach the words whereby Cornelius and household should be saved?

A. After the baptism which John preached (Acts x, 37).

Q. From what city?

A. Began from Galilee after the baptism which John preached (v. 37).

Q. Now, what message did he preach as the great salvation, beginning at the city of Galilee, as the place and after the baptism, which John preached, as the time?

A. See Mark 1.14, and you find not only the city and time, but the message also called the great salvation which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord.

Now after that John was put in prison, Jesus came into Galilee, preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God. This is the great salvation, which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord. How shall we escape if we neglect it? It is also the words whereby Cornelius and his household were to be saved.

What about the second section: Was confirmed unto us by them that heard him. Who heard him?

A. His disciples.

Q. In their confirmation did they preach the same message as the gospel, the power of God unto salvation, the great salvation?

A. They preached exactly the same message.

Q. Where do you find it?

A. In Luke ix. 1-6. Then he called his twelve disciples together, and gave them power and authority over all devils, and to cure diseases. And he sent them to preach the kingdom of God.

Q. Did they do so?

A. Yes. And they departed and went through the towns preaching the gospel—the gospel of the kingdom of God.

Q. The third section said that God would add his confirmation in the shape of signs, and wonders, etc. Did he do so?

A. Yes. See Mark xvi. 19,20: After the Lord had spoken unto them, (for forty days of the things pertaining unto the kingdom of God, Acts i. 3) he was received up into heaven, and sat on the right hand of God. And they went forth, and preached every where, the Lord working with them, and confirming the Word with signs following.

THE LAW QUESTION—II

J. J. Heckman

Text: "Think not that I am Come to Destroy the Law, or the Prophets; I am not Come to Destroy but to Fulfill."

The word "fulfill" is [illegible] ing said and by so doing we can usually find what is meant. When we speak of a prophecy being fulfilled, we believe that what the thing foretold or pointed to by that prophecy, has come as the prophecy said it should, and that ends the mission of said prophecy.

Seventh Day Keepers quote this text as if "fulfill" meant only to be kept to perfection, and not that what was pointed to come as pointed out by the law.

Now the question is, Are they right in so interpreting this text? If there was not two things pointed to by the word we might have some reason to believe they are right, but we find the text says, "I am come to fulfill," both law and prophets. To "fulfill" what the prophets have said concerning Jesus, is to make an end of them as prophecies: the same must be to "fulfill" the law. We would hardly think the same word would have two meanings, when only once used in one sentence. So then the mission of Jesus was to make an end of the law as well as the prophecies that pointed to his coming and work.

We would not go back and preach that all the prophecies about Jesus' mission are still present truth, that is, point to our dispensation, for fulfillment, but we would say and show that they were fulfilled in Jesus' day, as he said, "I am come to fulfill."

But he came to fulfill both law and prophets; therefore we should not go back and call the law present truth, Jesus, by the comforter through Paul says, "Christ is the end of the law," etc.

The question might be asked according to some teachers, which end? And the answer possible is the last end, because he was not its giver. So you see the law ended in Jesus, especially to those who believe. And hence we who believe are not to keep it.

We think the Jewish people are very blind because they still teach those prophecies are not fulfilled; and why are not those who teach the same about the law; there can be no caviling here: the word "fulfill" applies to the prophets as well as the law, and what it means in referring to the one, it means in reference to the other.

If it completes the mission of the prophecies it also completes the law, and we should believe it.

Then you see how groundless our text is for Seventh Dayites. They have not one point in it upon which to stand. I believe the truth will be made clear to us if we dig for it as for hidden treasures, and the speculations of men will vanish before it. "He that doeth his will shall know of the doctrine."

COVENANT ACCEPTED THROUGH FAITH

F. M. Howell

Many misled people believe that Christian character and works will save regardless of faith. Awake dear reader, if this is your belief, and don't let the enemy cheat you out of your crown. Believe God! It was unbelief that caused all this suffering and death of the human family; therefore it is only reasonable that God requires faith in his word as the first requisite to an acceptance of his covenant. "Abraham believed God, and it was counted unto him for righteousness (Rom. 4:3), and it will be imputed to us also if we walk in the steps of that faith of our father Abraham. It is not only necessary that we believe God's promises, but also his edict that the devil contradicted when he told the first lie. John admonishes all Christians of the danger of believing that they have immortal life within themselves, instead of believing God that it is in his Son. He says, "He that believeth not God, hath made him a liar, because he believeth not the record that God gave of his son. And this is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in his Son" (I John 5:10). Paul said to the Colossians, Your life is hid with Christ in God (Col. 3:3).

If we have eternal life, and are not in possession of it, when will we receive it? Paul says it is when Christ shall appear (Col. 3:4) He also says to the Corinthians, "Christ the first fruits, afterward they that are Christ's at his coming" (I. Cor. 15: 23). Jesus says we shall receive eternal life in the world to come (Luke 18:30). Is this not plain enough? Can you not believe Jesus? Yes, the Christian has eternal life, but Jesus as our guardian holds it in trust until the time appointed of the Father (Gal. 4:2; Rev. 11:18), which is when Christ comes again. Before we can became covenanters with God, and heirs of his promises, we must believe those promises. God tells us plainly that the country he promised to give Abraham and his seed is here on the earth. To Abraham God said, "For all the land which thou seest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed forever" (Gen. 13:15); The land in which Abraham, Isaac and Jacob dwelt, says Ezekiel (37:25). Stephen told the Jews that it was the land in which they lived (Acts 7:4) "The uttermost parts of the earth," says David (Psa. 2:8). Daniel says it is the kingdom and dominion under the whole heaven (Dan. 7:27).

Now what is the negative showing that this promised home can not be in heaven?

David says, The heaven, even the heavens are the Lord's but the earth hath he given to the children of men (Psa. 115:16). Jesus told his disciples that where he went they could not come (John 13:33), but he told them that he would come again and gather them to himself (John 14:3. Yes, he did say, "In my Father's house are many mansions, I go to prepare a place for you," but he did not say it was in heaven. The Father's house is the church in this world (I. Tim. 3:15), and the kingdom in the age to come (Heb. 3:6).

The place that Jesus had promised his apostles was a place as rulers over the twelve tribes of Israel in his kingdom, to be established on the earth. He told them why it was expedient for him to go to the Father in order to prepare a place for this people; he said, I will come again and receive you unto myself, that where I am, there ye may be also. Notice that he is to receive them unto himself after he comes again, and he will then be here.

Paul says our Lord is dwelling in light which no man can approach unto; whom no man hath seen nor can see (I. Tim. 6:16). This is Jesus our Lord that Paul is talking about, and he says that in the light in which Christ now dwells, no man can approach unto and no man hath seen him nor can see him. So no one has gone to heaven where Christ is. "The righteous shall be recompensed in the earth" (Prov. 11:31) "at the resurrection of the just" (Luke 14:14).

The Israelites who would not believe God's word were not allowed to go into the promised land, but perished in the wilderness. So all who will not believe God's promises are warned of being in a like danger.

Jude says, "I will therefore put you in remembrance, though you once knew this, how that the Lord, having saved the people out of the land of Egypt, afterward destroyed them that believed not." Paul exhorts Christians to labor to enter into that rest, lest any should fall after the same example of unbelief (Heb. 4:11).

Remember, dear reader, that God's covenant to Abraham and his seed does not promise to give them any other home except on the earth, and baptism in the faith that our inheritance will be in some celestrial world called heaven, is not a seal to that covenant, because such a promise is not in God's covenant to man.

O why will men and women refuse to believe such plain assertions of a truthful and merciful God, and cling to the delusive phantoms of immortal disembodied souls! when such belief is the result of the beguiling story by which the serpent deceived Eve by telling her that she would not surely die, as God had said she would, but would become as the gods (angels). God requires all who are to be saved to believe him. Jesus said that if any man hear his words, and believe not, and reject him, that his words would judge that man in the last day (John 12:47, 48). Jesus had told the Jews before this that Moses, in whom they trusted, would accuse them to the Father, because they would not believe his writings, saying, "For had ye believed Moses, ye would have believed me: for he wrote of me. But if ye believe not his writings, how shall ye believe my words?" (John 5:45-47). It was Moses who wrote that God said man should die and return to the dust; it was Moses who wrote about God's covenant to Abraham and his seed (Christ), by which all who become Christ's are heirs of an everlasting home on the earth.

WHAT I BELIEVE AND WHY—No. VI.

Charles Clifford Maple

We wish to consider now another part of gospel preaching, viz., Christian Baptism. The Immersion of a believer in water for the remission of sins.

"When they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptised, both men and women (Acts 8:12).

Then Peter said unto them, Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit (Acts 2:38).

I am well aware that there are some who say, "No need of baptism; all that is necessary is to believe. Why not just preach the gospel and leave baptism out? You know it is rather an offence to some, who do not see these things just as we do."

My reply is that there is need of baptism. If it is not essential why was it commanded. Why did the Apostles always preach it? and why did Peter command them to be baptised? (Acts 2:38;10:48).

If believing alone was all that was necessary, why did Christ say "He that believeth and is baptised shall be saved?" (Mark 16:16).

Christ either taught that baptism was necessary or he taught nothing.

Paul says, "We are justified by faith" (Rom. 5:1), but he did not say "by faith only." James says, "Faith without work is dead" (James 2:17). Why? because it is "alone," by its self, has no expression.

Paul and Silas said, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shall be saved" (Acts 16:30). This was the first step. Then he spake unto them the word of the Lord, and later baptised them (Acts 16: 32-33).

Again, can we preach the gospel and leave baptism out? As Bro. Joblin says, "Is not baptism itself gospel, as it brings us into Christ?" (Gal. 3:27).

If any are offended at the preaching of baptism they certainly have never believed from the heart the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, for when they do, they will be ready to take the next step, which is baptism. Philip preached Jesus to the Eunuch, and at once he was ready to be baptised (Acts 8)— no evading the question with him.

Baptism promises us forgiveness of sins; it makes us children of God; it gives us a title clear; not "to mansions in the sky," but to reign with Christ upon the throne in the coming age. It gives us a title to the inheritance, the land promised to our father Abraham. If baptized into Christ we have put him (Christ) on. We are Christ's; if Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise. I am glad for the old Abrahamic land grant, and glad that it holds good; that the time is coming when we may enter into the possession thereof. Here we have no continuing city; we seek one to come.

I love to tell the story,
To me it has its charms;
That we'll soon move into glory,
On the Abrahamic farm.

Christ is coming, Christ is coming,
He is coming in his glory.
He will take the throne of David and reign forever more.

Paul, in writing to Galatians, makes mention of the deed. And by him it is asserted that Jesus is the seed.

Christ is coming with the kingdom
He is coming back from heaven.
We shall reign with him
Forever in that blessed Eden home

SOFTLY AND TENDERLY CALLING

Alice Hill

As I sit alone tonight I am thinking deeply of the gentle voice of Jesus, softly and tenderly pleading for us to come home, receive the truth and labor faithfully in the good work.

Calling so tenderly, pleading and watching so patiently, is Jesus; ready to receive us in the faith. Why do we tarry when we have been called by Jesus our Lord to take heed to the truth? Brothers and sisters, we have no time to tarry, for the moments are passing away swiftly and quietly. Be up and ready with your lamps burning brightly, ready with faith and courage. Follow the straight and narrow way that leadeth unto life, the path the Savior trod before us; turn from evil thoughts and worldly amusements, and let thy light shine among men.

We know not at what hour the Lord will appear, so let us be up trimming our lamps (letting our light shine unto all children of the Lord), shaping our lives by his blessed example. Ever let our motto be, "More and More like Jesus, and follow him day by day." How patient, loving and kind we are made by trusting and obeying God's commandments!

The Restitution

Issued weekly by

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING COMPANY.

Entered as second-class matter under act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

TERMS.

One year $1.50; six months 75 cents, in advance.

ROBT. G. HUGGINS.....Editor
BUELL W. NUTT.....Manager

BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Burton H. Lang, Harry Pott,
Chas. A. Goss, Robt. G. Pate,
Buell W. Nutt, D. G. Robison,
W. S. Tomlinson.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

All remittances should be sent by bank draft, post office money order or express money order to The Restitution Publishing Co., 803 Parkwood drive, Cleveland, Ohio.

All communication intended for publication should be sent to the editor, Robt. G. Huggins, 10823 Lee avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

It is necessary to adhere strictly to the rule of not returning unused manuscripts. Writers will please keep copies, or risk the loss.

While the editor exercises a general supervision over the articles appearing in The Restitution, his endorsement does not extend to the interpretation of details nor the exegesis of particular texts in the writings of contributors.

Cleveland, Ohio ....July 9, 1912

EDITORIAL

THE SKIES ARE BLUE

The skies are blue
Which stretch above,
And all is well,
For God is love.
He knows your need,
He hears your call;
For he e'en marks
The sparrow fall.

Then sing a song,
Do not despair;
His Providence
Is everywhere.
Keep faith always
And do your best,
And leave with God
Each day the rest.

Why grieve and sigh
Through hopeless tears?
Take heart again,
Dispel your fears;
The skies are blue
Which stretch above,
Look up and know
That God is love.

What you call ill
Is hidden good.
What yo uterm fate
Is Fatherhood.
God guides in all,
If we but knew;
Then keep up heart,
He cares for you.
—Selected by the Editor.

HE CARETH FOR YOU

Selected by Sister M. L. Curry

Are you waiting, longing, yearning
For an answer to your prayer?
Does in vain seem all your pleading,
Sorrow more than you can bear?

Have you waited for an answer
Days and weeks and mayhap years?
Have for naught seemed all your labors
And in vain been all your tears?

Nay, not so; the loving Father
Knows the burden of each soul.
Knows its longings, fears, and troubles,
And he longs to make you whole.

Longs to answer each petition,
Give each weary one sweet rest;
But not always in his wisdom
Does he deem our way the best.

Never has he taken from us
That in which all blessings bides
Always, ever, in his goodness
Something better he provides.

So we'll leave to him our sorrow,
Cast on him our every care;
He will strengthen, keep and guide us,
He will all our burdens bear.

Though He slay us, we will trust Him,
We will take him at his word,
We will rest upon his promise;
We will say, "Thus Saith the Lord."

Remember that God only hears the prayers of those who are pleasing in His sight; the prayers of the wicked are an abomination; and there are wicked people who have the name of Christ upon them.

Divine mercy, surpassing the mind of man to conceive is offered to you and me by the favor of God through Jesus Christ our Lord. Thanks be to God for His unspeakable gift. Let us gratefully accept it, and escape the reproach incurred by the Jews when Paul and Barnabus said, "Seeing ye judge yourselves unworthy of everlasting life, lo, we turn to the Gentiles." "Let him that is athirst come, and whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely."

THE WIND AND THE HOLY SPIRIT

In a sermon by Dr. James Stalker he gives three reasons why Jesus compared the Holy Spirit to the wind. (1) It bloweth where it listeth. (2) Thou hearest the sound thereof. (3) Thou canst not tell whence it cometh and whither it goeth. The whole sermon is to show that these also are characteristics of the Holy Spirit. But Jesus did not say, "So is it with the Holy Spirit." What He said was, "So is every one that is born of the Spirit."

Is not this inference of Dr. Stalker a perversion of his text? Is it not an error in exegsis that has made a great amount of mischief? Does it not lead to the theory that the operation of the Spirit is lawless, arbitrary, and uncertain? Has it not served to excuse a great many people who wait for the Spirit to "move" before they do God's will?

WHO ARE RESPONSIBLE?

Dear Brother Huggins:

I have been over among the Christadelphians. They claim that all who are out of Christ are not responsible for their acts to God, it matters not what they may do. I mean they can kill, steal, rob, and do any crime in the catagory and are no more responsible for it than an idiot would be; that the Gentiles are aliens from God, and strangers fro mthe covenants of promise, and are without hope and without God in the world, and it matters not what they may do; they are just in the same condition as if they had not committed the crime. I suppose you understand their position. Now I claim that with the coming of light comes responsibility. And the greater the light, the greater the responsibility. I referred them to the commjasion, "He that believeth not shall be condemned." Condemned to what? They were already condemned to death before they heard the gospel. Now I want you to write an article on this subject, "Who are Responsible?"

Editor's Reply

Above is an extract from a correspondent who marks his letter "private," and whose name, for this reason, is omitted from his communication. To some who are not familiar with the body whose doctrine is described, it may seem that exaggeration has been used by our writter; but absurd and unscriptural as it sounds and as it is, it is, we are sorry to say, a sober, unstrained, and dispassionate presentation of American Christadelphianism. The only palliative observation we can make is that the theory was repudiated by the founder of the body, and is disowned and disfellowshipped by the original body in both Europe and America, those holding the theory being a minority whose organization is maintained in schism.

In answering the question, "Who are Responsible?" we say those who are enlightened, who know the will of the Lord. In proof of this we point to

1. The First Sin.—"Because thou has harkened to the voice of thy wife, and hast eaten of the tree, of which I commanded, saying, thou shalt not eat of it," etc. (Gen. 3:17). The penalty of death came upon Adam, not because he had made a covenant with God, not because he had agreed to obey God, not because he had been baptized, but because God "commanded" him saying, "Thou shalt not eat of it." A known commandment of God disobeyed was the ground of his responsibility.

2. The Mosaic Law. That responsibility is coextensive with knowledge is obvious from the fact that when the whole congregation sinned through ignorance; or the ruler, or the "common people," when it "is known," "comes to his knowledge," etc., he was guilty and had to make an offering unto the Lord (Lev. 4:14, 23, 27, 28). The same remark holds good as to

3. The Prophetic Age. David points out that 'men of the world have their portion in this life' (Psa. 17:14), that the great, rich, and honorable, if they "understand not," are "like the beast that perish" (Psa. 49). "So foolish that I and ignorant, I was as a beast before thee" (Psa. 73:22). This text read strictly according to the Hebrew, as given in the margin of our Bible, settles the whole issue: "So foolish was I and ignorant, I was as a beast with thee;" that is, a foolish and ignorant man sustains the same relationship "with" God as a beast sustains non-accountable to divine law. But no Bible writer ever says such a thing of an enlightened man—never.

4. The New Testament Preaches the same doctrine.—(a) Inspired writers declare that those who "know to do good, and doeth it not," commit sin (Jas. 4:17); that those who have "known God" and disobeyed him are "worthy of death" (Rom. 1:21, 28; 2:1,3,9,16), that while God "winks at people in times of ignorance," he will hold them strickly to account in the day of judgment in times of knowledge (Acts 17:30,31); and that sinners must repent and be "baptized for the remission of sins" (Acts 2:38). "Sin is the transgression of the law" (1 John 3:4); but law can only be transgressed by people who are "under" it (Rom. 3:19). Then if sinners are not under divine law, and transgress it before their baptism, "baptism for the remission of sins" is the most stupendous hoax and farce ever known among men. (b) Finally, if you care to know where Jesus Christ our Lord stands on this question, you may read John 3:19; 9:41; 15:22,24.

NOTES AND QUERIES FOR THE LITERALIST*

"Literal—According to the letter; not figurative." Such is the definition given by Noah Webster of the adjective which yields the designation of the class whose rule of Bible we are about to illustrate.

The class is not unknown to us. It works according to a certain rule, called the literal rule. This is a rule which, truthfully applied, we do not despise; but there are certain cases in which the letter kills. There is such a thing as being "filled with the knowledge of God's will in all wisdom and spiritual understanding" (Col. i. 9). This involves a recognition of some things ignored by the literalist. To show the killing effect of his absurd method of working a good rule, is the object of these remarks, hoping that they may create in some of the literal many class a desire to come to a "spiritual understanding" of "spiritual things" (1 Cor. ii. 13).

What literalists say is this, that every passage of Scripture is to be read literally, unless the immediate context shows plainly that it is to be taken figuratively. We are not at liberty to turn to other parts of the word to find the import. A horse means a horse, and nothing but a horse, unless there and then specified to the contrary. This principle has led some to the conclusion that there is nothing new in the Scriptures; and certainly when you have gone carefully over the terms in a dictionary sense, there is an end of the matter, and the most that can then be done is to reproduce things.

We have always observed, so far as our own experience has gone, that the literal man has very little to say upon the prophets, and almost literally nothing upon the Apocalypse. Whether it is because his rule does not work well, is probably best known to himself. But if the rule be what he claimed for it, why not work by it in one book as well as another? As to the Apocalypse, the literal man affirms it to be all in the future, in this case even, his rule ought to be able to solve it, for surely there is no great difficulty in finding out the literal meaning of its vocabulary; and if all events are in the future, and can so be understood, then the rule is valuable indeed. But some theories can never be reduced to practice. They are admirable so long as they are untried. Like the traditional apples of Sodom, pleasant to the sight, but bitter to the taste, and anything but good for food. But let us, without further preliminary, see what can be done by the literal rule in the Apocalypse; for if it will work satisfactorily there, no doubt need be entertained about its power in the other writings.

Chapter i. verse 5: "Unto him . . . . . that washed us in his own blood;" is this literally comprehensible? Verse 8: "I am alpha and omega;" these are the first and last letters of the Greek alphabet. What would our rule bring us to here? Verse 18: "I have the keys of hell and of death;" what sort of keys are these?

Chapter ii. verse 12: "These things saith he which hath the sharp sword with two edges" (what does this mean?) going "out of his mouth?" Verse 17: "To him that overcometh will give . . . . . a white stone." Is a literal white stone to be a saint's reward? Verse 22: "Behold, I will cast her into a bed;" what sort of a bed is this? A literal bed? Verse 27: "And he shall rule them with a rod of iron;" will this be cast or wrought iron? Verse 28: "And I will give him the morning star!"

Chapter iii. verse 4: "They shall walk with me in white;" what advantage would there be in white over black or any other color? Verse 7: "He that hath the key of David;" here is another key; what key is this? Did it belong to David's wardrobe, or the door of his house? Verse 8: "I have set before thee an open door;" into what apartment does this door lead? Verse 10: "I also will keep thee from the hour of temptation;" when it this sixty minutes to begin? Verse 12: "I will make him a pillar in the temple of my God." Of what? Salt or brass? Verse 18: "Anoint thine eyes with eyesalve" is this anything akin to Holloway's Ointment? Verse 20: "Behold, I stand at the door and knock;" where is this door? Chapter 4: "A door was opened in the heaven;" did this make a hole in the sky? Verse 6: "There was a sea of glass;" what sort of fish are found in this sea? "Four beasts full of eyes;" does Buffon or any other naturalist mention these? Whoever saw a lion, or calf, or man, or an eagle, full of eyes? that is to say "full of eyes within?" Chapter vi. verse 2: "He that sat on him had a bow." Of what material? Steel, lance or yew? Verses 5 and 6: "And he had a pair of balances in his hand, and I heard a voice say, A measure of wheat for a penny, and three measures of barley for a penny." Who is this cornfactor? Verse 14: "And the heavens departed as a scroll when it is rolled together." Where did the heaven depart to?

Chapter vii: "Standing on the four corners of the earth." Did the writer understand geography? Was it known in his day that the earth is round? "Holding the four winds." By what appliance were the winds kept back?

Chapter viii, verse 1: "Silence in heaven about half-an-hour." Who had been making a noise before the beginning of this thirty minutes? Verse 8. "A great mountain burning with firse cast into the sea." Was this to extinguish the mountain or dry up the sea? Verse 11: "And the name of the star is called Wormwood." Is this star known to astronomers? "The third part of the waters became wormwood." Does Linnaus the botanist notice this? Verse 12: "The day shone not for a third part of it, and the night likewise." Is there any authentic record of this four hours' eclipse of a third part of the sun, moon and stars?

Chapter ix: "The key of the bottomless pit." What use would a key be to a pit open at one end, or bottomless? Verse 6: "And in those days shall men seek death, and it shall flee from them." Are those men alive now? Verse 17: "And thus I saw the horses in the vision, and them that sat on them having breastplates of fire, and of jacinth, or hyacinth, and brimstone." Supposing these to be real horses, is there any of this breed in existence? And what may the construction of their mouths, which belch forth fire and smoke and brimstone? Verse 19 specifies certain peculiarities touching their "tails" as well as their "mouths;" and what is remarkable in this breed of horses is that their tails have heads. And how do we account for the deadly hatred these noble animals had against devil worshippers mentioned in verse 20?

Chapter x: Here we are told of a mighty angel who took a little book from the hand of another angel, and ate it up. While the book was in his mouth it was "sweet," but in his belly it was "bitter." May we ask whether "little books" are the ordinary food of mighty angels? Chapter xi, verses 3 and 4. Let us not depart from the letter for fear we should not catch the sense. "My two witnesses . . . , these are the two olive trees, and the two candlesticks." We observe that the witnesses are olive trees and candlesticks. And now we learn from the 5th verse that these olive trees and candlesticks have mouths, and out of their mouths fire proceedeth, and devoureth their enemies, that is to say, kills those men who were so bent on murder as to put to death the literal olive trees, and two literal candlesticks; such men certainly ought to be punished!

Wonders never cease. Here comes (chap. xii.) a great red dragon, having seven heads and ten horns, and seven crowns on their heads. If some enterprising Barnum could have captured this dragon he would have been quite a fortune for him. But view his "tail." What a "tail!" This wonderful beast was the sworn enemy of astronomical science. He would have none of the stars—not he indeed! Behold how he prostrates a third part of them at one switch of his mighty instrument, or literally speaking—which he must be careful not to depart from—his "tail."

Verses 14-17: What an extraordinary woman is here. She first appears clothed with the sun, and standing upon the moon. Now she is about to fly, not with angels' wings, but with the wings of a great eagle. Behold she flies from the face of the serpent. This serpent is also a surprising creature. He appears to have a sort of camel stomach on a grand scale. He has taken in water for the occasion, and is now about to attempt to destroy the woman by projecting it upon her. Whereupon the earth becomes pitiful, and opens its mouth, and receives the flood. Of course al this is future. We ought not to expect to find anything analogous to it in the past.

Chapter xiii: But here is another beast still more marvellous. Whatever tribe it belongs to it looks like a leopard. The writer does not say in what particulars, whether spots or any other things. This is a wonderful animal indeed. It has bears' feet and a lion's mouth, and heads no less than seven; and horns more still—ten. And then comes something about blasphemy upon its heads. What have leopards to do with blasphemy? But Revelations appears to be quite a zoological book. Next we see a talking lamb with two horns. But what language does this lamb speak? It spake as a dragon. The difficulty still exists, being shifted only from a lamb to a dragon. Can any philologist tell us what is the vernacular of dragons? Saint George encountered a dragon; but there is no account of the dragon speaking?

The literal reader will not need to be conducted any further. His way will now be perfectly easy through the remaining chapters. He will find a beast in the seventeenth chapter, which is full of names of blasphemy. But he need not be surprised at that. This is not more remarkable than many other things, and all he has to do is to recollect that the intestines of this beast consists of blasphemous titles and no further enquiry would be profitable. The future will be its own interpreter!

*Not the "literalist" or orthodox innuendo, by which would be meant, above all others, the Church of God, who reject the spiritualistic method of reading the Scriptures invented by the apostasy; and recovers apostolic faith by a rational treatment of the holy writings. The "literalist" in view is that amiable, but dull class of individuals, who (honest enough) having got an inkling of the right method, runs riot on the subject, and ignores the figurative and symbolic elements of prophecy, reducing most important parts of God's word to absurdity, and indulging in theories and speculations destructive of the truth itself.

COMMUNICATIONS

Dear Brother Huggins:

Inclosed find the obituary of Brother Laban Tilton, of Antioch.

We are pretty busy these days in Oregon getting ready for our Bible School and Conference. And that reminds me. You will remember the little tree you so carefully trimmed that stands near the corner of the Oregon church. Could you see it now you would really be surprised at its present size and symmetry. Your work still shows.

The work is moving slowly in Illinois, but still we are making progress. During the present conference year I have had the pleasure of inducting ten candidates into the Body of Christ through baptism.

The cafe man, with the unpronounceable name, where you used to board, frequently asks about you and sends his best regards.

Sister Rita Lindsay is confined in the hospital at Dixon at the present. Sister Castle is failing rapidly and there is but little hope of her recovery. She always has a good word for you, as do your many other old time friends "out west."

With kindest regards to sister Huggins and yourself, yes, and I must not forget "Baby Huggins," I am,

Yours in the Master's Service,
G. ELDRED MARSH.

Dear Brother Huggins:

After reading the Restitution of last week and hearing of the effort being made to effect an organization of the Isolated Believers of the Abrahamic faith, I am moved to write a few lines to the paper in the form of a letter. I was pleased with the respect you paid to me in allowing my article on the Rich man and Lazarus to come before the readers of your good paper. I could have told just what the parable of the Rich man and Lazarus was spoken to the Jews for. But it would only have been my opinion about it. We find that God has used a man to represent a nation, and a woman to represent a church, so you reason out the rest.

Now I am of the Abrahamic faith and believe in a restitution of all things, as taught by Peter in Acts 3:19-26, and I believe also in a literal gathering of Israel to their own land at the second coming of our king to earth again. I also believe, not only in an age to come, but in the ages to comes, as Paul our teacher, our great teacher, puts it in Eph. 2:4-7.

But God, who is rich in mercy, for his great love wherewith he loved us, even when we were dead in sins, hath quickened us together with Christ. By grace are ye saved and hath raised us up together and made us sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus, that in the ages to come he might show the exceeding riches of his grace in his kindness toward us through Christ Jesus.

When will God do all of this? Paul says in the ages to come, and I am one that believes it.

Now I don't know whether you would place me with the isolated believers of the Abrahamic faith or not, as I preached for the Methodists for about twelve years. In 1903 I preached the restitution doctrine so strong they took steps to stop me, and they did in their congregations. After Christ Jesus made me free from sectarianism I said I would remain so and preach where opportunities were opened. I have done considerable preaching since. Our town is seventeen miles southeast of Springfield, Mo. Don't know of any church in this country; if you do, please let me know. We have men-made organizations called churches, but none of our faith.

Now I have been thinking a great deal about this effort made to benefit believers scattered abroad, and I believe it would have God's approval. If we can keep things in the name of the Father, for all virgins bare their Father's name. He says, "Come out of her my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, for her sins have reached unto heaven."

Yours in the faith,
JOHN REMER.

(Several years since we held a series of meetings in the country near Gates, Greene Co., Mo., also in different places in Christian Co. At Gates there was quite a congregation of believers, but we do not know by what name they were known in the community. We remember by name Sister Bertie Cannefax, Sister Russell, and Brethren Dodd and Patterson. If Bro. Remer will hunt up this body of believers I think he will find them fairly straight in the faith and will no doubt enjoy their fellowship. If anything comes of this suggestion, let us know of it, Bro. Remer.—Editor).

Knowing that brethren everywhere rejoice to learn of a spiritual feast among the members, I am sending a report of such a meeting.

Sunday, June 23, was a day long to be remembered by those present at the joint meeting of the Springfield and Brush Creek ecclesias.

For several years past we have been meeting together in June at Bro. W. S. Westfall's home. This year, through the kindness of Bro. Ashford Lehman, the meeting was held in the beautiful grove at Sweet Springs Farm, where he is superintending the work, the place being more easily reached by both ecclesias.

The day was ideal. The brethren from Brush Creek drove to the farm, while the Springfield brethren came on the interurban. They were met by Bro. Ashford with the hay rack, who conveyed the jolly crowd to the farm.

The morning was spent in social chat, renewing old and forming new acquaintances and speaking our blessed hope and faith.

At the noon hour the long table was spread from heavily laden baskets, of which more than 60 partook.

After the meal we proceeded to praise God in his own beautiful temple, "not made with hands."

Its pillars tall were leafy trees,
Its roof a dome of blue;
Its aisles a carpet cool and green,
Its pews the mossy banks.

The seats were arranged in a shady place and being led by Bro. David Bee.., we studied to learn more of Him and His holy will concerning us.

We had anticipated the pleasure of having Bro. Robinson with us on this occasion, as he was returning from Indiana, but were disappointed.

After the breaking of bread a social meeting was held in which many took part.

To me such meetings hold a solemn seriousness and impressive ness. God seems so near. He shows himself in the trees, flowers, grass and all things. David says, "The heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament sheweth his handiwork." To see the tall and sturdy trees with each leaf different and distinct from all others makes us feel God's greatness and power, and remember our own weakness and inability to do; in fact we are but dust.

As the day was now far spent, thoughts were turned towards our different homes. Quite reluctantly did we say "Good by," and give the parting hand, but not without the hope that should our Lord delay his coming we shall meet again next year.

Brethren, we should meet oftener together to speak of the things concerning the kingdom of God, for it makes us strong to perform life's duties.

Your sister in hope of life,
ETHEL LEHMAN.

PRACTICAL AND SENTIMENTAL LEGISLATION BY ZIONISTS

Successful Close of Fifteenth Annual Convention of American Federation—Nathan Straus and Louis D. Brandeis

Sermon by Rabbi Heller

The fifteenth annual convention of the Federation of American Zionists is history, says the Jewish Independent.

The delegation was of the average size and a great deal of practical and sentimental legislation was accomplished. As usual, there were differences of opinion, but everything was adusted amicably before final adjournment. Among the important happenings was the acquisition to the ranks of Zionists of Mr. Nathan Straus of New York, and Mr. Louis D. Brandeis of Boston. More than the usual number of leaders in the party were present.

Bene Jeshurum Temple auditorium was crowded on Friday evening to listen to the preaching of the convention sermon by Rabbi Max Heller, of New Orleans, following the regular Sabbath services. Rabbi Heller is an ardent Zionist, but never before had the opportunity to attend a National Zionist convention. Only recently was he the president of the Central Conference of American Rabbis, which is the national organization of Reform Rabbis. Dr. Heller said, among other things:

It sems a strange circumstance, it gives me a rather strange feeling that I should have the honor of speaking the first word, of striking the first note at this great gathering of my fellow Zionists. I am in somewhat the position of a novice among you, for this is the first time that I have ever found myself able to join my Zionist brothers in convention assembled. I am among you one of the fledglings; it is you who ought to teach me.

It sorely puzzles all of us, I am sure, again and again, why it should be that especially among the eminent and successful, among the prosperous and comfortable of our people, the cause of Zionism should count so small a number of followers. A modest man does not enjoy believing that he alone has the truth, neither can it be pleasant to any man who loves his kind, to play the role of the prophet in the wilderness, to feel that the great majority of his friends and neighbors are in error. Let us not deceive ourselves; we Zionists are not only numerically, but in other senses, a minority. We have with us, it is true, vast masses of the down-trodden on the one hand, of the disappointed and embittered on the other hand; but among those that have emerged into the daylight, among those that have mounted the eminences of worldly success, among those of whose prowess in the titanic rivalries of today we are often so foolishly proud, we may count a few lukewarm sympathizers, but a far larger number of bitter and relentless enemies. If a cause were to be judged by its popularity in the ranks of what are called practical men, the men of affairs, the matter-of-fact intellects, how deserved would Zionism seem in this bustling modern world of all that boasts itself safe and sane!

And yet, my friends, is that the court of last resort to which you would submit the appraisement of an ideal? Have we not been told, again and again, from pulpits that reverbrate with rhetorical denunciations of Zionism that, in the experience of mankind, even more so in the growth of Israel, it has been the minorities that have always forced some new truth upon reluctant majorities? Always it has been the possessing class, the ranks of the privileged and comfortable who have opposed any upheaval of opinion, any change of direction; the new ideal, the redeeming word, has always found its most ardent devotees among the disinherited and among those few who are free-minded and strong-hearted enough to place truth above the rut of habit and justice superior to the enjoyment of ease.

We are a remnant, a dwindling minority, especially those of us who live altogether in an occidental environment; but not only as Jews, but as men, we ought to be proud and happy in our isolation, painful as its trials must be at times; proud and happy not only to find our place by the side of the poorest and most helpless of our brothers, proud and happy, not only as being among the first to gaze upon a dawning sunrise, but proud and happy with something of the exaltation of an Akiba, that we are permitted to testify by our hardships and our sacrifices to the eternal truth of an ideal that must conquer in the end.

One of the most absurd and self-stultifying contentions of the anti-Zionists to which it is marvelous that so many students of Jewish history should listen with patience is this: that it has been an advantage to Israel to be dispersed, that dispersion has enabled us better to fulfill our divinely appointed task of witness, to become, indeed, the very teachers of mankind. It is always, my friends, a precarious endeavor for man to attempt to set forth the aims of Providence, but the least that could be demanded of such a rushing in of fools is that it should not be a trampling upon obvious historical fact. What have you to prove that Israel in Palestine exercised a smaller influence upon the world of its day, not to say upon later generations, than did it as a in the ghetto? And if you will only open your eyes to the indisputable fact that the actual, spiritual dispersion of Israel, its real living with, rather than by the side of the nations, began with the disappearance of ghetto walls, what is there in the life of today to testify to the stimulation of our activity as religious teachers by the dissipation of our forces? What army ever conquered by scattering itself planlessly over a large territory? What cause has ever been strengthened by loosening the ties that united its followers? A thousand inexorable symptoms of disintegration teach us with a plainness that cannot honestly be disregarded; what vast numbers of our people, what precious traditions, customs, habits, teachings are constantly being swept from their moorings in the unprecedentedly wide dispersion, physical and spiritual, of masses of Jews; show us, as against these patent conditions, one actual symptom to give evidence that the faith of the Jew, that the individuality of the Jew, have been strengthened by dispersion, so strengthened that having, thoroughly organized his own religious camp, he can go forth to battle to become, in the world's strenuous rivalry of thought and aspiration, its inspired teacher of religious truth.

From the beginning of the movement Zionists have been taunted as preaching a philosophy of pessimism; and many well meaning people, at one time, myself among th rest, have been misled by what seemed a deserved rebuke. The Zionist, we are told, unjustly and ungratefully, impeaches modern civilization to which the Jew, above others, owes as much; the Zionist fixes his gaze on the few survivals of medieval prejudice and forgets the lightning like speed with which the Jew was emancipated and admitted to all the unrivaled opportunities of the age; Zionism has no faith in the power of modern civilization finally to rid itself of its inherited burden of fanaticisms, intolerances, race hatred finally; Zionism lacks faith in the capacity of the Jew to resist the coersive influences of assimilation, to rally around his faith and to save his Jewish identity, undiminished and undegraded, but of all the allurements and confusions that surround us. Zionism, we are told, advises flight in the face of battle isolation as the refuge from the menances of assimilation, selfish exclusiveness in the place of brotherly co-operation.

To us, as to the prophet, the future, perhaps a distant, but as we feel the certain future, is radiant with promise. The dew and the rain, to the Palestinian farmer, they meant the most precious of all boons. The dew came unseen over night like a mysterious gift of God; the rain came splashing on the meadows suddenly, in the eyes of all men. We know what was meant by the dew, and the rain, when God is made to say, I shall be as the dew to Israel, when Moses calls heaven and earth to witness that his instruction and EIGHT—Resti his word might distill as the dew, as the shower upon the herb. Israel is to become the guide and the teacher of nations, the refresher of care worn hearts, the quickener of spiritual harvests. We live in a world that is parched with the thirst for real teaching, in a world where the sheep look up and are not fed.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Martha A. Smalley

At Rocky Point, Washington, June 17, 1912, Mrs. Martha Ann Smalley, pneumonia being the immediate cause of her death. Another of the pioneer mothers, to whom is due so much in the life and development of our nation, has passed away.

Martha Ann Magan was born in Calloway County, Missouri, November 23, 1835, and was married to James A. Smalley in California in 1850.

A husband and seven children survive her as follows: Mr. Frank Smalley and Mrs. Theodore Flink, of Eden, Wash.; Mrs. Oscar Larsen, of North Shore, Washington; Mrs. Florence Hanson, of Frankfort, Washington; Mrs. Alice Parcher, of Ranier, Oregon; Mrs. Edna Upton, of Hood River, Oregon, and E. A. Smalley, of Bandan, Oregon.

A consistent Christian, a noble mother who devoted her whole life to home, and children—kind, patinet, and thoughtful always—she lived a life far removed from the selfishness and frivolity so common in modern life.

How her children loved her, respected, and trusted her. The whole community by their presence at her funeral, paid tribute to the high place she held in their estimation.

Hers was a life of peculiar interest. She crossed the plains in an ox cart, with her parents, in 1849. In 1852 with her husband she moved to Oregon, settling on a donation land claim a few miles from Portland where they lived until 1857, when they returned to Missouri, traveling by water to New York, via the Isthmus of Panama, and thence by rail to Missouri.

In 1865 they again crossed the plains with ox teams, and a few years later moved to their present home.

She was buried in the Eden cemetery, June 19th, the funeral services being held at the grave, E. E. Groat, speaking words of hope and promise.

We sorrow not as those who have no hope. The chair is vacant, the voice is still, but the good by was only for a little time, soon we will clasp glad hands in the kingdom. "Come Lord Jesus, come quickly."

E. E. GROAT.

Laban Tilton

The sad duty devolves upon us of recording the death of another old and faithful soldier of the coming King, brother Laban Tilton, of Ogle County, Illinois. Brother Tilton was born in Shockton County, Ohio, February 12, 1820, and died at his home near Chana, Illinois, Sunday, June 23, 1912, aged 92 years, 4 months and 11 days.

He was joined in wedlock to Susan Harper, January 14, 1841, and soon after removed to Illinois, where he continued to reside until the time of his death, which was preceded by that of his wife, the latter occurring some eight years ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Tilton were the parents of ten children, of whom two sons and three daughters are now living. In addition to the children mentioned he leaves twenty-seven grand children, and thirty-five great grand children, and also one brother to claim the sympathy of neighbors and friends.

For more than half a century brother Tilton has been a zealous and faithful member of the Antioch Church of God, which is located near his home. He was largely instrumental in reviving the interest and energy of the brethren residing in the vicinity of his home, after the church in that locality had sufferd a long period of inactivity.

He was a life long student of the Word, and up to within a few hours of his death took great delight and comfort in talking of the blessed hope, and quoting the beautiful and inspiring promises that foretell the speedy return of our Master.

While death is always sad, yet we sorrow not, even as others that have no hope, for we believe that Jesus died and rose again, and even so them that sleep in Jesus will God bring with him.

By request of brother Tilton, expressed a short time before his death, G. Eldred Marsh, of Oregon, delivered the funeral discourse, following in his remarks an outline suggested by our aged brother.

Burial was in Washington Grave cemetery a short distance from his home.

G. ELDRED MARSH.

POWERFUL AND TIMELY REBUKE

M. Joblin

Some time ago the following letter appeared in an American papar. It was sent to a young preacher by one of his hearers upon the occasion of an exchange with another pastor, and it would be well for all the better class of popularly religionists to read it. They are deeply concerned because the people generally do not "attend church," and want to find the reason why. Of course no one can teach the Gospel of the Kingdom which Jesus preached, and which is God's saving power, if they do not know what it is; but for all that, men of piety, earnestness and honesty can stir up the religious faculties in others, and inspire reverence for God and resolves to lead better lives, and so be better fathers and mothers, and brothers and sisters and friends and neighbors; and the various communities under the ministrations of such men are practicaly so many moral or religious police stations, and exert an influence for god in proportion to the attendance and the examplary conduct of its members. It needs to be kept in mind that just now, when iniquity abounds as seldom, if ever before, these communities have lost their influence for good. When most needed they are powerless, and it is no wonder that they ask with deep concern, "What is the reason people do not attend church?" The letter to referred is as follows:

"Reverend Brother:

"I listened very attentively to your clever essay on history this morning and hoped to find some features of a gospel sermon. Was it my fault that I did not find or detect anything in it, first, to convict men of sin; second, to conduct the penitence to Christ; third to quicken the backslider; fourth, to comfort the afflicted; fifth, to guide the perplexed; sixth, to encourage the desponding; seventh, to caution the unwary; eighth; to remove doubt; ninth, to stimulate zeal; tenth, to fortify patience; eleventh, to arouse aspirations; twelfth, to kindle devotion; thirteenth, to develop faith; fourteenth, to expose the wiles of the adversary; fifteenth, to deepen love; sixteenth, to instruct in any of the practical duties of Christian life; or finally, to impart information needed for practicl utilization in Christian life? You may reply, I did not design to do any of these things. But my brother, as a Christian minister (?) and not as a literary essayist, can you afford to misuse any such occasion by not designing to do some of those things? You are (should be) a minister of the Word, which is to make the man of God perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works. Pardon these kindly suggestions from one, who, tired of business, goes to church to be helped."

Who can doubt that reviews of popular novels, and the lives of heroes, and politics and expansion, and essays on history, and other things prove that the prevailing idea is entertainment, not a gospel message, and this has produced the impression that a great religious fraud is being perpetrated and they keep away from it.

And brethren of the Abrahamic Faith, may there not be a lesson for us in this letter? Would it not be well for us to remember that those who send for us to set forth the truth as it is in Jesus, to their neighbors and friends, may be just hungry and thirsty themselves? Long isolation and want of communion with those of like precious faith make them anxious to hear something more than arguments in defense of gospel promises and facts, which they know already. They love to hear first principles rehearsed, and the foundation of their faith and hope made clear by removing traditional rubbish, and all that; but it pays to draw them up close to us, and remind them of their exalted position as the called according to God's eternal purpose, a royal priesthood, heirs of God, joint-heirs with Christ, with the hallowed privilege of access to God at all times, and all circumstances and the help guaranteed for every time of need. Yes, it pays to run over some of the manifestations of God's love, and the exceeding riches of his grace stored up in the Anointed One for the faithful; it pays to dwell upon the blessed hope of seeing Jesus and of being wrapped about with immortality and sharing his power and glory, and becoming Evangels of peace and righteousness with God's praise, till their hearts are so set on fire that they will continue to water the seed of the kingdom we sow, after we are gone.

Man is very prone to go from one extreme to another; and we fear that many who have been trusting altogether to feeling and earnestness, go to the other extreme when they discover the essentiality of truth. If the person who taught them the truth was all head and no heart they would be apt to follow his lead, and all attention to the work of converting people intellectually, while the great truth that it is with the heart man believes unto righteousness; or in other words that faith in the truth of God must work by love and purify the heart, is largely neglected. It will not be denied by the honest, intelligent and thoughtful, that the practice of the truth is as important as faith in it, and that neither the one or the other alone, is of value. Because to practice the truth, it must be known and believed, and the Word of the Spirit for it, "faith without works is dead," useless! Besides intellectual assent to the truth, its transforming power must be taught, and more than that, its transforming power must be demonstrated by those who essay to speak for God and his gospel. And if Christ be in them the hope of glory, there will be no lack of demonstration. The Lord, the spirit being in them, the fruits of the spirit will arrest the feet. If filled will run over and effect others. As love is the motive power of the gospel, the constraining power of the gospel, we mean, we are bound to use it or be culpable. It is love that begets love, and if the love of God does not beget love in a person, how will he get it? And if he has no love for God how can he keep his commandments? Impossible! See I John v. 3. Does this explain the conduct of any professors to you, who seem to have the truth in their heads only?

WHEN WILL THIS MOVEMENT REACH AMERICA?

Belgium is in a state of eruption on account of the recent elections and rioting throughout the country having taken on a revolutionary character. Many persons have ben killed or wounded in various cities, and a large number of reserves have been called to the colors.

In Brussels a mob to night made a rapid tour of the city, wrecking street cars, smashing windows and doing all manner of damage. They broke in the doors of the church of St. John and St. Nicholas, and, entering demolished the tabernacle. They then set fire to the doors. Next they tried to force an entry to the monastery of the Arters Fathers, and, arriving at the Anderlecht quarter, wrecked a cafe and attempted to storm a convent, but were dispersed by firemen with streams from their hose.

A column of several thousand strikers left La Louriere for the nearby collieries this evening to induce the miners to join in the movement. The strikers were hotly pursued by mounted gendarmes, and three hundred soldiers have been dispatched from Charleroi for La Louviere, where serious rioting was feared.

At Cornu a mob wrecked the Catholic Club. At Bruges gendarmes fired on a mob wounding fifty rioters, several fatally. The gendarmes were assailed with bottles, bricks and pieces of furniture from hundreds of windows.

The educational fight, which is the principal cause of the present disturbances, is explained as follows: The Belgium schools today are church schools and public schools. The schools are managed or subsidized by the communes alone, and in the non-clerical communes there is a tendency to subsidize only the public schools. Broadly speaking, the desire of the clerical government is to place the church schools on the same financial footing as the public schools, the necessary funds being provided by the communes, province and state. The opposition urges that the church schools should be paid for by the church, not by the government.

The paramount issue in the coming presidential election is Roman Catholic supremacy in America. "What!" says a chorus. Yes, just that—Roman Catholic supremacy in America. Hadn't heard of it? Well, just watch the currents as they flow. Rome does not fight in the open until compelled to do so. But she has been buying guns and drilling companies of soldiers here for years. She has reached a crisis in her affairs. And boast has been made that she is not unprepared. Driven from other lands, she has need to establish herself in this. Toadying politicians have made her bold. She controls the police force of nearly all large cities. She has hordes of representatives in the army and navy, many of them in official position. Her ecclesiastics have confidential relations with high public officials. Three new American cardinals have been created. One honored with the highly earthly position mortal man can occupy is as putty in the hands of the Pope. But there is one factor that Rome is not reckoning on. The great common people of this country are not vassals as in Catholic countries. They have saved our government from six perils and will do so when the seventh shall come. But the common people must awake.

—Selected by Sister G. W. Smith.

BIBLE THEOLOGY

Charles Clifford Maple

Beloved, read this line :

In Memoriam

Bradford—In loving remembrance to Bessie who died, April 17, 1911.

Just one year ago dear Bessie,
Thou didst lay thy burden down.
Went to Heaven to be with Jesus
And to wear a golden crown.

Darling Bessie how we miss thee
Sorrow's pang can best express;
For our heads are bowed in sorrow,
But we know God's way is best.

—From Aunt Julia.

* * *

I do not know where Aunt Julia got her theology, no doubt from some hymn book. It sounds like lines we see in songs which are marked Gospel Songs.

Now it appears to me that a song in order to be a gospel song should be gospel. I believe our teaching should be Bible teaching, so our singing, Bible singing. We can sing the truth as well as preach the truth. We can sing a lie as well as preach a lie. But let us beware lest our theology be Hymn book theology and not Bible theology. Paul says, Preach the word, and I am certain if we keep this motto ever before us we shall never fail.

If we desire to comfort friends who sorrow when death has entered their home, Paul tells us what the message of comfort is (I Thess. 4:13-18).

The hope of Jesus coming is the Bible message of comfort, not that of immortal soul translation. Let us be Scriptural.

GOLD DUST

No life is so short that it has no time for god and kindly deeds, nor so long it can delay their doing.

We can form no other knowledge of spiritual things except what God has taught us in His word and where He stops we must stop.

God weighs our prayers rather than numbers them. That we should pray often and even without ceasing, is important, but that we should pray with sincerity and earnestness is still more so.

Since the generality of persons all from impulse, much more than principle, men are neither so good nor so bad as we are apt to think them.

EVANGELIST REPORT FOR MAY.

Sermons.

Randolph, Mo.	9
Kansas City	2
Omaha	6
Blair	8

Expense

Omaha to Blair and return	$ .90
Salary	$65.00
	$ .90
Due	$65.90

ALMUS ADAMS, Evan.

THE BIBLE; ITS PRINCIPLES AND TEXTS

As indicated by the title this book is divided into three sections. The first consists of a remarkable disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "principles" in formulated propositions, and the third expounds in a clear, impressive and homelitic manner particular "Texts." The knotty and perplexing texts of the Bible are united and solved satisfactorily to the most fastidious and critical. More than one hundred and fifteen subjects of intense interest to every Bible student are formally discussed. Both simple and scholarly—the child is fascinated and taught; the scholar is entertained and instructed. Bible lovers, here is a feast for you. Throw open the door of your home; let The Bible—its Principles and its Texts come in and bless you and your family. 309 pages, 5x7 1-2 inches, durably and handsomely bound in whole cloth, with title embossed on back in gold. One copy, $1.10, two copies or more $1.00 each, R. G. Huggins, 10623 Lee Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

PROOFREADER

Years of experience in proofreading; now completing a technical course in the art. MSS prepared for the printer and proofe read. Book work a specialty. Limited amount of work by mail accepted at popular prices.

ROBT. G. HUGGINS,
10623 Lee Avenue,
Cleveland, Ohio

The truth gives a man the hope of seeing with his own eyes the work of God, at last triumphant in the earth whether he live or die; and of himself sharing the blessedness for ages covenanted for all the earth through Abraham and his seed.

Forgetful hearers allow themselves to be diverted by the ephemeral things of life from the important business of making themselves familiar with God's word by reading. They are without excuse.

Real faith is a treasure, a companion of delight, a spring of living water, a fountain of purity.

The man who possesses faith unfeigned will do what others will not do: but a man of sham faith will not sacrifice anything for the sake of it.

Ladies! Save Money and Keep in Style by Reading McCall's Magazine and Using McCall Patterns

McCall's Magazine will help you dress stylishly at a moderate expense by keeping you posted on the latest fashions in clothes and hats. 50 New Fashion Designs in each issue. Also valuable information on all home and personal matters. Only 50c a year, including a free pattern. Subscribe today or send for free sample copy.

McCall Patterns will enable you to make in your own home, with your own hands, clothing for yourself and children which will be perfect in Style and fit. Price—none higher than 15 cents. Send for free Pattern Catalogue.

We Will Give You Free Presents for getting subscriptions among your friends. Send for free Premium Catalogue and Cash Prize Offer.

THE McCALL COMPANY, 236 to 246 West 37th St., NEW YORK

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

We, whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones.

This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of their paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

Ida Overholt, $3.00

Read This Special Subscription Offer

By a special arrangement just made with THE FARM JOURNAL, a sixty-four page magazine, we are able to make for a limited time a very generous combination subscription offer. The Farm Journal is one of the best farm and home magazines published in the country, a large, interesting journal which is known the country over. The Farm Journal also publishes the booklets of "The Money Making Secrets" series, including "Poultry Secrets," "Horse Secrets," "Corn Secrets," "The Million Egg Farm," "The Butter Book" and "Duck Dollars." The subscription price of the "Farm Journal" is $1.00 for five years, or $1.00 for 4 years and any one of the booklets of "The Money Making Series."

Now for the Special Offer

Regular Price of Restitution 1 year . . . $1.50
Regular Price of Farm Journal 5 years . . 1.00
(Or Farm Journal four years and one booklet)
2.50

We Will Send Both the Above to You for the Special Price of

$1.50

Remember the Restitution for 1 year, The Farm Journal for 5 years all for the price of $1.50

SEND IN YOUR SUBSCRIPTION TODAY

Books and Tracts
By W. H. WILSON

A BIBLE STUDY OF HADES.....15c each, or 5 for 50c.
(As compared with our modern ideas).
A critical study of Hell, showing the difference in the word in the past and in the present time.

STUDENTS TEXT BOOK 50c
How to study the Bible and rightly understand God's Word. Cloth bound, 200 Pages.

PINE WOODS BIBLE CLASS.....$1.25
Studies carried on between a class and its teacher. Cloth bound, 480 Pages.

CUNNINGLY DEVISED FABLES, 28 Pages.....10c

WHERE WILL YOU SPEND ETERNITY, 4 Pages, ... 25c per hundred

ARE YOU IN NEED OF MONEY, 4 Pages, 25c per hundred

WILL IT PAY TO BECOME A CHRISTIAN?.....25c
By Jas. W. Wilson. A neat Cloth book of 96 Pages which every one should read.

Bro. Wilson's Latest Book
Is Ready for Distribution
THE DESTINY OF RUSSIA AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES
96 Pages, Bound in Cloth, 25c.

W. H. WILSON, 625 North Willow Ave.
AUSTIN STA., CHICAGO, ILL.

The Restitution Publications

Send for all of the following books and tracts to

W. S. TOMLINSON, 10825 Orville Ave. N.E., Cleveland

A LETTER TO A FRIEND, 32 Pages 10c each, 12 for $1.00
FUTURE PROBATION, 150 Pages, 10c each, 12 for $1.00

The following tracts by M. Joblin:
THE KINGDOM OF GOD.
OLD MOTHER EARTH TO BE BORN AGAIN.
STRANGERS FROM THE COVENANT OF PROMISE.
VAIN WORSHIP.
NO IMMORTALITY OUT OF CHRIST.
GOD'S LOVE AND SOLICITUDE FOR MANKIND.
WHAT SHALL WE DO TO BE SAVED?
THE FOOLISHNESS OF PREACHING.
SALVATION, WHAT IS IT?

All the above are 16 page tracts, 100 for $1.00 any assortment.

THE PATERNITY OF JESUS, by M. Joblin, 122 Pages, each 10c. A work that proves Jesus was the son of God and not the natural son of Joseph.

THE SCRIPTURE SEARCHERS ASSISTANT, by M. Joblin, each 5c. A valuable aid to the study of the Scriptures, contains 400 references.

A WRONG DEFINITION OF LIFE AND DEATH, a six page tract, a most excellent booklet, 10 copies 25 cents; 50 copies 35 cents; 100 copies 60 cents.

THE DEVIL: WHAT, WHERE AND WHY—A 24 page tract, 5 cents a copy.

"SIGNS OF CHARACTER OR HOW TO READ CHARACTER AT SIGHT" and "HEALTH THROUGH NATURE'S LAWS"
Two books by Dr. A. Wallace Mason. One is a study of character and how we may read it by the face and head. Brother Mason has made a very close study of this subject for years, and the information given in this book will prove interesting and instructive. Price 25c, 73 pages.
The other is a work which tells how to gain and keep health as its title says, "through nature's laws" Every family should have a copy. Price 10c.

SALVATION: WHAT IS IT? A Sermon in German, translated by Henri Jerguen. Price, 10 copies, 15 cents; 50 copies, 35 cents; 100 copies, 60 cents

FOUR PAGE TRACTS:

Can You Believe? 10 for 10c, 50 for 25c.

State of Man in Death, 10 for 10c, 50 for 25c, 100 for 40c.

Life and Death, 10 for 10c, 50 for 25c, 100 for 40c.

Age to Come Not a Heresy, 10 for 10c, 50 for 25c, 100 for 40c.

TWO PAGE TRACTS

Bible Pearls—Suitable for wide distribution, 1. The Gospel. 2. Coming and Kingdom of Christ by 20,000 Baptists in 1660. 3. Immateriality. 4. Kingdom of God. 5. Nature of man and Thought for Thinkers. 6. Two Advents. 7. What is Religion? 8. Restitution Age. 9. Destiny of the Wicked. 10. Baptism. Ten copies for 5 cents, or assorted packages of 100 for 20 cents.

WANTED!
Subscription Solicitors

We will pay an actual salary to men and women in all parts of the country, to act as agents for The Restitution. This salary will be based on your ability to take subscriptions, take care of renewals, and make collections, and will be paid weekly. You can devote all or part of your time, and can make a special offer to prospective subscribers, which we will tell you about if you are interested. We will have some announcements to make in the near future that will also help you.

If you want to work, sit down NOW and write for full information.

B. W. NUTT, Manager.

"There is a great difference between the man who is sure of what he knows an dthe one who thinks he knows it all. The one has the beginning of knowledge. The other will never truly know anything"

"Courage is the power of going forward in spit of difficulties to reach a chosen and worthy object.'

"No truth is absolutely new; what is true is eternal; but old truth is new to the man who has just now found it out."

"You may depend upon it that he is a good man whose intimate friends are all good."

50 YEARS' EXPERIENCE
PATENTS
TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents.

Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the

Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co.
WHOLESALE OPTICIANS

We make a specialty of High Grade Prescription Work, and carry a full line of all kinds of Optical goods. All orders filled same day as received.

"S. K. N." SERVICE

Means prompt returns, careful work, moderate prices. Goods shipped to all parts of the country.

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co. 338 SCHOFIELD BUILDING CLEVELAND OHIO

SPECIAL OFFER!

IN ORDER to increase the circulation of The Restitution, the following special offer is made:

One new subscriber for 1 year; choice of:

W. H. Wilson's "Student's Text Book," regular price..... 50c
Or 5 Copies of "Cunningly Devised Fables," reg. price 50c
Or 5 Copies of "Bible Study of Hades," reg. price 50c

For Two New Subscribers

One Copy "Pine Woods Bible Class," 480 pages, reg. price, $1.25
Or "The Bible, Its Principles and Texts," 309 pages, reg., $1.25
Or One Hundred of Bro. Joblin's Tracts, regular price $1.00

Here is a chance to get some of the books you all should own. By making special arrangements with the authors we are able to offer them to you without the payment of a cent on your part, just a few minutes effort. We cannot afford to continue this offer long, so take advantage of it at once, get some new subscribers today.

THE RESTITUTION, 803 Parkwood Drive

"A LETTER TO A FRIEND"

This tract needs no introduction further than to say that it is one of the most convincing Gospel sermons ever written. Originally written as a letter to a friend by Sister C. C. Woodruff it was published and has sold extensively in tract form. In its present edition it is a 32 page tract, the price is

10c each; 12 for $1.00

There is no better way of spreading the Gospel than handing out one of these tracts wherever you have the opportunity.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

"Future Probation,
Is that Awaiting any of the Unrighteous?"

Here is a work by Wm. Glenn Moncrieff that every one should read. It is one of the best things on the subject ever written and will appeal to every student of the word. It is a book of 150 pages, made to sell at 25c. We have a limited number left which we will sell at the special price of

10c each; 12 for $1.00

Send for some at once.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

The Restitution
IS THE OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA.

The Restitution.

Founded in A. D. 1852

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Lk. 19:12-15), who will be King of Kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-53); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17), and belief in, the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Lk. 13:3), and obedience by Baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ." (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31).

ROBT. G. HUGGINS, Editor.

—Terms of— Subscription
ONE YEAR, $1.50;
SIX MONTHS 75 CTS. IN ADVANCE

VOL. 60 — 4 CLEVELAND, OHIO, JULY 16, 1912 No. 76

PEOPLE WILL TALK

You may get through the world, but 'twill be very slow,
If you listen to all that is said as you go;
You'll be worried and and fretted and kept in a stew
For meddlesome tongues will have something to do,
For people will talk.

If quiet and modest, you'll have it presumed
That your humble position is only assumed.
You're a wolf in sheep's clothing, or else you're a fool;
But don't get excited—keep perfectly cool—
For people will talk,

And then if you show the least boldness of heart,
Or a slight inclination to take your own part,
They will call you an upstart, conceited and vain;
But keep straight ahead—don't stop to explain.
For people will talk.

If threadbare your dress, or old fashioned your hat,
Some one will surely take notice of that
And hint very strong that you don't pay your way;
But don't get excited whatever they say—
For people will talk.

If you dress in the fashion, don't think to escape,
For they criticise them in a different shape:
You're ahead of your means, or your tailor's unpaid;
But mind your own business—there's naught to be made.
For people will talk.

Now, the best way to do is to do as you please;
For your mind—if you have one—will then be at ease,
Of course you will meet with all sorts of abuse;
But don't think to stop them—it ain't any use.
For people will talk.

RELIGIOUS CHANGES

In Belief and Practice Between the Resurrection of Christ and the Death of Constantine in 337.

XVI.—Close of Third Century

Christ gave instructions to his disciples to "Go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized (immersed) shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be condemned" (Mark xvi. 15, 16). In the first and second centuries the Christians carried out the Master's instructions just as he had given them, baptizing only those who heard, believed, and were willing to obey the Lord's command.

In the third century, however, they became wise above what was written, and introduced the baptism of infants who could neither understand nor believe the gospel. In the beginning of the third century, Tertullian, as we have seen, strongly opposed this new idea, but it became popular before the end of the century.

To the large majority of professed Christians, at the present time the idea of refusing baptism to infants seems shocking and monstrous. They look up to great men, so-called, who assert that this was a custom practiced by the apostles. Every impartial scholar, however, who is not blinded by interest or prejudice, admits that there is no scriptural warrant for this ceremony. James Vernon Bartlet, M.A., at present lecturer on Church History at Oxford, who should surely be orthodox of the orthodox, says, in his work, Apostolic Age: "There is not a trace of infant baptism in the apostolic age, or indeed till the end of the second century. . . Infant baptism began to creep in very slowly from the end of the second century. . . . Infant baptism is not an apostolic usage."

The great scholar, Neander, says: "In respect to the manner of baptizing, in conformity with the original institution and the original import of the symbol, it was generally administered by immersion. . . It was only in the case of the sick that any exception was made, then if the exigency required it, baptism was administered by sprinkling. . . The theory was finally evolved of the unconditional necessity of infant baptism. About the middle of the third century this theory was generally admitted in the North African church. The only point that was still in question was whether the child ought to be baptized immediately after birth, or, as in the case of circumcision, not till eight days after. The latter was the opinion of the bishop Fidus, who submitted the question to a council convened at Carthage. Cyprian answered him in the year 252, in the name of 66 bishops, that all were entitled to be baptized at birth. . . . As the church of North Africa was the first to bring prominently forward the necessity of infant baptism, so did they join with it also the communion of infants."

This church of North Africa was at least logical and consistent however absurd it may appear, in giving the communion to infants at their birth; if they were fitted for the rite of baptism which would bring them into Christ, they were also entitled to partake of his other ordinance. Our modern infant sprinklers are illogical in this respect Cyprian the great champion of baptism of infants on the day of their birth should have carried out his theory still more strictly, and insisted on their baptism the moment they were born. If it was necessary to baptize them the first day and not delay till the eighth for fear of them losing salvation, it was just as important the first moment. In writing to Fidus, Cyprian says: "But in respect of the case of the infants which you say ought not to be baptized within the second or third day after their birth, and that the law of ancient circumcision should be regarded, so that you think that anyone who is just born should not be baptized and sanctified within the eighth day, we all thought very differently in our council. For in this course, which you thought was to be taken, no one agreed; but we all rather judged that the mercy and grace of God are not to be refused of anyone born of man. For as the Lord says in his gospel: 'The son of man is not come to destroy men's lives, but to save them'; as far as we can we must strive if possible that no soul be lost. For what is wanting to him who has once been formed in the womb by the hand of God? . . . How much rather ought we to shrink from hindering an infant, who, being lately born has not sinned except in that, being born after the flesh according to Adam, he has contracted the contagion of the ancient death at its earliest birth; who approaches the more easily on this very account to the reception of the forgiveness of sins—that to him are remitted, not his own sins but the sins of another."

The fault of all such reasoning as the foregoing is that it is entirely unscriptural. Christ's command is to preach the gospel, and they who believe are to be baptized for the remission of their own sins; and nothing is stated about the remission of any sins contracted from anyone else. An infant at birth or a few days old has no sin to remit, and consequently cannot be a subject for this ordinance which was instituted by the great head for the remission of sins. Peter's command on the day of Pentecost to those who believed has been the uniform command of God's servants in all ages: "Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins" (Acts ii. 38). "And ye know he was manifested to take away our sins" (1 John iii. 5).

The church had a long period of rest after the Decian persecution in the middle of the third century, and the numbers and wealth increased very greatly up to this century. Many in the early part of it had been eagerly looking for Christ's coming, and this had had a most salutary effect on their lives; they knew not the day nor the hour when the king would come in his glory, and they would be called to give an account. Kurtz, in his Church History says: "Finally, the last dissolving action of this age was to less severity of life, . . . to make modifications in constitution, life, and conversation, in accordance with the social customs of the world, and to settle down through disregard of the speedy return of the Lord, so confidently expected by the earlier Christians, into an easy satisfaction of the enjoyment of earthly possessions." Eusebius, speaking of this period says: "Though excessive liberty they had sunk into sloth, negligence, envying and reviling one another, prelates inveighing against prelates and people rising against people, hypocrisy and dissimulation having risen to the greatest height of malignity."

Joseph Fletcher in his Life of Constantine the Great, well states the condition of things in the "orthodox" church at the end of this century: "The clergy augmented their powers, and became possessed of that independence which was once the boast of those for whom their office was instituted. In both the Greek and Latin churches their orders were multiplied. Besides metropolitans, bishops, presbyters, and deacons, there were sub-deacons, acolytes, exorcists, readers, and doorkeepers. The ministry became proud, ostentatious, formal. The simple worship of the primitive Christians was transformed into a thing of pomp and show. As the wealth of the clergy accumulated, splendid structures arose, especially towards the end of the third century, which vied with the temples of the heathen; and, at the same time, the worldly character of the church was evinced by internal decoration and vessels of gold and silver. The bishop ascended his throne, and the presbyters their chairs while the people humbly stood or kneeled around. Baptism became an imposing ceremonial and was thought to have a regenerating power when duly administered either directly by the successors of the apostles, or by those who acted for them. . . . . Marriage was constituted a sacrament among ordinary people, and virtually condemned when entered into by the clergy.

While this condition of luxury, pomp, pride, and vice was progressing among the majority of the clergy, another class was growing more and more numerous who practiced the most ascetic habits and who were also rapidly developing into a special order. Hieracas was perhaps in this century one of the most prominent of this class of men. He lived to a great age, said to have been over ninety when he died. He wrote commentaries on the Bible in Greek and Coptic, and also composed many hymns. He followed Origen in interpreting the Scriptures on an allgorical method, and considered the narrative in Genesis concerning Paradise as entirely allegorical. He considered that a heavenly spirit was enclosed in our earthly bodies, and that when it was once freed from its earthly clog it would never return to it again; consequently he denied the resurrection of the dead, so dear to the mind of the early Christian. Hieracas allowed that Paul permitted marriage to the weak. But he contended that none but those living in celibacy could enter the kingdom of heaven.

The third century drew to a close with, to all outward appearances, the Christians largely increasing in numbers in wealth and power: their old enemies the Jews had largely lost their influence and power to injure the Christians and while they had suffered somewhat from the emperors on the whole they had apparently greatly prospered, and they did not know of the terrible calamities that were to come upon them in the opening years of the following century.

When the century closed, the Roman empire was under four chiefs. Diocletian and Maximian Herculeus were the chiefs under the title of Augustus; while the other two, Constantius Chlorus (the father of Constantine) and Maximinus Galerius bore the title of Caesar. So far they had shown no enmity to the Christians; their great gatherings had not been interfered with; a mighty church had been built by them on rising ground overlooking Diocletian's palace in his chief city Nicomedia; and they met regularly on the first day of the week in their churches with very little interference.

There were very many divisions among them, however, but as the accounts of those various sects come to us mostly through orthodox sources, they are colored from their standpoint; and when they describe the so-called heresies of their day as terrible characters, we have to take their descriptions with the proverbial grain of salt.

A. WALLACE MASON.

AN EXHORTATION

Frances H. Russell

Jude, the Servant of Jesus Christ, and Brother of James, to them that are Sanctified by God the Father, and Preserved in Jesus Christ and Called" (Jude).

This short epistle was written with the view of benefiting those who have taken on the name of the Savior. Jude calls us the sanctified ones, "sanctified by God," a most holy relation. To think that we were set apart by God and consecrated to his use, is inexpressably grand, but to abuse that trusting love is baseness itself. In the Roman letter we find that those "whom he did predestinate, them also he called, and whom he called, them also he justified, and whom he justified, them he also glorified."

Our beloved Christ had to go through the agonies of his death that we might be redeemed to God by his blood. He said, "My sheep hear my voice and I know them, and they follow me." How earnestly we should strive to build up characters after Our Shephard's pattern, resulting in lives "pure as snowfields." Whittier has said, "The most valuable gift of a man or woman to this world is not money, nor books—but a noble life."

We are to be ministers of Christ and stewards of the mysteries of God, I. Cor. 4:2 reads, Moreovar, it is required in stewards that a man be found faithful." As a result of faithfulness and a continuance in well doing, we will obtain the promised reward. It is well worth our while to walk uprightly before God. If not, why should we have apostles, and ministers, and a church? Even the clock plays a part in the Christian life, for it is a symbol as well as a time piece. "The clepsydra of the Greeks, with its running water, and how like 'flowed apace;' the hour glass, with its dropping sand, how the earth returned to the earth; but the clock and bells of the church say that the Christian should order his life more perfectly, more regularly, more harmoniously, more diligently, than any other man."

If we are risen with Christ and dead to this world of sin, then we must seek those things which are above. These are old commands and familiar ones, but how new in each individual's case! It is the novelty in familiar things which arouses interest and notice.

"To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life which is in the paradise of God" (Rev. 2:7).

What a beautiful promise, but to inherit it one must keep a hold of one's self every minute of the day. Sometimes you feel that you are underneath in the struggle, but with a twist and turn the spiritual emotions prevail. We help overcome by doing our share of God's work. We must do our little part now, for "the night cometh when no man can work."

"It will be sad or joyful, as our lives shall color it, for we are daily painting the landscape of our future, and what shall be our picture of night? By every act now we are making a picture that rocks and terrible mountains enveloped in black clouds with the lightning crossing quick and revealing for an instant every horror of the scene; or we are making a different picture: the night beautiful in the serenity of the nightly heavens, peace bathing the hills and vales, and soft light bringing out everywhere new beauties; while far in the distance is the highest light of the painting—the light of Him coming who is the light of the world."

May we all be blest by keeping Paul's exhortation to the Ephesians, "I therefore, beseech you that ye walk worthy of the vocation wherewith ye are called, with all lowliness and meekness, with long suffering, forbearing one another in love, endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace."

WHAT I BELIEVE AND WHY—VII.

Charles Clifford Maple

It is impossible to say all we might wish to say and in as extended a way as we might wish to say it, in these short articles, which we are presenting each week. Last week we gave a few thoughts on baptism. one of the ordinances of the New Testament church; now we shall consider The Lord's Supper, the other ordinance of the church. For the church has but the two ordinances.

The Lord's Supper was instituted by Jesus Christ himself, and was observed by his followers in the early church upon every first day of the week.

The ordinance is spoken of as the "Lord's Supper" (I. Cor. 11: 20), the "breaking of bread" (Acts 20:7), the "Communion of the blood of Christ and of the body of Christ (I. Cor. 10:16).

It was to be observed by the followers of Christ until he should come again.

Paul said, "As often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do show the Lord's death until he come" (I. Cor. 11:26). Luke says, "Upon the first day of the week" the disciples met to observe it (Acts 20:7).

Now as to the time that this was observed by the early church; "Upon the first day of the week" should satisfy any one. Let me quote from Dr. Phillips: "What first day of the week does it have reference to in Acts 20:7. We are nowhere informed that they made any difference in first days; they were all alike, hallowed by the same great event and held sacred to its commemoration. When God commanded his people, Israel, to remember the Sabbath Day and keep it holy, they did not remember one day in every three or four months and keep it holy, but they remembered all of them and kept them holy. If, when God commanded Israel to remember the Sabbath Day and keep it holy, he meant every Sabbath Day, when it is affirmed that the disciple came together on the first day of the week to break bread, it is just to conclude that it meant on every first day of the week.

The phraseology is the same in both cases. This being true, in accordance with the example of the early believers in Christ, Christians should now observe every first day of the week in memory of Christ."

In this ordinance we show the Lord's death. And Christ intended that we should show it forth; if he had not it would not have been given, but being given it is certain that it is our duty to observe it. Neither can we please God when we neglect it. He expects that when a band of believers are assembled together upon the first day of the week the "breaking of bread" will be a part of the worship.

This is a subject of vital interest to every follower of Christ. It should be studied and understood by all. Many things might be mentioned under this theme that we hope to speak of later.

Remember: "As oft as ye do it, ye do show the Lord's death till he come."

Thy body, broken for our sake,
Our bread from heaven shall be;
Thy testamental cup we take,
And thus remember thee!

TILL BREAK OF DAY

Lillie H. Willis

"Until the day break, and the shadows flee away" we laugh, or sigh, or weep; sin's blighting hand has touched all about us, and ourselves as well, nothing has escaped its cruel touch. The flowers bloom but to die, the grass grows green only to wither, the trees send forth their leaves and blossoms only to fade and fall, the songs of the birds cease, and the hand of the destroyer touches young and old, and the bright eye becomes dim, the hand palsied, and the heart still." We all do fade as a leaf until "The day break and the shadows flee away." Then all will be changed. The voice of weeping will no longer be heard, for God shall wipe away tears from off all faces (Isaiah 25:8). And will swallow up death in victory. Then the flowers will never fade, the grass will always be green, the trees with their loads of leaves, fruit, and flowers will be a delight to the eye as well as to the palate, for winter's frost will never touch them, the birds will continually sing songs of praise to their Maker, and the hand of death will never again touch those who dwell there, for theirs is a youth that's immortal. When we ask the watchman, "What of the night?" he will tell us the day is breaking, and soon the voice we love best of all will say, "Arise, my love, my fair one, and come away. For lo, the winter is past, the rain is over and gone; the flowers appear on the earth; the time of the singing birds is come, and the voice of the turtle is heard in our land. The fig tree putteth forth her green figs, and the vines with the tender grape give a good smell. Arise, my love, my fair one, and come away"

(Song of Solomon 2: 10-13). May our God anoint our eyes with eye salve, that we may see, and make up ready to hear when he speaks, and quick to understand, so we may be numbered with that favored company who shall go out to meet him and see him as he is, and be like him.

GOLD DUST

There is dew in one flower and not in another, because one opens its cup and takes it in, while the other closes itself and the drop runs off. So God rains goodness and mercy as wide as the dew; and if we lack them it is because we open not our hearts to receive them.

They who are faithful in opposing and condemning sin may expect to suffer from the prejudice and hatred of the world.

He who is false to present duty breaks a thread in the loom, and will find the flaw when he may have forgotten the cause.

The Restitution

Issued weekly by

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING COMPANY.

Entered as second-class matter under act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

TERMS.

One year $1.50; six months 75 cents, in advance.

ROBT. G. HUGGINS.....Editor
BUELL W. NUTT.....Manager

BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Burton H. Lang, Harry Pott,
Chas. A. Good, Robt. G. Pate,
Buell W. Nutt, D. C. Robison,
W. S. Tomlinson.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

All remittances should be sent by bank draft, post office money order or express money order to The Restitution Publishing Co. 893 Parkwood drive, Cleveland, Ohio.

All communication intended for publication should be sent to the editor, Robt. G. Huggins, 10618 Lee avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

It is necessary to adhere strictly to the rule of not returning unused manuscripts. Writers will please keep copies, or risk the loss.

While the editor exercises a general supervision over the articles appearing in The Restitution, his endorsement does not extend to the interpretation of details nor the exegesis of particular texts in the writings of contributors.

Cleveland, Ohio.. . July 16, 1912

EDITORIAL

SCRIPTURE ALPHABET
(Guide to Living)

A—A soft answer turneth away wrath (Prov. 15:1).
B—Be ye kind, one to another (Eph. 4:32).
C—Cease to do evil, learn to do well (Isa. 1:16).
D—Draw nigh to God and he will draw nigh to you (James 4:8)
E—Enter not into the path of the wicked (Prov. 4:14).
F—Forgive, and ye shall be forgiven (Luke 6:37).
G—Go not in the way of evil men (Prov. 4:14).
H—Honor thy father and thy mother (Ex. 20:12)
I—In all thy ways acknowledge Him and He shall direct thy paths (Prov. 3:6).
J—Jesus saith, "Follow me" (Matt. 9:9).
K—Keep thy tongue from evil (Psa. 34:13)
L—Love your enemies (Matt. 5:
M—My son, give me thine heart (Prov. 23:26).
N—Now, therefore, fear the Lord, and serve Him (Josh. 24:14).
O—Overcome evil with good (Rom. 12:21).
P—Pray for one another (Jas. 5:16).
Q—Quit yourselves like men (I. Sam. 4:9).
R—Refuse not him that speaketh (Heb. 12:25).
S—Speak not evil one of another (James 4:11).
T—Thy word have I hid in my heart, that I might not sin against Thee (Ps. 119:11).
U—Underneath are the everlasting arms (Deut. 33:27).
V—Verily, I say unto you, Except ye be converted, and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the Kingdom of Heaven (Matt. 18:3).
W—Walk as children of light (Eph. 5:8).
Y—Ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I command you (John 15:14).
Z—Zealous of good works (Tit. 2: 14).

—Selected by Sister Viola Gazely.

An interesting communication from Bro. Humphreys is received too late for this issue.

We now have only two more of Bro. Mason's articles on "Religious Changes." They have been so good, and have been appreciated by such a large circle of readers, that many are hoping with the Editor that Bro. Mason will find time to continue them.

Copy generally gets scarce during the hot season, but this year our contributors are unmindful of the weather. It seems to us that The Restitution this week is better than ever.

Death has been busy among us recently. Many in both north and south will mourn the death of Brother Bond, whose obituary appears in this issue. And many in the east and west will read with sorrow of the demise of Brother Webster, of Los Angeles, Calif., written by a Christian Minister, presumably his pastor, which accounts for the laudation of "religious tolerance," and other sentiments that sound discordant to the ear which has been trained to "Take heed how ye hear." Mr. Thamer has written a racy and beautiful obituary, but we must not be blinded to truth and duty by the charm of literary excellence.

THE LEAST IN THE KINGDOM

Brother Huggins:

I would like to have some light on Luke 7:28: "For I say unto you Among those that are born of women there is not a greater than John the Baptist, but he that is least in the kingdom of God is greater than he." What I want to know is, Who is meant by "he that is least in the Kingdom of God?" Please answer through The Restitution, at the earliest opportunity, and oblige a sister in Jesus.

MRS. A. J. MARTIN.

Editor's Reply

The explanation of Sister Martin's difficulty may be found in the truths which the Scriptures disclose about the new birth. Jesus, in answer to the question of Nicodemus, "How can a man be born when he is old?" makes this explanation: "The wind bloweth where it listeth (margin, the spirit breatheth), and thou hearest the sound thereof, but knowest not whence it cometh, or whither it goeth. so is every one that is born of the spirit." Every intelligent reader will observe that this birth of the spirit is placed in contrast with the birth of the flesh; and that instead of describing the action of the spirit in conversation, as popularly interpreted, it has to do with the "man" born of the spirit. Not the nature of the action of the spirit, but the nature of the man, or the "one born of the spirit," is what Jesus is talking about.

"That which is born of the flesh is flesh." All "born of a woman" (Job 14:1) are born of the flesh. Among these fleshborn there have been many "great men," but "among those that are born of women there is not a greater prophet than John the Baptist," says our text. There never has been and never will be a greater than John by a flesh birth. But great as this man was, the very least in the kingdom of God will be greater than he! There is the "greatest in the kingdom of heaven" as well as the "least;" there is an "abundant entrance" as well as one more limited (Matt. 18:4; 2 Pet. 1:11). From the least to the greatest—all have to be born of the spirit before they can inherit the kingdom (I. Cor. 15:50). So the "least" one there will be far greater than John was in the days of his flesh—as much greater as in corruption to corruption; honor to dishonor; strength to weakness; immortality to mortality (I. Cor. 15).

SHOULD CREEDS BE ENDED OR MENDED?

What is a creed? According to the definition of the best dictionary accessible, a creed is "a statement of belief on any subject, religious, political, scientific or other, especially a formal statement of religious belief, a form of words setting forth with authority certain articles of belief, which are regarded by the framers as necessary for salvation, or at least, for the well-being of the Christian Church." This definition seems satisfactory, and may be borne in mind in the reading of the following remarks.

From Mr. J. B. Rotheram, translator of The Emphasized Bible, we have a pamphlet entitled, "Should Creeds Be Mended or Ended? The Scriptural argument for one faith, free confessions, no creeds." He explains that by the One Faith he means the chief article of belief on which the Church of Christ is built; Also that by "free confession," he means spontaneous avowals of faith in Christ, and by "creeds" he means "binding summaries of beliefs composed since the days of the apostles;" and he declares that no colorable approach to a creed is to be discovered in the New Testament. If he be asked, "Do you advocate a creedless church?" he answers: "If by 'creedless' you mean 'beliefless,' then I do not advocate any such thing; but if by 'creedless' you intend 'not based on human formularies,' then I certainly do plead for such and only such assemblies of Christians."

In chapter I Mr. Rotheram speaks of "The One Faith," and says truly that "the One Faith enshrined in the New Testament is that of Jesus of Nazereth is the Son of God." But he does not speak according to the oracles of God, when he seeks to find the faith of Jude's allusion (v3) "delivered unto the saints," on some special occasion, as at the baptism of Jesus in Jordan (Matt. iii:17).

The voice from heaven which said, "This is my Beloved Son in whom I am well pleased," was not the delivery of the faith once for all, but the divine attestation of the Messenger of the covenant. The things of the covenant itself had been revealed to Israel "at sundry times and in divers manners," and were recorded in Moses and the Prophets, as Jesus himself emphatically declared, saying, "Had ye believed Moses ye would have believed me, for he wrote of me. But if ye believe not his writings, how shall ye believe my words?" (Jno. v: 46-47). And again, "If they hear not Moses and the Prophets, neither will they be persuaded though one rose from the dead" (Luke xvi). To believe with John, "that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God," and believing to have life through his name (John xx:31), we must know and believe the writings of Moses and the Prophets concerning the Christ. The One Faith existed in the time of Adam, and, later, in the times of Noah, Abraham, Moses and David; but David's articles of belief were of necessity more comprehensive and detailed than those of Adam. And to one who might have essayed to lead him back to the simplicity of Gen. iii:15 he would no doubt have replied with emphatic instruction concerning the "everlasting covenant" that God had made with him concerning Christ.

We can carry this simple principle forward, and so dispose of Mr. Rotherham's objection that "no example of catechising with a view to the initiatory rite of baptism can be discovered in apostolic history;" a remark which he immediately qualifies by saying, "Undoubtedly instruction was needed and faith was demanded." As a matter of fact, the New Testament was full of precept and example concerning the preservation of the One Faith, and uncompromising repudiation of all corruption thereof. Jesus himself is the example in this respect. "If ye believe not that I am He, ye shall die in your sins" (Jno. viii 24). And in the epistle to the church of the Ephesians he approves their intolerance of false professors. Christ's conditions of salvation were, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." And the apostles, in executing his commission, first preached "the word of the truth of the gospel," which was attested by the Holy Spirit and by miracles, and then upon their hearers' belief of this word, they baptised them. It cannot be imagined that the apostles were in the least dgree slack concerning the "instruction needed" and the "faith demanded." As the corruptions of the faith increased so their scruples became greater. Hence we have the apostle John exhorting the brethren to "try the spirits whether they be of God," because of the false teachers (1 Jno. iv:1). Also, in another place, he advises one to refuse those who "confess not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh" (2 Jno. 10). Again, in the case of Philip and the eunuch, we see the preaching of Jesus from the prophets precede baptism. And at Ephesus, we see Paul setting right a defective faith, and afterwards baptising the newly enlightened persons "in the name of the Lord Jesus" (Acast xix). And so on the day of Pentecost, and at the house of Cornelius (Acts ii; x).

Mr. Rothenham proceeds on the assumption that as regards essentials, "There is nothing in which such as bear the Christian name are more united than in regard of one faith concerning Jesus." Surely he must have closed his eyes. Anything more disunited than Christendom it would be impossible to conceive. "The one body" of Mr. Rotherham's allusion is not "the one body" of New Testament allusion. This last, in the contemporary remnant thereof regards the present state of Christendom as only fitly described in the language of the spirit of God in Revelations xvii:5. It is truly Babel from the Mother Church downwards.

Speaking concerning "Free Confessions," Mr. Rothrham says, "The Master has not exacted this or that form of confession" . . . "In form the confession is left free." And as to the amount of freedom suggested, imperfection and diversity of views of the following matters are instanced: "Inspiration, Predestination, the Atonement, the work of the Holy Spirit, the right constitution of the Church, the second advent, etc." It is obvious, says Mr. Rotheram, "that such questions must either be settled for us, or we must settle them for ourselves." Quite so; or, it might be added, "Let them remain unsettled for the sake of peace." Then arises the question, Can a man scripturally "confess Christ" while holding more or less error on any or all of the maters thus tabulated? Or, we might put it in another way: Jesus says, "The truth shall make you free." How much less than "the truth" is it proposed to substitute for "the truth"? It is fully and freely admitted that there must be "babes in Christ"—that believing men and women must "grow in grace and in the knowledge of their Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ." But it is not according to truth that such a list of matters should be suggested on which variant and therefore untrue beliefs should be tolerated on the plea of "free confession" of Christ. Such a course is not at all the "confession" of which Christ speaks. His words imply the reception of his doctrine and a following in his footsteps. When he himself "witnessed a confession" before Pilate the form of it was not "left free." It was a clear (and humanly-speaking, treasonable), affirmation of his kingship as against Caesar; and it brought about his death on the cross. There was no trimming of the truth with Christ.

Speaking of the nature of a creed, the author gives a singular reason for one clause of his definition, that in which he says a creed "must have been composed since the days of the apostles," since, says he, "no one who is interested in this argument is supposed to object to anything delivered by Christ and the apostles." Ah, that is the question. As a matter of fact, that is just what people do object to. The teaching of Christ and the apostles is absolutely subversive and destructive of the faiths of Christendom. No doubt this sounds shocking and outrageous when first enunciated; but on impartial investigation it will be found that it cannot be denied.

We very cordially endorse many of his remarks concerning the human character of all creeds, and concerning the distressing futilities of the Westminster Confession. Also some very interesting and discriminating remarks on the so-called Apostles' Creed. Of this Mr. Rotherham says:

"As to the so-called 'Apostles' Creed' contained in the Episcopal prayer book, it is obvious that objections to its use are reduced to a minimum; for the plain reason that it is less a creed than any of the rest; less, not indeed as being invested with inferior authority, but as being rather a rehearsal of notorious divine facts and revelations than a series of exact definitions of Christian truth. This admitted characteristic may in part be due to the early composition of this symbol, when, in the absence of printed Bibles, and the paucity and expensiveness of written manuscripts, it was naturally felt that a rapid summary of admitted Christian truth was needed; and when, theoretic hair-splitting not having begun its evil course, there was less temptation in composing this creed to meet one subtlety of deniat by another of affirmation."

There is much that is very true here; but the admissions involved seem to upset our author's "conclusion," which is, "that creeds should be 'ended', not 'mended.'" For if the rehearsal of notorious divine facts and revelations be entirely unobjectionable, as all must admit, and if such rehearsal supplied "a naturally felt need," the same or a similar rehearsal is equally unobjectionable now, when the "naturally felt need" is greater than ever; for the "theoretic hair-splitting" has now had an evil course of many centuries.

We live in evil times. The Son of Man is absent. The world-field where he sowed the good seed of the kingdom has been plentifully sprinkled with the tares, as he predicted it would be. It is forbidden to attempt the uprooting of the tares before the harvest—a procedure which the Church of Rome has blasphemously adventured on in her dealings with "heretics." The Master will do the separating at "the end of the age." But, on the other hand, it is forbidden to be unequally yoked with the unbelievers (2 Cor. vi). "Come out from among them and be separate," is the spirit's command by the apostle. How otherwise than it has been done in the past? Communities of believers in the word of God, having come to understand "the first principles of the oracles of God," have "come out," and placing on record their summary "rehearsal of notorious divine facts and revelations," have preached the Word, and invited all like-minded to join them. What else could they do? There is no authority on earth in the absence of the Lord Jesus Christ. All have the Bible, and none are injured by the course above described. Two cannot walk together except they be agreed. "There must be hercsies, that the approved may be made manifest." These are scriptural principles.

As regards Christendom it is a matter of little importance whether its creeds be "ended" or "mended," since they do not express any vital beliefs in the vast majority of cases in the mouths of those who mechanically repeat them every Sunday in the churches. This is notorious. On the whole, it would perhaps be more decorous to "end" the creeds, than for tens of thousands of people to go on saying "I believe" when they do not believe at all.

But as regards the "one body" wherever it may be found, it is under command to "hold fast the form of sound words" delivered by the apostles (2 Tim. i. 13); to be "of one mind" (2 Cor. xiii. 11); to come out from the unbelievers (2 Cor. vi. 17), as a condition of belonging to the one body, or being accounted the sons and daughters of God. It must not tolerate false apostles and liars. (Rev. ii. 2).

A creed is a "naturally felt want" in such a case, and being recognized as entirely without divine authority, and only a convention to be used subserviently to the word of the spirit of God in the Bible, is entirely unobjectionable. Where men are faithful to God and the Bible there is not much friction over creeds. But where error and latitudinarianism arise there is naturally controversy so long as there is any vitality left in the community. This is illustrated even in the Acts of the apostles and in the epistles.

This order (or disorder) of things is not going to be abolished before the return of Christ. That is the only true remedy for the situation, and a drastic one it will be for the world, as Christ himself declares. But blessed will be the portion of those who have known the truth, and have held fast Christ's name and not denied his faith amidst the multiplied troubles and difficulties of this present evil world.

COMMUNICATIONS

Dear Brother Huggins:

I went to Kennard, Neb., seven miles west of Blair, June 22, and continued meetings to July 2.

This is a new field and the prospects for a good work is bright. The Christian people have a church there, but on account of lack of members they haven't held meetings in it for several years. They let us have it free of charge, and it seemed like old days when people were interested enough to turn out.

Part of the time we had the house filled nearly to its capacity, with a splendid interest. On Sunday the brethren from Blair came and brought their baskets, and we had an all day's session. Tuesday night, the second, two, a husband and wife, took a stand for the truth. I return next week and others will be ready. Pray for us and them.

Your fellow-laborer,
ALMUS ADAMS.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

You have no doubt seen the constitution of our organization of isolated members. Now let me urge every one to send in your name and membership fee to Sister Hanson. I think it would be a good plan to cut out the constitution and keep it for reference. You can then always have the names and address of the officers. We want to hear from and know each other.

The object of the organization is to devise ways and means for the isolated members to work. We must work; faith without work is dead. Many of those who are off by themselves, are not doing anything; really they are not in a position that they can do much. If you know of any brethren who do not take The Restitution urge them to subscribe; they will then become acquainted with so many able writers through its columns.

This organization will be a power for good, in building us up, in one most holy faith. If we work together, and contribute our mites no matter if they are small, if it is our best.

We realize that our time to work is short; the fig tree is budding, the powers of earth are in a turmoil; the gospel age is almost ended. Don't delay. Yours in love for the truth,

CARRIE FREE, President.

In Eph. 5 chapter we are urged to lead a true life, a life that God will be pleased with. The light of the glorious gospel has shined into our hearts and we are no longer in darkness as to what we should do. Look to Jesus as our great example, believe on him, walk in love. All the prominent evils that would bar a person from the Kingdom of God have been enumerated so that it is impossible for us to commit any gross error unknowingly. Paul tells us further to search out what is well pleasing to God. To do this we must go to his great field for gathering the information we need. Yes, we need to search the scriptures and meditate upon our ways. "Redeeming the time" has reference, I think, to using time in such a way that it will remove from us all danger of liability to error. It is using time in a way that our lives will be free from condemnation. Another definition I find of "redeem" is "the rescue from captivity," and if we have given our lives to Jesus and are serving him, we are no longer the servants of sin to obey in the lust thereof: We are rescued from the captivity of sin. By living godly we can be saved from a good many of the evil consequences of sin in this life, and can develop a character pleasing to God. As a man soweth so shall he reap. I am trying to sow so that I may meet my Savior, bringing many precious sheaves. Pray that I may be guided aright. I am sure it will be worth all we have suffered to meet with his approving smile.

May these words, "Let us not be weary in well doing, for in due season we shall reap if we faint not," be a source of inspiration to us to press on to victory.

At this season of the year, when all nature is bursting out into life and beauty again, we see God's wonderful sustaining and providing power. May it lead us to trust him more fully and to draw more from the riches of his grace. As the plant reaches up higher and higher and takes in more of the sunshine and air, and reaches out its roots further and further for food, its capacity for receiving is, its capacity for receiving is us, dear brethren and sisters of the Lord. The things we need are ready for us if we but know how to reach out and get them.

May we all be ready, yes, be ready for the grand review.

Yours in the service of the Master, and in the hope of his appearing,

EMILY GROVES.

Dear Brother Huggins:

I write you to commend the article in The Restitution of July 2 on "Eternal Life—The Myth of Science—The Truth of Scripture," by J. R. Norrie. There are many articles coming to us that are fine, but this one I mention, to me, seems specially strong. In the fourth column is laid down the conditions through which eternal life is meted to all through Jesus Christ in the most clean cut, concise language it has ever been my privilege to see it placed, and I feel it would be a worthy article to print in tract form.

With love and good wishes to yourself and wife from self and wife, I remain your brother,

F. M. McCRORY.

THE TRUTH DEFENDED—No 10.

An Ex-Mehodist Pleads for the Truth.

Mrs. Chas. Thomas.

In my Father's house are many mansions, if it were not so, I would not have told you. I go to prepare a place for you, and if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you unto myself, that where I am there you may be also (John 14: 2-3). Some think this contradicts the truths we have been trying to explain, but it does not when properly understood. Christ spoke of his people being built unto a spiritual house for example: "Ye also, as lively stones, are built up a spiritual house (1 Pet. 2:5). The house of God, which is the church of the living God, the pillar and ground of the truth. "In whom all the building fitly framed together, groweth unto a holy temple in the Lord." Him that overcometh will I make a pillar in the temple of my God (Rev. 3:12). The household of God built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone. Christ was alluding to the symbolical temple or mansions composed of the children of the kingdom. It will be revealed when the kingdom is set upon the earth. He is preparing a place for us, for he is selecting, guiding and ruling in the hearts and lives of a people that he will reveal when he comes to earth again. That is when he says he will receive us unto himself.

Another text that some quote-to prove that the kingdom of God is a state of spiritual enlightenment in the heart is this: "Neither shall they say, Lo here or lo there, for behold the kingdom of God is within you" (Luke 17:21). We know such was not Christ's meaning, for he had said of the same people (Pharisees) that "within ye are full of hypocrisy and iniquity (Matt. 23:28). In the margin "among you" is substituted for "within you," which makes it very different. Enough has been given to prove that the same kingdom of David was looked for and preached by the apostles, and that it will be set up in Jerusalem, and the Jews brought back to their own land, and will know that Jesus is the king of the Jews, the same Jesus that they crucified; that those who are really his, who know, accept, and obey the truth, are being moulded and fashioned into a peculiar people, who will soon reign on this earth with him for a thousand years. When Christ comes to take to himself his saints, he will raise the sleeping ones and they, with the living ones, will be caught away to reign with him for the thousand years. The rest of the dead—those that die during the thousand years—will remain dead until the thousand years are finished. Sin and death will continue, but in a milder form, for satan will be chained. The law shall go forth and many nations shall come and say, Come and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, and to the house of Jacob, for he will teach us his ways, and we will walk in his paths; for the law shall go forth of Zion, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem (Isa. 2:1-30).

OBITUARY

F. A. Bond

Brother F. A. Bond was born on old Bank Street, September 10, 1835, and died at the home of his son, 27 Chapman avenue, East Cleveland, June 30, 1912.

He had a stroke of paralysis last November from which he only partially recovered, and has been in feeble and declining health since that time. The end of our brother's life came suddenly and peacefully, his demise being directly due to heart failure.

He leaves to mourn his loss a [illegible] son, Fred. E. Bond; a daughter, Josephine Bond Wallace, and a sister, Miss Frances D. Bond, an artist of Capri, Italy, and many friends.

Brother Bond was a Civil War veteran. He has ben a resident of Cleveland, Ohio, all his life. His father, Newell Bond, was a charter member of the Church of God, which was organized in the year 1863, and was a regular attendant, also being a willing helper in supporting the truth.

The brethren and sisters will miss our dear brother in Christ, and join his immediate family in mutual sorrow. May the glories of God's promise help us to bear his loss, and enable us, as they did brother Bond, to hold fast and be "faithful to the end."

Funeral services were held July 3, conducted by the Editor of The Restitution, after which our brother was laid to rest until the Master comes.

A. C. BAKER, Sec.

Eugene Carroll Webster

A useful life came to its earthly end with the passing of Eugene Carroll Webster, on Sunday, June 16, 1912, at the Glendale Sanitarium, as a result of an automobile accident that occurred on the preceding day. With the rumor of the catastrophe and the later report of his death, there came to friends a realization of the deep bereavement sustained by the community and by the church. His versatile talents had enabled him to aid projects varied in nature and diverse in character, and his loss fell heavily upon many not numbered within his circle of intimate friends. Wide as were his activities and numerous as were his associations with civic, realty and general interest, it was to the church that his deepest devotion was given, and in the church where his highest pleasures were found. Nor did he wait until he had laid aside the business activities of existence to take the time for religious thought and for a clear estimation, in their true value, of the affairs of time and the interests of eternity. His spiritual nature, which had been so deeply touched as to lead him to make a public confession of his faith in Christ, for years gave abundant proof of his consecration to the cause of the Master. Influenced by the life and teachings of Mr. Halstead, on Easter Sunday of 1885, he and his wife united with the Church of God at Andover, S. D. During 1905 the family became members of the Broadway Christian church, in Los Angeles, and when the Wilshire Boulevard Christian Church was organized he became one of its charter members, which relationship continued until his untimely death.

While always a thoughtful reader, fond of god literature, and regarding books as his choice companions, Mr. Webster was most deeply interested in the Book of books. Few men were better posted than he concerning its sacred pages. Thoughtful study gave him a knowledge of Gospel history surpassed by few ministers of the Word. Religion seemed to him to comprise the simple acceptance of the Gospel truths and the exemplication in life of the teachings of the Lord. The duty of a Christian was as clear to him as any of the other fundamental obligations of existence. Naturally, one who had studied the Scriptures for so many years had formed decisive opinions, and could not be easily swerved from such convictions, yet invariably he displayed the deepest consideration for the opinions of others. In fact, religious tolerance was one of his most marked characteristics. With those of opposing beliefs he was ever amiable and gentle, and to them he gave the same liberty of thought which he demanded for himself. The genuine Christ spirit was manifest in his daily walk. As a teacher of the Bible he loved so well, as a follower of the Christ, so dear to him, and as a member of the church beloved to his heart, his gracious memory remains a comfort and a benediction to friends who, like himself, have striven for the "life that is hid with Christ in God."

The life whose inward aspirations have been here depicted began March 13, 1859, in the home of Samuel Webster and Mary Ann Webster, that home having been an old stone house at Stockholm, N. Y., where the father, too, had been born. There were eleven children in the family, and Eugene C. was eleven years of age when the family removed to Lake City, Minn., then at the extreme edge of the frontier. After he had completed the studies of the local schools he taught in the fall and winter, devoting the summer months to learning the carpenter's trade with his father. As early as 1878 he went to what is now Watertown, South Dakota, where he worked at his trade and acquired a homestead in Hayward County, Iowa, during 1880, he married Miss Nettie L. House, and for the first two years of their wedded life they endured all the hardships and vicissitudes incident to homesteading. In February of 1882 they moved to the present site of Andover, Day county, South Dakota, where Mr. Webster built the first house. For twenty years he was a leading citizen of Andover and its growth was promoted largely by his self-sacrificing endeavors. The general store which he started at the very first, soon developed an encouraging hardware trade, and he specialized in that department. Later he added a stock of furniture, and finally he opend an undertaking parlor. Nor did he relinquish these varied business enterprises until a decision to seek a less regorous climate caused him to remove to Los Angeles during 1902, when he erected a residence at No. 2923 Vermont avenue.

From the time of his location in Los Angeles, until his death ten years later, Mr. Webster made a specialty of real estate exchange. Upon the completion of the H. W. Hellman block, at the corner of Fourth and Spring Streets he leased a suite of rooms in the building and occupied the same office for seven years, or until his demise. During 1906 he sold his home on Vermont avenue and built a more pretentious residence at No. 709 Catalfne street, his decision as to location having been guided by his foresight as to the possibilities of the Wiltshire district. In Los Angeles, as in South Dakota, he was active in church work, generous in his support of religious enterprise, philanthropic toward the poor, and liberal in the aid of missionary movements. His time and talents and energy were freely given to the advancement of the cause to which he was devoted. The church greatly benefited by his wise counsel, purposeful sagacity, and profound Biblical knowledge. His friends, in their bereavement, find pleasure in the thought that activities so far-reaching, and consecration so sincere, can but be an earnest of the wider sphere of eternity, where larger possibilities will be realized and richer joys inherited than any that earth now can bestow.

J. CHAS. THOMER.

CONFERENC EREPORT

The North West conference of the church of God in Oregon and Washington met in conference at Pellda, Wash., June 21-23. There was a goodly number in attendance who were made more than welcome by the people of the neighborhood, as Pellda is a country place. The interest was good and altogether a pleasant and profitable meeting was enjoyed. The preaching brethren were A. W. Darby, and Bro. Edwin Groat, of California.

Sunday afternoon four young people put on Christ by baptism; they were Bro. Hathaway's two boys, Harry and Elmer, and Evelyn McIrvin and Jenny Fisher.

The temperance people and local W. C. T. U. arranged a very interesting program for Saturday afternoon, which was appreciated by all.

The Evangelical Report

Sermons and Bible Readings
Families visited
Baptisms
Total expenses	$51.
Wages for work	$82.
	$133.
Total receipts	$120.
Still due him	13.

Treasurer reported $120.15. treasury at beginning of meeting and received during the meting in pledges and money $155.00.

The following officers were elected: President, Frank Smallen of Eden, Wash.; Vice President, A. W. Darby, of Corvallis, Ore. Secretary, Emmet W. Irvin, Pellda, Wash.; and for treasurer, Goldie Darby, Corvallis, Ore.

In view of the loss to our conference by death during the year the following resolutions were adopted and ordered added to the minutes:

Resolved: That we as a conference of brothers and sisters in Christ do extend to Bro. Smallen and family our heartfelt sympathy in their bereavement by the death of their mother, and pray God's loving kindness to comfort them. Also to Sister Darby and family, and the church at Corvallis for their great loss by the death of Brother William Darby. Also Sister Smith in her great bereavement by the death of her only little grand child. Also to the and friends of Brother William Skeel, who was so highly esteemed and appreciated by all the churches and friends of the east. And we hereby commend them to the loving care of our Heavenly Father and the hope of reaching the kingdom of God.

On moton t was ordered that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the friends of the departed, also to each of the papers published by our cause.

LIBBIE PALMER.

THE SEAL OF THE NEW COVENANT

F. M. Howell

Now what is this seal called baptism? As has been stated, every religious rite that God required of his people was a symbol of some act or change that man must pass through before he enters into the heavenly kingdom. Baptism is a sign of circumcision made without hands (Col. 2:11), and means literally a cutting off of this body of flesh, which must actually be cut off through the process of death and a resurrection, because flesh and blood can not inherit the kingdom of God (I. Cor. 15:50), so this is symbolized by a burial and a resurrection from a watery grave, which is a figure of the true (I. Peter 3:21). Paul explained very plainly to the brethren at Rome that all who receive the life giving spirit now so that they will rise from their graves at the resurrection with spiritual bodies, must symbolically cut off this body of flesh through or by means of baptism (Rom. 6:1-10 8:11). He told the faithful brethren in Christ at Colosse that they were circumcised in Christ with the circumcision made without hands, in putting off the body of flesh (symbolically), by the circumcision of Christ; (which consists in) having been buried with him in baptism (Col. 2:11,12. Diagiott).

This is the only condition during this age by which we may become members of Christ's body, and heirs of God's promises to Abraham and his seed. Paul said to the Galations, "For ye are all the children of God by faith in Jesus Christ. For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ, have put on Christ. And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise (Gal. 3:26,29).

It is true that this circumcision must be of the heart (Rom. 2:29) that is: the mind must entertain faith, repentance, and a sincere desire to obey Christ, and this can not be unless the outer man body performs that act of obedience to the divine command that manifests to the world the token of the sincerity of the inner man or mind (Rom. 7:22,23)

The command of our Savior that the believer be baptised, very clearly refers to water baptism, not to Holy Spirirt baptism, but to an act on the part of man himself, because Jesus commanded his disciples to baptize believers into his name, and Peter says it is the answer of a good conscience, while Paul says we are baptized for the dead (I Cor. 15:29).

Not that we are baptized in behalf of some who died unprepared, as the Mormons believe, but that the act symbolizes the burial and resurrection of the dead, and that those who submit to the ordinance should be dead to sin, buried to a sinful world and sinful intentions, and resurrected to a new life spiritually. Paul says to the Romans, "For if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death (note the word "likeness") we should be also in the likeness of his resurrection." (6:5) Holy spirit baptism, sprinkling, or pouring, can not be used as a likeness of planting, therefore it must mean immersion in water. Inasmuch as Peter told the convicted Jews to repent and be baptized in the nameof Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and they should receive the gift of the Holy Spirit (Acts 2:38), and that Paul said God hath sealed the anointed and given the earnest of the Spirit in their hearts (II. Cor. 1:22), and in Eph. 4:30, said, "And grieve not the holy Spirit of God whereby ye are sealed unto the day of redemption," it is evident that as soon as the penitent believer obeys Christ's command to be baptized, and thereby seals the covenant on his part, that God then pardons his sins and records his name in the "book of life," and seals him with the holy Spirit giving him the pledge of the Spirit in his heart.

SPASMODIC RELIGION.

T. E. Adams.

There is more than one kind of religion in the world, and more than one name for them in the Bible. There is the "Jewish religion" which is peculiar to the Jews and there is what was called "Pure undefiled religion," perhaps, the same as the first. Then there was a "vain religion" and this kind is very prevalent yet, and very deceptive and misleading. Then there is one more kind mentioned in the Bible, that is very peculiar in its nature and also in its name. This is the genuine article called "Pure and undefiled religion," and is a very rare article in these days. Then there is also another kind of religion that is very popular, and in a general way might include the "vain religion," yet the right name for this kind is "Spasmodic Religion," because so very many of its adherents go by fits and jerks, very much as people do when laboring under a spasm. When the spasm passes off they are themselves again. Just so with this popular "Spasmodic Religion." when the jerks and fits of excitement pass off, they get as cold as cold potatoes, as one of their ministers recently said of such converts, "We have a lot of cold potatoes now on our hands, and I don't know what we will do with them unless we do with them like the old woman did her preserves, warm them over again." People can and do get this kind of religion, but not the genuine article, as that consists in doing good deeds.

PRAYER.

M. Joblin.

It has ben beautifully said by Montgomery, that "Prayer is the Christian's vital breath; the Christian's native air." But if there be one thing more than another calculated to cause men to doubt the reality of Christianity, we think it is the kind of talk called prayer. We recently attended the funeral of an aged judge. A high church dignitary invited all to unite with him in prayer. After the opening words it was mainly composed of an eulogy of the deceased; telling the Lord what a wonderfully good man had just entered the celestial sphere—apparently, to secure a good place for him near the throne, as if the Lord knew nothing about him before, and so needed an introduction or recommendation before his proper place could be assigned him. On and on he went at great length; over and over again he extolled him, till the monotonous and fulsome strains made us feel sick; and as we turned away from the house of death we wondered if there were any skeptics present, and if so, what effect it would have upon them.

A solemn subject is this of prayer. We sometimes wonder if anything tries the forbearance of God toward his children more than the way they appear to pray. Is it not our duty, as well as privilege, to study what it is God's will to give us; and in the intervals of business study our needs so as to know what to ask for? How else can we expect to receive? The promise to ask what we will and it will be done unto us is not addrsed to a fleshly mind, but to the spiritually minded, who want nothing but what it is the Father's will to give.

The word prayer is probably derived from a Hebrew word signifying appeal, interposing—interceding; but in our judgment, it properly embraces more than desires, or requests; such for instance as adoration, confession, thanksgiving, and so forth. "Prayer may be mental or vocal, regular or occasional, public or private, for ourselves, or for others; for the procuring of some good, or the removal of some evil, if it be God's will. We learn from James v. 16 that it is earnest supplication of a justified one that prevails; and from Col. ii. 2, that prayer and thanksgivings are to be addressed—to God the Father. And as we cannot come to God without a mediator, the same verse gives us the name of Jesus to plead before him.

Blessed Jesus! we were undone without him. He has tasted the trials of life in advance for us. This fits him for his high office. He knows how to sympathize with the tried ones, having been touched with the feelings of their infirmities, and so is able to succor them. As the evils and perils of the last day crowd upon us, let us constantly go to the Father in the name of his glorious Son, and so obtain strength and favor to help us in every time of need.

SERMON SUBJECTS.

Charles Clifford Maple

I would suggest for the benefit of our preaching brethren, a series of sermons on the general topic, "Lessons from the Prophets." Four sermons, or as many more as you may desire. I made use of the four, one upon each first day of the week for the month of February, as follows:

I. Micah and true religion (Micah 6:8).

II. Daniel and his deliverance (Dan. 6:16).

III. Zacharish and the vision (Zech. 4:6).

IV. Malachi and the end (Mal. 4:1-2).

I found many modern messages among the words of the ancient prophets.

The following I wish to present during the month of March. These are designed to reach the church and revive the spiritual life, to reach the one in sin and lead him to Christ.

I. The first day of the week and how to observe it. Acts 20:7.

II. Becoming a Christian (Acts 26:28).

III. Our accountability (James 4:17).

IV. Thoughts on the church (Matt. 16:18, 19).

V. Will Jesus come again? When? How? Why? (I Thess. 4:16).

We should not forget to follow the instruction of Paul and "Preach the Word." "Study." "Rightly divide." What the people need is the Word of God. They do not need the teachings and doctrines of men but the WORD OF GOD ITSELF. Not what WE think about the word, not what has been written about the word. To preach the word means to tell what the word says.

GOLD DUST.

Followers of Christ are called by Him "salt" to preserve and "light" to guide. While both are silent in action yet they are constant and great in effect.

A virtuous life is like a lamppost. It lessens evil and shows the way for righteousness.

Praise consists in the love of God, in the wonder at the goodness of God, in recognition of the gifts of God, in seeing God in all things. He gives us, ay, and even in the things He refuses to us; so as to see our whole life in the light of God, and, seeing this, to bless Him, adore Him, and glorify Him.

ANNA DREW.

"Room for a short paragraph," says the printer. Here it is! Warm weather is here; many readers are enjoying holidays by the lake shore, the sea beach, and on the mountains. As a consequence The Restitution, with all other kinds of publications, is in the midst of what is proverbially known as the "dull season." Do not forget that we need money now as much, if not worse, than at other times of the year. Take this hint kindly and remember us and the cause of the truth.

ILLINOIS CONFERENCE

The sixteenth Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Christ Jesus in Illinois will begin in Oregon, Ill., on Wednesday evening, Aug. 21, and continue over the following Sunday. A cordial invitation is extended to all. Come and help us make our meeting a success. A program will be printed later.

GRACE M. WILLIAMS,
Secretary.

SOUTHERN ILLINOIS CONFERENCE

The Southern Illinois Conference will be held with the church at Moriah, near Casey, Ill., Sept. 21-29. Program will be published later.

MRS. AMY WEAVER, Secy.,
210 S. Jasper Ave.,
Casey, Ill.

NEBRASKA CONFERENCE

The Nebraska State Conference will be held at Moorefield, Neb., from Aug. 17 to Aug. 25, inclusively. All are cordially invited to come.

ALTA KING,
Secretary.

THE BIBLE: ITS PRINCIPLES AND TEXTS

As indicated by the title this book is divided into three sections. The first consists of a remarkable disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "principles" in formulated propositions, and the third expounds in a clear, impressive and homelitic manner particular "Texts." The knotty and perplexing texts of the Bible are united and solved satisfactorily to the most fastidious and critical. More than one hundred and fifteen subjects of intense interest to every Bible student are formally discussed. Both simple and scholarly—the child is fascinated and taught; the scholar is entertained and instructed. Bible lovers, here is a feast for you. Throw open the door of your home; let The Bible—its Principles and its Texts come in and bless you and your family. 300 pages, 5⅞ 1-2 inches, durably and handsomely bound in whole cloth, with title embossed on back in gold. One copy, $1.10; two copies or more, $1.00 each. R. G. Huggins, 10623 Lee Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

PROOFREADER

Years of experience in proof-reading; now completing a technical course in the art. MSS prepared for the printer and proofs read. Book work a specialty. Limited amount of work by mail accepted at popular prices.

ROBT. G. HUGGINS,
10623 Lee Avenue,
Cleveland, Ohio

The truth gives a man the hope of seeing with his own eyes the work of God, at last triumphant in the earth whether he live or die; and of himself sharing the blessedness for ages covenanted for all the earth through Abraham and his seed.

Forgetful hearers allow themselves to be diverted by the ephemeral things of life from the important business of making themselves familiar with God's word by reading. They are without excuse.

Real faith is a treasure, a companion of delight, a spring of living water, a fountain of purity.

The man who possesses faith unfeigned will do what others will not do; but a man of sham faith will not sacrifice anything for the sake of it.

Ladies! Save Money and Keep in Style by Reading McCall's Magazine and Using McCall Patterns

McCall's Magazine will help you dress stylish at a moderate expense by keeping you posted on the latest fashions in clothes and hats. 81 New Fashion Designs in each issue. All sizes. Information on 56 home and personal matters. Only 6 cents a year. Including a free pattern. Subscribe at once. Order of agent or send for free sample copy.

McCall Patterns are the standard of correctness the world over. Within reach of every woman. Ask for them and insist on getting them. Send for free Pattern Catalogue.

We Will Give You Free Patterns for getting subscriptions among your friends. See List of Free Premiums and Special Cash Prize offer.

THE McCALL COMPANY, 238 to 248 West 37th St., NEW YORK

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

We, whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones.

This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of their paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

Read This Special Subscription Offer

By a special arrangement just made with THE FARM JOURNAL, a sixty-four page magazine, we are able to make for a limited time a very generous combination subscription offer. The Farm Journal is one of the best farm and home magazines published in the country, a large, interesting journal which is known the country over. The Farm Journal also publishes the booklets of "The Money Making Secrets" series, including "Poultry Secrets," "Horse Secrets," "Corn Secrets," "The Million Egg Farm," "The Butter Book" and "Duck Dollars." The subscription price of the "Farm Journal" is $1.00 for five years, or $1.00 for 4 years and any one of the booklets of "The Money Making Series."

Now for the Special Offer

Regular Price of Restitution 1 year - - - $1.50
Regular Price of Farm Journal 5 years - - 1.00
(Or Farm Journal four years and one booklet)
2.50

We Will Send Both the Above to You for the Special Price of

$1.50

Remember the Restitution for 1 year, The Farm Journal for 5 years all for the price of $1.50

SEND IN YOUR SUBSCRIPTION TODAY

Books and Tracts

By W. H. WILSON

A BIBLE STUDY OR HADES.....15c each, or 5 for 50c.
(As compared with our modern ideas).
A critical study of Hell, showing the difference in the word in the past and in the present time.

STUDENTS TEXT BOOK 50c
How to study the Bible and rightly understand God's Word. Cloth bound, 200 Pages

PINE WOODS BIBLE CLASS.....$1.25
Studies carried on between a class and its teacher. Cloth bound, 480 Pages.

CUNNINGLY DEVISED FABLES, 128 Pages.....10c

...D ETERNITY, 4 Pages,
..... 25c per hundred

...NEY, 4 Pages, 25c per hundred

...A CHRISTIAN?.....25c
Cloth book of 96 Pages which should read.

...Latest Book

...Distribution
...AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES
...d in Cloth, 25c.

...North Willow Ave.

...CHICAGO, ILL.

...n Publications

...wing books and tracts to

...rville Ave. N.E., Cleveland

...32 Pages 10c each, 12 for $1.00
... Pages, 10c each, 12 for $1.00

...in:

...O BE BORN AGAIN.
... COVENANT OF PROMISE.

... OF CHRIST.
...CITUDE FOR MANKIND.
...O BE SAVED?
...PREACHING.
...T?
...tracts, 100 for $1.00 any assort-

...SUS, by M. Joblin, 122 Pages, ... Jesus was the son of God and

...HERS ASSISTANT, by M. ... to the study of the Scriptures,

...N OF LIFE AND DEATH, ...nt booklet, 10 copies 25 cents; ...0 cents.
...RE AND WHY—A 24

...OR HOW TO READ CHAR- ..."HEALTH THROUGH NA-

...Mason. One is a study of char- ...by the face and head. Brother ...tudy of this subject for years, ...his book will prove interesting ... pages, ...tells how to gain and keep ...nature's laws" Every family

... A Sermon in German, trans- ...10 copies, 15 cents; 50 copies,

TWO PAGE TRACTS

Bible Pearls—Suitable for wide distribution. 1. The Gospel. 2. Coming and Kingdom of Christ by 20,000 Baptists in 1660. 3. Immateriality. 4. Kingdom of God. 5. Nature of man and Thoughts for Thinkers. 6. Two Advents. 7. What is Religion? 8. Restitution Age. 9. Destiny of the Wicked. 10. Baptism. Ten copies for 5 cents, or assorted packages of 100 for 20 cents.

WANTED!

Subscription Solicitors

We will pay an actual salary to men and women in all parts of the country, to act as agents for The Restitution. This salary will be based on your ability to take subscriptions, take care of renewals, and make collections, and will be paid weekly. You can devote all or part of your time, and can make a special offer to prospective subscribers, which we will tell you about if you are interested. We will have some announcements to make in the near future that will also help you.

If you want to work, sit down NOW and write for full information.

B. W. NUTT, Manager.

"There is a great difference between the man who is sure of what he knows an dthe one who thinks he knows it all. The one has the beginning of knowledge. The other will never truly know anything"

"Courage is the power of going forward in spit of difficulties to reach a chosen and worthy object."

"No truth is absolutely new; what is true is eternal; but old truth is new to the man who has just now found it out."

"You may depend upon it that he is a good man whose intimate friends are all good."

60 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest Agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the

Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

"A LETTER TO A FRIEND"

This tract needs no introduction further than to say that it is one of the most convincing Gospel sermons ever written. Originally written as a letter to a friend by Sister C. C. Woodruff it was published and has sold extensively in tract form. In its present edition it is a 32 page tract, the price is

10c each; 12 for $1.00

There is no better way of spreading the Gospel than handing out one of these tracts wherever you have the opportunity.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co.

WHOLESALE OPTICIANS

We make a specialty of High Grade Prescription Work, and carry a full line of all kinds of Optical goods. All orders filled same day as received.

"S. K. N." SERVICE

Means prompt returns, careful work, moderate prices. Goods shipped to all parts of the country.

The Strong, Kennard & Nutt Co. 338 SCHOFIELD BUILDING CLEVELAND OHIO

SPECIAL OFFER!

IN ORDER to increase the circulation of The Restitution, the following special offer is made:

One new subscriber for 1 year, choice of:

W. H. Wilson's "Student's Text Book," regular price.....50c
Or 5 Copies of "Cunningly Devised Fables," reg. price 50c
Or 5 Copies of "Bible Study of Hades," reg. price 50c

For Two New Subscribers

One Copy "Pine Woods Bible Class," 480 pages, rg. price, $1.25
Or "The Bible, Its Principles and Texts," 309 pages, reg., $1.25
Or One Hundred of Bro. Joblin's Tracts, regular price $1.20

Here is a chance to get some of the books you all should own. By making special arrangements with the authors we are able to offer them to you without the payment of a cent on your part, just a few minutes effort. We cannot afford to continue this offer long, so take advantage of it at once, get some new subscribers today.

THE RESTITUTION, 803 Parkwood Drive

"Future Probation,

Is that Awaiting any of the Unrighteous?"

Here is a work by Wm. Glenn Moncrieff that every one should read. It is one of the best things on the subject ever written and will appeal to every student of the word. It is a book of 150 pages, made to sell at 25c. We have a limited number left which we will sell at the special price of

10c each; 12 for $1.00

Send for some at once.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.
803 PARKWOOD DRIVE

Oregon Bible College
Oregon State

The Restitution
IS THE OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE CHURCH OF GOD IN AMERICA.

The Restitution.

Founded in A. D. 1852

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

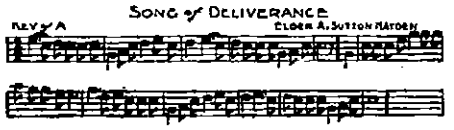
The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Rev. 19:11-16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the world; the resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous; and eternal life only through Christ, the Life Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23; 1 John 1:1-3); repentance (Lk. 13:3); and obedience by Baptism into the name of Christ, to a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation in the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ." (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31).

—Terms of— Subscription
ONE YEAR, $1.50;
SIX MONTHS 75 CTS. IN ADVANCE

VOL. 60 CLEVELAND, OHIO, JULY 23, 1912 No. 77

SONG of DELIVERANCE

REV. X. ELDER A. SUTTON HAYDEN



Our bondage here will end by and by, by and by,
Our bondage here will end by and by.
From Egypt's yoke set free,
Hail the glorious jubilee,
And to Canaan we'll return by and by, by and by,
And to Canaan we'll return by and by.

Our Deliverer will come by and by.
And our sorrows have an end,
When with Jesus we shall reign,
And vast glory crown the day, by and by.

Our enemies are strong; we'll go on,
Though our hearts dissolve with fear,
Lo! Sinai's God is near;
While the fiery pillar moves we'll go on.

By Marah's bitter streams we'll go on.
Though Baca's vales be dry,
And this land yields no supply,
To a land of corn and wine we'll go on.

And when to Jordon's flood we are come,
Jehovah rules the tide,
And the waters will divide,
And the ransom'd hosts will shout, We are Come.

There the friends will meet again who have loved.
Our embraces will be sweet
At our dear Redeemer's feet,
When we meet to part no more, who have loved.

There with all the happy throng, we'll rejoice,
Shouting glory to our king,
Until all the earth shall ring,
And through all the eternal day we'll rejoice.

The above was one of the hymns of the past generation sung in the days of Elder Hyden, Dr. John Thomas, and men of The Restitution movement. The illustrations seems to be taken from the journeys of Israel. They look forward to the coming of Christ and the coming reign of the saints. I am hoping, some time in the near future, to publish a small pamphlet of gospel songs that is correct in theology. My desire is to publish it in a form convenient for special meetings, Conference gatherings, evangelistic services, etc. Shall be glad to get suggestions from any of the brethren.

North Ridgeville, O. CHARLES CLIFFORD MAPLE.

THE LAW QUESTION

J. J. Heckman

Text: Blessed are They that do His Commandments, that They may Have a Right to the Tree of Life, and may Enter in Through the Gates into the City.—(Rev. 22:14).

Sabbathanians are fond of quoting this text, and of course they can only see the ten commands of the ancient dicalogue referred to. They seem to forget Moses' prophecy that Jesus words were to be the words of God, and if he gave any commands they would also be commands of God. Now God states also through Moses that we should hear Jesus in "all things whatsoever he shall say unto you" (Acts 3:23), and "every soul which will not hear him, shall be destroyed," etc. (Acts 3:24). Now did Jesus give any commands? Listen: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature" (Mark. 16:15). Here we have two commands: Go, and Preach. May not these have been some of the commandments mentioned in our text?

Now turn to Matt. 28: 19, 20, which reads: "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptising them into the name of the Father, and the Son, and of the Holy Spirit, teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you." Notice, Jesus did commission the apostles to "go" and preach Moses' law, but the gospel, nor did he command them to teach those baptized to observe "all things" written in the law, but "all things whatsoever I have commanded you." Let us stick a pin here, and not forget that Jesus was to speak "all that God should command him." If God had commanded him to commission his apostles to teach the law, he should have done so; and if people were to do more than the commands of Jesus as Christians, he should have said Teach them to observe all that I have commanded you, and also other things, the Sabbath, etc. But if Jesus left out anything God commanded him to speak he was a false prophet, and therefore not the true Christ. None who believe the Bible will contend for that, hence, he is the true Christ, and therefore spake all that God commanded him to speak, and gave his apostles a correct commission, and only what he commands is essential to Christianity.

But let us make assurance doubly sure, and build a bulwark of evidence that all the speculation of man cannot defeat. Jesus says: "Ye are my friends, if you do whatsoever I command you." (Jno. 15:14). Now what is it to be a friend of Jesus? It is to be his disciple (Jno. 3:29); Compare Jno. 11:11; 15:15). A disciple of Jesus is in a safe state, so then we will be saved if we do what Jesus commands. "If ye keep my commandments ye shall abide in my love, even as I have kept my Father's commandments, and abide in his love" (Jno. 15:10). Do you desire anything better than abiding in Jesus love? You can so abide by keeping his commands No necessity for other commands here. "And hereby we do know that we know him; if we keep his commandments. He that saith, I know him, and keepeth not his commandments, is a liar, and the truth is not in him. But who so keepeth his words, in him verily is the love of God perfected, hereby know we that we are in him" (Jno. 2: 3, 5).

How then do we know that we are in Jesus? By keeping his words, or commands, not by obeying the words of Moses. Now in the memorable sermon on the mount we have Jesus saying: Therefore whosoever heareth those sayings of mine, and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man, which built his house upon a rock." (Matt. 7:24). Here those who hear and do Jesus sayings or commands, are represented as standing upon the solid rock of eternal ages, and the floods of oppression may pour down upon them, and the winds of doctrine may whistle around them, but they will not fall, because built upon the great Gibraltar of eternal truth. While those who fail to do Jesus' teachings are likened to the man who builds upon a sandy foundation which will fall, and that fall will be great, because so many go that way.

We should notice here that Jesus is talking to a people who had the law of Moses and was teaching them not to depend upon that law, but the things he was teaching. The keeping of the law will not give life. "For if there had been a law given, which could have given life, verily righteousness should have been by the law" (Gal. 3:21). What, then, does give us life? Listen to Jesus: "My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me, and I give unto them eternal life" (Jno. 10:27, 28). Then it is because we hear and follow Jesus that we get eternal life, and not because we take Moses' law as our guide. To follow Jesus is to obey his teaching or law, and therefore his teaching is all that is necessary in our age.

But again: He that hath my commandments and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me, and he that loveth me shall be loved of my Father, and I will love him, and will manifest myself to him" (Jno. 14:21). Here we have it clearly stated that those who keep Jesus' commandments are loved by God, and therefore in God's favor, and let me ask, What more do we need? that certainly should be enough! The words of Jesus are God's words: "He that loveth me not, keepeth not my sayings, and the word which ye hear is not mine, but the Father's" (Jno. 14:24). Then what right have Seventh Day Keepers to apply our text to the ten commands, and those only? Is it not because they are blinded by a pet theory?

Now listen to our text again: "Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life," etc. Now another: "My sheep hear my voice, and follow me," and because of this, "I give them eternal life," Then we can see very clearly where to apply our text. It is hearing and following Jesus that gives us a right to the tree of life, and those who say it is the decalogue are mistaken.

Did Jesus ever command us to keep the Sabbath? Never, either personally or through his followers. But if we do his commandments, we have a right to the tree of life; or he "will give us eternal life," which is the same. Therefore it is not necessary for us to keep the Sabbath in order to obtain eternal life.

But our Seventh Day friends claim that the law should first be preached to the ignorant to let them know they are sinners. They quote: "By the law is the knowledge of sin." They forget Jesus' command: "Go, preach the gospel." It is true that the law also makes us know we are sinners, but it is the law under which we live. It was the law of Moses in its day, that made people know they were sinners, and it is Jesus' law now. "The law of Christ," as Paul puts it, that makes us know we are sinners. Listen: "If I had not come and spoken unto them (the world, see context), they had not had sin, but now they have no cloak for their sin." "If I had not done among them the works which none other man did, they had not had sin," etc. (Jno. 15:22, 24).

Those texts teach that refusing to accept Jesus' teaching makes us sinners, and makes our sins so manifest that we cannot hide them; we have no "cloak" for them. We most certainly know we are sinners if we cannot hide our sins.

But another text: He that believeth on him is not condemned, but he that believeth not is condemned already, because he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten son of God" (Jno. 3:18). Here we have it clearly stated what will condemn under Jesus' dispensation. It is the [illegible] whereby men can be saved. Now let us notice that Jesus says: "Go, preach the gospel." We hear and do not believe; do we not know that, so far as the gospel is concerned, we are condemned? Just as much as if we should hear the ten commands, if they were binding on us, and we would not believe them! Any one ought to see that. The gospel embraces the things concerning Jesus and the Kingdom of God, and that includes all of Jesus' teachings, as well as much of prophecy, and what was written under inspiration by Jesus' followers; hence is Jesus' law. Jesus also "commands all men every where to repent." I hear this command, I do not comply; do not I know I am a sinner? Anything commanded by Jesus to us is essential to our salvation, and if not complied with will condemn us.

Now we find that Jesus gave us nine of the ten commands as part of his law, and we can preach them. They are the only ones in which morality is taught, the other is only ceremonial: it does not make a man better to cease from labor on Saturday. He may let his servant, horse, ox, and self rest on that day, and yet be a great sinner: he may keep that day with out committing a single sin, and yet be a great sinner. So you see it is not a moral command, and therefore, not a part of the moral law of Jesus.

Again, a person could cease from having only the true God, not bow to idols, not take God's name in vain, rest on Saturday, honor father and mother, not kill, not commit adultery, not steal, nor covet in any sense, and yet be lacking under Christs' law. There are other things necessary besides the ten commands. Therefore they were not perfect in themselves. We must have faith in Jesus; we must repent of our past sins; we must be baptized; we must love our enemies; we must love our neighbors as ourselves; and we must be obedient unto every good work; such as teaching the scriptures, helping the needy, and visiting the sick—all of which are not parts of the ten commands.

Some quote: "The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul," and of course apply it to the ten commands, and them only, and then tell you they are a perfect law because the Bible says so. They forget that they were only a small part of the law that God had given before David's day, and therefore only part of what David had reference to. A soul would not be converted in the strict sense of the Bible use of the word, unless it loved God according to the great commandment, and turned from every sin revealed in the law under which the conversion took place. A truly converted soul in God's sight in any dispensation is one who is obedient to God's law for that dispensation. Whether Jewish or Christian, and the ten commands only contained a fractional part, of the law of David's day: Therefore they were not all David referred to. I doubt if there is an intelligent Sabbath keeper today that would contend that the ten commands are all that are necessary to our conversion to Christianity. They could not. Yet their books and papers are always harping that way.

The Golden Rule is positive. Confucius taught his disciples "What ye do not like done to your self, do not to others," a command very different from the active, positive Christian precept, "Whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them."

POURING NOT BAPTISM

F. M. Howell

The Israelites were actually buried in water, not in the cloud [illegible] the clouds poured out water, and the cloud was in the sea, so that two elements of water completely shutting them off from the view of the world. This was a miraculous burial in baptism, and it was not essential that the water come in contact with them and wet them, as some claim. The expression in the Psalms, "The clouds poured out water," does not mean that they were baptized by pouring, as some claim, but it is explained in the margin that in Hebrew it is "The clouds poured forth with water," showing that it was water over them as well as around them (Psa. 77:17).

The Holy Spirit baptism of the apostles on the day of Pentecost cause some to believe that pouring is a scriptural mode of baptism, because God said that in the last days he would pour out of his spirit upon all flesh. The fact is the room and also the apostles were filled with the Holy Spirit, so it was a complete immersion.

WHAT I BELIEVE AND WHY NO. VIII.

Charles Clifford Maple

In the closing articles of this series we wish to consider the mission of the church as we understand it. "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized, shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned" (Mark. 16: 15, 16).

This was the commission the Master gave to his followers just before he was parted from them. Matthew, in recording the same message says (Matt. 28:19, 26), "Go ye therefore and teach all nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit, teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you."

"I wish to notice the teaching commanded. They were first of all to teach the people. This was to precede baptism, and I would remark here that no person is ready to be baptized unless he believes, having been taught the gospel, viz, those things which concern the kingdom of God, and those things which concern the Lord Jesus Christ (Acts 8: 4, 12; 19: 8; 20:25; 28: 30, 31). Elder Westley McElroom, one of the older preachers of the state in the A. C. Church used to preach "that there was no intelligent conversion without a calm reflection," and I believe he was correct. The process of conversion is an educational process. You ask me, Do you believe in Homeopathy? Do you believe in The Biochemic System of Medicine? Do you believe in some of our later methods of drugless healing? I cannot answer you intelligently until I have made a study of these methods. Could I intelligently believe in any of them and not know anything about them?

Do I believe the gospel of the kingdom? Do I believe the teaching of the Scriptures concerning the Lord Jesus Christ? I must first know what the gospel of the Kingdom is, and know what the Scriptures teach concerning the Lord Jesus Christ.

To illustrate: I find many people in popular churches today who came in during some great wave of religous exeitement, because some "evangelist" told some beautiful "death bed" story, and they felt that they would also like to go to heaven and sing hallelujahs; but you ask them what they believe and they can't tell. They have not been taught.

But the Divine order is, first teach, then after having heard and believed the word spoken, one is ready to obey.

The mission of the church is to evangelize and teach the people. This gospel of the Kingdom is to be preached in all the world (Matt. 24:14). And the church is the missionary society that shall carry the message. Our next article will be the last of this series, [illegible] work of the church.

ARE YOU INSURED?

The King's Insurance Company—The Greatest, Oldest and Only Absolutely Reliable Fire, Marine and Life Insurance Company in the World.

Cash Capital—The unsearchable riches of Christ.—Eph. 3:8.

Assets—(Real Estate)—An Inheritance incorruptible, undefiled, and that fadeth not away.—I Pet. 1:4.

Cash in Bank—Gold tried in the fire.—Rev. 3:18.

Liabilities—Whosoever will may come.—Rev. 22:17.

Surplus Over All Liabilities—Able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think.—Eph. 3:20.

Condition of Policy—Repentance toward God, and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ.—Acts 20:21.

President—King of Kings and Lord of Lords.—Rev. 19:16.

SPECIAL POLICY

Reasons for Insuring in The King's Insurance Co.

1. It is the oldest insurance company in the world, having been in successful operation thousands of years.

2. The only company insuring against loss in the great judgment day fire.

3. The only company insuring against shipwreck in the ocean of life and in the river of death.

4. Its policies never expire, giving to the faithful holder thereof eternal life.

5. It has never changed management.

6. It insures a man for more than he is worth.

1. Applicants come directly to the president, and not through priest, bishop, cardinal or pope.

2. All companies offering to issue policies after death are frauds.

"After death the judgment."—Heb. 9:27.

"Now is the accepted time."—II. Cor. 6:2.

—Selected by Bro. Sterling P. Groves.

Live for today; to morrow's night
Tomorrow's care shall bring to sight.
Go sleep like closing flowers at night,
And heaven thy morn will bless.
—JOHN KEBLE.

Not myself, but the truth that in life I have spoken,
Not myself but the seed that in life I have sown;
Shall pass on to ages—all about me forgotten,
Save the truth I have spoken, the things I have done.
—HORATIUS BONAR.

WANTED

"Wanted—men!
Not systems fit and wise,
Not faith with rigid eyes,
Not wealth in mountain piles,
Not power with gracious smiles
Not even the potent pen:
Wanted—men!"

"A man who lives right, and is right, has more influence in his silence than another has by his words. Character is like bells which ring out sweet music, and which, when touched accidentally, resound with sweet music."

There is a class among us so conservative that they are afraid the roof will come down if you sweep off the cobwebs—Phillips.

"Do not talk about another man's meanness till you have a clean record of your own."

The Restitution

Issued weekly by

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING COMPANY.

Entered as second-class matter under act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

TERMS.

One year $1.50; six months 75 cents, in advance.

ROBT. G. HUGGINS.....Editor
BUELL W. NUTT.....Manager

BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Burton H. Lane, Harry Pott,
Chas. A. Goss, Robt. G. Pate,
Buell W. Nutt, D. G. Robison,
W. S. Tomlinson.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

All remittances should be sent by bank draft, post office money order or express money order to The Restitution Publishing Co., 808 Parkwood drive, Cleveland, Ohio.

All communication intended for publication should be sent to the editor, Robt. G. Huggins, 10618 Lee avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

It is necessary to adhere strictly to the rule of not returning unused manuscripts. Writers will please keep copies, or risk the loss.

While the editor exercises a general supervision over the articles appearing in The Restitution, his endorsement does not extend to the interpretation of details nor the exegesis of particular texts in the writings of contributors.

Cleveland, Ohio ....July 23, 1912

EDITORIAL

At the last moment lack of room prevents the appearance in this issue of interesting communications from brethren Deffenbaugh, Remer, Humphrey and and many others. They will appear next week.

In company with Brother Maple the Editor will be away from home for a week in meetings at Axtel, Ohio. Bro. Daniels and numerous other correspondents will understand from this intimation why their questions are not answered.

Are you a pusher? or are you pushed?

The trouble with easy going people is that they make it hard going for others.

The program for the Ohio Conference appears in this issue. Beside our home talent, which is good, we have the help of our new brother, C. C. Maple, whom all the brethren in the state are anxious to meet; and Bro. J. H. Anderson, of South Carolina, recognized as the ablest man in the south. Such talent will doubtless make an epoch in our Conference work. Brethren and sisters, make it a point to be there.

The Cleveland Church is enjoying a protracted visit from Sister Baker, of Dover, Delaware.

July 21st was a day of rejoicing in Cleveland, Bro. Charles Clifford Maple, of North Ridgeville, Ohio, formerly a minister among the Christians and Adventists, was given the right hand of fellowship as an obedient believer of the gospel. College bred ministers are, as a rule, blinded to the truth by fame, education, money and hundreds of other things; once in a great while, however, one with an honest and good heart loves the praises of God more than the praises of men, and identifies himself with the unpopular cause of the truth. Thank God, Bro. Maple is such a man. He now goes forth to labor under our benediction and the blessing of God. Praise the Lord.

RESPONSIBILITY OF CHRISTIAN TEACHERS.

Dedicated to Bro. C. C. Maple

Happy the Christian teacher who can adopt the memorable words of Paul to the elders of the church of Ephesus: "Wherefore I take you to record this day, that I am pure from the blood of all men. For I have not shunned to declare unto you all the counsel of God." He had "testified the gospel of the grace of God;" he had "gone among them preaching the kingdom of God;" and thus by these harmonious utterances, the two sides of the great salvation, he had "kept back nothing that was profitable unto them."

Can all who profess to walk in the footsteps of the great apostle truthfully use his declaration? Is "all the counsel of God" concerning the Lord Jesus and his church—so far, of course, and only so far, as that is revealed—openly and clearly proclaimed by all who profess themselves loyal to Paul-ine doctrine? Is there not much revealed which not a few "shun" to declare? It is no uncharitable charge, but a very mournful fact, that, so far as their exhibition in the pulpit is concerned, many portions of the Bible need never have been written. They are either systematically ignored as if they had no existence, or so misrepresented that their value as parts of the divine revelation is lost. They are either shunned or explained away, and practically it matters not which. In either case they are not as a living power and clear light from heaven. It is a solemn thing either to take from, or add to, the words of God; and the responsibility which rests upon Christian teachers, whether in the pulpit or by the press, is therefore such that they have the most urgent need to pray earnestly for light and faithfulness.

Just to declare the thing as it is, to set forth the truth as it is found in Scripture, is clearly the duty and privilege of all ministers of the Word. No one will deny this proposition. It will be at once admitted by men of all classes and all "shades of opinion." But, unhappily, it is just these shades of opinion that cast a dark shadow over the landscape of revelation, and hide its exquisite beauty from the sight. It was meant to be the teller of its own tale, the witness of its celestial origin, the letter commendatory which supersedes other commendation; but schools, systems, theories, churches, sects, parties, philosophies, have intervened, all professedly with the best intention—and we quite believe them, although the result is exceedingly lamentable. What would not adapt itself to the school, or system, was left out or modified; what would not comport with the logically arranged creed was so interpreted as to fall quietly into its destined place; and what would not harmonize with the philosophy was trained without scruple to do so. The result was systematic theology, taught in colleges, preached in pulpits, embodied in commentaries, believed by the people. The kingdom of God was the church; the second coming of Christ was death; the resurrection of good and bad took place or not; and the day of judgment was a period of twenty-four hours at the end of the world. All this was held to be the veritable teaching of the Holy Spirit in Scripture; and those who denied the proposition were denounced by the guardians of the so-called orthodoxy as dangerous heretics.

Oh! those dismal middle ages; what a legacy of error they have left us, and how remarkable it is that with all our boasted achievements in theology, we never get beyond the influence of that bewildering legacy! Those middle ages rule us yet. They speak from the professor's chair, they preach in our pulpits, and they wield the pen of our religious writers. Everywhere they meet us, casting a dark shadow over the bright and beautiful Book of God, plunging in mystery that which is clear as a midsummer sunbeam, and clothing in perplexing figure, which no one can solve, the plain declarations of outstanding prophecy. The middle ages compose our catechisms, our manuals of devotion, our hymnals, and our prayers. Thus the emancipation of the Bible from the thralldom of Popish darkness is not yet effected, notwithstanding over three centuries of so-called Protestantism. Doctrines are taught and opinions handed down from generation to generation which are palpably at variance both with the spirit and the letter of Christianity. If all this be so, and, alas! it is only too easy to prove it, how terrible the responsibility which rests upon our public teachers!

We are distinctly assured in the Word of God that the end of this age will be characterized by a fearful apostasy. There shall come a falling away first, before the day of Christ sets in, and the man of sin, the son of perdition, shall be destroyed. The Spirit speaketh expressly that in the latter-times some shall depart from the faith, giving head to seducing spirits and doctrines of demons. In the last days perilous times shall come. The time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears; and they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables. There shall come in the last days scoffers, walking after their own lusts, and saying, "Where is the promise of his coming?" Remember ye the words which were spoken before of the apostles of our Lord Jesus Christ, how that they told you there should be mockers in the last time, who should walk after their own ungodly lusts. There shall be false teachers among you, who privily shall bring in damnable heresies, even denying the Lord that bought them, and bring upon themselves swift destruction. And many shall follow their pernicious ways, by reason of whom the way of truth shall be evil spoken of. Many false prophets shall arise and deceive many.

This is a closely condensed view of what is said in the New Testament on the character of the close of this dispensation, just before the promised appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ, to set up his glorious kingdom. But is this in harmony with the representations of popular teaching regarding the Christian dispensation? On the contrary, instead of the apostasy of Christendom, characterized by daring impiety and atheism, popular teaching represents the gradual triumph of the gospel over every nation and tribe, until all mankind shall become Christian, and the church be co-extensive with the human race. This is the picture which the pulpit delights to exhibit, and a very beautiful picture it is. In skilful hands it is sometimes executed with such ingenuity, that the moral landscape of the nations seems to laugh before us under the sunlight of spiritual beauty. For imagination, poetry, graphic detail, and bursts of enthusiastic eloquence, it offers an exceedingly fruitful theme. But there is this drawback—it is not true! The Holy Spirit "speaketh expressly" against it. It is not only not the predicted issue of Christian testimony, so far as the nominal church and the world are concerned, but that issue is directly the reverse—apostasy, direful wickedness, impiety, blasphemy, atheism, doom! For mercy spurned, and grace refused, the end of the age is terrible "judgment!" For disobedience to the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, the close of the dispensation is "vengeance!" The day of long suffering is ended by "the wrath of the Lamb!"

Why, then, do so many of our teachers who are set apart for the vindication and exposition of divine truth, venture to proclaim theories which are so broadly contradicted by their sacred text-book? Assuredly it is no pleasure to us to ask this question. We are keenly pained to put it; but after reading it over and over again, conscience compels us to send it to the printer just as it is. Good, wise, learned men do teach that "the gospel will convert the world to Christ" before his return in glory to judge the quick and the dead. But, as his own word denies this with startling emphasis, and brings forward in proof of that denial appalling representations of the enormous wickedness of the world at the time of the Lord's second coming, we have no alternative but to say that those teachers and the inspired writers contradict each other.

Our Lord, speaking of the day that shall come as a snare on all them that dwell on the face of the whole earth, says, "Watch ye therefore, and pray always, that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the son of man" (Luke xxi. 36). This intimation that his watchful disciples shall escape the terrors of the closing scene, when the times of the Gentiles are fulfilled (for it is to that period, and not to the destruction of Jerusalem, that these words point), is one of the things which the Holy Spirit brings frequently to the minds of the apostles. "Ye turned to God and to wait for his Son from heaven, even Jesus who delivered us from the wrath to come" (1 Thess. i. 9, 10). Here the present is put for the future, denoting the certainty that Jesus will deliver those who wait for him from the wrath to come upon the world of the ungodly. "For ourselves know perfectly that the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night. For when they shall say, Peace and safety, then sudden destruction cometh upon them, as travail upon a woman with child; and they shall not escape. But ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief. . . . But let us, who are of the day, be sober, putting on the breastplate of faith and love; and for an helmet the hope of salvation. For God hath not appointed us to wrath, but to obtain salvation by our Lord Jesus Christ" (Chap. v. 2-4, 8-10). The contrast here between those who shall not escape, and those who shall be saved from the day of wrath is very striking. The salvation which the latter are to obtain is, of course, salvation from the tremendous terrors of that day. Spiritual salvation it is not, for that they have already. It is the right-eous taken away from the evil to come. "Then shall two be in the field; the one shall be taken"—graciously, as in John xiv. 3, "I will come again and receive you unto myself"—"and the other left. Two women shall be grinding at the mill; the one shall be taken and the other left" (Matt. xxiv. 40-41). Those who are left shall be exposed to the tempest, before the bursting of which on the earth the others are "taken." Referring to the case of Noah and Lot, Peter says, "The Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptations, and to reserve the unjust unto the day of judgment to be punished" (2 Pet. ii. 9). The flood came not until Noah was safe in the ark; the fire fell not upon the cities of the plain until Lot was removed from danger; the vials of wrath will not be poured upon the earth until those who "wait for the Lord" are taken to a place of glorious safety. "Because thou hast kept the word of my patience I also will keep thee from the hour of temptation, which shall come upon all the world, to try them that dwell upon the earth" (Rev. iii. 10). Most remarkable is this verse,—"the word of my patience;" what a revelation there is here of the dispensation of grace, and of the certainty that, in consequence of grace rejected, it will end in judgment; and what a proof that to look and wait for the patient, long-suffering Savior is the duty and privilege of the believer—an attitude which is to be rewarded by removal from the scene of trial before the Apocalyptic judgments descend upon the earth.

Now if these two momentous truths—namely, that Christendom ends in apostasy, and that those who wait for the Lord will be gathered lovingly to Himself before the judgment due to that apostasy descends upon the world—were presented to our congregations, it is impossible to avoid the conclusion that the indifference to the sublime realities of the gospel, the sleep, the deadness of which the complaint is so lamentably general, would, to a great extent, disappear. The law of Heaven is—God's blessing on His own truth. A faithful exhibition of that truth, therefore, is the bounden duty of all the ambassadors of Christ. The great realities of the gospel should be presented to men as things wonderfully near, not afar off, or cold abstractions concerning which curiosity may speculate. And if the day of grace, the era of divine long-suffering, is rapidly coming to a close; if the gospel dispensation, like its Edenic, patriarchal, and Aaronic predecessors, is to end in apostasy, and if the new epoch of royal rule by the manifested Messiah, with the Church of the first born ones as his co-assessors, converted Israel as his ministers of salvation to the nations, and the entire world as his empire, is just about to begin, the necessity of fidelity to God's revelation, always pressing, is now vehemently imperative. The great crisis to which all generations and all the purposes of God have been tending is near at hand. To talk now about the respective merits of ecclesiastical systems is a waste of precious time, for they are all doomed to dissolution that the sons of God may be manifested in glory with Him who is at once their Redeemer, their life, their Elder Brother, and their Head. To insist now upon form, and ceremony, and ritual is perfect madness, for the Bridegroom cometh, those who are ready will go in with Him to the marriage and the door will be shut. We have had trifling enough, let us now be in earnest, and give Christ such a place in our hearts as He never had before, so that the prospect of His coming may fill us with hope and joy!

TRYING TO BE FRIENDLY WITH ADVENTISTS

For many years we have tried in many ways to become friendly and cordial with the Adventists, but our well-meant efforts have been repelled with the effectual "cold shoulder." When we became Editor of The Restitution we made another endeavor to break the ice, thinking that perhaps the editors of their different papers would warm up some and smile a welcome to one who was just entering upon the serious responsibilities of editorial labor. We did receive a few friendly letters, but most of them remained quiet. The Editor of The Messiah's Advocate is a noble exception. He often reprints articles from our sheet, and warmly commends them, too. We wish more men like him were editors—men who are not afraid to publish the truth, no matter by whom written. If a Catholic priest were to write an article for The Restitution, advocating truth, it would be printed for the truth's sake. Our motto is:

Let truth be seized where ever found,
On Christian or on heathen ground.

As to why they are reticent we are left to surmise, as no explanation is tendered. We merely point to the unique condition, and ask the editors of The Crisis, Hope, Messenger, and other Adventists papers to remedy this unchristian situation.

COMMUNICATIONS

The Restitution and all the Brethren in Christ Jesus:

I am still in the land and among the living, watching and waiting for the Nobleman, for in this life we have trials and disappointments and sorrow. Nevertheless we know when He comes that will end for all that is in Him; then our vile bodies will be changed and be like his glorius body.

Blessed thought! how I love him! How it doth my bosom cheer!

There are so many good articles and letters in The Restitution. I read them with great interest. In the one dated June 18, there was some good spiritual food. One by H. V. Reed, "The Kingdom Delivered to the Messiah," was a feast of good thing. May God ever spare him and all the others who are fighting for the cause of the Truth as it is in Christ Jesus. Never give up the ship, nor compromise with the enemy, so that when life's journey is o'er we may be crowned with life and immortality, and enter into the kingdom with Christ and all that are in Him.

I think we are in the sun set of the Gentile age, but they say "Peace," when there is no peace. The people can't see the dark clouds rising over the nations, nor will they until the thunder bolt breaks forth, and then it will be too late for them. However, those that have on the armor of faith will rejoice. The Restitution and my Bible are all the preacher I have. I never hear a sermon on the gospel of the Kingdom, and but few want to talk about it. They can't tell for what Christ is coming, nor what is in store for them that love his appearing.

I send greetings to all the household of faith and a large share to The Restitution.

Yours in Hope of the Soon Coming King,

JESSE HARROLD.

Dear Isolated Ones of the household of faith:

While every thing is quiet here at home this afternoon I will try to impart some of my thoughts and desires to you in regard to our new organization of isolated brethren.

You have read in The Restitution concerning this and what we finally hope to accomplish, but unless we all go to work in earnest it will not prosper as it could and should.

I think the first thing to be done is for the isolated brethren to send in their names and addresses and twenty-five cents with their membership, as given in article 12 of the constitution. This part of it should not be neglected; until this is done nothing can be accomplished. The Lord will soon come, and let us not be found idle but be up and doing for our Master.

We are isolated, and sometimes it seems hard to have to be alone in our faith, but if it is worth so much to us who have the "one faith," we must not sit down and get discouraged, but help send it to others. Sometimes those about us will hardly listen to us and will scoff at what we say, but we are doing our part, and think how Christ was treated; but he never wavered; let us take his example and do likewise.

Sometime ago I wrote a letter to the brethren thanking them for their financial aid in sending Bro. Adams to Enid. How glad we were to have him with us! It would not have been possible for him to have made the long trip south, without their aid, and now we have an opportunity to send an evangelist to all of these isolated ones, if only we will work and give a hearty support to the cause.

You do not know who in your city or community might come out and take a stand for the truth if they could hear the true gospel preached, and what happiness it would be to you to feel that you had helped a dear one in receiving a knowledge of the truth. So once more I say, Let us get to work in earnest, hoping to see the results in the kingdom.

Your sister in Christ,
MRS. E. A. PENDARVIS.

Bro. Huggins:

Just a word to let the brethren know we are still alive. Last Sunday I had the pleasure of again meeting the brethren of Reading, Minn., on my way back from attending the Minnesota Conference at St. Cloud. I spoke to an audience of thirty-seven people Saturday evening at Bro. Baker's home; Sunday, a. m. attended the Union Sunday School held in the school house, after which I spoke to a goodly number for an hour. We then drove to Worthington, nine miles distant, where I had the pleasure of burying in the waters of Lake Okabena Bro. Harold F. Caster, whom we are proud to introduce as a brother to the brethren of the Church of God everywhere—a young man of sterling worth in integrity and character. After the baptism we joined in the breaking of bread, after which the sisters served a sumptuous dinner, twenty-seven partaking. At 3:55 p. m. we boarded the train for Ft. Dodge, where we arrived at 9:25 p. m., finding our son well, but much surprised to see us. We felt we had spent a very profitable twenty-four hours in the company of the brethren at Reading.

They are bravely working against difficulties at Reading, being forced to occupy the school house because refused the Presbyterian church to hold their meetings and Sunday school in. They have no preacher and occupy the building but very little of the time.

I have been greatly interested in the writings of the brethren on the Covenant. My article must have been widely read, but I really think but few understand my position. I am waiting for an answer from Brother Robison to a question asked him on the Covenant. It is impossible for the new Covenant to be the Covenant of Promise. I used to think that way too, but I see differently now, because I can see a vast difference between The Covenants of Promise and the Covenant of Law. As Israel's inheritance to the land of Canaan, depended upon their keeping the law or first Covenant, so our inheritance depends upon us keeping the New Covenant.

A stranger as well as a Hebrew had to be circumcised; that's what brought them under the Ten Commandments. So we must have faith in the gospel and be circumcised with the circumcision of Christ (baptism); and that's what brings us under the New Covenant, or the Law of the Spirit of Life in Christ Jesus.

Our inheritance depends upon us keeping the Law or New Covenant. Obedience to the gospel is what brings us under The New Covenant. I call to mind one passage of Scripture here: "Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them, for this is The Law and the Prophets"—not the Ten Commandments surely. Matt. 7:12, "Therefore whosoever heareth these sayings of mine;" Jno. 6:63, "It is the spirit that quickens; the flesh profits nothing, the words that I speak unto you they are Spirit and they are Life." What, then is the law of The Spirit of Life mentioned in Rom. 8:1? Now just to bring out a little thought: Will some brother or sister tell me where to find the passage of scripture that tells what the everlasting Covenant is?

Yours in the Faith,
O. J. ALLARD.

ESTHER AS AN EXAMPLE

In Esther we have one of the lovable women characters of the Bible, one who lived a life of self-sacrifice for others. It was to please Mordecai that she went to the palace to be chosen queen, and it was for the love of her people that she went in unto the king, not knowing but that it might be the cost of her life, yet God was with her, for He has said "that He would never forsake his people." What squarge it must have taken for Esther to go, yet she knew the adversary was there and that she must lose no time.

Esther had done just exactly as the king had commanded; she had gone through the law of purification, asking no extra gifts, but taking only such as were given her, and she was the accepted queen.

What a lesson for us! We are now going through the law of purification. Are we making our gowns pure and white and spotless, so that when our King shall come we shall be accepted? Let us then be on our watch and let no little thing go undone, for God has shown us the vast importance of little things in the lesson of Mordecai and Haman.

It was all for the bow of Mordecai, the Jew, that Haman was hung on his own scaffold, and that seventy-five thousand Jew despisers were slain.

Thus we see that God used the seemingly unimportant thing to carry out his purpose, i.e., to protect his people that they might prosper.

Let us then follow the example of Esther and live a life of self-sacrifice, For,

To live for self is to live in vain,
But to live for Christ, eternal gain.

Ethel Lehman, and Edna Brewer.

BEREAN DEPARTMENT

What Did Christ's Resurrection Mean to Himself?

It meant to him immortal life, a victory over death, and a rising in triumph from the grave as a Savior for all mankind—that all might be saved from their sins by the shedding of his blood. He said to his disciples when he appeared to them after his resurrection, "All power is given to me in heaven and in the earth" (Matt. 28:18).

It meant to him his ascension to the right hand of his Father, to be our High Priest and Mediator. "Whom the heavens must receive, until the times of restitution of all things spoken of by the mouth of all his holy prophets, since the world began" (Acts 3:21).

"Wherefore he is able also to save them to the uttermost that come unto God by him, seeing he ever liveth to make intercession for them" (Heb. 7:25).

"For if he were on earth he should not be a priest, seeing that there are priests that offer gifts according to the law" (Heb. 8:4).

"But now hath he obtained a more excellent ministry, by how much also he is the Mediator of a better covenant, which was established upon better promises" (Heb. 8:6).

"Christ glorified not himself to be made an high priest, but he that said unto him, Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee" (Heb. 5:5).

It meant to him his kingship, for he will return to earth as "King of Kings, and Lord of Lords."

It means the setting up of his kingdom on the earth with the saints as joint rulers.

"For the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea" (Isa. 11:9).

In Daniel's vision he saw Christ in his kingdom. He says, "There was given him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, nations, and languages should serve him. His dominion is an everlasting dominion which shall not pass away, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed" (Dan. 7:14).

"And he shall set up an ensign for the nations, and shall assemble the outcasts of Israel, and gather together the dispersed of Judah from the four corners of the earth." When he shall put down all rule and authority and power, for he must reign till he has put all enemies under his feet. The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death (I Cor. 15: 24, 25, 26).

It means all this for him, and for us who are worthy. It means a crown of life that will never fade away. May this be the portion of each one of us.

Your sister in Christ,
J. S. BARNEBEE,

Chicago, Ill.

WHAT DOES CHRISTS' RESURRECTION MEAN TO THE CHURCH, THE BRIDE OF CHRIST?

In the memory chapter for today we read these words from the pen of Paul, the apostle to the church at Corinth, "But if there be no resurrection of the dead, then is Christ not risen, and if Christ be not risen, then is our preaching vain, and your faith is also vain."

There were some in the church at Corinth who denied the resurrection of the dead, as it is denied to this day, and Paul writes at length to show them their error. He declares positively in the 20th verse that "Christ is now risen and become the first fruits of them that slept," the "first born from the dead."

Jesus Christ tasted death for every man on the cross, but his heavenly Father raised him from the dead, and by his resurrection pointed the way to eternal life for all who believe on him and obey his commandments.

In his ministry on earth Christ preached the resurrection. In Mat. 22:31 he says, "God is not the God of the dead but of the living;" Luke 14:14, "Thou shalt be recompensed at the resurrection of the just;" John 5:28, "Marvel not at this, for the hour is coming in the which all that are in the grave shall hear his voice, and shall come forth, they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life;" John 11:23-26, "Jesus saith unto her (Martha) Thy brother shall rise again. Martha saith unto him, I know that he shall rise again in the resurrection at the last day."

Jesus said unto her, I am the resurrection and the life, he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live. And whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die.

Paul explains these last words in this language (Cor. 15:51), "Behold I show you a mystery: We shall not all sleep, but we shall be changed." Also more fully in I. Thes. 4:15-17, "For this I say unto you, by the word of the Lord, that we which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord, shall not prevent them which are asleep. For the Lord shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God, and the dead in Christ shall rise first. Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air, and so shall we ever be with the Lord."

Moreover, all the apostles preached and testified that there would be a resurrection, and it was foretold by Job, David, Isaiah and Daniel.

And last of all, Christ in his revelation to John said, "I am he that was dead, and behold I am alive forevermore, amen, and have the keys of hell and of death."

He is our nobleman who has gone into a far country to receive for himself an inheritance and to return. For what?

"To build the tabernacle of David, which is fallen down," to reign over the house of Jacob forever; to sit on the throne of his father David; to take unto himself his power and reign; to subdue the nations; and last of all, to destroy the enemy of all mankind—death.

This is what Christs' resurrection means to the waiting church, the bride of Christ. He holds the key to the grave, and through the power given him by his Father, is able to release all that have fallen asleep in him. He will wipe all tears away.

EDGAR HATCH.

A SERMON REVIEWED

B. C. Lehman

The sermon was delivered by a young man (Mr. Phillips) on the state of man in death. As this was delivered expressly for me I thought it my duty to say how it benefited me (none). As to the mortality of man, he did the best one could expect from an ignorant unbeliever of God's Holy Word. As to proving the immortality of man, he did nothing. That all may see how blind he is I will trace his course. He first read I. Cor. 15:35-45, then he read Ecc. 3:18-22, and proceeded to tell his hearers that the spirit of man went upwards. Here I asked him if that was not just a question God asked, and proved that no one knows where the spirit went. He then read Ecc. 12:7 and said, "A question answered." Here he evidently wanted his hearers to guess the Spirit was the man, and that it was immortal. Then he talked about the inner man, and again he left his hearers to guess that there was a man within a man, and that the inner man did not die. Then he supposed that he had guessed his way, and he talked about Jesus and the thief on the cross.

He told his audience that the thief went to Paradise that very day, although the thief was not yet dead; and to prove they went to heaven he read Revelations, second chapter, the last half of verse seven. Again he wanted his hearers to guess that the Paradise of God was up in heaven. So he must have felt sure that if all had guessed his way it was settled, namely, that man was two men, one in the other, and the outer man was mortal, and the inner man was immortal and never died, but went straight to heaven at the death of the outer man. He spoke of the resulting of the outer and the inner man at the resurrection, but failed to tell us where we could read about it, so we had to guess again. Then he said that with these many quotations he did not see how any one could help believing and hoped they were satisfactory. He was silent for a while. Then he looked as wise as he could and said, "I don't believe any one will lay so long in death." I thought he told the truth here.

Well, he finally closed by asking if there were any questions. I asked him if the inner man could sin. He was afraid to say yes or no, so he said that some say he can. Then I told him that Christ died for the man that sinned and died, and if he held that the inner man was immortal, it could not die, and had no Savior, because Christ is saving sinners, and not immortal souls.

PROPHECIES FULFILLED IN JESUS' DEATH

Viola Gazeley

Prophecy is a declaration of something to come; a foretelling, especially an inspired foretelling. The prophets of the Old Testament were God—selected men, and inspired with that concerning which they prophecied. Amos says that God revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets. Peter says, "For the prophecy came not in old time by the will of man; but holy men of God spake, as they were moved by the Holy Spirit" (II. Peter 1-21).

Here I will mention some of the prophecies fulfilled in Jesus' death. That he was denied a fair trial is foretold by Isaiah (53:8) "He was taken from prison and from judgment, and who shall declare his generation? For he was cut off out of the land of the living, for the transgression of my people was he stricken." This prophecy is fulfilled, as recorded in Matt. 26:59-60, "Now the chief priests, and elders, and all the council, sought false witness against Jesus, to put him to death, but found none, yea, though many false witnesses came yet they found none" (Matt. 27-24) "When Pilate saw that he could prevail nothing, but that rather a tumult was made, he took water, and washed his hands before the multitude, saying, I am innocent of the blood of this just person, see ye to it."

Regardless of the false witnesses brought about him, Christ never protested, but remained silent under the accusation. Isaiah foretells that "he was oppressed, and he was afflicted, yet he opened not his mouth: he is brought as a lamb to the slaughter, and as a sheep before his shearers is dumb, so he openeth not his mouth" (Isa. 53-7). The fulfillment of this is recorded in Matt. 27:12-14. "And when he was accused of the chief priests and elders, he answered nothing. Then said Pilate unto him, Hearest thou not how many things they witness against thee? And he answered him never a word."

He was smitten. I gave my back to the smiters, and my cheeks to them that plucked off the hair: I hid not my face from shame and spitting" (Isa. 50-6). The fulfillment of this prophecy is found in Matt. 26-67, "Then did they spit in his face, and buffeted him, and others smote him with the palms of their hands." Jesus is reckoned with sinners. Isaiah says he is numbered with transgressors, which we know is true. "And when they were come to the place which is called Calvary, there they crucified him, and the malefactors, one on the right hand, and the other on the left" (Luke 23:33). He prayer for sinners, "made intercession for the transgressors" (Isa. 53-12). While on the cross, suffering the persecution of his enemies, he made no resistance whatsoever, but resigned himself passively into the hands of his enemies, and raising his holy eyes to heaven said, "Father, forgive them for they know what they do" (Luke 23:34).

Christ's lot is foreseen by David. eH says in Psalm 22:17-18, "They pierced my hands and feet. I may tell all my bones; they look and stare upon me. They part my garments among them, and cast lots upon my vesture." This prophecy is decidedly fulfilled after Christ is nailed to the cross, a groups of Roman guards playing at dice suggested that the decision as to whom should be given the garments of Christ, be made by throwing the dice. "And they parted his raiment and cast lots" (Luke 23:34).

How wonderfully have been fulfilled all these prophecies! How clear and plain they are to us all! This Christ, whom Isaiah could see a long way off, he prophesied to be "a man of sorrows," "despised and rejected of men," "taken from prison and judgment and cut off from the land of the living," "numbered with the wicked in his death," and his grave made with the rich. His arraignment before Pilate, Caiaphas, and Herod is foretold by David. "The kings of the earth set themselves, and the rulers take counsel together, against the Lord, and against his Anointed." His resurrection is foretold by David. "Thou wilt not leave his soul in hell, nor suffer thy Holy One to use corruption." Jesus foretold his own death. When he spoke of destroying the temple, and raising it in three days, he spoke of the tabernacle of his body. Still the people refused to believe that he had the power to do it. When his prophecies were fulfilled and he stepped forth from the grave and ascended to his Father in heaven, a great veil was removed from eyes of the blind and prophecies of old became lightened. What blindness to have seen and believed only the parts which spoke of his power and glory! When we can so clearly see what former blindness has led to, why is humanity still so perverted as to remain with so heavy a veil suspended between our lives and the glories which are to come?

David foretold the derision and mockery of Christ, how that vinegar was given him to drink while on the cross. "They gave me also gall for my meat and in my thirst they gave me vinegar to drink" (Psalm 69-21). "And the soldiers also mocked him, coming to him and offering him vinegar" (Luke 23:36).

"Was he wounded for our transgressions, was he bruised for our iniquities, was the chastisement of our peace upon him, and with his stripes are we healed? All we like sheep have gone astray; we have turned every one to his own way, and the Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all" (Isa. 53:5-6).

While on the cross, being watched upon by the eyes of multitudes, a wonderful phenomenon took place. The entire earth became wrapped in profound darkness, a cloud of inky blackness advanced toward Calvary, spreading itself in an appalling manner till supreme darkness reigned. Multitudes became prostrate and fell upon the ground. Out of the darkness came a light, which encircled Christ, giving him a divine radiance. When this supernatural light left and he was left amidst gloom and darkness of the awful night, all hope seemed to turn to despondency and with a face of intense sorrow he cries out, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?"

Prophecy is important, and the result of ignoring it will be our being taken unawares by those things which must come to pass. Let us heed more carefully those things spoken by God—selected men, for they are worth while, and let us all the more earnestly believe those things which Christ has promised us, for he says, "The words which I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life" (John 6-63).

GOD'S PLAN OF SALVATION

Read at the Northwest Conference

E. W. Knapp

The salvation of the righteous is of the Lord (Ps. 37:39). The Lord is my strength and song, and is become my salvation (Ps. 149:14). Salvation is far from wicked. Why? Because they seek not thy statutes (Ps. 119:155). Then what is Salvation? It is saving. Salvation for the people is saving them. God has a plan for saving the people, and has promised to save all that accept his plan. Man may invent many plans of salvation, but if they conflict with God's plans they will be of no avail. If we expect to be saved we must obey God, do as he commands us, and not follow man's command. When God dealt direct with the people, it was his command that sacrifices be made to him. Adam and his sons, Noah and his descendants. Abraham and his posterity, Job and Melchisedek, and others, before the law, offered to God real sacrifices, the law only ascertained the quality, the number and other circumstances of sacrifices.

Before that all was arbitrary. They offered the fruits of the earth, the fat and milk of animals, or the blood and the flesh of the victims (Lev. 14:15). But among the Jews, the law appointed what they were to offer and in what quantities, and at what time and place. All these offerings were to make the people obedient to God, and fulfill the law he had established whereby they could be cleansed of filth and impurities, and become worthy to come before him and partake of his blessings.

But all this had nothing to do with the salvation that leads to eternal life.

Read Heb. 9 and 10 chapters. These sacrifices were not great enough to take away sin. So according to God's plan, Christ was offered to bear the sins of many, and unto them that look for him shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation (Heb. 9-28). God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life (John 3-16).

God sent his only begotten Son into the world, that we might live through him (I. John 4-9). The Father sent the Son to be the Savior of the world.

Paul, an inspired writer says, Christ must needs have suffered and risen again from the dead (Acts 17-3). Hear Christ's words, Ought not Christ to have suffered these things, and to enter into his glory?

Thus it is written and thus it behoved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day (Luke 24: 26, 46). Jesus told his disciples now that he must go unto Jerusalem, and suffer many things of the elders and chief priests and scribes, and be killed, and be raised again the third day (Matt. 16:21). Again he said, The Son of man shall be betrayed into the hands of men, and they shall kill him, and the third day he shall be raised again (Matt. 17:22). But God commendth his love toward us, in that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us. Being justified by his blood, we shall be saved, from wrath through him. Being reconciled to God by the death of his Son, we shall be saved by his life (Rom. 5:10). Christ our passover is sacrificed for us (I. Cor. 5:7). Christ died for our sins according to the scriptures (I. Cor. 15) 3-4. Read Isa. 53: 3 to 6. Christ suffered for us, leaving us an example that we should follow his steps, who did no sin (I. Pet. 21-22, 22).

As God commanded the Jews to offer for sacrifice birds and animals free from any blemish, so he, in offering a sacrifice for all people and for all time to come, must needs offer for sin a sinless being and Christ was the only being that was free from sin. Why? Because he was born of God (I. John 3:9). He was manifested to take away our sins and in him is no sin, and the blood of Jesus Christ, God's Son, cleanseth us from all sin (I. John 1-7). God's plan of salvation is that we must repent, believe the gospel, and be baptized for the remission of sins. Then live a life consecrated to God and his gospel. The gospel of Christ is the power of God unto Salvation to every one that believeth. No other gospel will save. The gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord (Rom. 6: 23).

Our duty is to accept God's plan, and believe it to be necessary to obey the gospel. And don't dear brother, lose eternal life by finding fault with God's plan. He knows best.

OHIO CONFERENCE PROGRAM

Wednesday Eve., Aug. 21, 1912

7:10—Hymn of Praise, The Congregation.
Prayer of Invocation, R. G. Huggins.
Hymn.
Address of Welcome, Mrs. Mattie Neill.
Response W. C. Heacock
Address, President, W. S. Tomlinson.
Closing Hymn, The Congregation
Benediction.

Thursday, Aug. 22

9:00 a. m., Social Song Service, Chas Moore, Leader.
9:30 a. m., Bible School, D. C. Robison.
10:30 a. m., Sermon, J. H. Anderson.
1:30 p. m., Social Song Service, Owen Pottorf, Leader.
2:00 p. m., Bible School, D. C. Robison.
3:00 p. m., Sermon, R. G. Huggins
7:00 p. m., Social Song Service, N. S. Westfall, Leader.
7:30 p. m., Sermon, C. C. Maple

Friday, Aug. 23

9:00 a. m., Social Song Service, H. Juergensen, Leader.
9:30 a. m., Study of Bible Characters (a talk) C. C. Maple.
10:30 a. m., Business Meeting.
1:30 p. m., Social Song Service. Theo. Klingenstein, Leader.
2:00 p. m., Bible School, W. S. Tomlinson.
3:00 p. m., Sisters' Meeting, Mrs. Mattie Neill, Chairman.
7:00 p. m., Social Song Service, Ashford Lehman, Leader.
7:30 p. m., Sermon, J. H. Anderson.

Saturday, Aug. 24

9:00 a. m., Social Song Service, David Beck, Leader.
9:30 a. m., Bible School, Chas. A. Goss.
10:30 a. m., Sermon, J. H. Anderson.
1:30 p. m., Social Song Service, John Lehman.
2:00 p. m., Sermon, D. C. Robison
3:00 p. m., Business Meeting.
7:00 p. m., Social Song Service, Buell W. Nutt, Leader.
7:30 p. m., Sermon R. G. Huggins

Sunday, Aug. 25

9:00 a. m., Sunday School, Mrs. Mattie Neill, Supt.
10:00 a. m., Sermon, R. G. Huggins.
10:45 a. m., The Lord's Table, Chas. Moore, Presiding.
1:30 p. m., Young People's Societies.
2:30, Sermon.
3:15, An Hour for Us All, Chas. A. Goss, Leader.
(Bring your favorite text).
7:00 p. m., Song Service, Mrs. E. H. Lang.
7:30 p. m., Sermon, Chas. C. Maple.

Music in charge of Mrs. C. A. Goss.
Organist, Mrs. Ina McCave.

DAVID BECK,
W. C. HEACOCK,
CHAS. A. GOSS,
Committee.

OBITUARY

Eliza Howell

Eliza Howell died at her home in Springfield, Ohio. She was born in Liverpool, England, July 4, 1842, and died July 3, 1912. She was the wife of Bro. Benjamin Howell, who died on March 16th. They were married in Toronto, Canada, and have lived in Springfield for 35 or more years. Sound in the faith, always ready to give a reason for the hope that faded not away. To this union were born seven children, [illegible] sisters and four sons, [illegible] Jessie, John, Walter, [illegible] Fredrick, whose death occurred a few days after Bro. Howell's death.

Brother and Sister Howell were great sufferers, both being sick for several months. They are now asleep in Jesus waiting for the voice of Jesus on the resurrection morn. She was laid to rest by the side of Bro. Howell at Ferncliff cemetery. Comforting words were spoken by the writer.

DAVID F. BECK.

THE TRUTH DEFENDED—No. XI

An Ex-Methodist Pleads for the Truth

Mrs. Chas. Thomas

At the end of the millenium age (or thousand years) there will be a terrible time among the nations, after which those that have died during the thousand years with those who are alive, will all be raised and judged and sin and death destroyed, and then will come the Father to take his throne and righteousness will cover the whole earth. "And I saw an angel come down from heaven having the key of the bottomless pit, with a great chain in his hand, and he laid hold of the dragon, that old serpent the devil and satan, and bound him a thousand years, and cast him into the bottomless pit and shut him up and set a seal upon him that he should deceive the nations no more till the thousand years should be fulfilled, and after that to be loosed a little season, And I saw thrones and they that sat upon them, and judgment was given unto them, and I saw the souls of them that were beheaded for the witness of Jesus, and for the word of God, and which had not worshipped the beast, neither his image, neither had received his mark upon their forehead, or in their hands, and they lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years.

Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection, on such the second death hath no power, they shal be priests of God and of Christ—and shall reign with him a thousand years. But the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years are finished. This is the first resurrection, And when the thousand years are expired satan shall be loosed out of his prison, and shall go out to deceive the nations that are in the four quarters of the earth, Gog and Magog, to gather them together to battle, the number of whom is as the sand of the sea. And they went up on the breadth of the earth and encompassed the camp of the saints about, and the beloved city, Jerusalem. And I saw the dead, small and great, stand before God, and the books were opened and another book was opened, which was the book of life, and the dead were judged out of the things which were written in the books, according to their works, And the sea gave up the dead and hell (the grave) delivered up the dead which were in them, and they were judged every man according to their work. And death and hell (the grave) were cast into the lake of fire. This is the second death. And whosoever is not written in the book of life, was cast into the lake of fire (Rev. 20:7-15). Stop and think what a blessed privilege it is to serve God and overcome and be heirs of such a kingdom, which will come before long, for according to the fulfillment of prophesy we are living in the last days, and it may be even in our time that Jesus will return and take his people with him to Jerusalem.

THE BIBLE; ITS PRINCIPLES AND TEXTS

As indicated by the title this book is divided into three sections. The first consists of a remarkable disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "principles" in formulated propositions, and the third expounds in a clear, impressive and homelitic manner particular "Texts." The knotty and perplexing texts of the Bible are united and solved satisfactorily to the most fastidious and critical. More than one hundred and fifteen subjects of intense interest to every Bible student are forcefully discussed. Both simple and scholarly—the child is fascinated and taught; the scholar is entertained and instructed. Bible lovers, here is a feast for you. Throw open the door of your home; let The Bible—its Principles and its Texts come in and bless you and your family. 309 pages, 5x7 1-2 inches, durably and handsomely bound in whole cloth, with title embossed on back in gold. One copy, $1.10, two copies or more $1.00 each. R. G. Huggins, 10623 Lee Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

PROOFREADER

Years of experience in proofreading; now completing a technical course in the art. MSS prepared for the printer and proofs read. Book work a specialty. Limited amount of work by mail accepted at popular prices.

ROBT. G. HUGGINS,
10623 Lee Avenue,
Cleveland, Ohio

The truth gives a man the hope of seeing with his own eyes the work of God, at last triumphant in the earth whether he live or die; and of himself sharing the blessedness for ages covenanted for all the earth through Abraham and his seed.

Forgetful hearers allow themselves to be diverted by the ephemeral things of life from the important business of making themselves familiar with God's word by reading. They are without excuse.

Real faith is a treasure, a companion of delight, a spring of living water, a fountain of purity.

The man who possesses faith unfeigned will do what others will not do; but a man of sham faith will not sacrifice anything for the sake of it.

Ladies! Save Money and Keep in Style by Reading McCall's Magazine and Using McCall Patterns

McCall's Magazine will help you economically at a moderate expense by keeping you posted on the latest fashions in clothes and hats. 50 New Fashion Designs in each issue. Also valuable information on all home and personal matters. Only 50c a year, including 6 free patterns. Subscribe today, or send for free sample copy.

McCall Patterns will enable you to make in your own home, with your own hands, clothing for yourself and children which will be as stylish and fit. Price—none higher—10c and 15c per copy. Send for free Pattern Catalogue. We Will Give You Five Patterns for getting twenty subscribers among your friends. Send for free Premium Catalogue and Cash Prize Offer.

THE McCALL COMPANY, 236 to 248 West 37th St., NEW YORK

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

We, whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones.

This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of their paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

Read This Special Subscription Offer

